FRESHMAN CLASS MAY BE LARGEST EVER ENROLLED

Figures for Other Classes Show Possibility of Record Breaking Enrollment.

With registration returns incomplete and students still arriving, prospects are that this years enrollment will equal and possibly exceed that of last year.

Some unofficial estimates went so far as to place the figures at a mark 200 above the record number enrolled in 1927.

Practically all guesses from those in a position to know placed the freshman enrollment above the record set in that year. At that time, out of 1006 applications accepted, about 825 registered. This year six more applications have been accepted. Although the number of registrants who had checked out at the close of registration Wednesday was slightly less than 800, past experience with late arrivals justifies the prophecies of a record breaking class.

The graduate school enrollment to date indicates that all previous records will be broken with a registration a hundred in excess of the previous high mark.

Edwin Lanier, Self Help Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. stated that he had received from self help students 852 applications for work and that the number of jobs available was only three hundred. A large majority of the applications were from new men.

The number of co-eds will also exceed that of last year and of any preceding year. Spencer hall, famed home of the fair sex, was filled by the middle of the summer, and the various homes catering to the ladies are also being rapidly filled.

Final registration figures will not be available for several days, due to the annual flood of late registrants.

CAROLINA BOOKS BROADWAY HITS

Local Theatre to Inaugurate Collegiate Year With Joan Crawford Vehicle.

Joan Crawford, whose new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Our Blushing Brides," is being shown at the Carolina theatre today, was brought up in a stage atmosphere, her father being owner and manager of the principal playhouse in San Antonio, Texas, where she was born.

Her parents were opposed to a stage career so she ran away to Chicago and joined the chorus of a revue. Her dancing won her a featured part in the "Passing Show of 1924." Here she was seen by Harry Rapf, studio executive, who invited her to have a screen test.

The first test was a failure, but later a successful one secured her a contract from Metro. Her first picture, "Pretty Ladies," was made in 1925, and was quickly followed by many other hits. "Our Blushing Brides" is her third talkie, and is a sequel to "Our Dancing Daughters" and "Our Modern Maidens." In the supporting cast of the new production are Anita Page, Dorothy Sebastian, Robert Montgomery, Raymond Hackett, John Miljan, Hedda Hopper, Gwen Lee, Mary Doran and others. Harry Beaumont directed.

NEW MAGAZINE IS GIVEN SOUTHLAND

"Agora" Is Edited By Richard A. Chace; Has Impressive List of Donors.

A new Southern literary magazine, "The Agora," is being founded at the University. It is to be edited by a staff composed of the best undergraduate writers from the leading universities of the South and promises to offer a representative survey of young Southern thought.

"The first issue, which has just come from the press, features an article by Dean Addison Hibbard on current trends in new South. This first issue also presents an impressive array of talent, with more than a promise for good things to come in future numbers.

The long list of patrons actively interested in the venture includes President Frank Graham, Dean F. F. Bradshaw, Dean D. D. Carroll, Dr. Archibald Henderson, and Dr. George Coffman, all of the University of North Carolina. The advisory board bears such names as Paul Green, Addison Hibbard, and Gertrude Wilson Coffin, author of last year's successful "Magnolia's Man."

Two prize awards of thirty dollars are announced, a poetry contest to be judged at the

New Dean

Dr. A. W. Hobbs has been appointed Dean of the College of Liberal Arts to succeed Addison Hibbard who is filling a similar chair this year at Northwestern University.

Freshman Directory

A complete directory of all freshmen registered before Friday will be available at the Y. M. C. A. sometime today. This freshman directory will be printed in mimeographed form, and is to be put out for the benefit of all fraternities or others desiring to use it.

The Y. M. C. A. is putting out the directory.

The local address of each freshman together with his church preference will be included.

This is the first time that such a record of the local addresses of the new men has been gotten out, and the Y. M. C. A. officials state that all wishing to use this directory can do so by calling by the Y office.

Lutherans To Meet

The Lutheran student association will resume its work with a service in Gerrard Hall Sunday, September 21, at 11 o'clock.

New President

Frank Porter Graham, new chief executive of the University of North Carolina, has served the University as an instructor and a good-will ambassador; the state as an example of fearless, unselfish liberalism, and the whole South as an enlightening influence. He is now entering his term in the president's chair at a time when both the state and the University most need his genius.

DAILY IS LOOKING FOR NEW TIMBER

Old and New Staff Members Sought to Complete Organization

The first meeting of the*Daily Tar Heel* staff will be held Sunday night in the office of the publication in the Alumni building at seven o'clock. At this meeting opportunity will be given all members of the student body to join the staff.

At the beginning of each year a large number of new men try out for positions on the staff. Work on the staff affords an opportunity for persons interested in journalism to gain actual practical experience.

The only daily college newspaper south of the Mason-Dixon line, with the single exception of one in Texas, the Daily Tar Heel got off to a good start last year. With Will Yarborough as editor of the daily and Jack Dungan as managing editor, the Tar Heel begins its second year of existance with this issue.

Starting as a weekly paper issued by the athletic association of the University in February 1893, the publication grew to a bi-weekly in 1909. On account of financial troubles in 1911 however the athletic association was forced to return to a weekly. From 1911 to 1920 the Tar Heel was published as a weekly, but in 1920 the student body voted for a bi-weekly to replace the weekly. Until 1925 the paper was continued as a bi-weekly when it took another advancing step by becoming a tri-weekly. Last year the paper was made into a daily to complete its steady growth of over thirty years.

In addition to Yarborough and Dungan the staff will be composed of: Pat Patterson, business manager; Hal V. Worth, circulation manager; and B. C. Moore and J. C. Williams as associates.

Y OFFICERS PLAN FOR COMING YEAR

First Meeting Is Scheduled for Next Week.

The Sophomore and Junior-Senior cabinets f the Y. M. C. A. will hold their first meeting of this year on Monday night, September 22, in the Y building at 7:30.

At this meeting all plans for the new year are to be discussed, and some of the new committees will probably be formed.

President Hamer and his associates are planning on a large gathering of all of the old cabinet members as well as any other upperclassmen who might be interested in the Y work for the new year.

The Y officials state further that if a large crowd turns out for the first meetings it will mean that more work can be accomplished by the association during the year '30-'31.

During the registration of both freshmen and upperclassmen, the Y groups have been at work helping all the new students to register correctly.

A new plan has been tried this year in regard to the collecting of the Y pledges, and from indications things look well for a fine year for the Y. M. C. A. association in that respect. As yet, however, no definite report has been made in this regard.

Business Staff Call

An organization meeting of the business staff of the Daily Tar Heel will be held this afternoon at 2 in the business office.

Pat Patterson, business manager of the Tar Heel, is anxious to have as many men out as possible for the staff meeting. Old men as well as new are expected to attend the afternoon meeting. Plans for the coming year are to be discussed.

FRIENDSHIP CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

Council for First Year Men Will Begin Its Activities September 26.

Plans are going forward for the annual Ex-Hi Y banquet, scheduled for Friday night, September 26. The banquet given each year by the sophomore cabinet is for the purpose of organizing the Freshman Friendship Council.

All freshmen who were formerly Hi-Y men and those interested in Y work will attend this banquet. Some time during the coming week blank sheets will be placed in the Y lobby on which all freshmen interested in Y work will be requested to place their names together with their college addresses.

The Freshman Friendship Council gives an opportunity for freshmen to enter Y work from the beginning of their college careers.

Last year more than seventy freshmen were present at the banquet. At the banquet this year, just as in past years, the council officers will be elected.

"Bim" Ferguson, president of the sophomore Y cabinet, will preside at the banquet. The program will probably consist of one or two speeches by a prominent student leader and a leading faculty member.

English Head

Dr. George R. Coffman has been selected by University officials to fill the chair in the English department made vacant by the death of the late Dean J. F. Royster.

Mrs. McCall's Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chambers were guests of Mr. and Mrs Fred McCall recently. Mrs. Chambers was formerly Miss Helen McGraw; she gave a music recital at Mrs. McCall's a year or so ago.

McCorkles Home

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle They left here August 2, were on road 8 days going and coming, spent 2 weeks in Texas, and arrived here August 23.

Interfraternity Council Meeting

An important meeting of the Interfraternity Council will be held tonight at the Coop at 7:15, according to President Jack Ward. All members should be present with a bond for $100 and the regular assessment of five dollars.

NEW AUDITORIUM IS TO BE READY NEW YEAR'S DAY

$200,000 Structure to Seat 1800 Persons; Will Have Comfortable Chairs.

The erection of a $200,000 auditorium to replace Memorial Hall which was condemned last fall is progressing rapidly. J. B. Thompson & Brothers, of Charlotte, who were awarded the contract for the structure, plan to have it completed by the first of January.

The new building is being erected on the site of Memorial Hall, condemned last fall because of decay in the beams supporting the roof. After several weeks of indecision as to whether the strueture should be repaired or a new building built, the board of trustees decided to erect a new building with an emergency fund voted by the state legislature, of which only $200,000 was available for this purpose.

The plans for the building were submitted the board of trustees by Atwood & Nash, Nash, University architects, work being started June 19 by the construction company. The building is to be of the Georgian colonial type of architecture, in keeping with South building and the new library, with red brick walls set off by white limestone pillars and ledges.

The outside walls are now practically completed and work on the roof will be started within a week, according to Mr. Atwood.

The auditorium will seat 1800 persons, 400 more than Memorial Hall. Opera seats will be installed in place of the benches formerly used. A modern, well-equipped stage will be included in the new structure so that the building can be easily used for performances of the student activities as well as for chapel exercises.

GIANT ORGAN IS BEING INSTALLED

Instrument Expected to Be Ready for Use by October 20; Mechanism Explained

The great pipe organ, given to the University music department, by an unknown donor, has been in Chapel Hill since late August. It is now being installed in the magnificent auditorium of the new music building, converted from the old library.

The larger part of the organ has been installed and a part of it is still lying about the auditorium floor. Coming here from Lawrence, Kansas, the instrument filled two box cars, and the freight bill was $1,600.

Three experts from the Cassivante factory, in Lawrence, have been here to put up the organ. In a short while, Jake Schaeffer, world-famous organ-voicer, will come to Chapel Hill for a final inspection of the organ mechanism. As Louis Graves has written in the Chapel Hill Weekly, "Mr. Schaeffer can sit at the console and press down key and, if a gnat has crawled into the top of the corresponding pipe, far up in the loft, Mr. Schaeffer will not only know the gnat is there but will know its exact age and girth and how to get it out—all from the waves of sound that come from the said pipe."

At Holden's Beach

Several Chapel Hill families enjoyed their vacations this summer at Holden's Beach, an unfrequented place on the ocean front in the southeastern corner of North Carolina, between Southport and the South Carolina line.

George Lawrence discovered there a big frame house which had not been occupied for years and too a lease on it. He and his family occupied it for a while, and others who went from here were the A. S. Lawrences, the Murchisons, the Harrers, the Olives, the Breckenridges, the Guy Johnsons, and Wiley Sanders.

"A fine place for an outing," is George Lawrence's verdict. "Plenty of goo dswimming and fishing. None of the frills and formalities of the better-known comforts. We hope to go back next year."

Knight Says Graham Election Is Of Immense Significance

University Official Praises New President in Recent Feature Article.

"The recent election of Frank Graham, over his protest, to the presidency of the University, is viewed generally as an event of immense educational significance for the South," writes Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the University's school of education in an article entitled "North Carolina Keeps Faith" in the current issue of the Nation. "If the wide editorial comment is representative of real opinion, this forty-four-year-old, many-sided, popular scholar, teacher, and bachelor becomes head of his Alma Mater with wider approval than could have been given any other man," the article says.

Commenting on President Graham's wide popularity in the state the Knight article says: "Although his qualities are not those which commend men to the favor of political bosses, it is probable that Frank Graham could have any office in the gift of the citizens of North Carolina, but he is not political-minded, nor has he personal ambition. His ambition is for the institution in which he has invested his life for a quarter of a century."

Dr. Knight points out Mr. Graham's chief activities in behalf of the University and the State. "It was largely through Mr. Graham's inspiration and leadership," the article says, "that a bond issue of $20,000,000 was provided by the legislature in 1921 for the educational and charitable institutions of the state. He was the leader in a recent movement to lift North Carolina from the humiliating last place in the American Union in public library facilities." It is pointed out that Mr. Graham was also a leader in the movement to prevent the passage of the Poole anti-evolution bill which would have restricted the freedom of teaching in the schools of the state.

"Graham's keen sense of social justice has been conspicuously illustrated in connection with the recent industrial conflicts in North Carolina," the article goes on to say. "He has lectured and written and talked with leaders as a flaming apostle of a better social order in a state that now has new problems to face. He has worked as probably no other private individual has done to have North Carolina adjust itself to the changes produced by industrialization without the tragic cost entailed in industrial revolution elsewhere."

Many Changes On Carolina Campus

Old students returning to the University campus this week are being greeted by several changes on the campus.

The new auditorium, which is to take the place of Memorial Hall, is going up rapidly, and the addition to the Music Building has been completed.

The brick walls of the auditorium have been constructed, the steel framework for both the stage and the balcony is about completed, and the steel skeleton of the roof will be in place in a few days.

There are several changes in the business section of Chapel Hill. Four new eating places have been opened. These are the Greenland Coffee Shop, the Waffle Shop, the Cavalier Cafeteria, which replaces the old Welcome In Cafeteria, and the Anilorac Cafe. An addition has also been made to the Friendly Cafeteria which opened here last spring.

A Brief Sketch of Chapel Hill For the Benefit of Newcomers

(From the Chapel Hill Weekly)

Every fall there are many people who come to live in Chapel Hill, and frequently they tell me that they are interested in learning something about the history of the village. The best way for them to satisfy their curiosity is to read Kemp P. Battle's History of the University of North Carolina and Old Days in Chapel Hill (which latter book is a collection of the letters of Cornelia Phillips Spencer). But the newcomers are not always able to get at this reading promptly, and so, for their benefit, I set down a few facts about Chapel Hill.

The University received a charter from the legislature in 1789, and two or three years later a committee of the board of trustees was commissioned to select a site for the institution. The committee traveled about, inspecting several localities, and at last selected this one. William Richardson Davie, the leading spirit in the educational movement of those days, and often called the Founder of the University, was a member of the committee. It is recorded that not only the natural advantages of the ground, but also "substantial donations in land and money from the farmers dwelling hereabouts," determined the selection.

In the language of the geologists, Chapel Hill is a promontory of granite belonging to the Laurentian system. The hill is shaped somewhat like a tongue, with its tip pointed eastward over a stretch of lowland which was in past ages the bed of an inland sea. Originally the settlement, at the crossing of two important highways, was called New Hope Chapel Hill because here stood a chapel of the Church of England called New Hope Chapel. The words New Hope were dropped from the name at about the time of the establishment of the University. The chapel stood about where the Carolina Inn now is.

The cornerstone of the Old East building was laid October 12, 1793. The new institution had its formal opening January 15, 1795. It was a hard winter, and Battle's History tells how the Governor and other notables, in order to attend the ceremonies, "braved the discomforts of 28 miles of red mud and pipe clay and jagged rocks that stretched from Raleigh to Chapel Hill."

In those early years the rest of the South had no institutions of higher learning, and so many students came here from other states.

The University had a hard struggle for survival. It belonged to the state and was controlled by the state, but about all the state did for it was to give it "escheats"—that is, the ownership of such property as might fall to the state by forfeitures or unpresented claims. Solicitations for funds were made periodically. Lotteries, then legal and respectable, were resorted to; part of the money for the South building was raised by a lottery.

The buildings which were put up before the Civil War are the Old East and Old West, the New East and New West, the South, Gerrard hall, Smith hall (now the Playmakers Theatre), and Person hall.

When the Civil War broke out, scores of students flocked away to the Confederate Army, but the University functioned all through the struggle and until 1868. Reconstruction dealt it a death blow. The carpet-bag government made a pretense of keeping it in operation, but even this farce endured but a year or so, and the University was definitely closed in 1870. At one time the South building was used as a stable for cattle and horses. In all the buildings mantels collapsed, windows were shattered, the floors were covered with fallen plaster. The campus was in a state of dilapidation—walls tumbling down, gates rotted, many of the old oaks axe-scarred and dying. Cows and pigs roamed over the campus and through the deserted village streets.

The work of regeneration began in the spring of 1875, with Kemp P. Battle as chairman of a committee to solicit funds, and the reopening was formally celebrated September 15. In June of 1876 Mr. Battle was elected president; he continued in the office until 1891. His successors have been, in order: George T. Winston, Edwin A. Alderman, Francis P. Venable, Edward K. Graham, Harry W. Chase, and Frank P. Graham.

October 10 Is To Be University Day

October 10th has been designated by W. T. Shore, president of the General Alumni Association of the University of North Carolina, as the date for the meetings of local alumni clubs in celebration of University Day. A statement of this designation was sent today to more than 200 officers of University North Carolina alumni clubs, representing practically every county in North Carolina and larger cities outside the state.

October 12th marks the 137th birthday of the University, but since this date comes this year on Sunday, President Shore has asked that Friday, October 10th be celebrated as University Day. In his letter Mr. Shore makes special urge that local clubs meet this year which he points out to be a critical one in the life of the University.

University alumni number 14,000, the majority of whom reside in North Carolina.

President Graham Is a Good Skipper

All sorts of things were predicted for the University last spring when shortly after President Chase announced his resignation to accept the presidency of the University of Illinois it became known that the University was to suffer a twenty percent cut in its appropriation. Then when several of the brighter lights of our faculty resigned things looked bad.

But the Board of Trustees solved the entire problem when they selected Frank Graham president. Mr. Graham is accustomed to facing difficult positions and has proven himself an excellent one to cope with an emergency.

Those expecting the worse should have been here during the early part of Freshman Week. New men from all parts of North Carolina and from many other states began coming in Saturday Sunday and Monday resembled football days, for traffic downtown and around South Building approached the congested stage. Those new men had read all about the resignations of faculty members. They knew that the appropriations had been cut. But they came up here in larger numbers than any time he fore except in 1927. There must have been some reason.

One of the first things Mr. Graham did upon becoming president was to fill vacancies in the faculty with men whose stars may not just now shine as brightly as those of the departed but who are men capable of filling their positions well.

Then he began to speak. Almost "from Manteo to Murphy" he spoke, urging always faith in the State's educational institutions. Both Mr. Graham's speeches and his personality were such that people did have faith in the State's educational institutions and a lot of them had faith in Mr. Graham.

Some may account the enrolment this year to be the result of parents realizing that higher education is a necessity if their children are to have a fair chance in life. We are inclined to think that it was the confidence they had in Mr. Graham, in the University he directs, and in his belief of a square deal for all that brought over 800 new members here.

Undoubtedly, President Graham has delivered the goods. The University will still feel the effects of the cut, but it faces the year with more confidence than many would have thought possible last spring.

Touch The Flesh

This and similar greetings meet the ear of the returning upperclassman as he treads the streets of Chapel Hill again. Numerous posters convince the men of '34 that they are welcome to every place of business within the village. 'Tis even the custom for this paper to carry words of welcome in its initial issue.

For reasons which can be attributed neither to the attractiveness of departure from custom nor to hostility to the expression of sentimental cordiality, we take occasion here and now to say that the new and old men don't need a welcoming editorial. Where is there a man so smothered in ignorance that he feels unwelcome within the walls of his own tax-supported institution? To such an one words of welcome would mean nothing, anyhow.

Continuing, if there be a high school enthusiast who expects to find a brass band at work in the columns of this paper, he should be stripped of his false impression. The Daily Tar Heel, like other college papers, has few virtues of which to boast. Hence the writer of this opinion proposes to join those who would banish the harmful effects of embullient secondary school papers to which many newcomers have been unfortunately exposed.

And finally though not in conclusion, the incumbent scribe secretely feels that some stranger at this seat of learning is responsible for injury inflicted upon his animal frame in the annual display of savagery which rocked the place of registration yesterday. Rather than welcome the ill-fleshed elbows which plowed into our editorial ribs, we refrain from welcoming anybody.

If there is a man here who feels that he is not welcome, he should deprive his ill-chosen timidity of further augmentation by departing to another region.

He who enters the portals of this institution with a purpose is ever welcome; he who enters without a purpose is never welcome.

—J. C. W.

Ringing Up The Curtain

As the curtain rises and reveals the one-hundred-thirty-seventh act of the University's existence, certain changes are apparent. Chief among these are a new president and a lamentably meager outlay of money. That President Graham has all too little of that great tool—money—at his command is indeed deplorable; none the less, the present scarcity of funds has been inevitable for quite awhile. The problems confronting the new president are, therefore, extraordinarily acute.

We call upon the University student body to cooperate in every particular with the new administrative control, thereby helping to make this the greatest year in the history of the institution.

As the ninth president of the University, and the second from the House of Graham, gets into the full swing of his duties we predict great things for act number one-hundred-thirty-seven.

The organ console has four keyboards. There are also dozens of stops arrayed on both perpendicular sides of the keyboard. Underneath, at the operators feet, are placed a number of pedals, by which the bass notes are played. The frame of the console is of Oregon walnut.

The various sections of the organ are being installed in a chamber backstage. Below this, next to the ground, the organ blowers are housed. By an electro-magnetic device, the player exercises full control of the airflow.

In an attic up the front of the building, an echo organ is being placed. The echo organ can be played by itself, independently of all other section. There is a hole in the ceiling, above the heads of the audience, through which the sound comes.

Mr. Dyer, head of the music department, hopes to have the organ ready for use by October 20.

close of the year (May) by DuBose Heyward and a short story contest to be judged by Julia Peterkin.

According to the editor, Richard A. Chace, the magazine will be essentially Southern in tone and spirit, and most of the material published will be by Southern authors. The magazine promises to fill a real need in the South. The feeling here is that it should prove a splendid medium for developing and for exploiting the work of Southern writers.

Commenting on the new magazine, the editor of the Nashville Tennessean says, in part: "There are many reasons why we should encourage the publication of Southern magazines. In the first place, they would afford an increased outlet for the ever growing number of splendid writers in the Southern states. Magazines of this character published in the atmosphere of the South would necessarily better reflect the real sentiment and the true attitude of the Southern people. They would contribute immensely to out knowledge of Southern history. It is only through magazines of this type that we can recover much of the romantic and fascinating history of our states and our section. Such publication would also do an incalculable amount of good in recapturing and restoring the fine elements in our splendid civilization of the past. They would prove a bulwark against the drift toward materialism which threatens to engulf if not wholly destroy the fine cultural standards that we inherited from the old South."

Violations Of Rushing Rules To Be Punished Says President Ward

Asks Observance of Period of Silence Until September 26; Warns New Men.

COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT

Discussion of Regulations Governing Issuance of Invitations to New Men Will Be Discussed; Meeting to Be Held In Coop.

"Violations of rushing rules by either new men or fraternity men will be punished to the fullest extent of the Interfraternity Council's power," Jack Ward, President of the Council, stated last night following a meeting of the Executive Committee. Members of this committee which is empowered to enforce all regulations of the Council are President Ward, Tom Hunter, John Cooper, M. D. Holderness and Will Yarborough.

A meeting of the entire council has been called for tonight at 7:15 at the Coop. At this time regulations governing the issuance of invitations to freshmen will be discussed. Invitations may be secured from Tom Hunter, secretary, early next week. These must be filled in and returned by noon Wednesday September 24. They will be issued to freshmen through the Dean of Students' office.

"Both new men and fraternity members are asked to note that rushing does not begin until Friday, September 26. Violation of this rule will likely cause infliction of the one year penalty upon any new man or fraternity member," President Ward stated.

"Ignorance of the rules will not be accepted by the committee as an excuse for violation. The rules are practically the same as last year's and the fraternity members should be familiar with them by now. Enough copies have been distributed for every freshman to have seen them.

"By-Laws number three, four, five and six are also called to the attention of fraternity men. These rules place definite limitations on rushings," Ward said, "and the only way we are to have rushing rules is for each fraternity member and each freshman to help the council enforce them. I hope that the fraternities will assist the council in enforcing these rules, and I believe that each by insisting that its members observe the rules will aid us considerably in our efforts to enforce the regulations this season."

E. C. Smith Entertains Freshmen at Theatre

As the final feature of the Freshman Orientation Week, the Freshman Class was entertained by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre, at a midnight show last night. Dr. R. B. House, Executive Secretary of the University and Red Green, President of the Student Council, and Bill Chandler, former cheer-leader, were guest performers taking part in the program.

The program of the Freshman entertainment last night consisted of talks to the new men by Dr. House, and Green, and cheering practice lead by Chandler, in addition to the regular daily feature presented by the Chapel Hill representatives of the Publix-Saenger Theatre chain.

The moving picture seen by the Freshmen last night was Jack Oakie and Jeanette MacDonald in a light south sea romance, "Let's Go Native."

Local Journalists Are To Take Field

Magazine and Buccaneer to Commence Publication in Near Future.

With the initial issue of the Daily Tar Heel this morning, interest in the campus publications is resumed after a summer of diversion. This collegiate year marks the thirty-ninth volume of the college newspaper and the second year of the daily.

The Carolina Magazine, which was made a literary supplement to the Daily Tar Heel beginning with the collegiate year 1929-30, will also make its debut in the near future. The magazine is the oldest of the University. Although contributions from faculty members and non-resident persons are occasionally used, the magazine is essentially a student enterprise. J. C. Williams, editor of the supplement, and Jack Dungan, managing editor, are hard at work on the first issue—concerning which more definite information will be printed later. The columns of the magazine are open to all types of creative writing. Contributions should be addressed to Box 710, Chapel Hill. Issues will be made twice monthly throughout the entire collegiate year; the deadline for each issue being one week in advance of its oppearance on Sunday morning.

Kermit Wheary, editor of the Carolina Buccaneer, plans to gladden the campus with the first issue of his comic about October 15. This will be called the Initial Issue. An organization staff meeting will convene in the Buccaneer office in the basement of Alumni building Monday night at 7:15. Beginning as an unfavored publication a few years ago, the Buccaneer has grown to prominence on the campus. The Buccaneer is essentially a comic, appearing eight times during the collegiate year. There is no definite color scheme for the cover, each issue having some work of art on the cover. J. C. Harris will serve as business manager.

The Yackety-Yack, University yearbook, will be edited by Clyde Dunn and managed by Travis Brown. Plans for this publication are not yet far enough under way to permit any statement in this article.

Tar Heels Prepare For Wake Forest Game

MANY VETERANS COMPETING FOR BACKFIELD POSTS

Both Reserves and Sophomores Working for Places In Line.

By K. C. Ramsay

Seventy Tar Heels have been drilling twice daily for three weeks, and are rapidly rounding into shape for the first game of the season which is to be played in Kenan stadium against Wake Forest one week from tomorrow.

Coach Collins has the finest assortment of backs on the Southern grid if you believe what is being said throughout sportdom in the South. Only three of the 1929 star backs are missing this year. Nash, Magner, House, Branch, Wyrick, Maus, Erickson, Slusser—all of these star performers are showing up well in practice sessions. There are several sophomores who are looking good at present. Chandler, McNeill, and Croom are probably the best prospects in this group.

The line seems to be the biggest worry for the Carolina coaches at present. There is a large number of reserves and sophomores who are working hard to win the places left vacant by Ray Farris, Bud Eskew, Bill Koenig, and "Pot" adkins. George Thompson, who won his monogram last year, and Underwood and McDade, sophomores, are the most likely prospects for the two tackle positions. McIver, Newcombe, Blackwood, and Fysal have done the best work at guard during early season practices.

End is presenting a rather difficult problem. It seems that "Red" Parsley and Herb Nelson will win the places on the team left vacant by Holt and Fenner unless some changes take place within the next few days. Theron Brown, Irwin Walker, Johnson, and Bridges are other ends who have been doing well in early season practices.

Carolina has two of the finest centers in the Southern conference. Ned Lipscomb and "Red" Gilbreath are the pair. Ned was praised by sports writers last year from Washington to Atlanta for his excellent work in defense. Gilbreath is one of the most alert centers in Dixie. He cvers his position well, and is good at opening up holes for the backs.

Offense Good in Scrimmage

Fifteen touchdowns were made by the first and second teams against the third and fourth squads in the first scrimmage session on Wednesday. These points were scored by every type of offense. Long passes, short passes, off tackle plays, and end runs were used time and time again for long gains.

Line work in the scrimmage was a bit ragged, but was very good for the first session of the year. Magner to Nash and Chandler to Slusser proved to be strong passing combinations. Henry House was good with his work at hitting the line.

Scrimmage Again Saturday

The second scrimmage of the season will be held at the stadium tomorrow afternoon. Line candidates spent yesterday working to erase the ragged spots in blocking.

Line performance in tomorrow's practice probably will be much improved over that displayed in the scrimmage on Wednesday. Some idea as to whom Coach Collins will start in the Wake Forest game may be had after the Saturday workout.

Six of the 1928 Sophomore Backs Intact

Seven Tar Heel backs, known throughout the Carolinas in 1928 for offensive ability, are, except for "Pap" Harden, battling for posts on Coach Collins' 1930 team. Each of them has made a splendid record during the two years which they have played on the varsity gridiron.

Cross Country

All candidates for the varsity cross-country team are requested to report to Coach Ranson at Emerson field this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Candidates for the freshman team are requested to report to Emerson field Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

HILL AND DALERS BEGIN PRACTICE MINUS VETERANS

Lose Eight of Nine Letter Men; New Men Show Much Promise.

With only one letter man returning from last year's cross country team, Coach Ranson faces a difficult task in assembling a team capable of continuing the Tar Heels' winning streak of four consecutive Southern Conference championships.

Captain Cliff Baucom, one of the most consistent of last year's harriers, is the letter man returning. Reserves from last year include Farris, Rhodes, Shulenberger, and Brown. Phoenix, Pierce and Cohen, letter men eligible this year, will not return.

Jensen, Cordle, Jones, Lumpkin, Stikeleather and Zelly, of last year's freshman team, are expected to furnish most of the team's strength. Jensen led last year's Tar Babies to an unusually successful season, and broke several course records.

Tom Watkins, although not a candidate last year, will probably be out for the team this year. He won the cake race given early last fall, and was one of the best freshman quartermilers.

The varsity loses this year by graduation Captain Barkley, Lowry, Wrenn and Cohen. Regular practice began yesterday and will be held every afternoon from four to six.

Dual meets have already been schedued with V. P. I., Duke and State. The Southern Conference meet will be held here on November 15.

125 CANDIDATES FOR FROSH TEAM

One hundred and twenty-five freshmen are working out daily on the Freshman field for the yearling team. Coaches Enright and Farris have been leading the new team through calisthenics, and have been drilling the fundamentals of the game. The entire group is in light equipment at present, but full uniforms probably will be issued within the next week.

The yearlings will go to Princeton to meet the Tiger freshmen for the principal game of the year. Maryland and Virginia Frosh will be met in Chapel Hill. Games away with State and Duke will complete the five game schedule.

FORMER CAPTAINS WILL COACH HERE

Archie Allen and Ray Farris Added to Carolina Coaching Staff.

Several changes of interest in this year's coaching staff have been made, two captains of last year's teams having been added to the roster of Tar Heel mentors. Ray Farris, all-Southern guard and captain of Carolina's high scoring gridiron team in 1930 has been added to the freshman coaching staff, replacing Odell Sapp, who has been aiding Coaches Collins and Cerney in preparing the varsity for its rigorous season.

Archie Allen, Southern Conference lightweight champion in 1929 and Conference finalist in the welterweight class in 1930 is another captain of a 1930 team who has been appointed to the staff of coaches. This year Archie will assist Coach Crayton Rowe in preparing the Carolina team for its attempt to regain the Conference championship this winter from Florida.

Both Allen and Farris are returning to the University this year as students in the Law school.

TAR HEELS WILL NOT PLAY NIGHT FOOTBALL GAMES

State College to Have All But One Home Game at Night; University Officials Prefer Playing in Daylight.

"State College Adopts Night Football" was the headline stretching half way across the News and Observer's sports page one day last week. And there followed the announcement by Ray R. Sermon, director of athletics, that all of States football games in Raleigh this season, except the one with Duke, would be played at night.

This news naturally moves people in Chapel Hill to wonder if night football will be introduced here. The answer is: No.

Questioning reveals that the University athletic authorities have considered the innovation and have decided against it. Their opinion is that, as far as the University is concerned, it is better to have all the playing done in the afternoon.

There is less reason to introduce night-time athletic spectacles in a village community like this than there is in a city. For, in a city there is a large working population which cannot get off to see games in the daytime. These people constitute an important potential resource; as mining prospectors would phrase it, a rich vein to be tapped. Night baseball has been introduced in several cities in order to augument attendance, and midget golf has served to familiarize great numbers of people with night sport.

Recent advances in the science of illumination have made possible, on athletic fields, what is practically the conversion of night into day. Enormous floodlights are mounted on the sides of the arena, and the experts have learned how to arrange them so that they give the players plenty of light without blinding them.

Several years tennis was played under artificial light in New York City. Then the lighting system had not reached such a degree of perfection that it was adequate for baseball or football, but the labratory men in the service of the great electrical corporations kept at their studies until they solved the problem.

Schenectady, where the General Electric Company has its chief plant, was the first city to have an illuminated football field, and night football is part of the regular athletic program of the high school there. Detroit and other cities in the North and West have followed suit.

Dr. Wilson Greatly Impressed By State Of European Affairs

iversity Librarian Relates Many Interesting Experiences of His Tour; Says America Needs to Develop Fine Arts.

Were America more skilled in the fine arts she might find easier going in periods of financial depression.

That is the outstanding impression brought back from Europe by Dr. Louis R. Wilson, Librarian of the University and director of the University Press, who has just returned from a six-month tour of England and the Continent. He was taking advantage of a leave of absence voted him by the trustees a year ago.

Always a keen observer, Dr. Wilson brought back a great many definite impressions about conditions in Europe, but apparently nothing impressed him as much as the way Europeans are making practical applications of art.

Dr. Wilson explained that in France and Italy such objects of art as miniatures, carvings, cameos, pictures, and reproductions of old masterpieces were on sale everywhere and were bringing high prices. He found art one of the big industries of the people.

America, thinks Dr. Wilson, needs badly to develop the applications of art to industry. This would give employment to thousands who are now idle and would keep at home millions that are spent in Europe every year.

Now that America has attained eminence in science, Americans don't go to Europe to the extent they did formerly for further study in that field, Dr. Wilson observed. But they do still find in Europe an element of beauty such as is expressed through the opera, in painting, in architecture, and sculpture. England has its beautiful gardens, and Belgium and Holland their carillons.

Art in Chapel Hill

What does Europe have that you would like to see here at the University?, Dr. Wilson was asked.

"More of the type of beauty such as that produced by Coker in the Arboretum, by Sprunt and Erwin in the Chapel Hill churches, by Kenan in the stadium, by unnamed friends in the new Music Building, by the Pattersons and Moreheads in the carillon, by the Hanes family in the incunabula and materials of printing, and by the Carnegie Corporation in the art materials," he replied.

Dr. Wilson had several amusing experiences abroad. On one occasion he almost got locked up in the Bibliotheque Nationale, the French national library. He was given a permit to visit three departments he was particularly interested in. As he came out of each department the door attendant would tear off a corner of his permit. When ready to leave the third department the attendant examined the permit and informed Dr. Wilson that he couldn't allow him to leave because the card showed it had already been used by someone who had left that department. And the Frenchman pointed out that a perforated section of the card was gone. Dr. Wilson insisted that a mistake had been made, that another attendant had already detached the portion of the card indicated, but the Frenchman was equally insistent that Dr. Wilson couldn't be released even though it was time for the library to close. Finally several other attendants were called in and after a prolonged consultation, they decided to accept Dr. Wilson's statement that he was a man of good standing in library circles and to release him.

Pharmacy Professor Offered High Honor

Prof. J. Grover Beard, secretary of the school of pharmacy in the University, has been elected first vice-president of the American Pharmaceutical Association. The announcement was made by E. F. Relly, of Baltimore, secretary of the association.

The election was conducted by a nation-wide mail ballot, Professor Beard having been nominated for the place last May.

This is one of a number of high honors that have come to Professor Beard. Last year he served as president of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy, and this year he is president of the National Conference of Pharmaceutical Association Secretaries.

Crittenden-Quinlan

Charles C. Crittenden, assistant professor of history in the University, was married to Miss Janet Quinlan Saturday evening, September 6, at the home of the bride's parents in Waynesville. Miss Quinlan received her master's degree from the University. Mr. Crittenden is a Ph. D. of Yale.

Mrs. J. F. Kenfield and her two children came from Illinois by train recently, and Mr. Kenfield will follow by automobile about the first of October. As soon as he arrives they will proceed with their preparations for building a home in Westwood.

RULES AND REGULATIONS
LAUNDRY DEPARTMENT
University of North Carolina

You are requested to bear in mind that the following rules and regulations must be observed, in order that you get prompt and efficient service from the Laundry Department.

1st. Have your laundry READY—positively no second call will be made for bundles that are not ready for the laundryman on the first call.

2nd. Write REGISTRATION NUMBER, NAME, INITIALS and ADDRESS, plainly on the Laundry List. This list must accompany your soiled linen to the laundry. Have each article carefully enumerated on the Laundry List. Place this list INSIDE the bundle—tie it securely to avoid possible loss in transit.

3rd. Every student is required to enumerate each article on the Laundry List. Claims of error cannot be considered unless such itemized list accompanies soiled linen to the Laundry.

4th. Under NO CIRCUMSTANCES are two or more persons permitted to send their laundry in the same bundle. Do not send "borrowed linens" in your package. Return them to the owner before laundering. When two or more persons send in the same package we will positively accept NO RESPONSIBILITY for either loss or damage.

5th. Laundry will be called for once a week, on MONDAYS, from all students living in TOWN RESIDENCES and FRATERNITY HOUSES. You are cautioned to have your laundry ready for the laundryman. LAUNDRY DEPARTMENT

The University owns and operates a modern laundry which is conducted on a strictly scientific basis. All students (except those who live with their families in Chapel Hill) are required to send their work to the University Laundry each week. A laundry deposit fee to be paid at the time of registration is required of every student, against which a charge is made for the work done. If the amount of work done exceeds the amount of this deposit, the student is required to pay the excess. If the amount of work done is less than the deposit, the balance is refunded, except that a minimum charge of 25 cents per week will be made.

Laundry may be sent home by parcel post—but must be sent through the office of the Laundry Dept. They will pay the postage and insurance and charge the same against your laundry deposit fee. In this event no minimum charge will be made against the student account.

All work is accepted on a piece-price basis. The charges are exceedingly reasonable and are made strictly in accordance with the cost of operation. This enables the student to get laundry work at a cost below the usual commercial prices.

FRESHMAN WEEK IS OBSERVED BY SEVEN HUNDRED

Usual Daily Lectures and Excursions Fill Time of First Year Men.

With the registration of the freshmen on Wednesday of this week another Freshman Week (sometimes called Orientation Week) came to a close, with over 700 frosh entering the University.

The week's program opened Monday night with the President's reception in the Library. A big majority of the class of '34 men turned out to the reception at the library to get the week's program off to a good start. Entering the front door of the library, the freshmen were sent through the reserve book room, where tags bearing their names were placed on their coats. The new men then went up stairs to the receiving line made up of President Graham and a large number of the faculty members. Punch was served in the educational reading room as the long line of new students filed out the front door again.

Tuesday morning in the Methodist church, the new men heard an instructive lecture by Dean Bradshaw, who gave the frosh advice concerning their college career. Following Dean Bradshaw's talk, the men were divided into groups, with a faculty adviser and a student assistant for each group. The remainder of the morning was taken up with conferences with the faculty advisers. Tours of the library were made by the groups at different times during the day.

At three o'clock that afternoon each freshman, with a few exceptions, was required to take the romance language test, which was given this year for the first time. On Tuesday night the new men were given the English placement test.

All day Wednesday was taken up with registration for the freshmen and the psychology test given on Wednesday night at 7:30 brought the week's program to a close.

Judging by the amount of applications handed in before the opening of the University this year, it looked as though this year's freshman class would be the largest in the history of the school. The actual number registering on Wednesday, however, brought this prospective large class down to around the seven hundred and fifty mark.

The classes this morning will begin the college career of the seven hundred and fifty-odd freshmen of the class of '24.

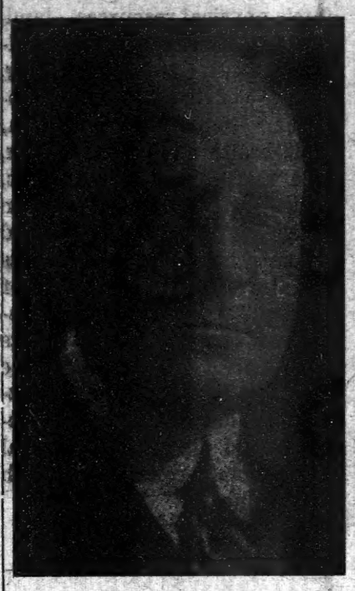
FACULTY ROSTER SHOWS CHANGES

New Faces Replace Many Resignations Effective This Fall.

The changes, resignations from and additions to the faculties of the various schools of the University present an almost unprecedented number of new instructors.

With the resignations last year of Professors Howard Mumford Jones, Russell Potter, Norman Foerster, and the untimely death of Dr. James Finch Royster, the English department appears to be most altered in its personnel. George R. Coffman, formerly of Boston University, is to be professor of English as well as head of that department; E. E. Ericson, of Pittsburgh University, is to be an associate professor of English, as is A. P. Hudson of the University of Mississippi.

The history department, which will temporarily be without Professors Hamilton, who is busy with the Southern Historical collection, and Garrett, who will remain in Europe for the fall quarter, will add to its members the following men: Professor L. C. MacKinney, of Louisiana State University; C. C. Crittenden, an assistant professor; W. S. Jenkins, assistant professor of government; C. R. Pegg, instructor. At the end of the fall session, it is Professor Caldwell's intention to leave for Egypt, where, accompanied by his family and perhaps one or two students, he will make explorations.



Other additions to the general faculty are: B. E. Wilcox, of Richmond, Calif., who will be an instructor of civil engineering; A. McLaren White, who is to be associate professor of chemical engineering; I. L. Martin, instructor in geology; J. M. Valentine, assistant professor of zoology; P. E. Shearin, instructor in physics; V. P. Ferguson, instructor in physics; V. C. Elliot, instructor in Latin; A. K. Shields, instructor in Spanish; F. C. Hayes, instructor in Spanish; George Howard, professor of education; and Miss Gladys Angel, assistant professor of health and physical education. To this list should be added the regular number of fellows and teaching assistants.

BROOKS FAMILY COMPLETES TOUR

Soon after L. M. Brooks got back from the University extension division's transcontinental tour he and Mrs. Brooks started out for the North.

They motored to Norfolk, took their car along on an Old Dominion steamship, and landed in New York City. Thence they motored through New England and New York State and returned to Chapel Hill by a circuitous route that took them as far west as Ohio.

Give University Set of Chimes

The gift of a set of chimes to the University, presented by John Motley Morehead, minister to Sweden, and Rufus Patterson, both alumni of the University, brings a beautiful addition to the University community. To clear up a number of malimpressions about the nature of the chimes, Mr. Morehead wrote a letter to Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, which is quoted in part:

"The bells at Chapel Hill will be exact duplicates of those at West Point, which are said to be the best in the United States and, like that set, will be hand-operated."

Mr. Morehead says that the bells he and Mr. Patterson are offering the University are chimes, not a carillon. He explains that a group of from eight to 13 bells constitute a set of chimes, while an aggregation going as high as eighty bells, makes a carillon.

There are 13 bells in the set which is being given to the University. Mr. Morehead writes that the bells at Chapel Hill are to be provided with a console that looks very much like an overgrown piano with 13 keys. The console will be located in a room directly under the bells in the tower and connected with the bells by wire cables."

In regard to the ringing of the bells, Mr. Morehead says that anyone with musical ability enough to play a tune with one finger on a piano and enough strength to strike the keys forcibly can operate the chimes. It is customary in the universities to organize a group of bell-ringers, headed by a faculty member, to play the bells. Usually, membership in the bell-ringing association is very much sought after.

LANIER ASKS FOR SELF-HELP JOBS

Insufficient Amount of Work for Needy Students.

According to a statement by Edwin Lanier, self-help secretary of the Y. M. C. A., there is still some hope for students desiring work for the coming year to secure jobs.

It is Mr. Lanier's desire that more townspeople take in self-help students and give them either room and board, or both, in return for the students' taking care of the heating system or doing some other odd jobs during the winter. The self-help secretary realizes that the people of Chapel Hill have communicated with him extensively in securing jobs for the new students, and declares that he is very grateful to them for their assistance. In view of the number of applications still coming in for work Lanier asks that the people make a special effort to give more students work of some sort.

Mr. Lanier also requests that any members of the student body knowing of some place where work can be secured for self-help students please call by the Y. M. C. A. building as soon as possible and see him.

For the past ten days or more, the self-help secretary has been covering the town in an attempt to find work. Mr. H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., has also done a great deal in trying to aid the self-help situation.

SUMMER SCHOOL BREAKS RECORDS

Forty-Third Session Tallies 3,005 Registrants for Both Periods.

Finishing its forty-third session with banners flying, the University of North Carolina Summer School broke all former records for attendance and degrees conferred during the past season.

Despite the financial slump general throughout the state, the number of enrollments totaled 3,005, bettering by 900 the previous high mark of 2,656, established in 1928. This number shows an increase of fifty percent over the enrollment of the summer school of 1925, five years ago.

Also, in contrast to five years ago, when only 26 degrees were conferred, 125 students won degrees during the past session. Of this number, 53 degrees were awarded by the graduate school of the University.

As when the Summer School was originated by President Kemp Battle in 1887—the first state university summer school in the country—the main incentive has been to furnish teachers with professional training. In other respects there is hardly any similarity. The first session in 1887 was overcrowded with 238 students, a very small percentage of these being co-eds. This past summer, with 3,005 students enrolled, over 2,000 were co-eds.

Next Chapel

This next week will see the starting of chapel exercises for both the freshman and sophomore classes in Gerrard Hall. Freshmen will be divided into two groups, meeting twice a week, Mondays and Wednesdays and Tuesdays and Thursdays. Sophomores will meet only on Fridays. F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, will have charge of the programs as has been the rule in the past.

TAR HEEL MEET SET FOR SUNDAY

Largest Staff in History of Publication Will Vie for Campus Recognition.

The first meeting for the year of the editorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel, the student newspaper, will be held at 7 o'clock Sunday night at the editorial office in the Alumni building. All aspirants for positions as reporters, old men as well as new, will be present, and all men who are connected with the staff and wish to continue are required to attend.

Managing editor Jack Dungan, in making the announcement of the meeting, said there would be between forty and fifty positions on the editorial staff of the Tar Heel to be filled ed and that he wants all men available, whether old or new, former members or inexperienced, to try out for positions in this campus activity to attend the meeting Sunday night where they will be assigned work with the Tar Heel as a try-out.

The Tar Heel needs a large number of men this year, and welcomes any new man who has had experience with other college or school papers, or with any experience at writing, Dungan said, but previeus experience is not required and every person who attends the meeting Sunday night will have an equal chance to work and to gain a key, the symbol of faithful work with this campus activity.

The key, which was changed last year, has been pronounced a beautiful charm as well as a designation of a high attainmen in campus activities.

The forty reportorial positions occasioned by the policy of the present editorial staff which is to have a large number of men covering the campus well and to give the students of the University the best possible paper.

The meeting, which will be presided over by Managing Editor Jack Dungan and Editor Will Yarborough, will be held in the Tar Heel office on the ground floor of Alumni building.

BOARDING HOUSE HAS SMALL FIRE

About 10:30 yesterday morning, while the convocation exercises were being held in the Methodist church, a fire broke out in the kitchen of the newly opened boarding house run by Mrs. Macbriar, immediately behind the church. The building was formerly occupied by the Kappa Sigma fraternity. The fire was caused by a gas stove which had no legs and was placed on the floor of the room. The heat from the stove set the wooden floor on fire. The blaze was extinguished in a few minutes.

THREE SPEAKERS OPEN UNIVERSITY AT CONVOCATION

Graham, Saunders and Greene Speak to Large Audience in Methodist Church.

The rains that traditionally come during the first week of school poured down yesterday morning and the student body was driven indoors for the formal opening of the University at which President Frank Graham, "Red" Greene, president of the student body, and J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the University alumni association spoke at 10:30 o'clock. A crowd, composed mostly of freshmen, filled the auditorium of the Methodist church to hear the speeches.

Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw presided over the assembly. An opening song, "America," was led by Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department. Following the song, the invocation was offered by "Parson" W. D. Moss of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church.

In his capacity as president of the student body, "Red" Greene opened the speaking program with a welcome to the incoming freshman class, calling particular attention to the honor spirit of the University—a tradition of long standing.

Greene was followed by "Spike" Saunders, representing the 14,000 Carolina alumni. Speaking of the loyalty of the graduates, which has meant so much to the growth of the school, Mr. Saunders said, in finishing his remarks, "It is that loyalty which I wish to call to your attention this morning."

Introducing the last speaker, Dean Bradshaw declared, "We hear next a man who is not only the leader of this faculty of more than 200 members, the leader of this student body of near 2600, but one who is also a leader of North Carolina—President Frank Porter Graham."

With a characteristic, unassuming introduction. "Fellow students of the University, ladies and gentlemen," Mr. Graham began, following up Mr. Greene's statements about the honor spirit and referring to loyalty of the alumni, first mentioned by Mr. Saunders.

Of Greene Mr. Graham said "He would like to have this a place where men shoot straight, play the game fair, and do honest work"; of the campus code he asserted that "at the heart of Carolina is the honor spirit."

Mr. Graham was particularly eloquent in his praise of the alumni for their help in building and supporting the University. "Over on that campus there are 10 new buildings put there by the crusading spirit of the alumni," were the words of one of his many tributes to their loyalty.

Friendships—the making of which is one of the new president's distinguishing traits—are "by-products" of college life, he declared. The University

Greene Condenses The Honor Code

Both old and new men here hear much concerning the "honor system." Student government lectures are given in the fall to incoming freshmen. Periodically, someone writes that the "honor system" is a failure or a glorious success. Editorially the Daily Tar Heel has its say-so and sometimes class periods are devoted to discussions of honor.

We detest the word "system" when applied to honor. It denotes a racket of some kind. And the great American game is trying to "beat the racket." One doesn't attempt to beat honor. It is entirely too personal a matter for one to treat as something to beat.

Here we have a definite code of honor. Students accept that code when they enrol here just as they accept other conditions. Otherwise they are not wanted.

The most condensed and possibly the best definition of Carolina's code of honor was given by President Greene yesterday morning when welcoming the student body he said: "In order to understand and uphold the honor system you men must rely upon those qualities within you which are the highest and noblest type. In following your high and noble qualities you will have no trouble in maintaining the proper individual conduct and helping us to preserve and perfect our honor system."

We do not think that it is necessary to add to those two sentences. They contain all the Daily Tar Heel has to say at this time about Carolina's code of honor.

New Magazine For The South

The Agora, "the magazine of the South," made its initial appearance this month. Its editorial board, headed by Richard A. Chace, includes a number of the best-known and most capable authors that the University campus has known in the last four years. Its advisory board is made up of no less personages than Paul Green, Addison Hibbard, Gertrude Wilson Coffin, and Margaret Vale.

Its patrons, those who have contributed to the support of the new venture, are equally as prominent in the cultural activities of the State and South as the editorial board is on the campus. Furthermore, The Agora lists as its contributing editors—whose number it hopes to enlarge—students from other universities and colleges. With the assistance and the contributions of these last-named, the publication, which is intended, incidentally, to offer to the young writers of the entire South "a field for their earlier development," hopes to make its scope truly South-wide.

Thus The Agora, appears well equipped for its undertaking. It has or will get, the best of the student talent in the South and an advisory board which might be improved only with difficulty.

The first issue promises much for The Agora. It is a worthy objective that Editor Chace states there: ". . . we intend that the material chosen will give our readers food for reflection and delight, hoping not only to stimulate the pen to write and the mind to enjoy." And even in the first issue may be found a near attainment to this standard. The material which appears therein is both entertaining and instructive.

If its editors and authors will but answer the "challenge to the New South" given by Addison Hibbard in this issue, The Agora can be, as it aspires "a representative estimate of the young South."

Pen Points

The junior J. G. Hamilton is wanted at the office of the Daily Tar Heel. It was he who, with that charm and assurance that only a Baron Munchhausen or the editor of True Story magazine could possess, originated the story that J. Elwyn Dungan, managing editor of this newspaper, had been obtained by slick methods and a tremendous salary by the Kansas City Star, a paper with over a million circulation. The story, of course, was unfounded. What he should have said is that Dungan, with the heavy weight and responsibility of his present position, merely purchased a Ford in Rochester, New York.

It is hoped that more people will note, favorably, upon the fact that an eight page issue of the Tar Heel was "on the street" by Friday, the first day of school. But it is more to be hoped that the readers will remark that in spite of the temptations that so beset the editors, they courageously and manfully refused to print a story about "Freshman Week." No sad sighs for good old Freshman Weeks nor any playful comments about the ignorance of the neophytes. It shows intelligence may be one of the tools of issuing a paper, after all.

Ray Farris is in town, just trying to be helpful along political lines. Being strictly non-partisan ourselves, we wonder just how much value there will be to the Democratic party in having Ray hang around here. The thinking students who are eligible to vote, need not be told, except by scientific explanations, as to who or why to vote. The lethargic voters are rarely vitalized by a drummer-up of votes. And the only other class of students, viewed from this angle, are the dumb ones, and they're faithful, ardent Democrats, anyway—so, what's the use Ray?

After all, there's just as much joy in telling what you did during the summer as it was in actually doing it. Which serves as an introductory statement to one of the funniest stories, if true, told in any of the bull-sessions held last night. One of the several North Carolina students who went to Europe this summer was in Paris for three days just before embarking on the boat-train which would carry him to Cherbourg, and thence on to the steamer to home. There is a statement recorded in some very ancient document that the key to a man's character may be had if you find out what he does in Paris the first night he is there.

The student in question would, we now, prefer not have his character read from his Parisian activities for they were, from the very start, nothing but a round of drinks. In short, after three days of Paris, he could no longer stay up. He was lifted on the train at Paris, carried off at Cherbourg, and literally poured on the transatlantic boat. And for three days he continued drinking and remaining in the comotose state in his cabin. With the fourth day at sea, a tremendous storm came up and for two days there was nothing but the pounding and breaking of tremendous waves to be heard. All the deck chairs were broken, parts of the ship carried away, life-boats smashed, and the boat looked in quite a bad way. All this served to sober up the Tar Heel to a certain degree, and he managed to crawl up stairs to the promenade deck only to see this terrible state of affairs—chairs broken, window panes shattered, lamps swinging idly with no attachements, etc. Mournfully, yet with a note of panic to be seen, the Carolina student proceeded to the purser (he's sort of the secretary-treasurer of the ship) and told him, "I know I must have been mighty drunk the past few nights to do all that damage, but if you'll tell me what the bill is, I'll pay it."

NEW YORK TIMES LAUDS N. C. BOOK

Hobbs' "North Carolina: Economic and Social" Used as Textbook Here Commended.

Although S. H. Hobbs, Jr., has been using his book, North Carolina; Economic and Soeidl as a textbook in his classes all summer, The New York Times Book Review first printed a review of the book two weeks ago on September 7th. It is of interest not only for its criticism on the book, but also for its comment on the University.

The University of North Carolina is unique in its possession of a department of rural, or home-State, social economics which was founded fifteen years ago by Professor E. C. Branson, an enthusiast in the conviction that thoroughgoing knowledge of one's own State is an essential of competent citizenship. The author of this book has been associated with him in the faculty of this department ever since it was organized and for the greater part of that time has taught a course bearing the same ground as this volume. The wide interest in it is indicated by the fact that he has given it to students in residence, by correspondence and through extension classes. And he notes in his preface that a similar course is to be included hereafter in the public school curriculum of the State. It is an interesting educational movement, and the rapidity with which it has made its way in North Carolina illustrates the vigorous influence which can be exerted by a state university when it seeks to meet a real need of the community.

Professor Hobb's book stands out among books dealing with localities because of its author's frankness, his desire to set forth the exact truth and his determination not to admit into his text rhetorical patches or patriotic outbursts. His many years of research into the social and economic conditions of his home state have given him comprehensive knowledge of them, and his purpose in this book is to set it all down with scientific accuracy and impartial statement, whether creditable or otherwise. He writes of the State's physical resources—land, soils, water power, minerals, climate, forests, resorts, fishing, hunting—of its agriculture, population, industry, education, public health and welfare work, State and county government, wealth, transportation, farm tenancy, typography, social and economic characteristics of its several regions. A wealth of classified and tabulated statistics and of maps and charts makes a solid foundation for the work. But much lucid, humanized and illuminating text describes and discusses the social and economic conditions which they outline.

McINTOSH FINDS HUGE STONE FACE

C. E. McIntosh of the University's school of education saw something on his recent vacation trip to the mountains. Many things, but something in particular. He tells about it in the following communication:

"My brother, J. W. McIntosh of Lenoir, invited me to bring my family to his camp at Edgemont for a wee's vacation, and also sent down to Lincoln county for my mother and father. We bathing of Wilson's creek for afternoon several of the party took a stroll up Rainbow Trail, into the heart of Pisgah Forest. The trail is a government road, having been blasted from the who is in charge of the government's reservation there.

"As we walked along a cliff near Edgemont, I saw on the side of one of the large rocks as fine a likeness of a soldier as Gutzon Borglum will ever carve on Stone Mountain. Knowing that I had taken nothing calculated to stimulate the imagination, I asked the other members of the party to look around them and see if they could find anything remarkable. Each one present found the 'man in stone' in a few moments, and all marvelled that a likeness so perfect could result from a mere accidental blast of dynamite.

"At a distance of 50 or 75 benignant American general. The drooping mustache, shaggy eye-brows, piercing eyes, and officer's hat are all perfect. As one approaches the rock on which the figure appears, the mouth becomes less attractive, until it finally gives the impression of extreme anger. The figure remains visible, however, within some six or eight feet of the stony face.

"The face appears to be something like two feet in diameter and is not more than seven feet from the ground. Yes, it is there and any of you who chance by may take a look at my discovery entirely without charge."

A magistrate remarked last week that marriage means the end of a man's troubles. He didn't say which end.—The Humorist.

Former Carolina Man Is Now Tree Surgeon

By Louis Graves

When I heard a few weeks ago that Thomas W. Brown, a former student here, known on the campus as Tom Brown, had become a wandering tree surgeon, I wrote to him and asked him to tell something about what he was doing.

"When I quit college and said I was going to be a tree surgeon," he writes, "my friends shook their heads sadly and intimated that I was ruining my life.

"I did not say much about what I was going to do because I hardly knew what it was all about myself. However, I boarded the train one night in the summer of '28 and the next night I found myself in Kent, Ohio, ready to begin the training required before I was sent into the field to work as a tree surgeon. Previous to this trip to Ohio, I had been outside of N. C. only once, and that was on a trip to Atlanta.

"I have now been doctoring trees 2 1-2 years. In checking up on a map I find that I have been in 23 states and up into Ontario, Canada. I have worked in Detroit, Newport, R. I., Niagara Falls, N. Y., St. Louis, a dozen central Illinois towns, including Springfield, Danville and Peoria Davenport, Ia., Birmingham and northern Alabama, and last but not least, Westchester county and New York City. While I was in Alabama we were caught in a flood and were cut off from the rest of the world for nearly two weeks.

"Last winter I was called in to our headquarters to attend the Davey Institute of Tree Surgery. This school is the only one of its kind in the world and is run by the Davey Tree Expert Co. for their employees.

"The thing that has impressed me most is the friendly manner in which people have accepted me everywhere I have been. It seems that almost everyone loves trees and flowers and even the grouchiest individual will open up and smile if you get him out and show him that you know some thing about nature.

should be a place where we may "develop excellence without snobbery, democracy without vulgarity."

In his concluding remarks, Mr. Graham devoted a few minutes to the problem of mastering the mind and the body, of learning to live "a mastered life. . . . Your life here is to be the fruitage and the flower of what's in you. . . . It's your life, your University, and your opportunity. No American pioneer ever faced an adventure more thrilling than that which calls to you from this University, along the frontiers of your unmastered life and the frontiers of our yet unmastered civilization. May your hearts be stout as you face the trail towards the great tomorrow," Mr. Graham concluded.

This and the other talks were addressed to the new men.

VARSITY SQUAD WILL SCRIMMAGE THIS AFTERNOON

Collins Will Give His Team Second Workout Before Wake Forest Game.

The coaches of the nation's second highest grid scoring machine last year continued to drive their charges on at a rapid pace yesterday. With the commencement of a "rocky road to Dublin" schedule just around the corner the coaches are still trying to find their best starting combination.

The second scrimmage session of the year will be held at Kenan Stadium this afternoon. Many changes probably will develop in the first line, for Coach Collins was disappointed with the blocking of the inexperienced men in the Tar Heel forward wall. Some idea as to the starting linup for the Wake Forest game may be had after today's scrimmage, since the game is only one week away.

With a herd of fast experienced backs on the squad again, the backfield presents no problem of which to speak. Captain Nash, Jim Magner, Jimmy Maus, Rip Slusser, Pete Wyrick, Johnnie Branch, and Henry House looked fine in practice yesterday. These men will cause much trouble before the year is out—for the opposing teams. Chuck Erickson was on the field also, but, due to a slight injury he took things light. Erickson is one of the best broken field runners in Dixie.

The line offers a problem to Coach Collins and his assistants. However, there is plenty of material on the squad. How this material will stand up under fire remains to be seen. Both Ned Lipscome and Red Gilbreath are showing up fine. They are among the two best centers in the South. Fysal, veteran hold-over from last year's team, is idle for the present due to a minor injury. McDade, who looked like the "rock of Gibraltar" in the frosh line year, is looking better and better at tackle. June Underwood has made a very good showing too. However, both men are still untested. George Thompson, the only veteran tackle on the team, is also sure to clinch a tackle post in the first string line.

If those ends were as good on the offense as they are on the defense! Red Parsley and Herb Nelson, both lettermen, are showing up fine. There is still room for a great deal of improvement in their offensive play, however. Irwin Walker, one of the sophs, is looking great. They will have to step lively to keep up the pace set last year by Fenner and Holt.

There are a number of lettermen back for the guard positions. Elliott Newcombe, Charlotte boy, is looking good at this position. The veterans Blackwood, Crew, and McIver, are all scrapping hard for first string assignments, and don't forget Fysal either.

While the rain may not be welcome, the cooler weather of the past few days is very helpful. The second scrimmage of the season is set for this afternoon. Speculation continues as to who will be in the starting line. So far the coaches have given no inkling as to who will be in the line a week from today against the Deacons. The Deacons lost only one or two men last year and are expected to bring a stronger team to Kenan Stadium this time.

Tar Heels Strong at Center

Ned Lipscomb and Red Gilbreath Two of Best Centers in South.

The centers of the Tar Heel line will be one of the strongest positions on the team with Ned Lipscomb and Red Gilbreath as candidates for the post. Lipscomb is the only veteran lineman from the 1929 team who played regularly all season, and he will lend much strength to the inexperienced line which the Tar Heels will have this year.

Gilbreath, who was one of the stars on the 1928 championship freshman team, saw a great deal of action as substitute for Lipscomb last year. He has been showing up well in practice, and is running Lipscomb a close race for the position.

Ned Lipscomb was one of the greatest centers ever to play in a North Carolina high school. His work at Greensboro High for four years was known throughout the state.

NED LIPSCOMB

RED GILBREATH

Red Gilbreath came to Carolina from Texas where he held an enviable record for his playing in the middle of the line.

BIG FIVE SEASON UNDERWAY WITH CONTESTS TODAY

First Illuminated Game in State Scheduled to Be Played Last Night.

The 1930 football season in North Carolina opened last night when the Lenoir-Rhyne Mountain Bears met Atlantic Christian College at Hickory. This was the first college football game ever to be played at night in North Carolina.

Big Five football starts today when Davidson plays Elon at Davidson this afternoon. State College Wolfpack will meet High Point College at West Raleigh tonight. The only other North Carolina eleven opening the season this week is Guilford College. The Quakers go into Virginia this afternoon to meet Emory and Henry at Emory.

North Carolina football will not get into full swing until next Saturday, when Carolina starts with Wake Forest. Another Big Five contest will be played at Greensboro on the same day when State College plays the Davidson Wildcats under the flood lights at Greensboro.

Fans will get a chance tonight to see what has been going on over at State College for the past few weeks. Judging from pre-season dope, the Wolfpack expects to do big things this season. They had a rather disastrous season last year, but their freshman team was very good, and they have several of the stars of the 1928 outfit who were out of school last year. The High Point team is expected to lose to State, but the Panthers have shown considerable strength in early workouts. Both teams have been having signal drills and scrimmages for the past few nights under the flood lights, so that they will be used to the illuminated field when they meet tonight.

Monk Younger is as gloomy as ever. He said at practice on Thursday, "That is the greatest bunch of loafers that I have ever seen. We won't win a single football game if they play like they did yesterday." In spite of all this Davidson will have one of the heaviest lines that she has had for several years, and will show a group of experienced backfield candidates. Captain Fraley, McCall, Brock, Brohard, and others are back from last years team which surprised the state by defeating Duke 13-12.

Night football, being new and quite a fad in this section, probably will draw a large crowd to Riddick Field tonight for the Wolfpack-Panther game. It remains to be seen whether it will become sufficiently popular for the other teams to follow suit and have their contests under the giant flood lights.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

Bryant Grant, number one man on last year's crack freshman team and school champion, has just returned from a hard summer campaign with a lot of brand new titles the most notable of which is the national clay championship. Bryant was down as just another entry, but he soon woke up the spectators and experts by eliminating a well known player right off the bat. Bryant kept up his spectacular form climaxing it with a brilliant victory over Wilmer "Junior" Coen, Davis Cup Alternate, to gain the title. Grant's smashing tactics brought praise from all the experts who predicted great things of the diminutive Atlantan.

In Wilmer Hines, number two man on last year's frosh, Carolina has another national champion. Wilmer annexed the title in Indiana last August running through a star field of entries with very little trouble.

With these two men to carry on the burden of the work, it looks like Carolina will boast her greatest tennis team in years. Supporting Hines and Grant will be Liskin and Hendlin, who between themselves won the doubles' and singles' titles of North Carolina with the latter carrying off the singles championship, Yoemans and Captain "Sonny" Graham.

Charlie Farmer, Carolina's speed merchant and Southern 220 champion, kept himself in trim during the summer by running the nation's speed stars ragged. In the national senior championships held at Pittsburg last August, Charlie came in fourth. Since George Simpson, the Ohio State flash, Eddie Tolan, whose record of 9.4 is accepted as the world mark, and Claude Bracey of Rice Institute were in the field, Charlie's showing was not so bad. Decidedly not. That Lawson Robertson, coach of the University of Pennsylvania's track team and dean of American coaches, thought that Charlie was quite the stuff was evident when he placed Farmer on the United States team to face the British Empire squad. "Watch Out for Farmer" will be the watchword of track experts throughout the land.

Coming back to baseball, Tar Heels are making quite a name for themselves along the professional baseball front.

Wesley Ferrell, pitcher with the Cleveland Indians, was recently named on an all star team by the concensus of opinion of ten sport writers. Wes was one of four to gain that position unanimously.

Saw Bill Werber prance around the short field for Albany in the Eastern League. The former Duke slugger is the leading stickman in his circuit and has fielded spectacularly. As soon as the league season terminated, Bill was recalled by the Yankees.

Two of Duke's last year stars hold an informal reunion whenever Albany and Springfield meet. The principals are Bill Werber of the Solons and little "Lefty" Jenkins of the Hampdens. "Lefty" started off as one of Springfield's bull pen hurlers but at the end of the season was their ace.

CAROLINA VIRGINIA GAMES NOT WHAT THEY USED TO BE

Local Editor Holds Present-Day Thrill Practically Is Nihil.

(Louis Graves in The Chapel Hill Weekly)

It happens that analyses of the Virginia football team and the Carolina football team appear in the newspapers both on the same day.

Back for play this fall Virginia is to have 9 of last year's letter-men, Carolina is to have 21. So it looks as if the Cavaliers are in for another sound walloping.

This thing is going too far. It is getting monotonous.

By reasons of its infrequency a triumph over Virginia used to be an achievement of the first magnitude; and so the annual brought the big thrill of the year. As the fateful day drew near, the campus and the village quivered with excitement. Palpitant citizens would gather in groups on the street and speculate upon whether or not, this season, our team could break the evil spell. The letter V, done in orange on a blue sweater, was the terror of the alphabet.

Now the Virginia game is just one of the eight or ten on the schedule. We observe the slaughter with a casual sort of interest and cheer indulgently when by some accident the enemy makes a touchdown—all without a flutter of the pulse. This is no fun—certainly not for an old-timer like me.

In the piece of Mr. Beirne's, which I reprinted recently from the Baltimore Evening Sun, he recalled his student days at the University of Virginia, saying: "Our football season always concluded with the Carolina game in Richmond. There was never any question as to the outcome of the game. Virginia always won. No matter how disastrous the season had been, it always ended in a burst of glory. The Carolinians never refused to act as the sacrificial goats."

Well do I remember. Over a stretch of several years I was myself one of those sacrificial goats. When we were not beaten over 12 to 0 we came back home and had a parade, and if we achieved a tie we had both a parade and a bonfire. The year after I left college Carolina won, by some strange freak of fortune, and friends wrote me that the community was so dazed and palsied by the wonder of the thing that it was incapable of celebrating at all.

What a difference now! We have here a group of super-efficient coaches from the Middle West. High schools all over the state obligingly drill scores of players for us and pour them in every fall. Not only that, but one of the principal functions of Virginia's excellent private schools seems to be to train football players for Carolina. Woodberry Forest, which is only a few miles out of Charlottesville, is the notable example. Our captain this year, Nash, was prepared for us by the Messrs. Walker, the University of Virginia alumni who conduct Woodberry. Thus we not only aid ourself to beat Virginia at football, but Virginia contributes its valuable aid to the same worthy end.

All this may be agreeable to many Carolinians, who remember the long string of defeats and want to keep piling up revenge, but I am against it. To think of it—that I should have to be hearing talk, not of our chances against Virginia, but of what we will do against Georgia Tech and Tennessee! The old Thanksgiving Day thrill is gone. And it won't come back until we face the foe with a fair degree of fear and trembling. My football battle cry, then is: More and Better Players for Virginia.

But more and better players will not solve the problem. I am convinced that Virginia will never overcome its jinx until Armistead Dobie is prevented from making speeches at the Virginia Students' mass meeting preceding the game. He was here teaching law this summer, and at a party at Archibald Henderson's he told us that he had spoken at all the mass meetings in recent years. And in this period the Virginia performance on Thanksgiving Day has gone from bad to worse. His eloquence, meant to stimulate, seems to act as a depressant. I heard R. D. W. Connor tell Mr. Dobie, that evening at the Henderson home: "If it weren't for the fact that we frown on commercialization, we could afford to pay your athletic association a handsome sum for the assurance that you would address the Virginia team just before it meets ours every year."

Frosh Practice

There will be freshman football practice this afternoon on the freshman field at 2:30 o'clock. Coaches Enright and Farris request that all candidates for the team be at the field on time for practice.

SIDEWALK JOB IS LET TO COBB JR.

Young Collier Cobb Is Conducting Work on Franklin Avenue.

The contract for the regrading and paving of the sidewalk on the south side of Franklin street, from Columbia street down beyond the bakery, has been let by the town to Cobb and Homewood, the firm of which Collier Cobb, Jr., is senior partner. The amount to be paid, about $1,500, does not fall upon the taxpayers; it is covered by assessments upon the abutting property.

Under the terms of the contract the time allowed for the work is 60 days, but Mr. Cobb says he expects to get through with it in a week or so.

The contract with Cobb and Homewood includes the construction of the steps in front of the bakery and nearby buildings. The steps are made necessary by the lowering of the sidewalk.

The Texas Company will soon tear down the frame building on the corner—the building which used to be known as the Roberson store and was more recently the Berman store—and will go ahead with the erection of a filling station.

The two structures to the east, one occupied by R. A. Eubanks and the other by the express company, presented a problem because the cutting away of the sidewalk would leave their floors several feet above the street level. Dr. Foy Roberson, representing the Roberson estate, owner of both the properties, came over from Durham one day this week, and worked out a solution in consultation with the town manager and the tenants. Along the front of each building will be built a retaining wall, and a flight of interior steps will lead up from the sidewalk to the present floor level.

The ordinance adopted by the aldermen, directing the improvement, provides that there be left a broad planting strip between the curb and the concrete sidewalk. Trees are to be set out here under the direction of W. C. Coker and are to be cared for by the town.

Lights mounted on posts, of exactly the same design as those now on the north side of the block, will be put up at regular intervals along the curb from the corner eastward.

The sidewalk on Columbia street, for about a hundred feet from the corner, alongside the filling station property, is also to be paved with concrete, but this is not included in the Cobb contract. The work there will be done in conjunction with the erection of the station.

ARRANGE HOURS FOR LOAN OFFICE

Anticipating a large demand for loan fund help, Dean F. F. Bradshaw has arranged for specific business hours for the loan office. In order to speed up the business, it is necessary that all applicants come to 204 South building during the hours designated and ask for the loan fund desk.

The hours named by Dean Bradshaw are 10 to 11 o'clock in the morning and 2:30 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, except on Saturdays when the office is closed at noon.

In regards to the loan fund, this statement has been issued from the dean's office: "Judging from summer correspondence, a great deal of assistance will be needed from the loan fund. The University is trying, through every possible method, to care for all cases of genuine need. is essentially an investment. To is essentially an invsstment. To get an education on credit is, then, a fundamentally sound idea."

Mrs. Peele Owns Paper

Mrs. Joseph Peele, formerly Miss Catherine Groves of Chapel Hill, has become co-owner, with her husband, of the Edenton Daily News and its associated weeklies, the News of Hertford and the Progress of Columbia. The three papers were bought from Clark Kinnaird.

They circulate in the counties of Chowan, Bertie, Gates, Perquimans, Washington, and Tyrrell. These counties lie in the northeastern part of North Carolina known as the Albemarle.

As Catherine Groves, Mrs. Peele was one of the most brilliant pupils in Oscar Coffin's journalism class year before last. Upon his recommendation Herbert Peele offered her a place on the Elizabeth City Advance. She started in there in the fall of 1929, and three or four months later her friends in Chapel Hill were informed of her engagement to Joseph Peele, the editor's brother and associate. The marriage took place February 1.

Mr. Peele will be editor of the three papers and Mrs. Groves managing editor.

The Edenton News presents an innovation in the way of a masthead for the editorial page. Not only are the names of the editor and managing editor set down; everybody in the shop is listed, with his or her title: the city editor, the advertising manager, the machinist, the social editor and book-keeper, the compositor-operator, the pressman, and the two apprentices.

LANIER IS NEW SELF-HELP MAN

Coming From Job at Thomasville Orphanage, Georgia Man Succeeds Grady Leonard.

Ewdin Lanier has succeeded Grady Leonard as self-help secretary of the University Y. M. C. A. Mr. Leonard has returned to his insurance work.

Mr. Lanier, who attended the University between 1920-24, was one of the most outstanding self-help students during his career here, thus acquiring a rich background for his present work.

For the past six years Mr. Lanier has been in charge of athletics, student personnel and other activities at the Thomasville Orphanage, at Thomasville. There he worked with 600 boys and girls in the high school, directing their student life, scouting activities, etc.

During the past summer he attended summer school here, completing work for his A. B. degree. On September 1 he took over the duties at the Y. Since that time he has made thorough survey and canvass of the town to locate the maximum number of jobs for self-helpers.

His office is at the counter in the lobby of the Y. Although he is being allowed by the Y. M. C. A. board of directors to take one course, he will be on duty during the most of the day.

Boxing Candidates Asked To Report

Coach Crayton Rowe announced yesterday that fall boxing practice will begin next Monday. Coach Rowe, who will be assisted by Archie Allen, captain of last year's ringmen, asks that all candidates for the freshman and varsity teams who are not out for another sport, report to him at the Tin Can, Monday afternoon between 3:30 and 6 P. M. to get equipment. Actual practice will begin Tuesday. All of last year's varsity and freshman squads as well as all interested freshmen and men who competed in the intramural tournament last spring, are urged to report Monday. Coach Rowe, in his interview with the Tar Heel reporter, pointed out that opportunities for letters and numerals are always great, and the chance for physical improvement is unlimited. Boxing was made a major sport by action of the Athletic Association last year, and it is hoped that there will be a large turnout of men seeking to eventually wear the coveted monogram.

Two Tennis Stars Are Back In University

Bryan Grant of Atlanta, Ga., and Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., after having won triumphs months, have returned to the University to be team-mates on the Carolina tennis squad. They were freshmen last year and so were not eligible for the varsity.

Grant won the Southern championship in the summer just ended. Among the players whom he defeated were Clifford Sutter of Tulane, national college title holder, and Fritz Mercur of Pennsylvania, who ranked No. 5 on the national list last year.

Hines won the Southern junior and the national junior titles. With Beaver of Gainesville, Ga., he won the Southern doubles

Additional Stop Signals May Be Installed Here

In giving directions to strangers entering the town, Chapel Hillians have more than once used the stop light at the corner of Franklin and Columbia streets as a center and refer to it as the "only signal light in town." If the plan that is now under consideration of a special committee appointedly the councilmen is carried through, Chapel Hill may lose this distinction.

It has been proposed that a second signal light be erected at the Carolina Inn corner and that there should be flashing beacons at the corner of Franklin and Henderson, where the post-office is located, and at the corner of Franklin and Hillsboro, at the co-ed building. As has been stated before, this plan has not been approved by the councilmen, but the problem is being investigated by a special committee.

Literary Societies Will Hold Meetings

The Phi Assembly, University literary society, will hold its first meeting of the year Tuesday night according to an announcement made by the president of the Phi, Mayne Albright. The Di Senate, the other campus literary society, will probably hold its first session at the same time, although no official notice of the meeting has been given out.

The meeting of the Assembly Tuesday will be open for members only and all are urged to attend. The following meeting will open so that prospective members can attend and see the workings of the society. President Albright would like to have all new men hold this fact in mind and attend at the proper time.

Ticket Sale Is On

The University Athletic Association has launched its ticket sale, for the 1930 football season, by sending out to every alumnus a set of order blanks for six games—five here in Chapel Hill and the Virginia game at Charlottesville on Thanksgiving Day.

The most important event here is the match with Georgia Tech Saturday, November 1, and that day is designated as Homecoming. Day. The other four matches on the home grounds are: September 27, Wake Forest; October 11, Maryland; November 8, N .C. State; December 6, Duke.

Away from Chapel Hill there are five matches: October 4, V. P. I. at Blacksburg, Va.; October 18, Georgia at Athens; October 25, Tennessee at Knoxville; November 15, Davidson at Davidson; November 27 Thanksgiving Day), Virginia at Charlottesville.

The order blanks for reserved seats received by every alumnus are in the form of six cards of six distinct colors. These are to be mailed, with a check, to the University Athletic Association. The price for admission to the Georgia Tech, the Virginia, and the Duke games is $2.50; for the Wake Forest, State and Maryland games, $2. For transmission of the tickets by registered mail 20 cents must be added.

Glenn Holder has been appointed assistant to the Alumni Secretary.

Hobgood Succeeds Mac Covington As Swain Hall Manager

Hamilton Hobgood, junior from Bunn, N. C., has succeeded Mac Covington as head waiter of Swain Hall, the student dining hall, and J. O. Griffin has succeeded W. B. Morgan in the capacity of assistant head waiter, Obie Harmon, head of Swain Hall, has announced.

The position Hobgood now has, Mr. Harmon stated, is the leading job that self-help students can gain in Swain Hall and the men are chosen after several years' experience and faithful work.

Mr. Harmon expects that Swain Hall will be filled to capacity this fall as soon as school gets under way and the dining room will feed 750 students.

The meal hours for the hall will be, for the present: breakfast at 7:45 to 8:45; dinner at 12:30, 1:00 and 2:00; and supper at 6:30 to 7:15. The regular board at Swain Hall is $22 per month or 25 cents per meal.

Farris To Assist In Coaching Freshmen

Ray Farris, whose name still lingers on at the University as a triple-threat star of recent football teams as well as president of the student body during 1929-30, is once more on the campus. Rather than seeking knowledge as of yore, Farris, one of the few North Carolinians who have been prominently mentioned as material for the mythical all-American football team, is here to impart the technique of voting (for the Democratic party) to those students who, having but recently arrived at the age of manhood and voting priviliges, will cast their ballots for the first time this coming election in November.

Soon after he graduated from schol, Farris allied himself with the young Democrats of North Carolina and during the past three months he has been engaged in organizing the youthful voters of ninety-five counties of this state. He is to stay here at Chapel Hill for some time, and it is his hope that he will be able to render assistance to students, and others who would like to be initiated into the intricacies of the ballot.

DAILY TAR HEEL STAFF ORGANIZES IN MEET TONIGHT

Reporters, Editorial and Feature Writers to Meet At Seven.

Tonight at 7 o'clock there will be a meeting of the staff of the Daily Tar Heel in its office in the rear of Alumni building. All former members of the staff are requested to be present, and all new men who are interested in trying out for positions on the staff are asked to report. Previous experience in newspaper work, while desirable, is not at all necessary. All men who have done work on prep school and high school papers are especially desired.

A position on the Tar Heel staff is held an enviable one by Carolina students. Last year, under the leadership of Editor Holder, Managing Editor Yarborough, and Business Manager Alexander, the paper made its first start as a daily publication and was considered a great success by the students, as a vote of confidence by the student body showed.

This year the staff will be led by Will Yarborough as editor, Jack Dungan as managing editor, and "Pat" Patterson as business manager, and indications point toward an even more successful publication this year. The paper has rapidly gained fame in college circles throughout the country. To be a member of the editorial staff, and even of the reportorial staff, is considered an honor on the University campus.

Aside from the distinction to be gained, a wealth of valuable

TIN CAN IS MOST USEFUL BUILDING ON U. N. C. CAMPUS

Huge Tin Structure Is Now Used for Registration, Receptions and Commencement Dances.

By Will Yarborough

It is extremely doubtful if the planers of the Tin Can, the University of North Carolina's large athletic arena, foresaw the usefulness of the structure when they set out to enlarge Carolina's athletic equipment. Certainly few of them could have imagined at that time that it would become just about the most useful building here.

But it has. Condemnation of Memorial Hall last spring left the registration officials without an adequate building for registering the students enrolling here this week. The Tin Can was the solution.

Back in 1923 when Carolina basketball teams were winning titles with monotonous regularity it became evident that Bynum Gymnasium was inadequate As no money was available for an up-to-date gym, the Tin Can was built. Three hundred feet long and one hundred feet wide the structure was suitable for almost every need of the athletic authorities.

It was completed in January 1924 and dedicated at the Carolina-Mercer basketball game. Carolina won that night 35-23 and contnued winning until it had captured its second consecutive Conference title.

Hubert Heffner Is Back From Chicago

Professor Hubert Heffner has returned from a full summer of study at the University of Chicago, where he has been for the past two months or more working in the university library on a history of melodrama which he hopes to publish sometime in the future.

A large part of Professor Heffner's work during the summer consisted of teaching courses in melodrama and comparative drama at Northwestern University, which is near the University of Chicago. Besides doing the work of teaching and working on his history, the University of North Carolina professor also found time to help three graduate students who were attending North Western University.

Professor Heffner stated that he enjoyed his summer's stay at Chicago. The work done by him during the summer months will undoubtedly be of aid to the Carolna Playmakers this coming season.

SELDEN RETURNS TO PLAYMAKERS

Dramatic Group Planning "Bigger and Better Year."

Pointing to the return of Samuel Selden, technical director, from a year of study in New York, and to a wealth of material in the form of new students coming to Carolina especially for courses in playwriting and acting, and numerous former members, both graduate and undergraduate, the Carolina Playmakers are looking forward to an unusual year under the direction of F. H. Koch, director, Hubert Heffner, associate director, and Mr. Selden.

Selden, who has been on leave of absence studying in New York, returns to Chapel Hill from a profitable year. His office was filled last year by Elmer Hall of Massachusetts.

A number of students interested in the type of work the Playmakers are doing and the courses given by Professors Koch, Heffner and Selden, have come to Carolina particularly to take that kind of work. In addition to these, there are a number of Carolina graduates taking playmaking work and there are a number of undergraduates here to do the same.

Mrs. Loretto Carroll Bailey, author of "Job's Kinfolks" and several one-act plays, has just completed another long play and also another one-act play. Professor Hudson, a new member of the faculty in the department of English, has written a one-act play, which the Playmakers expect to use during the coming year.

The schedule now under consideration by the Playmakers for the school year of 1930-31

Business Staff Call

The business department of the Daily Tar Heel will hold its final tryout meeting Sunday night at 7:15 in the basement of the Alumni building. Pat Patterson, business manager, is very anxious to have as many men as possible. This invitation is extended to freshmen as well as upperclassmen.

STATE RED CROSS TO CONVENE HERE

Representatives of State Chapters Will Gather October 8 To Hear Speakers.

Representatives of a number of Red Cross chapters in North Carolina will gather here for a one-day session beginning at 10:30 o'clock, October 8. The meeting will be open to the public and everyone is invited.

The University Extension Division, with Morgan F. Vining, director of short courses and lectures, in charge, is assisting in completing arrangements with Mrs. Elsie Mulliken, national field representative. The Chapel Hill chapter with Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt as chairman, will act as host to the visitors.

President Frank Graham is personally interested in the success of the Conference and has expressed a desire that all who can will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending it. The conference keynote—"The Red Cross in the Home"—cries out the idea of the "Live-at-Home" program of Governor Gardner. It will be the first meeting of the State Red Cross at Chapel Hill.

Present at the luncheon will be speakers of national prominence, including Miss Mabel Boardman, volunteer executive secretary for the national board of directors in Washington, D. C., President Graham will make an informal address at this time. Judge Winston will be toastmaster.

In the discussions at the afternoon session the problems of the veterans will receive major emphasis. Miss Helen Taylor, Red Cross recreational director at Oteen, will tell of the ex-soldiers quartered in this government hospital.

In conjunction with the adult meeting there will be held a separate conference at 2:00 P. M. for members of the Junior Red Cross. Under the personal guidance of a national representative children from the schools enrolled over the state will conduct their own meeting apart from their elders. Weather permitting they will gather on the campus in front of the new library. Otherwise, their conference will take place in Person Hall.

The day's program will come to a close with an hour's reading by Prof. Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers.

Valentines Moving

The Valentines are moving from North street to Chase avenue near the Pittsboro highway.

Dormitory Socials

Each dormitory on the campus will have a "get-together" meeting at 10:15 Monday night, September 22. The dormitory officers will visit the rooms and collect funds for the purchase of refreshments. The general program for the evening will be election of councilmen for the various floors of the dormitories, explanation of the service rooms, intramural athletic programs, and consideration of particular dormitory problems. These smokers give the men rooming in dormitories an excellent chance to get acquainted with each other. New men are especially urged to turn out for the occasion.

New Y Secretary

The above cut of Edwin Lanier, new self-help secretary at the Y, lay on the ground outside Alumni building for some 18 hours while the Tar Heel staff searched high and low, far and wide, to find it. It was to have appeared with a story about Mr. Lanier in yesterday's paper. As you see, it was found, and here it is—Mr. Lanier.

Y TO COMMENCE YEAR'S ACTIVITIES

First Meeting Comes Off Monday; Freshman Council to Be Organized.

The first meeting of the junior-senior and sophomore Y cabinets will be held tomorrow night in the Y. M. C. A. council rooms at 7:15.

It is the plan of President Hamer that the two cabinets meet in a joint session for the purpose of discussing plans for the year 1930-31. The work and duties of the different committees will also be discussed. The chairmen and members of the several committees, however, will not be appointed until the next meeting, states Hamer.

It is the Y. M. C. A. officials' desire that all old men be present at this opening meeting of the year. All upperclassmen interested in Y work who have not been connected with the association in the past are also requested to attend the Monday night meeting.

Jimmie Kurfees, president of the friendship council last year, has been working with Mr. Lanier, self-help secretary of the Y, for the past few days making plans for the Ex-Hi-Y banquet which is to be held on Friday night, September 26, in the social rooms of the Methodist church. All freshmen who were members of Hi-Y clubs last year and all those interested in Y work will be given opportunity to give in their names at the Y. M. C. A. building some time during the coming week.

Last year there were over 70 freshmen who were present at the Ex-Hi-Y banquet, and the Y. M. C. A. is looking for a larger number to attend the luncheon this year. Officers for the friendship council wil l be elected at this time.

The program for the dinner will probably consist of one or two talks by a member of the faculty and one of the student leaders on the campus. The Y

Buccaneer Staff To Meet On Monday

The entire staff of the Carolina Buccaneer will meet Monday night in the Buccaneer office, Alumni building basement. The art and editorial departments will convene at 7:15, and the business staff at 7:30. Editor Kermit Wheary urges all old and new students to be in attendance.

Theatre Managers To Assemble Here

Managers of Publix-Saenger theatres in North Carolina will assemble here Friday, September 26, as guests of the Carolina Theatre for the regular managers' meeting.

E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre, said today that R. B. Wilby, of Atlanta, Ga., vice-president of the Publix-Saenger chain, and Jack Barry, of New York, head of the personnel department of the organization, will be among 30 managers and other officials expected here for the meeting.

The opening session will be held Friday morning in Gerrard Hall. President Frank Graham will welcome the visitors, and after this a business meeting will be held. Lunch will be served at the Carolina Inn.

Addresses by H. F. Kincey, of Greensboro, general manager of North Carolina, and M. S. Hill, also of Greensboro, assistant general manager, will feature the afternoon session.

Managers from Winston-Salem, Hendersonville, Salisbury, High Point, Greensboro, Burlington, Durham, Raleigh, Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Rocky Mt., and Wilson are expected here for the meeting.

DORMITORY CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

At First Meeting Friday Night; History of Organization Is Outlined.

The Carolina Dormitory Club, composed of self-help students operating service rooms in every dormitory, began its second year with a meeting Friday night by electing officers and having the new regulations of the organization read.

The Dormitory Club was organized last year under the supervision of the buildings department of the University consolidated service plants, when agents were prohibited from coming into the dormitories because of the annoyance and thefts caused by the easy access of all kinds of persons to the dormitories.

The service rooms were established in every dormitory and were put in the charge of self-help students rendering partially the services of agents. The commissions and profits derived from the stores, on an average, paid for the board of the operators.

The new rules of the service rooms are hardly any different from last year's. The chief difference is that a standardized list of articles and services is suggested which in no way are aimed to interfere with the trade of local merchants.

The stores will handle candy, chewing gum, bottled drinks, milk, sandwiches, fruit, peanuts, smoking tobacco and matches, tooth paste, shaving cream, soap, hair tonic, pressing, shoe repairing, writing materials, pennants and banners of local merchants. This is a complete list of authorized articles.

The new officers of the organization are: J. B. Parker, president; R. H. Morgan, vice-president; and J. E. Huffman, secretary.

Eric Merritt in Florida

Eric Merritt left Monday night for Blountstown, Florida, to be assistant principal and director of athletics in the high school there.

WARD DISCUSSES MINOR CHANGES IN RUSHING RULES

Executive Council Announces Plans for Distributing Invitations and Making Dates.

Meeting Friday night, the executive committee of the Intrafraternity Council discussed and made one minor change in the rushing rules for 1930. Jack Ward president of the Council presided.

By-law No. 2 of the rushing rules, which deals with fraternity invitations was thoroughly gone over and plans made for its strict enforcement. The date when invitations are to be turned in to the Dean of Students for presentation to the Freshmen, was changed from September 25 to September 24. This section of the rules now reads as follows:

"Rushing for the first two days (i. e., September 27th and 28th) shall be done by invitation. During these two days rushing shall be restricted to fraternity houses. Cards will be distributed to the fraternities on which they are to write (one name to the card) the full name, the home and in every possible case the local address of the freshman they wish to come to their houses these two days. These cards are to be handed to the Dean of Students through the secretary of the Intrafraternity Council by noon, September 24. A standard invitation will then be delivered to each freshman for every card received, these invitations requesting that the freshman visit the various houses, at least once

ORCHESTRA AND BAND TO START PRACTICE SOON

McCorkle Announces Meetings Monday and Tuesday Nights For Organization and Rehearsals.

The musical activities on the campus for the new year will get under way Monday night when the University Band, under the direction of Professor T. Smith McCorkle, holds its organization meeting in the practice room in Person Hall. The University orchestra will meet at the same time Tuesday night to start its organization for the year.

Director McCorkle expects a large number of students to try out for the band. Forty-eight members of the band of former years will be on hand at the organization meeting and there will probably be about that number of new men who will be candidates for membership.

Every year, according to Mr. McCorkle, there are more men who come out for the band and this is due to the fact that high schools and prep schools are laying more and more emphasis on music.

The gathering to be held Monday night at 7:00 will be a

Hazing And Its Consequences

Few students here realize that a good many years ago the legislature of this state outlawed hazing. It decreed that anyone guilty of hazing or even having knowledge of hazing and not reporting it to the proper authorities was guilty of a misdemeanor.

Now and then we hear of cases of hazing in other institutions, but certainly for the past three years there have been no cases reported here. This is a fine record for the University.

But now and then rumors that all is not as it should be become current on the campus. No one seems to know exactly where these rumors originate but the persistence of some of them are such that they must be something more than just talk.

This year the campus has been free of such. But during the next few weeks we are expecting to hear some such. The Tar Heel's advice to any freshman who is hazed is to report the occurrence to the student council, for one who is hazed is guilty of violating the same act outlawing hazing as the hazer unless the affair is reported.

It is impossible for the student council to investigate every rumor, but if hazing is to be stamped out it must be reported, and reported immediately.

Loafing Profitably

In these strenuous times, when it is so hard for many of us to come and stay in school, "How can we loaf!" President Graham asked in his address at the Methodist church Friday morning. One answer, taking President Graham's words in a different sense, is this: We may loaf profitably.

Loafing and exaggerated participation in campus activities are called, by the Raleigh News and Observer the two "lions in the path" of scholarship excellence among the college students. The activities offer, however, some remuneration for the time spent on them. Loafing, on the other hand, is wholly unprofitable.

But no matter how hard the circumstances under which a man attends the University may be, he will still waste a part of his time in idleness, on week-end excursions, in bull-sessions, and the like. Regardless of any and all economic difficulties that may exist, most students will devote but so much and no more time to their studies. Then, they find themselves with spare time on their hands. To use these extra hours profitably, without incurring expense, is the problem of making loafing worthwhile.

The great University library offers one of the cheapest and most enjoyable sources of diversion and pleasure. Magazines and books are, in addition, a simple agency for self-education.

So, when tempted to loaf, read a book instead—paraphrasing the well-known cigarette advertisement slogan.

The First-Year Man And His Friends

Contact with numbers of classmates and dormitory acquaintances—potential friends in themselves—affords an outlet for the gregarious instinct of every normal freshman. Away from home, in many cases for the first time, they seek companionship naturally, and with the majority feeling the same way, friendships, often deep and lasting, spring up as a result of the common bond of loneliness and feeling of alienism.

To emphasize the value of friendships is trite, but no one can deny the importance of these contacts, not only because of the society they afford the individual but because they supply a medium to mold, to a large extent, the character and habits, of the individual. In some cases this truth is borne out by dismissal from the University and in many cases of "flunking out." The individual's associates have unconsciously shaped their friend's hapless end.

Consider the boy who comes to school knowing next to no one, and whose friendships are formed gradually around the circle of students he meets day after day at his eating place and on the floor of his dormitory. His nature seeks society; he wants friends and the companionship which furnish so much of the collegiate color he has read about. He gravitates to this circle of those whom he sees most often and soon is established informally in that clique. And here the mob influence is brought to bear without anyone in the circle realizing it as such. If the boys for the most part waste time, spend week-ends away from the Hill, and take up the insidious campus pastimes of bridge, poker, and bull sessions, then the freshman has begun his year wrong already. If he is weak-willed he will probably remain with the time-wasting group and frittering the quarters away aimlessly will have extracted from college only the more vicious influences. If on the other hand he sees from the start that such contacts are not for him and makes a determined effort to escape, it is easy enough to establish friendships of another sort, of the better type whose influence will prove valuable.

One cannot overestimate the necessity of the right sort of friends. The effect of his select-group of associates on the freshman often make or break him so far as his college career goes. It is necessary for no one, no matter how much time he intends to devote to studies or how unsociable he considers his temperament, to do without friends. Among 2500 undergraduates no one is too cold and aloof or too shy and reserved to pursue a solitary course.—R. H.

Working Unprofitably

We are informed that seven-tenths of the freshman class have applied for some form of self-help employment. The self-help secretary of the Y. M. C. A. has combed the town in quest of jobe until it is threadbare. The entire student body is mad on the subject of self-help. One would think that most of the students of the University have come here to make a living, rather than to get an education. Such a state of affairs, although derivative of financial depression throughout the entire State, is detrimental.

Speaking from the standpoint of investment, self-help is the poorest investment that was ever conceived. It is not a bad policy for a student to work three hours each day at the rate of twenty-five cents per hour to secure his board, when even a good bull session would benefit him more in actual dollars and cents. If washing dishes is worth twenty-five cents per hour, then studying is worth at least two dollars per hour.

The question that arises at this point in the self-help controversy is: "What can be done about it?" More and larger loan funds is the only solution to the problem.

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Hazing, chief among the things that sophomores must do to think they are having a good time, has broken out on the campus again, an annual occurrence at the beginning of a new year.

Friday night a number of shines had to grab straps and scour the dormitories for freshmen to assault them and to humiliate them with indignities to think they were showing their superiority, while, in fact, they were giving evidence of greater inferiority.

Hazing has been abolished by state law as well as by regulation of the student council, and it seems that those who wish to indulge in a harmful and indecent sport would respect either of the regulations of governing powers they elect, even if their consciences do not dictate what is right and gentlemanly.

One realizes that members of the student council are busy getting their own affairs in order as well as their work on the council, but it would be much better if they nipped this evil in the bid by more and stricter attention to it.

Hazing is such a foolish and futile thing and is very unfair. Many of those who indulge in the sport do so far revenge, "because it was done to me, and I must in turn do it." But far worse are those who were slick enough to avoid it and who gain from it the perverted pleasure of saying: "I was smart enough to get away from the sophs, and now I'm just smart enough to give some freshman hell."

Hazing is such an ungentlemanly thing and is contrary to the ideals and traditions of Carolina. The new class is our guest and will become an integral part of us; they are our co-workers and must carry on our work when we leave, so why can't we all treat them as they deserve—friendly, gentlemanly, and helpfully—and make them realize the importance of themselves now, when they can have greater chance to develop for the work ahead of them, instead of six months or a year from now?

FIVE OF FACULTY ARE PLACED ON ADVISORY BOARD

Banquet at Carolina Inn Next Saturday to Open Campaign.

At the meeting of the faculty in Pharmacy hall yesterday afternoon, five new members were selected to the faculty advisory committee. They were: Professors W. C. Coker, L. R. Wilson, A. W. Hobbs, W. W. Pierson and W. M. Dey. The old members of the committee are R. D. W. Connor, D. D. Carroll, J. M. Bell and G. M. Braune.

The faculty advisory committee consists of nine members who are elected for a three-year term arranged so that each year three new members are added. Five new men were elected this year to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Dean J. F. Royster and the election of Fank Graham to the presidency of the University.

The executive committee which was elected last spring now consists of Drs. M. T. Van Hecke, E. L. Mackie, G. A. Harrer, H. G. Baity, J. N. Couch and S. E. Leavitt.

Koch at California

Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers and professor of drama, spent the past summer at the University of California in Los Angeles teaching drama in the summer school. Following the six weeks' term there he taught the same subject in a short term at the University of Southern California.

To Launch Appeal For Alumni Funds

The 1930 appeal of the alumni loyalty fund of the University will begin next Saturday and continue until October 12, according to an announcement made today by Felix A. Grisette, director of the fund.

A banquet at the Carolina Inn immediately following the Wake Forest football game which is expected to be attended by 500 leading alumni from all parts of the State will mark the formal opening of the annual appeal. President Frank P. Garham and Governor O. Max Gardner are to be the principal speakers at the banquet.

The alumni loyalty fund is the medium through which alumni lend their financial support to the University in order to provide for such projects of University work as can not practically be financed by state appropriations. The fund urges and systematically promotes small gifts from all University alumni to the end that it may receive an place the absence of a large endowment.

Already hundreds of alumni are contributing regular annual gifts but the forthcoming appeal has as its objective the increasing of the number of such contributors. The appeal will be carried on jointly by a chairman for each class and by local committeemen under the general supervision of the loyalty fund council, of which Leslie Weil of Goldsboro is chairman.

University officials hasten to make clear that loyalty fund contributions are used only for emergency purposes and for such purposes as can not be financed from any other source. The particular emergency which now confronts the institution is a lack of funds for student loans and scholarships. It is to meet this emergency that the 1930 contributions are being sought.

DEBATING SEASON WILL OPEN SOON

Forensic Council Hopes to Schedule Ten Queries for Coming Year.

With the intercollegiate debating season drawing near, the University debate council is already laying plans. The council reports tentative agreements with several colleges and universities throughout the country. Unless developments occur to the contrary, the season will be opened locally by a contest with a team representing three British universities. The council hopes to make arrangements for this season-opener some time in November. The Carolina-British debate has become well nigh an annual affair.

As usual, the council hopes to schedule about ten contests for the present collegiate year. Queries and a list of institutions to be debated by the local forensic artists will be printed later.

The following varsity debaters of last year have returned: W. W. Speight, president of the debate council; J. C. Williams, president of last year's council; H. H. Hobgood, J. M. Baley, H. N. Brown, J. C. Harris, R. M. Albright, J. A. Wilkinson, and McBride Fleming-Jones.

Debating this year will be conducted on the squad system, which was adopted two seasons ago. All debaters will be chosen from the membership of the squad. No one will be eligible to compete for a varsity team who has not attended a prescribed number of the squad discussions of the question to be debated.

Tar Heels Hold Second Scrimmage Session On Kenan Field Yesterday

Varsity Starts Off Well But Fails to Keep Pace Set At First

WHOLE SQUAD IN ACTION

Blocking in Line Still Needs Improving; More Scrimmage Next Week.

The first team started off yesterday afternoon in Kenan Stadium for the second scrimmage session of the year with all the pep and smoothness of an eleven in mid-season form. They ran up three touchdowns against the fourth team with little or no trouble. Passes, end runs, returned punts, etc. netted yard after yard for about 15 minutes. But the fourth eleven rallied and showed the varsity that going would not be so easy after that.

The Blue team drove down to the Orange varsity's three yard line and missed by inches scoring on them. When Coach Collin's sent in the second line-up, the varsity was struggling deep in its own territory.

The first eleven showed Lipscomb at center; Newcombe and McIver, guards; Underwood and Thompson, tackles; Parsley and Nelson, ends; Branch, quarterback; House, fullback; Captain Nash and Magner, halfbacks.

George Thompson was looking good at tackle, both on offense and defense. Johnnie Branch showed up very well, reurning one punt for some 45 yards and a touchdown. Magner to Nash was a very successful passing combination.

McCaskill, Ken Thompson, and Ferebee did some good work in advancing the ball against the varsity, and Archie Davis caught several passes for the Blue outfit. The varsity's defense seemed to be weaker on covering passes than on anything else.

Second and Fifth Teams Battle

The scrimmage between the second and fifth teams revealed a closer scrap than did the first-fourth battle. Blocking by the second line was not very good and the backs were unable to make large gains. However, by steady punching and driving the Orange squad succeeded in crossing the blues goal twice.

Gilbreath, center; Crew and Dunavant, guards; Hodges and McDade, tackles; Walker and Brown, ends; Wyrick quarterback; McNeill, fullback; Maus and Slusser, halfbacks were the gridders playing on the second squad. Slusser and Maus showed up well for this group.

Third Team Fast

The third team, clad in orange jerseys, made several substantial gains aganst the fourth eleven, and netted two touchdowns. Erickson and Chandler showed plenty of drive in this scrap, both making several long runs. Moore, quarterback on the third squad, ran the team quite well. Blocking by this line was good at times, but there is still room for improvements.

The first team line with backs Branch, Chandler, Slusser, and McNeill returned into the scrimmage after the third eleven retired and showed considerable drive and punch. Branch, Slusser and Chandler all showed ability at gaining ground, running up three touchdowns within a few minutes.

Room for Improvement

Although the Tar Heels showed exceptionally well at times during the afternoon, the impression made did not come up to the expectations of the coaches.

Blocking in the line was very good for a part of the afternoon, but taking the practice session as a whole it was below average.

Pep and enthusiasm was quite evident when the varsity line started out, but the drive and consistent work seemed to lag just before the first forward wall retired.

Competition with other teams will be a whole lot harder than scrimmaging fourth and fifth squads, and it is believed that Coach Collins, Cerney and Fetzer will put the lines through additional line scrimmages the first of next week, and hold another full scrimmage session before the Wake Forest game.

BURCH APPOINTS DORMITORY AIDS

Thirteen University Buildings Will Be Regularly Inspected.

P. L. Burch, superintendent of buildings, announced this morning that in accordance with the policy of the building department in giving the dormitory residents the best possible service that he had appointed a group of dormitory inspectors.

The duty of these inspectors, one living in each dormitory, is to see that every resident gets his full share of what the University has provided for him in that respect. Twice a week the inspectors will visit all the rooms halls, and toilets and report to the university consolidated service plants the conditions of the rooms, janitor service, conditions of the floors, walls, windows, and furniture.

The inspectors will daily report troubles with lights and water connections, and will cooperate with the Dormitory club in making living conditions in the dormitories comfortable and pleasant.

The men chosen for this work are: W. D. Croom, Aycock; E. C. Ferrebee, Steele; C. I. Nichols, Old West; F. W. Slusser, Old East; N. A. Underwood, Ruffin; H. M. Hodges, Vance; A. J. Rotary's Golf Exhibit

Mr. Creighton, Professional, Gives the Club a Demonstration

Golf was the ruling topic—in fact, the only topic of consequence—at the Rotary Club's dinner Wednesday evening.

Mr. Creighton, the professional of the Hope Valley Country Club, was the guest of honor and principal speaker. He did not content himself with merely telling the diners how the game ought to be played. When the eating was over, he got up on a table with a set of clubs and showed how each one should be swung.

It was an illustrated lecture of absorbing interest. Mr. Creighton interspersed his explanations and demonstrations with comments upon the methods and the peculiarities of the famous players. He talked about Bobby Jones, and Ouimet, and Hagen, and MacDonald Smith, and Chick Evans and a dozen or more other notables in the world of golf.

The Rotarians asked him many questions, the most active inquirers being Y. Z. Cannon, M. E. Hogan, W. de. R. Scott, and J. S. Bennett.

R. D. W. Connor presided in the absence of the club's president, Collier Cobb, Jr.

FRESHMAN DAYS UNDERGO CHANGE

First-Year Men Soon Become Adapted to University Life.

Coming from every section of the State and many other states, students no longer come to Chapel Hill as they once did. Those arriving by train would get off the Southern at University station and look around for the University. Finally they would discover that the University of North Carolina was about ten miles away. Then they would either take Cap'n Smith's special to Carrboro or come on to Durham by train and take the bus from there.

Now a great many of the new men are driven up to the Hill by their families. Automobiles filled with the newcomers and their well-wishers begin arriving in Chapel Hill several days before the opening of Fresh man Week. The families usually stay here for a day or more.

Contrasted to the days of the past freshme nare now treated as others by the upperclassmen. Hazing is taboo. A complete program arranged by the Dean of Student's office is administered during Freshman Week. Considering the fact that this year nearly nine hundred men were handled, the orientation period was remarkably successful.

A series f events to familiarize the new men with the University and t odetermine their standing and registration was run off in two days. A tour of the library, physical examinations, English placement tests, mental alertness tests, romance language tests, student government lectures, consultation with a faculty and student advisors, and registration constituted the program for Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sophomores and upperclassmen aid rather than hinder the new men to become acclimatized to the University. Each sophomore is assigned one or more new men to aid him, and results indicate that till felling between the two classes is extinct. But of course some of the more gullible of the new men are kidded a bit during the first days. Stories are told each year of how some of the new men bu yall sorts of privileges. They are sold room privileges, chapel seats, walking-on-the-grass privileges, and the like.

Prominent men in all vocations throughout the state have at one time been members of the Tar Heel staff. On the University faculty there are several former editors of the paper. Frank Graham, president of the University; R. D. W. Connor, head of the history department; Oscar J. Coffin, head of the school of journalism; and J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, are listed among the former holders of the editorship of the Tar Heel.

TAR HEELS POINT FOR DEACON GAME

Coach Collins Is in the Dark About Wake Forest Contest.

Groping in the dark, as it were, Head Coach Chuck Collins will begin pointing the Carolina gridders Monday for Saturday's Kenan Stadium engagement with Wake Forest, which will start the 1930 ball rolling for both teams.

Coach Collins is in the dark for two reasons. First, very little information has come out of the Baptist camp, although it's generally understood that Coach Pat Miller has a husky squad of veterans who may surprise several teams this year.

Second, the North Carolina line hasn't seen the light yet, and despite a multiplicity of speedy, shifty backs, Carolina will enter this curtain-raiser with a rookie line whose strength will be a big question mark.

Ned Lipscomb, rangy center, is the only regular back from last year's stalwart forward wall, so that rookies will form exactly six-sevenths of Collns' line. Centers and guards look strong, but tackles and ends have looked but weak in training.

Collins obviously will have to begin tapering off on the training this week, to get his squad in good shape, but it's a known fact that if he had his wish, he'd delay the season and give his linesmen about four more weeks of intensive blocking practice.

Hence it's going to be mighty interesting to see how well Collins can whip his rookie line into shape in this final week of practice.

The starting line will probably be picked from Lipscomb and Gilbreath, centers; McIver, Fysal, Blackwood, Crew and Newcombe, guards; Thompson, Underwood, McDade, and Hodges, tackles; and Nelson, Tabb, Parsley, Brown, Walker and Davis, ends. That is unless some of the younger candidates make phenomenal advances in this week's practice.

Kiwanians Observe Constitution Week

R. D. W. Connor, head of the history department of the University of North Carolina, was the speaker at the Kiwanis Club meeting here on the occasion of the Club's observance of "Constitution Week." Professor Connor reviewed the history of the Constitution or North Carolina.

Allison Huneycutt, of Hendersonville, Governor of the Carolinas District of the Kiwanis, and Mrs. Huneycutt were guests of honor. Mr. Huneycutt spoke briefly on the aims and work of the club in North Carolina and South Carolina and complimented the Chapel Hill club upon its accomplishments.

Boxing Notice

All those interested in trying out for this year's freshman and varsity boxing teams are asked to report to Coach Rowe in the Tin Can between 3:30 and 6 p. m. Monday. Previous boxing experience is desirable, but not at all necessary. Some of the best fighters on past and present Carolina teams never had on a boxing glove before they entered Carolina.

born there, and boxing while growing into a major sport here annexed two Southern Conference championships. It was used by the tennis players during unseasonable weather, and with Wilmer Hines and Bryan Grant here, the Tin Can may see another championship team developed.

The finals of the state high school tennis tournament were held there one year. Baseball and track also have a place in the spacious building.

Coach Bob Fetzer brought the first Southern Conference indoor track meet to the Tin Can last winter. In fact, last year proved the Tin Can's banner season. At one time called the "world's largest frigidaire," a heating system was installed there last winter.

This was wise, for about this time Memorial Hall was condemned. A concert by the United States Marine Band had been planned and the Tin Can was the only available building.

Then last spring other uses were found for the building. Chapel Hill's Community Club staged a flower show there. Meanwhile changes in Commencement dates had made impracticable the use of Swain Hall for the President's Reception, the Alumni Ball, and the Commencement dances. Again the Tin Can came to the rescue.

President Chase held his last reception there. The dances were well attended, more than a thousand attending the final ball.

Truly, the Tin Can has justified its construction. No one can foretell to what uses it will be put in the future. But whatever may be necessary the Tin Can will likely fill the bill.

Effort to Ban Cigarettes

(Hartford Courant)

The voters of Oregon will be called upon to decide a momentous question in November. It is whether or not they shall adopt an amendment to the state constitution forbidding the manufacture and sale of cigarettes and make it unlawful to import, possess, purchase or give them away. This matter comes up for referendum on a petition bearing 15,733 names and initiated by the Anti-Cigarette League.

It seems unlikely that the amendment will be adopted, first, because the people of Oregon probably have had their fill of prohibition in other matters, and second, because they are not unmindful of the futile attempt that Kansas made to outlaw cigarettes. Although cigarettes were not at the time particularly popular there, the edict against them quickly brought them into high favor. They were to be had everywhere and they were smoked with malicious satisfaction. The price went up, but it was willingly paid. The state found it utterly impossible to stop the surreptitious sale, to say nothing of the open use. Finally it rescinded the law.

Utah had a similar experience, but it tried to go even further by prohibiting any kind of smoking in a public place. A Hartford man actually found himself in the toils of the law because he was caught smoking a cigar in a hotel lobby.

It is of interest to note that those who are opposing this further perversion of the state's constitution are being characterized as lawless in their outlook and their morals. Even their Christianity and Americanism are being questioned.

A. T. O. HOUSE IS FORTY THOUSAND DOLLAR BUILDING

Constructed of Rock, Stucco, and Oil - Striped Open Timbers.

The Alpha Tau Omega fraternity last week moved into its new home on Franklin street, opposite the Episcopal church.

The contract for the building was let last spring to the Fidelity Construction Co. of Durham for $40,000. Mr. Curtis, an alumnus of Carolina and a member of the fraternity, who is now teaching architectural engineering at Tulane, had charge of the designing. Curtis also designed Gimghoul Castle. The A. T. O. house is an almost exact replica of an Old English mansion.

The construction is of rock, stucco, "garden bond" brick, and oil-striped open timbers. The furnishings are finished in heavy red leather, and the fixtures are of Old English wrought iron. The home has hardwood floors and walls of Aberdeen sand.

There are ten bedrooms, a great hall, dining room, kitchen, living room, library, an alumni room, and a foyer. The hall is beautifully appointed. The fireplace is modeled after one belonging to an old English exchequer, and is carved with emblems associated with that office.

This is the fourth home to be occupied by the fraternity on this site. The first was built in 1889, when the group was ten years old at Carolina. Their third home was burned in 1927, and temporary quarters were used until the present building could be completed.

Presbyterians Are Hosts To New Men

Last Friday night the Presbyterian church was host to a gathering of more than sixty persons at a reception in their social rooms. It was a great opportunity for freshmen to familiarize themselves with one another as well as to meet with prominent student leaders on the campus.

Clyde Dunn, editor of the Yackety-Yack gave an interesting talk on the college annual. Will Yarborough, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, spoke on the subject "The Leading Southern Daily." Ed Hamer, president of the Y gave an account of the Y. M. C. A.—its work and what it stands for. Miss M. M. McLeod told of the attitude of the co-eds on the campus.

Ned Lipscomb, center, and Peter Ruffin, manager of the football team, spoke on the prospects of the squad. Alfredo Nazareno talked of life in the Phillipines and of his travels.

John Lang explained the activities of the State Student Federation. Professors George McKie and George Lawrence led the group in singing ,after which the reception ended with a talk by Parson W. D. Moss. Mrs. A. Ellenwood served refreshments.

quartet has also been booked to render a few selections. Last year's president of the council, Jimmie Kurfees, will be the toastmaster at the opening dinner.

For freshmen interested in getting into the activities on the campus, this offers an excellent opportunity for them to start early in their college career.

practice meeting as well as an organization meeting, for the band's first public appearance will be at the Wake Forest game on Saturday, September 27, in Kenan Stadium.

In addition to appearing at all the home games, the band will make the trip to Virginia and may possibly make trips to Athens, to the Georgia game, and to Knoxville, to the Tennessee game. It will also appear in concert in Chapel Hill this fall and will make a tour in both the winter and spring quarters.

The organization will play entirely symphonic music in concert, but will play some lighter types as well in football games when the occasion demands.

Mr. McCorkle announces that new men who have had experience with band instruments are cordially urged to attend the meeting Monday night and take part in this activity. There are 60 unforms available for band members and there will be a membership of 70 players open to take care of necessary absences.

The band has purchased several new instruments, among which are a bb flat Sousaphone and a new, specially built drum, and expects to buy several more that are needed.

The University orchestra will hold its first meeting at the same time and place on Tuesday night for organization for the coming year. At this meeting a practice will be held and an organization will be effected.

The Orchestra will be comprised of between forty and fifty members, the largest number it has had since its existance on the campus. About half of this number are faculty members and the remainder students.

Mr. McCorkle is director of this activity also. It is of symphonic proportions and will play music of that type.

All new men as well as old are cordially invited to attend the meeting Tuesday night and try out for places on the orchestra.

during the two days. Each freshman must visit each fraternity house from which he has received an invitation, if only for a few minutes, and failure to do so will be considered a violation of the rushing regulations."

The executive committee stresses particularly the new part of this by-law which says that no fraternity shall make more than two dates with any freshman on the first night of rushing. This regulation is the only important addition to last year's rules, and is to be strictly enforced. It is supposedly intended to keep the freshman's schedule from being overloaded with too many engagements.

By-law number 4 is also important, the committee states. It declares that "no freshman who rooms with an upperclassman who is a member or a pledge of any fraternity shall be allowed to join or to be pledged to the fraternity with wihch his roommate is affiliated until the second week of the winter quarter, 1931." However, the rule allows that freshman may change their quarters before September 22 and not be affected by the penalty.

These and the other rushing rules should be studied and obeyed by freshmen and upperclassmen alike, says President Ward, if penalties are to be avoided.

includes five major productions, two student productions, and three tours. The plays to be used this year have not been announced but a large number are under consideration.

The Playmakers will open the season in the first week in November with a set of one-act original productions at the Playmaker theatre. Some of these plays will be taken on the annual northern tour which will be made November 15-26.

The route the northern tour will take has not been definitely decided upon, but it will be similar to the one taken last year when Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Hartford, Boston, Petersburg, Easton, Morristown, N. J., Farmville, Va., and other places were played. The trip will not be as extended as last year's trip, as the troup will return before the Thankgiving holidays.

Following the tour, a long professional play, a New York hit, will be given; the month of this production will be December.

In the winter quarter another professional production will be given the first of February and will probably be a classical play. In the middle of February the winter tour will take place, which will probably extend as far south as Florida; several engagements are desired in Alabama and the tour may be extended in that direction.

A classical production, probably the 18th or 19th century, will be presented the first of March.

The schedule calls for a group of folk plays the first of April and for a second set of student productions around the first of May. The third tour of the year will begin the middle of April and will last two weeks, at which time towns in North Carolina, which have been visited for the last ten and twelve years, will be included.

The final production of the year will be presented in the Forest theatre during the month of May, at which time a professional play will be given.

In making out this schedule, the Playmakers were forced to sacrifice a large number of places in order to fill engagements formerly promised or engagements that have been held open for years, Mr. Heffner said yesterday. Notable among the refusals the Playmakers have made to fill out the present schedule is the invitation of the St. Louis Drama League for a week's run in St. Louis and another week in the vicinity of St. Louis.

The Playmakers, following their usual custom to give Chapel Hill the benefit of their productions, have decided to offer 900 season tickets for the seven performances to be given here for $1.50. This has been decided recently, in spite of the fact that many of the members think this price too low. The tickets for single performances will be $1.00. The time that the season tickets will be put on sale has not been announced. Last year all of the 900 tickets were sold within two days' time.

ALLEN DEFEATS SPEIGHT IN LAW SCHOOL BALLOT

Ward, Dunn, and Graham Win Other Three Offices Voted Upon.

By Everard B. Shemwell

In the first elections of the year, Archie Allen was elected to the presidency of the first year law class over W. W. Speight by an overwhelming majority. Jack Ward defeated Charles Whedbee in the race for vice-president, while Bill Dunn was victorious over his opponent, J. A. Bailey, for secretary. John Graham was elected treasurer over Fred Bunch in a tight race in which the victor was but one vote ahead of the vanquished.

Allen, captain of the Tar Heel boxers in 1930, had little opposition in Speight, snowing him under an avalanche of votes, and winning by a 3-1 majority.

The election was rather impromtu, having been held with but ten minutes warning by J. A. Williams, president of the Law School Association. Campaign speeches were in order, and Speight was given a large amount of verbal support by supporters, but Allen proved to be the preferred man when the votes were counted.

ORCHESTRA ADDS NEW PIECES TO YEAR'S ENSEMBLE

T. Smith McCorkle Discovers New Talent on Campus.

Last year the University Orchestra was composed of about forty-five pieces, a membership that represented a growth of over thirty in the last five years. This year, T. Smith McCorkle, director, hopes to increase the membership to sixty.

The new additions that Mr. McCorkle plans include several experienced violin players, celloists, a bassoon, two french horns, two violin players, two oboes, and a string bass. With the exception of the oboes all of these pieces have been in the orchestra.

Only a small portion of the first program has been decided. It will probably include Shubert's Unfinished Symphony, Number 8 in B minor, the Sicilian Vespers Overture, by Verdi, and the Prelude to Wagner's opera, Lohengrin.

In addition to the regular symphonic work, there will be several instrumental soloists with the orchestra this year. Mr. McCorkle will play a violin concert, and Mr. Kennedy will play one at the organ. Also, outside artists may be invited.

The first practise is to be held at Person hall on Tuesday September 23 at 7 o'clock and all old members are asked to attend.

Assembly To Meet

The Phi Assembly will hold its initial meeting of the year tonight at 7:15 in the regular session hall in New East building. Speaker Albright requests that all old men be present at the meeting to help get the assembly off to a good year.

Announcements will be made later concerning the initiation of the new men.

Presbyterian Classes

The Presbyterian Sunday school announces that this year it will hold two student classes, instead of one as was done last year. The new students will be taught by Professor I. C. Griffin of the school of education. The upperclassmen will be taught by Professor E. L. Mackie of the mathematics department. The classes meet with the rest of the Sunday school at 9:45 for the opening exercises of the school, and the class discussion begins at 10.

DYER SPONSORS INSTALLATION OF THE NEW ORGAN

Head of Music Department Superintends Activities From Factory to Campus.

Dr. Harold S. Dyer, director of music at the University, has been quite busy this summer with the installation of the new organ which was the gift of some unknown person, evidently interested in the department of music to the extent of several thousands of dollars. At the close of the first session of summer school, Dr. Dyer made a trip to the factory in Kansas at which the organ was built, and made a thorough inspection of the assembled instrument, which is now the center of attraction in the department. After his return, he became the official guide for visitors, pointing out the intricacies and explaining the work which it will do in the education of musicians. It is a very valuable addition in this respect. Since the beginning of the assembling at Chapel Hill, Professor Dyer has shown more than 300 visitors through the construction room, among which was a Kiwanis convention, of which Dr. Dyer and three of the craftsmen were guests at dinner before the demonstration.

It is hoped that the dedication of the organ will take place soon after the first of November. Before the instrument can be definitely put into use, however, the final voicing must be done by an expert from the factory, and it is impossible to complete this adjustment until the final furnishings and seats have been installed in the music auditorium. As soon as the final adjustments have been made, the dedication will take place. At this ceremony there will be a concert by one of America's masters. Several are under careful consideration, among whom are Palmer Christian, of Michigan, Edward Eigenschenk, of Chicago, E .Harold Geer, organist at Vassar College, Henry F. Seibert, Town Hall organist at New York City, and others of equal note.

After the dedication ceremony, there will be two series of organ recitals, the first of which will be a vesper series at 4:45 on Sunday afternoons, the dates of which are to be announced later. The second series will be a guest series, and will feature six or more of the leading church and auditorium organists of North Carolina.

The music auditorium promises to be of great value to the University, and the entertainment committee will probably hold the first few of their programs there, as the new University auditorium will not be finished before the first of February.

FRESHMAN BIDS ARE READY NOW

Rushing Season Opens Officially Friday Afternoon at 2 O'clock.

"Fraternity representatives may secure freshman invitations from me at the Sigma Chi House this afternoon between two and four and tonight between seven and nine," Tom Hunter, Secretary of the Interfraternity Council, said last night. "No invitations will be given fraternities which have not posted the one hundred dollar bond required by the Council's rules and which have not paid their regular assessment of five dollars."

According to the Interfraternity Council rushing rules these invitations must be filled in by the fraternities and returned to the Secretary by noon Wednesday. He delivers them to the Dean of students and they in turn are delivered to the freshmen through the Dean's office.

Rushing season opens officially Friday afternoon at two o'clock when the new men begin visiting the fraternity houses. This continues through Saturday night. After that time freshmen are permitted to make their own dates, but no new man may make more than two dates with any one fraternity during first two days of rushing, the rules state.

Will Scour Woods For Moorer's Body

In a final effort to clear up the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Morgan P. Moorer last spring, Boy Scouts and University students under the direction of L. B. Lloyd, hunter and woodsman, and George Henry, assistant scoutmaster, are scouring the territory around Chapel Hill in search of the boy's body.

Moorer, a member of the freshman class, disappeared during the spring quarter of last year. For days fraternity brothers and friends searched the neighboring territory, fearing that the boy had committed suicide, but hoping that he was still alive. The possibility that he was a victim of amnesia was the most probable explanation advanced for his disappearance by those who believed him to be alive.

During the summer the search continued. His mother, who still believes that he is alive, secured the services of private detectives to push the investigation.

And now, his mother, after appealing to the Governor and to President Frank Graham, has started this last search, fearing that if the boy is dead his body may be in some out-of-the way place where it would have been overlooked by earlier searches.

Dr. G. N. Couch, botany instructor, is expected to return to the University today, where he will resume his work. Dr. Couch has traveled in Europe during the past summer vacation. Dr. Couch spent considerable time in Cambridge, England.

Student coupons will be exchanged for student tickets to the Wake Forest game on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. from 3 to 6 o'clock.

COUNCIL HOLDS FIRST MEETING

New Office Hours Announced by President Greene.

The student council held its first meeting last night in its new office in 204 South building for the purpose of discussing plans for the coming year. According to plans, the student government will hold regular office hours in their new office. The office will be open from 10:30 to 12:00 on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday, and from 10:30 to 11:00 on Wednesday and Friday.

It is the plan of the council that all reports be made at the office, which is next to that of Dean Bradshaw, during these hours.

This is the first time in the history of the University that the student government has had an office of its own.

The plan of giving the government of the student body an office, although new on this campus, is in line with all of the other large universities in the country.

Having received praise from sources all over the United States, the student government on this campus is brought still another step forward in its efficiency and superiority by this new office plan.

Subscription Price Of Daily Tar Heel Raised Two Dollars

Meeting Sunday afternoon, the University Publications Union board elected officers for the ensuing year and raised the price of subscriptions to the Daily Tar Heel. K. C. Ramsay, senior member of the board, was elected president and E. C. Daniel, sophomore, was chosen secretary.

As the student publications fee was raised last year, in order to take care of the extra expense of publishing a daily paper, the portion of the fee allotted to the Daily Tar Heel was increased to four dollars. This means, really, that each student pays that amount for his paper.

Up until this time the subscription price for outsiders has been only two dollars a year or one dollar per quarter. If this rate were continued, it would mean that Chapel Hill people and others would get the paper for less than the students—to whom the paper belongs.

Accordingly, the board decided to increase the subscription fee for outsiders to four dollars for the entire school year or one dollar and a half per quarter.

Law Association To Meet On Wednesday

The Law School Association will hold its first meeting of the year Wednesday night at 7:15 in the session room of the association. President Frank Graham, and Dean C. T. McCormick will be the principal speakers.

J. A. Williams, president of the association, states that refreshments will be served, and the meeting will be of a general get-together nature. Following the meeting, which President Williams says will be short, the Carolina Theatre will entertain the members of the association at a free show, "Common Clay."

Graham To Speak

Beginning Friday morning President Graham will address the students of the freshman and sophomore classes in chapel once a week. This will give the first-year men an opportunity of hearing Mr. Graham once per week, and will give the sophomores a chance to hear him once every two weeks.

When the new auditorium is completed the two classes will meet together for chapel. This building is expected to be ready by the middle of the winter quarter.

NOTED COMPOSER BECOMES MEMBER OF LOCAL COLONY

Lamar Stringfield, Pulitzer Prize Winner, Comes to Chapel Hill From New York.

By J. P. Huskins

The Chapel Hill are colony, already an institution of many parts, has added a composer to its list of distinguished citizens.

Lamar Stringfield winner of the Pulitzer prize for the outstanding musical composition in 1928 and a nationally known flutist and interpreter of folk music, has left the whirl of New York life for the quiet beauty of Chapel Hill.

This picturesque little village seems to have a strong appeal for scientists and artists. One of every forty-eight of its citizens is listed in "Who's Who," and one of every fifteen of its male adults is a recognized scientist.

Friends of Stringfield recently induced him to come back to his native state and to make his home in Chapel Hill. Here at the University they saw an opening for a new department that would make use of the folk music already collected by the Institute for Research in Social Science. It is Stringfield's idea to develop this folk music for use in the University music department and by the Carolina Playmakers thus establishing here at the University a distinctly American music and drama based on American subjects. Efforts are now being made to get the proposed department financed.

Won Pulitzer Award

Mr. Stringfield is a native of Wake County, although as many as half a dozen other counties of the state are loud in claiming him.

His Pulitzer award number, a composition for full orchestra, 'From the Southern Mountains," was based on the folk melodies from the Carolina hills. "Cripple Creek," the last movement of the suite, was chosen last year as a national high school contest number and was recorded by the Victor company.

Believing that only a native may translate musical subjects into a form that will be interesting to the people who sing them, Mr. Stringfield made a compila-

Cross Country Call

Coach Dale Ranson has issued a call for freshmen to try out for the freshman cross country team. All who intend to go out for this sport should report at Emerson field this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Coach Ranson stated that previous experience in cross country is not necessary.

NORTHWESTERN U. CALLS HEFFNER TO NEW POSITION

Was One of Prof. Koch's Original Students Here; Westerman to Fill Vacancy.

Another wound was inflicted in the university's faculty staff yesterday when it was officially announced that Hubert C. Heffner, business manager of the Carolina Playmakers and of the Carolina Playbook, associate director of the Carolina Playmakers, and Assistant Professor of English, had resigned to take charge of the dramatic department of Northwestern university.

Despite the fact that the loss of Mr. Heffner is a decided blow to the University, it remains that a compliment has been bestowed upon Carolina. The department which he will head is one of the largest of its kind in the country. His task there will be a stupendous one as he will supervise all dramatic work and act as business manager of the dramatic organization.

"It grieves me," said Mr. Heffner, "to leave Carolina. This is my home. I loved my work here and I feel that I am leaving a momentous task. I

Y. M. MEETS FOR FIRST TIME THIS UNIVERSITY YEAR

Plans Laid for Active Session On Part of Group.

At a joint meeting of the sophomore and the junior-senior Y cabinets last night, President Ed Hamer outlined the program of his group for the fall quarter. In his address he said, "I am anxious to carry out every feature of the program we have on hand."

This program includes the Freshman Friendship banquet to be held this week, the meeting of the state student cabinet to be held at Greensboro October 25 and organization meetings of the upperclass cabinets to be held next Monday night. The University Y will be represented at the national council meeting in Chicago next month.

Hamer has appointed Beverly Moore, Ellis Crew, F. M. James and J. E. Miller as a program committee to plan the activities of the organization for the year.

The program committee of the separate class cabinets will prepare mimeographed reports to be submitted to the cabinets at their regular meetings. Mr. Lanier, self-help secretary, and B. M. Ferguson, of the sophomore cabinet, were appointed a committee in charge of the freshman banquet which will probably be given at the Methodist church Friday of this week.

One of the most ambitious plans discussed at last night's meeting is one by which the Y. M.-Y. W.'s will meet at a banquet following the state student cabinet meeting in Greensboro. The speaker for the banquet will be Kirby Page, who, with Sherwood Eddy, has recently completed a tour of India. While there he visited for several days at the home of Ghandi, the leader of the peaceful revolution. If plans materialize, Page will present Ghandi's official message at the banquet.

Will The Fraternities Bear Responsibility?

Experiments in rushing rules have been conducted here for several years with varying success. The failures of the various systems employed have been due mainly to the lackadaisical attitude of the fraternities in adhering to the regulations adopted by the Interfraternity Council.

Two years ago the Interfraternity Council and the Faculty Committee on Fraternities discarded the somewhat battered system then in force and adopted an entirely new system. This was adopted as an experiment and succeeded fairly well last year.

There were no noticeable infractions of rules during freshman week. This week a rumor has it that there has been a serious violation of the rule forbidding new men to accompany fraternity men away from Chapel Hill either during the period of silence or during the rushing period.

An investigation is expected by the Executive Committee of the Interfraternity Council. If evidence of a violation is discovered and the Council imposes a penalty, will the fraternities back the Council? Judging from the attitude of many fraternity men they will not. Their efforts seem directed more toward evading the rules than toward enforcing them.

Nothing may come of this rumor. But it is likely that there will be occasions this year, if the Executive Committee sticks to its declaration of enforcement, when penalties will be inflicted. Only until the regulations are enforced will the Interfraternity Council decide that the system is a failure or is successful.

Registration And The Waiting Line

In view of the course of events of last Thursday, the Daily Tar Heel feels that comment on that long line of red tape which seems to be a part of the registration machine is well in order. There always has been some complaint to make about registration—certainly since the University's enrollment has become swelled—and such probaly always will be the case as long as the formality, which is obviously a necessary one, must be gone through with. So we do not advocate abolition of registration; we merely would like to see the machinery improved.

The method in handling the situation might have proved highly efficient for five or six hundred students, but for almost three thousand it did not work. The time required for individual registration was so long that the task became an exteremly irksome one, due to the lengthly lines which moved so slowly. The fact is that it took almost half a day for anyone to register, whereas it seems that an hour or so ought to suffice. The process underway in the Tin Can last Thursday appeared to people to be one grand mix-up.

Whoever is in charge of registration of students has a tremendous burden on his shoulders, and it is apparently not easy to devise a plan of facilitation. What the University needs for a thing of this sort is an efficiency expert who can work out a system for the elimination of long, needless hours of waiting and standing in line. The Tar Heel asks for just that.

Begin Early

Every Freshman, whoever he may be, when he goes off to school for the first time, always has some ambition in the back of his head. He may have a desire to excell in studies, on the gridiron, in journalism, in debating, or in some other field of campus activity.

The main trouble that faces the new man with an ambition, is how he can "get going" in the particular field of his interest. He probably knows the thing that he is interested in, and in which he desires to excell, but he is sometimes a little shy in entering this field.

The best thing for a man to do in such case as this is to start early working on the activity of his choice. There is one sure thing and that is that this activity is not going to go out and look for its men. The first move must come from within the man himself. If he is interested in journalistic work, let him try out as soon as possible for the Daily Tar Heel staff; if he wishes to make a name for himself in Y work, let him get into the Freshman Friendship council, or if he hopes to gain his laurels in athletics, let him start out early in his college life. Don't wait too long.

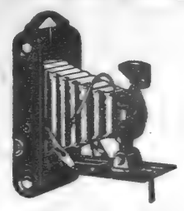
Many men, after it is too late, wake up to find that their college careers are drawing to a close, and that they have practically nothing to show for their four years' stay in school. Profit by the mistakes of these men, and start early working in the field that may be chosen.

"Deliver the goods" from the start, and at the end of four years the man who has done his best, will be gathering the honors for the hard work that he put in at the beginning.

—C. G. R.

MAGAZINE WILL HOLD TRY-OUTS

All new men who are interested in trying for positions on the Carolina Magazine staff are requested to meet Wednesday at 7 o'clock in the basement of Alumni building (Tar Heel-Magazine offices). Previous experience in creative writing is desirable, but not at all necessary.



Williams states that co-eds of the University are extended a special invitation to attend the meeting and to contribute to the campus literary sheet. Heretofore some of the best magazine writers have been co-eds.

The columns of the magazine will be open to poems, essays, short stories, plays, critical comment, etc. A large staff is desired, and it is hoped that the entire student body will feel at liberty to contribute.

Contributions should be mailed to Box 710.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

In Town Again

After a summer spent in the pursuit of both good and evil, the cameraman is once again on the job and ready to photograph anything that looks like a student enterprise. Our camera is nicely polished — and we are ready to commence.

Big Things Brewing

Now that we have all registered and gotten located, the old campus seems rather calm. That calm, however, is like the dreaded stillness that always precedes a great battle. Yet a few days of peace and the whole locality will be astir. Rushing season will be here in all of its glory. Poor freshies will be vociferously engaged, glossy automobiles will be at their service, and picture shows will be as free as the morning air.

But let us enjoy the calm while we may!

"How Are the Mighty Fallen?"

Beatty Rector—one time chief war-horse of the Di Senate, all-time gas bag, revitalization enthusiast, and cigar hound—rolled off the second story of one of the University's beds the other night. Apparently, the senator was sleeping very nicely when he unfortunately overestimated his aerial power. This publication calls upon the senator to explain his strange action.

Judging from what we've read in this paper, the coaches are keeping pretty close Tabb on the work of the entire football squad.

Improvement's the Thing

How strange it will seem to walk on real cement sidewalks in front of the express office! 'Tis beginning to look like the dreaded mud of that section of the village will soon be a thing of the past. Every improvement helps a little bit, anyway. We earnestly trust that some day even the Chapel Hill weather will undergo a change for the better.

Peace at Any Cost

"Killed His Father to Bring Peace to His Mother," headlined a big western daily recently. The lengthy account of the patricide made it clear that the young man was bent on having peace at any cost.

We had laid plans to comment on the freshman class in this column, but we desist since a fellow columnist has already congratulated the staff upon its wisdom in leaving that subject alone.

Since all things are possible, there is no reason for doubting that the University will some day install a class of columnists.

We Calculate

The annual cost of higher education in this country is $350,000,000, according to a well-known magazine writer of the South. This is a startling figure, to be sure. Yet it is not so startling after all, when one considers the cost of funerals occasioned by collegiate liquor experiments.

Today's Question

How Now?

Coach Jim Ashemore has returned to the village after a visit to his former home in Decatur, Illinois. He has been away from Chapel Hill since the closing of the University Coaching School in August.

AT THE CAROLINA

The Carolina has made an auspicious start in their selection of movies for the first school week. Every film is above the general run of shows. Credit is due to Manager E. Smith for the selection of these shows.

Miss Constance Bennett will star Wednesday in "Common Clay," Cleve Kinkead's prize Harvard play which was a sensation ten years ago. John Ayres, the young unknown who made a phenomenal hit in "All Quiet on the Western Front," which will appear here soon, supports Miss Bennett. Together with "The Cock-Eyed World," "Common Clay" is the only show that has played at the Roxy Theatre, in New York, for four weeks. Miss Bennett has a charming voice, and she is known for her sophisticated roles. In this picture she deviates quite a bit from her former roles. The picture affords her a fine display of her emotional hisrionic talent.

In "Song o' My Heart," which is here Thursday, John McCormack sings eleven of the songs that he has made famous. The Fox wouldn't take any chances on such a film; so they had Frank Borzage, their crack director, take charge of this movie, of which many sequences take place in Ireland. McCormack, because of the simple, homey ballads which he sings with a warm, rich voice, is a household name. The concert halls are taxed to capacity when the famous singer is billed. The remainder of the cast, a briliant one, is composed of Maureen O'Sullivan, whom Fox has been grooming for the recalcitrant Janet Gaynor's place, John Garrick, Alice Joyce, J. Farrell MacDonald and many other familiar actors.

Friday we will see the talkie version of a film that made film history in 1924 when Leatrice Joy and Thomas Meighan were starred in "Manslaughter." Claudette Colbert, who made a distinctive hit in "The Lady Lies," stars, while Frederich March is featured. This picture conclusively proves the superiority of the "talkies" over the silent pictures; the drama is more compact and tense in the audible version. Miss Colbert sincerely portrays the metamorphosis of a giddy society girl into a mature, understanding woman. The remainder of the cast contribute fine portrayals, especially the girl that plays the part of Miss Colbert's maid.

Jeannette Macdonald, former opera star, has gone from one big role to another. She made an immediate hit in "Love Parade" and then followed it up with a greater success in "The Vagabond King." Now she is starred in the "Lotttery Bride," which comes here Saturday. The famous Rudolf Friml wrote the songs for this picture, and we can be sure to hear songs far above the banal melodies that one hears in the usual show. The locale of this picture is set in the barren tracts of the Northwest.

FALL INTRAMURAL SPORTS TO BEGIN WITHIN FEW DAYS

Will Include Tag Football, Tennis And Cross Country; Boxing And Wrestling Later.

Within the next ten days the referee's whistle will inaugurate the fall program of intramural sports with inter-dormitory and fraternity competition in tag-football, tennis and cross-country. Later in the season opportunity will be afforded for boxing and wrestling matches.

Letters are being sent to dormitory and fraternity presidents by the department of intramural athletics asking them to call immediate meetings for the purpose of selecting an athletic manager. This should be done very carefully the department enjoins, since the success of the competing units depends a great deal on the selection of men who will have complete charge of the athletic program in this organization.

Tag football teams will compete daily on the intramural fields. Two games will be played every day on each of the three fields. Tennis matches will provide competition for those who choose this form of intramural activity. A cross country meet will also be included in the schedule. All men planning to enter this meet must report to Coach Ranson every afternoon at four o"clock at Emerson field. No man will be permitted to run unless he has undergone a period of supervised training prior to the meet.

Awards will be made under the same point system that was used last year. Dormitories and fraternities will be given points all through the season for their showings in all the sports on the intramural program. At the end of the spring program the dormitory or the fraternity having the greatest number of points will be awarded a large loving cup. Last year the cup was won by Beta Theta Pi fraternity. In addition, gold medals will be given to the individual members of teams winning the various activities included in the intramural program.

OLD GRADS WILL HAVE FIRST SHOT AT GRID TICKETS

The 14,000 alumni of the University of North Carolina have been mailed applications for football tickets for the Tar Heels' games in Kenan Memorial stadium this fall.

There will be five varsity games in Chapel Hill, and alumni are accorded first choice of seats. Addresses of former students are maintained in the Central Alumni office, and it is with this list that mail contact is established with the alumni.

Featuring the home games will be the Georgia Tech encounter November 1, which date has been designated as Homecoming Day for alumni. Other home games are: Wake Forest, September 27; Maryland, October 11; N. C. State, November 8; and Duke, December 6.

Included in the letters mailed to alumni is also an application for tickets to the Virginia game, to be played this year at Charlottesville. Virginia is now rushing the building of a stadium for dedication at this game.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

The climax of the 1930 major league season is rapidly drawing close with the first World Series' game scheduled for October 1st at Shibe Park Philadelphia, where the American League champions will for the second time running defend the laurels of their circuit. Their opponents are as yet unnamed although the probability is that the St. Louis Cards will be the pick of the senior circuit.

The Cards started a spurt very similar to that of the Boston Braves in 1914 when they started their drive past midseason from last place and emerged as National League champions. Later in the World Series they conquered a heavily favored Philadelphia team.

Although Brooklyn and Chicago, last year's pennant winners, are still in the race mathematically, all indications favor the St. Louis team. St. Louis plays teams that have offered very little opposition during the season and in addition to that can divide the remaining amount of games and still be tied for the leadership, whereas Brooklyn and Chicago must break their jinxes in order to crash through the Cardinal defence.

The faltering Robins play a series of games with Boston and Pittsburgh, two of Uncle Robbie's sore spots, while St. Louis fans rejoice that the Cubs must play a four game series with the Cincinnati Reds, a seventh place team, who have won 12 out of nineteen games with the Cubs. So it looks like Hallahan against Grove for the opener.

Hack Wilson, the chubby piece of T. N. T. of the Cubs, has already broken two National League records and is still going strong. Hack shattered "Chuck" Klein's récord of home runs in the middle of last month by crashing out his 44th circuit clout of the campaign. Since then Hack has added eight more to his record and is also leading Babe Ruth by five, thus probably assuring the Chicago slugger of the major league home run crown. In addition to this, Hack has made a new major league record for driving in runs, smashing Lou Gehrig's mark of 175. Not a bad mark for a former discard, Hack being sent to Toledo by John McGraw in one of his weak moments.

An incident which happened a year ago and in which Hack was one of the principals may rob the Cubs of the National League bunting. Ray Kolp, a Red hurler and the senior circuit's leading "jockey" (Baseball lingo for "razzer"), so infuriated the "Dempsey of the Dugouts" that he took a swing at Ray. Later, in the railroad station, Hack followed it up by knocking another Red hurler, Pete Donohue, cold. The Reds avenged themselves in an unique manner. The Cubs are having the devil of a time beating the Reds this year and the wollopings that the seventh place team has given the last year champions have just about put the Cubs out of the running.

HINES AND GRANT ARE CLAIMED FOR NORTH CAROLINA

National Tennis Stars Are Tar Heels By Blood.

Blood makes a difference, especially when it's good Tar Heel blood.

Or so it seems to a prominent North Carolinian who hastens to tell the world that Bryan Grant of Atlanta, Ga., and Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., the University of North Carolina's nationally prominent tennis stars, are more than Tar Heels by adoption, having generous portions of good Tar Heel blood in their veins.

Grant's grandfather on his mother's side, it is learned, was a Scales from Greensboro, N. C., and Hines' mother was a Miss Bernice Wooten of Warsaw, N. C., whose people now live in Clayton, N. C. "Why shouldn't the boys be good?" thinks the loyal Tar Heel informant.

Hines and Grant, freshmen at the University last year, won national prominence in the summer's tournaments.

Grant, a diminutive slip of a lad who is being called a second "Little Bill" Johnson, won the southern senior title, the national claycourts title, and numerous other tournaments.

Among other nationally prominent stars he defeated were Clifford Sutter, Tulane star, who won the national college title this past year, and Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem, Pa., who is fifth ranking tennis player in the country.

Hines, a close second to Grant, but tall and rangy in build, won almost a score of titles in a summer's tournament rounds.

Among his biggest trophies were the southern junior and national junior singles crowns. He also paired with Judge Beaver of Gainesville, Ga., to win the southern senior doubles and the national junior doubles.

The two Tar Heels (blood and adoption) will be teammates on the varsity tennis team at North Carolina this year.

New Faces at Tackle

Several new faces will be seen at the North Carolina tackle posts this year, for the regulars, Adkins and Koenig, both graduated last year. Best prospects are George Thompson, the only letterman; Marion Cowper, a reserve; Roy McDade and Frank Smith, freshman regulars last year; Harry Hodges and Tom Redding, converted freshman centers; and June Underwood, a newcomer eligible for the first time. All of the seven are big, rangy and powerful, but need seasoning in varying degrees, which means the tackle competition should be keen.

BLUE AND WHITE FORWARD WALL STILL UNKNOWN

Linemen Will Undergo Heavy Practice Duty This Week.

Starting the final week of preparations for the opening game with Wake Forest Saturday, Head Coach Chuck Collins will probably go very light on his flashy veteran backs, but it's more than likely the North Carolina linemen will have plenty more line scrimmage before the Deacon game.

The Tar Heel line is still very much of a big question mark, even at this stage, with three weeks of intensive work behind, when all good teams should be shaping up pretty definitely.

It's hard enough to tell what a line of one or two or three rookies will do, but Collins is having to build an entirely new forward wall around Center Lipscomb, only regular who returned from last year.

The blocking has looked ragged, despite intensive work, all training season. As a result Collins has had to stress offensive work all the way, with a look at defensive only occasionally.

The linemen will probably get lots more work this week, with Saturday to tell the story of how well they respond to training, and to give the big line on whether the Tar Heels may live up to ambitious conference hopes their supporters hold.

The center of the line isn't giving much worry. Lipscomb and Gilbreath rate with the best veteran pivot-pairs in the South, and McIver, Fysal, Blackwood and Crew form a veteran quartet of strong guards backed by two or three good reserves and sophs.

Tackles and ends are the big problems, and the Tar Heel tackles being mainly rookies unsteady on defense, and the ends being veterans without blocking proficiency on offense. Thompson, Underwood, McDade and Hodges are the outstanding tackle candidates; and Nelson, Parsley, Brown, Tabb, Walker and Davis have looked best to date among the ends.

Some Observations On The First Night Football Game In The State

By Bob Betts

Everybody at the game Saturday night was wet (No, Ophelia, everyone was not drunk!).

Some four thousand of the faithful turned out in spite of the rain to witness the inauguration of night football in this state. It was the largest crowd ever to attend a State College opener.

The spectators had no trouble following the ball but it was very hard to identify the players. The glare from the flood lights was hard on the eyes.

Three sailors came to the game and felt at home. Some wag shouted to them: "Hey, Josephus."

One spectator wanted to know if he got a rain check with his ticket.

N. C. State had nothing in the backfield that looked like a Jack McDowell or a Bob Warren. However, the original "All-American" Sam Gourneau looked mighty good at fullback. Sam is an Indian.

The High Point Panthers put up a game, stiff fight against their heavier opponents. The score at half time was 12-0. With their regulars used up the Panthers crumbled in the last quarter beneath a savage Wolfpack attack.

The novelty of the night play attracted many. However, the real football fans need no novelty to attract them. As Bill Shakespeare would say, "The game's the thing." After all there is no substitute for old "Sol." Anything that tends to commercialize football will degrade it in the end.

WOOFTER ISSUES NEW VOLUME ON ST. HELENA LIFE

University Professor Deals With Negro Ownership in South Carolina.

Dr. T. J. Woofter, Jr., of the University has just brought out a third book as the fruit of several years of research work, largely in the field of race relations. His latest volume, entitled Black Yoemanry, is the result of an intensive study of Negro life and conditions on St. Helena Island, off the lower South Carolina coast. The book was published by Henry Holt and Company, of New York.

There, more than anywhere else in America, it is said, Negroes have developed a distinctively racial community since the Civil War, when all the white people left the Island and the land passed largely into Negro ownership. Black Yeomanry tells the story of the efforts of these people to build a civilization of their own.

The book is not only a scientific study of background history and present conditions, but also a pleasing volume of human interest. Intimate glimpses of quaint home life and customs, folk lore music, religious rites and superstition relieve the solid data concerning population, agriculture, education and health, and make of the whole study, it is said, a very readable document.

Dr. Woofter's previous books were The Basis of Racial Adjustment and Negro Contacts in Cities.

Student Killed

Alder J. Blethen, a student expecting to enter the University this fall, was fatally injured in an automobile near Lynchburg, Va., September 12. Blethan was riding on a motorcycle driven by his friend B. C. Goodwyn, Jr., of Clifton Forge, when the machine skidded and he fell off right in front of a passing car. He died in the hospital.

Blethen was twenty years old, and the son of Mr. C. B. Blethen, publisher of the Seattle Times. He was on his way home after leaving the "Hill."

particularly regret in having to leave my friend and colleague, Fred Koch. All our associations have been most pleasant. His friendship has been invaluable to me."

From the veranda of his house one gets a beautiful, provincial view of Chapel Hill's backland. Pointing to it, Mr. Heffner said, " . . .and who would want to leave that?"

Mr. Heffner was a member of the original playwriting class which included Paul Green. In 1919 he wrote "Dod Gast Ye Both," which has won popularity here and in play-producing organizations in other states. In 1921 he received his B. A. degree with honors in language and literature at this university. The following year he received his M. A. degree and from here went to the University of Wyoming. There he founded The Wyoming Playmakers and produced the original plays of that organization. According to Professor Kach, "It was too cold for a southern boy there," and he accepted a position at the University of Arizona. Here he founded The Shamen Players and the state-wide drama extension service. The Shamen Players under his supervision also produced their own plays. In 1926 he returned to Carolina to work with Professor Koch and The Carolina Playmakers and to accept a position as Assistant Professor of English. During the past summer he acted as visiting professor at Northwestern University. Upon his return to Chapel Hill he was notified of the offer. His resignation was accepted Saturday.

Mr. Heffner was one of the outstanding actors in the history of the Playmakers. He could successfully fulfill almost any role he was called upon to take. His excellent portrayal of Rip Van Winkle last year and his marvelous interpretation of the character, Carl Rogers, in "Job's Kinfolks" mark his unlimited ability as an actor. He has played in most all of Green's plays produced here. He may be remembered as the miser in "The Miser," Cooper in "Fixins," January Evans in "12 O'clock," Jernigan and Dr. Emanuel in "Quare Medicine," and others. Professor Koch has said of him, "His ability as an actor comes from love of his work."

In speaking of Mr. Heffner before his class yesterday, Professor Frederick Koch impressed upon the group the grave significance implied by the loss of Heffner. "For four years he has earnestly devoted all his time, strength, and talents to the advancement of our dramatic work," said Koch. "Our debt to him can not be estimated. As business manager, actor, director, and teacher, he leaves a distinguished record. His services here will always remain a living monument to him. We shall miss him much.

Samuel Selden, former technical director of the Playmakers, has been chosen to fulfill the vacancy left by Mr. Heffner as associate director. Ralph Westerman, former business manager of the Cape Playhouse and Cape Cinema, has been appointed business manager of the Playmakers.

tion and arrangement for voice and piano of thirty folk songs last spring. This was published by Clark Fisher, Inc., of New York.

Mr. Stringfield is at present writing an opera, both play and music, based on the life of mountaineers. It will have the distinction of being the first American opera by an American composer on an American subject employing American folk music. It will be produced in Chapel Hill this fall by the Imperial Stock Company, a local organization.

Stringfield is alert and sports-minded. He is an enthusiastic follower of baseball and finds a close relationship between enjoyment of sportsmanship and music.

Comes of a Musical Family

He comes of a musical family. He was born at Inwood, five miles from Raleigh, the son of the late Rev. O. L. Stringfield. Stringfield is still a young man and is in his early thirties. His musical training started early. Early experience was gleaned from participation with the Mars Hill band and with the Wake Forest orchestras. Later he became associated with the First N. C. Infantry Band, which became the 105th Engineers band with the 30th Division.

The war upset his purpose to pursue the study of medicine. He determined to master the flute. After a six weeks' tour with the "Hickory Nuts," the Thirtieth division show, he started the serious study of his instrument with Emil Medicus of Asheville. Stringfield later entered the Institute of Musical Art in New York to continue his studies under the great flutist and teacher, George Barrere. He also studied composition with Percy Gootschius. He completed seven years prescribed work between 1920 and 1924, graduating with an artist's diploma in flute playing and receiving a prize in composition. Thereafter, with orchestra routine, including experience as a conductor, he became well established in the musical world and his work was much in demand.

Varied Musical Career

In 1924 he was flutist with the New York Chamber Music society, comprised of eleven of the outstanding instrumentalists of the country. He played with this organization three years, when he resigned to become conductor of the Washington National Opera association. He has played for the radio, phonograph companies, music guilds, recitals, and as soloist with the American Orchestral society, New York Symphony, American National orchestra, and other organizations. For two years he conducted the English folk dance festival in New York, having an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic orchestra.

Stringfield takes his music seriously. His compositions, numbering to opus forty-five, include vocal and instrumental solos, chamber music, and compositions for small and large orchestras, which have been performed by leading organizations and artists. His latest composition is a solo for flute, without accompaniment, written to Lucy McAlister Green, Paul Green's daughter.

The honors that have come to Mr. Stringfield reflect considerable credit upon the state.

ADAMS SPONSORS 'WALDEN' EDITION

Lakeside Press of Chicago Issues One Thousand Art Volumes.

By Virginia A. Douglas

The Lakeside Press of Chicago has abandoned its forty-year-old custom of acting as bookmaker alone and has turned bookmaker and publisher. The skill of the press has gone into the making of four American books, American-illustrated, one of which is Thoreau's Walden with a Preface by Dr. Raymond Adams of the University of North Carolina English faculty. Only a thousand copies of each book have been made, so the venture is more artistic than commercial. The press announces that "future publishing activities will be entirely casual, and if we do not find another perfect combination of artist and book, nothing more will be produced."

Walden, of course, is Walden, a book in black and white. But Thoreau is a paradox and therefore, and if not therefore, at least also, a enigma. A new interpretation of the author results in a new interpretation of his work. Dr. Adam's Preface gives a new and decidedly pleasing idea of the man who went to live in a shack by the New England pond on almost nothing, financially, a year, and absorbed wisdom. Public opinion is bull-headed, so once having accepted the translation of the name Thoreau to be whimpering recluse, it has held tenaciously to that idea; but Dr. Adams makes a new translation and finds in the name Thoreau, friendly, experimenting youth impatient with sham. He reminds the reader that, far from having the one

ENGINEER CO-OPS ASSIGNED DUTIES

Some Jobs Go Unfilled Due to Smallness of Junior Class.

Following the schedule of co-operative work inaugurated last spring, twelve members of the junior class in the engineering school are now doing co-operative work, A. R. Hollett, co-ordinator for the junior year co-op work announced this morning.

The length of the co-operative periods was increased last year so that, beginning this fall, a whole quarter would be used for co-operative work and the next year for school work instead of dividing the quarter into a period of study and a period of work.

Due to the smallness of the class, there have been several year, and several positions have been withdrawn by various companies because of shrinkage dur financial depression. The City of High Point, the Carolina Heating and Engineering Company, and the U. S. District Engineer's office in Wilmington, are concerns that are new on Hollett's list.

Five men interested in civil engineering are now on the co-op job. They are Harry Tsaumas, and C. H. Boyd, with the State Highway Commission; T. Knoop, with the City of Charlotte; W. M. Atkinson, with the District Engineer in Wilmington; and C. L. White, with the City of High Point.

TO ASK ALUMNI FOR MORE FUNDS

Banquet for Alumni Loyalty Fund Committeemen to Follow Deacon Game

Felix A. Grisette, director of the alumni loyalty fund, has announced that the appeal for funds for this institution will begin Saturday evening, Sept. 27, when 500 committeemen from all parts of the state gather in Chapel Hill for a banquet to be given at the Carolina Inn, and continue during the following two weeks, ending on Oct. 12, University Day.

All the attending alumni will be guests of the Athletic Association at the Carolina-Wake Forest game. The banquet, the principal speakers of which are President Frank P. Graham and Governor O. Max Gardner, will get under way soon after the game; at this gathering detailed plans of the campaign will be announced.

The alumni loyalty fund finances such projects and emergencies as cannot be practically taken care of by state appropriations. Lack of funds for student loans and scholarships are the particular emergencies which now face the institution.

McKINNEY TAKES FACULTY PLACE

President Frank Graham has announced the addition of Dr. Loren C. MacKinney to the faculty of the Department of History and Government in the University of North Carolina.

Dr. MacKinney takes the place in the department made vacant by the election of Frank Graham to the presidency. He is a Ph. D. of the University of Chicago, and is one of the best known of the younger group of mediaevalists in the United States. He was for one year on the faculty of Knox College at Galesburg, Ill., and for the past five years he has been a member of the faculty of Louisiana State University.

Last year Dr. MacKinney was a visiting professor at Ohio State University and during the summer quarter just closed at the University of Chicago. He has been a contributor to the Speculum, the journal of the Mediaeval Academy of America, and other journals of mediaeval history, and has a reputation as an inspiring teacher. He arrived in Chapel Hill in time to begin his work with the opening of the fall quarter.

FROSH Y COUNCIL TO HEAR GRAHAM

The Ex-Hi-Y Banquet to be held at the Methodist church Friday night, is expected to be the biggest yet. Everyone interested in Y work is invited, and over one hundred guests will be present. Registration is being handled by Mr. Comer and the Y.

The program for the banquet includes addresses by President Graham and Dean Bradshaw. Jim Kurfees, president of last year's Council, will be toastmaster. Officers of the council will be elected at this meeting, and the program for the year will be outlined.

Begins Fifth Year At N. C.

Coach Chuck Collins is starting his fifth year as head coach of the Carolina football team. He has met with much success during his four years here. The Notre Dame system, which was installed here by Coach Collins, has been largely responsible for the strong offensive teams which Carolina has had for the past few years.

Y REFURNISHING NOW UNDER WAY

The much-needed refurnishing of the Y cabinet rooms was accomplished during the summer. The Junior-Senior Cabinet room has been completely refurnished in wicker and other upstairs rooms are being done over. Mr. Lanier, Self-help Secretary, is in charge of the work.

The replacement of plaster which fell during the summer has been postponed until more is known of the possibilities of securing a new building.

J. D. Watson Takes Merritt's Position

John D. Watson, alumnus of the University, has been appointed to fill the position of W. D. Merritt as an instructor in the engineering school.

Mr. Watson has already taken up the position in the civil engineering department of the engineering school made vacant upon Mr. Merritt's resignation.

Watson, who was graduated from the engineering school in 1928, comes to Chapel Hill from Greenwood, South Carolina.

UNIVERSITY HAS GIVEN START TO MANY FAMOUS DANCE ORCHESTRAS

By Grier Todd

The University of North Carolina, long famous as the birthplace of many of the world's best dance orchestras, this year offers exceptionally good opportunities for a repetition of its former successes.

It has been a curious fact that every few years, quite regularly, some guiding genius has come forth from nowhere, taken his pick of talent from the many small orchestras on the campus, and in a year or two shown the general public that there is ability in a woodpile, as well as tenacity.

The first orchestra leader from Carolina to gain worldwide recognition was Tal Henry, who today holds one of the prominent places in the world of jazz leaders. A few years after the departure of Tal and his North Carolinians from the University, Hal Kemp presented to the world his famous band, with the saxaphone section which Paul Whiteman declared to be the best in the world and which has since then received even more favorable criticisms from the untutored public. Both Tal Henry and Hal Kemp left North Carolina with combinations of students who showed ability and promise, and kept right on climbing until today they stand at the top, along with bands composed of professionals who have known nothing but music since childhood. All of which might perhaps point out that college is at least not detrimental to the artistic attributes of music genius.

The most recent prodigy of the University is Kay Kyser, who has just begun an indefinite engagement in one of New

HEALTH OFFICER GRADES DAIRIES

Local Milk Supply Receives High Rating From Health Inspector.

Milk grades of Chapel Hill dairies were recently announced by Dr. S. A. Nathan, health officer. Following is a list of the dairies and managers which, in accordance with the definite standards set up by the town, are selling grade "A" raw milk: Chapel Hill Dairy, F. S. Sparrow; Chapel Hill Boulevard Dairy, J. S. McFarling; Carrboro Southside Dairy, D. L. Tripp; Chatham Dairy, William Ausley; Durham Road Dairy, T. R. Harwood; and Ray's Dairy, W. H. Ray. The following dairies are distributing grade "A" pasteurized milk: Durham Road Dairy, T. R. Harwood, and the Oak Grove Dairy, C. H. Weaver.

The Chapel Hill milk supply is controlled by the standard milk ordinance which is recommended by the United States Public Health Service in order to encourage a unification of milk practice in the country. Chapel Hill adopted this standard in 1925, and the dairies must keep certain definite standards or they are refused permission to sell milk.

In Chapel Hill grade "A" milk is the only grade that may be legally sold. Grade "A" raw milk is defined as milk in which the average bacteria count does not exceed 50,000 per cubic centimeter, and which is produced on dairy farms that comply with all the 26 items of sanitation. These items include: health of cattle, sterilization and disinfectants, milk-house construction, and sanitation, screening, utensils, etc.

Grade "A" pasteurized milk is designated as either grade "A" or "B" raw milk which has been pasteurized, cooled and bottled in a milk plant which conforms to similar sanitation requirements.

The grades of milk appear on the cap of each bottle and are posted in every restaurant, soda-fountain, or other establishments where milk is sold.

PHI HOLDS FIRST MEETING OF YEAR

The Phi Assembly opened it's 136th session tonight when the meeting was called to order by speaker Mayne Albright in the Phi Hall.

The roll was called together by counties, after which speaker Albright discussed the purpose of the society in a short talk. Articles from the Constitution membership and fees were then read.

Sergeant-At-Arms Hobgood discussed the advantage of having early initiation and increased membership.

The motion was made and carried that new members be invited to join next meeting with initiation to be held meeting after next. Thereupon the meeting adjourned.

In the long run it is safer to dictate to a stenographer than to a Latin-American republic.

SENATE SWINGS INTO ACTION AT INITIAL MEETING

Resolutions and Motions Fill Time; Fees Reduced to Three Dollars.

The Dialectic Senate held its first meeting of the current quarter last night at 7:15 in the Di Hall, New West building. Senator Rector, retiring chief executive of the society, delivered an inspiring farewell message in which he called upon every member to carry on the work of the organization.

Upon taking the president's position, Senator Medford delivered his inaugural address. The speaker traced the history of the senate on the campus, calling frequent attention to the sentiment-moulding influence which it has wielded for a long number of years. In naming several important figures in state and national politics of today who were once members of the Dalectic Senate, the new president sought to impress upon each senator the dignity and revered traditions of the institution. In conclusion, Medford advocated purging the senate of all dead wood.

Senator Dungan introduced a motion to reduce the initiation fee to one dollar and the regular dues to two dollars. The senate saw fit to sanction the motion maker's persuasion.

President Medford appointed a committee to investigate the status of the senate on the campus and to make recommendations regarding this year's program. The personnel of the committee is: Dungan (chairman), Williams, Ramsay, Kenan, and Fleming-Jones. The committee is to report two weeks from the time of their appointment. New men will be received at the next meeting.

DYER SEEKS NEW GLEE CLUB MEN

Possibility of Organizing All-Freshman Club.

Director Dyer wishes to urge everyone who is interested in, or who is planning to become interested in, the University glee club, to be present at the music building Thursday afternoon at five o'clock for the first meeting. This meeting is not for try-outs, but is merely for assembling and obtaining the names of the possible members, as well as arranging a suitable time for the try-outs. Everyone having the remotest idea of trying for a position later should be present, and it should be remembered that any student in the University is eligible for membership. All old members are requested to be present, also.

Dr. Dyer wishes to impress upon the new students, or students wishing to join the glee club, that no musical knowledge or experience of any kind is necessary as a prerequisite, although naturally it is a decided advantage. Last year there were several good men who, through the mistake of thinking that previous training was necessary, waited until late in the year to start, and therefore were handicapped to some extent. All freshmen who have inclinations toward vocalizing, or who would like to try to develop such, are urged to attend this short assembly meeting.

Are Cheerleaders Becoming Obsolete?

The honor and glory of being head cheerleader at the University apparently departed when Kike Kyser packed his instruments and orchestra boys off to some distant radio broadcasting station. Since his time there hasn't been a cheerleader here who added to the distinction of leading student cheering.

It wasn't so many years ago that everyone knew the cheerleader just as they knew the captain of the football team and one or two other campus notables. Now the spectators at the games must ask about who is leading the cheers and then they are lucky if they find a student who knows.

Of course cheering at the games has diminished considerably during recent years. Too many of us are in a huddle trying to decide who just made that fifty yard run, or we are peering high above the surrounding heads in an effort to attract the attention of the girl in the green hat. Cheering seems confined to the over-enthusiastic, the drunks who emit loud whoops every now and then, and those who happen to be observing the cheerleader at the time he calls for a yell.

But mass cheering is on the down grade. We haven't any reason to offer for this, but it is apparent to everyone who attends the game. Perhaps with a high scoring team this fall cheering will pick up; but we're inclined to think that cheerleading must regain some of its lost glory before we are to have spontaneous and good cheering.

Serve Carolina

Extra—curricula work is one of the most enjoyable and remunerative phases of university life. While every man should join some outside activity, such participation should never be carried to the extent of overindulgence or be permitted to interfere with other duties which are, after all, the primary reasons for attendance here. Honor, character, experience, and self-satisfaction are the compensation offered to the active members of this institution for their efforts. All these rewards and, perhaps other remunerations go to the student in possesson of initiative. The recompense for such service is often not a medal, a letter, or anything tangible, but is the acquisition of experience and character.

Service for the University is not forced upon us. It is something that we, ourselves, must decide to render. Those Carolinians with sufficient loyalty to the alma mater to induce themselves to participate in any of the various teams, clubs, and societies of the Tar Heel organization, surely find themselves amply repaid in the end for their efforts in immaterial, yet none the less precious form.—M. P. H.

WORD PICTURE

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Davie Hall, picturesque, typical of "Carolina's" treasure store of traditions, nestles gracefully among the innate branches of green and golden shrub. Within earshot of the arboretum, it has for decades been the silent sentinel for romantic Youth, whose whispered vows of enraptured emotion have so repeatedly floated up to its waiting ears. Faithfully it has kept its secrets and always shall.

Impressive in its firmness and stability, it has lured within its walls endless numbers of us who long to delve deeper into the mystery of living things.

Venerable, because of the men of science it has housed, men whose love of nature has gained them superior knowledge, whose love of humanity has sent them here to give to others the reapings of their years of tireless effort.

Priceless store house of zoological treasures, it has become, containing, as it does, innumerable specimens of scientific interest.

Colorful, with its background of immortal college history, it stands a firm memorial to men of undeniable courage and perseverance, whose inspired visions of a great educational institution have materialized into a systematic mass of structure and edifice, combined with a greatly diversified selection of academic possibilities.

Dedicated in honor of the "Father of the University," General Richardson Davie has a worthy memorial for his life of sacrifice and self-denial in the furtherance of the progress of the institution.

Clothed in such a wealth of glory, Davie Hall should stand an object of interest and respect to every student, and an object of admiration to the most casual passerby.

W. T. LASLEY.

HENDERSON PICKS TEN GREATEST MEN

Who are the immortals of today? Who are the men and women now living that future generations will remember as those who have presented the world with some superlative achievement? By what criterion shall they be selected?

In Contemporary Immortals, a book released from the press of D. Appleton and Company, Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the University of North Carolina, distinguished author and biographer of Bernard Shaw, attempts to answer these questions.

The volume has already appeared in syndicated articles in this country and abroad, is dedicated to Albert Einstein, one of the "immortals," who is regarded by Dr. Henderson as having "the most intricately organized intellgence of our era."

Ten men and two women are selected by Dr. Henderson for his brilliant gallery of immortals: Einstein, Gandhi, Edison, Mussolini, Shaw, Marconi, Ford, Paderewiski, Kipling, Wright, Jane Adams and Madame Curie.

"It may well be," Dr. Henderson writes, doubtless with the magnitude and unique nature of his undertaking in mind, "that in choosing contemporary immortals we are only designating temporary immortals. We are not posterity; nor is our judgement, with any assurance of finality, the verdict of history. It requires hardihood to venture upon such a choice, since it is a form of prophecy—the vainest and most fruitless of all human activity.

"And yet!—the human mind is endlessly avid of the forbidden and the impossible, and irrepressibly craves to do what has never been done before. In spite of all the arguments against the likelihood of accurate identifying human genius and greatness, and there is one unanswerable argument in favor of maikng the attempt. That argument, in one word, is: idealism.

It must be in this spirit of idealism that Dr. Henderson nominates for immortality such antipodal characters as Gandhi and Mussolini. One will be remembered forever for his doctrine of non-resistance, the other just as long for his doctrine of blood and iron. Doctrines completely polar in their antithesis will place the Indian and the Italian in Fame's eternal hall along with Aristotle and Napoleon, in the judgement of Dr. Henderson.

clearing in an otherwise primaeval forest, Thoreau had a fronting on the road between Concord and Lincoln. He reminds the reader that Thoreau entertained, visited, went to town, ate the "remnants of Saturday's baked beans" with farmer Hosmer. "The neighborliness of the Walden experiment and the hopeful buoyancy of Thoreau have been forgotten while partially judged and but half understood, the author of Walden has remained to most readers the stoic of Emerson's biographical sketch... His peculiarities, his paradoxes, his noncooperation, the lack of qualification in what he said convinced the villagers and the readers of Walden that he was a carping critic of life, a whining Rousseau." Dr. Adams in his Preface advances the idea that Walden was a happy experiment taken more seriously by the world than the experimenter ever intended.

It is not news to announce that a debunker has smashed an idol; but it is news as welcome as unprecedented to say that a debunker has worked backwards and made a dead man more agreeable than tradition and preconceived opinion would have him. Dr. Adam's Preface to Walden satisfies in that it convinces; it pleases in that it paints youth.

The 1854 edition of Walden was "physically a sombre book with a murky cover releived but sligthly by the lemon yellow end papers." That book matched the stoic of the biography. The artist Ruzicka has made the new edition to match the new Thoreau. The cover promises revelations. Ruzicka has done the illustrations in black and white with thin pen marks that make etchings of drawings. The format, the Preface, and of course Walden itself make a volume that the great writer Walter Prichard Eaton described to Dr. Adams as a "grand job all around."

Merritt in Florida

James E. Merritt, who was a graduate student working for his Ph. D. degree here last year, is now teaching in the high school in Bluntstown, Florida. His position is that of assistant principal and director of athletics.

Coach Chuck Collins, getting things lined up for his fifth year as head football coach at Carolina, has few worries in the right halfback sector. Three fleet, hard-running, shifty lettermen, for as many backfields, are back in camp. Captain Strud Nash, Rip Slusser and Chuck Erickson.

Carmichael Writes Thesis On Freedom

A thesis entitled "The Nature of Freedom," which in the opinion of Dr. Horace Williams, head of the department of philosophy, "will surprise the ultra-scientific, excite the conservative, and will appeal to the philosophical," has recently been published by the University department of philosophy.

The author, Dr. Peter A. Carmichael, who is a native of Georgia, a graduate of Johns Hopkins, and has a master's degree from Columbia, holds a doctorate in the philosophy department here. He states in the foreword that "the writer was motivated by a desire to find out what freedom meant, not with respect to conventions, 'rights,' and legislative arrangements, but with respect to the free beings as such and to the other things from which he is free."

"I wish to know," he says, "not only what it meant for man and other creatures to be free, but also what it meant for God or the universe to be free."

The thesis is published in pamphlet form and divided into six sub-divisions, "The Meaning of Nature," "The Universal Relation," "The Individual," "Free Will," and "Freedom."

Dr. Carmichael is a holder of the Graham Kenan fellowship in philosophy and at present is engaged in research work here at the University.

UNIVERSITY HAS GIVEN START TO JAZZ ORCHESTRAS

York's most fashionable hotels, and is still familiar to the older men around the campus as a shining example of personality and showmanship. His musicians were forced, most regretfully, to desert many interesting classroom problems of today and yesterday, and to face many others of today, possible a little more interesting, and most certainly more engaging.

There have always been men in Chapel Hill anxious to follow in the footsteps of these undoubted geniuses, but this year there seem to be even more worshippers of the unnamed god of jazz than usual, and it is already a very familiar experience to most students to be startled in the dead of night, or much worse, early in the morning, by weird and grotesque noises, which possible in later years will be the golden tones of masters. A dormitory is indeed fortunate which does not have more than two or three of these ambitious musicians to the floor, and a fraternity house without even one must be a paradise.

With the large amount of talent available this fall, the campus may look forward to seeing in the near future another organizaiton that will have the genius and the talent of the few that have gone before. He might also see some results from last year's orchestras, two or three of which are returning to school after summer engagements, which did quite a bit this past summer toward making progress. An event which deserves particular notice along this line is a recent combination of last year's two leading orchestras, the Carolina Buccaneers and the Carolina Tar Heels, both of which have just finished summer jobs. The Buccaneers were under the management of the National Broadcasting Company, and the Tar Heels were at Myrtle Beach, S. C. The name of the orchestra will be, or, rather, has been the Carolina Buccaneers, and it promises to be a satisfactory arrangement of more or less gifted students, if not the best dance orchestra in the state, and has already begun to issue doubtful sounds from the neighborhood of the old Beta house.

Besides this organized company, the town will doubtless be afflicted with four or five small combinations which will spring up and disband with the same regularity of the proverbial Chapel Hill eating places.

German Instructor Back From Europe

L. J. Bell of the Germanic language department has recently returned from Europe where he spent about two months of the summer quarter.

Mr. Bell went over on the new North German - Lloyd liner, "Europa," which is the largest, fastest boat in the world and which covered the distance from New York to Cherbourg in four and one-half days.

Mr. Bell spent the major portion of his time in Budapest, Hungary, where he studied the language and the customs of the people. Before going to Hungary he made a flying trip over Germany, visiting Bremen, Berlin, Munich, the passion play at Oberammergau and thence to Minchen. Flying from Minchen to Budapest he had a most exciting experience. His plane, encountering a heavy fog, was forced to make a blind landing in the mountains. But nevertheless he says that he enjoyed it immensely.

In Budapest, during the time of the revolutionary and Communistic upheavals, Mr. Bell got in a mob of Communists who were making a demonstration in the streets against the regent of Hungary. As this notable passed by, the German professor snapped his photograph. At once he was seized by the police and thrown into jail. After quite a bit of red tape he received his release along with profuse apologies.

Mr. Bell says that the thing that struck him most forcefully during his trip was the attitude of the various countries toward America. "Far more friendly," says he, "are the countries we fought against in the last war in comparison with those which were our very allies."

Dyer Seeks New Men

The glee club last year made a very enviable record in comparison with other clubs throughout the country. It won the southern championship, and made a strong bid for the national, and promises to do at least as well this year since there are quite a few of the old men returning. There are always vacancies, however, and anyone interested has Dr. Dyer's assurance that the best men fill the places and that the next best will have a chance. Last year there were two freshmen who made all three trips, taking the jobs away from experienced upperclassmen. In the national contest in New York last year five freshmen were included in the lineup.

The officers for this fall are: Steve Lynch, president; Charlie Duffie, secretary; and A. J. Starr, librarian. The president has been closely observing some singing organizations in Europe this summer, and has several new ideas which he hopes to incorporate this term.

For the first time, there is also a good chance for a club composed entirely of freshmen. Director Dyer states that he sincerely hopes that there will be enough new material at the first meeting to enable him to begin work on the combination as soon as possible, and thus fit them for the "varsity" next year. If, however, there are not enough men, competition on the club will be open.

First Team Will Scrimmage Freshmen At Stadium Today

Second Varsity Started Like Wildfire Yesterday But Failed To Keep Pace.

MORE HARD WORK AHEAD

What resembled the second team of the Tar Heel football squad did not show up any too well against the inexperienced freshmen yesterday in scrimmage.

However, the varsity crew started off like wildfire, pushing over four touchdowns in short order. Then, something happened. They played sluggish, no pep anywhere. Something was badly wrong. And all the while the frosh were breaking through, smearing plays, intercepting passes, and sometimes throwing the varsity for losses. A big fellow by the name of Eanes and a shifty back called Hackney were the mainstays of the frosh team when they were in the game. Coach Enright sent in many substitutes. This reserve strength was a factor in the tiring of the varsity, who seemed to be working together only at intervals.

The frosh, playing their second day together, with a repertoire of but two plays, made a first down their first three plays, and scored when Sam Eanes of Lexington intercepted one of Chandler's passes and sprinted 50 yards.

Coach Chuck Collins' face was a study in disgust, as he drove and criticised his linemen, who were blocking the freshmen but spasmodically, and blocking the secondary not at all.

Hopes of the coaches are that today and tomorrow will tell different stories. Today the first team will tackle the frosh. Chances are that there will be many changes made and many points brushed up on before the game with Wake Forest here Saturday.

The starting second team was composed of Branch, quarter; Slusser and Maus, halves; McNeil, fullback; Brown and Walker, ends; McDade and Hodges, tackles; Newcobe and McIver, guards; and Gilbreath, center.

MANAGEMENT IS NEWEST COURSE

There is a noticeable increase in interest among commerce and engineering students in the field of management. During the past four years the enrollment of engineering students in the course of business administration has grown from 24 to 43.

The courses now offered in the field of management are: business administration, industrial management, and labor management. A new advanced course will be offered during the winter quarter in time and motion study, for which a demand has been expressed.

In special preparation for the time and motion study course, Professor Schwenning spent the summer with the Western Electric Company at Kearny, N. J., doing research work in the subject.

Two students in the commerce school are doing graduate work in the University this year.

TREE GROWS FROM SIDE OF SOLID BRICK WALL

Chapel Hill has a miracle of nature which could easily win a place in Ripley's "Believe It Or Not." A young tree is growing from the solid brick wall of the Klutz Building in which the Stetson D shop is located. There has been a great deal of speculation as to where this tree secures the substance to live on, but thus far no satisfactory answer has been obtained.

Sports Staff To Meet

There will be a meeting of the sports staff of the Tar Heel at the office in Alumni building this afternoon at 2 o'clock. All those who expect to remain on the staff must attend this meeting. Any one wishing to join the staff should be present at this time.

DEACONS PLAN TO STOP TAR HEELS' WINNING STREAK

Only Few Members of Team Lost by Graduation; Tackle Positions Strong.

Pat Miller, coach of the Wake Forest College Demon Deacons, has been silently driving his men through practice for over three weeks. On Saturday he will bring them to Kenan Satdium to lock horns with the Tar Heels.

So far only silence has emitted from the Deacons' camp. Still suffering under the stings of two overwhelming defeats in the past two years, they are working hard to turn out another winning team. Only two men were lost by graduation last year. The men who will not return are Johnnie Cox, quarterback and captain of last year's team, and Denton, a linesman.

Captain Jack Parker is one of the best centers in the state. around him a very strong line can be mustered. He is flanked by Sammy Levine and Hicks at the guard positions.

Levine is showing up mighty well in scrimmage. At the tackle positions the Deacons have two of the best tackles in the State in Webb and Williams. Each of these boys weigh 200 or more pounds. Gregson and Brogden will take care of the wing posts. All of these men are veteran lettermen. However, the reserve line material is scarce and untried.

The backfield that will take the field Saturday will probably be composed of Tex Quillen, quarterback, Mills and "Shorty" Peters, halfbacks, and Walter Covington, fullback. Other veteran backs are Benton and Bradley. "Shorty" Peters, incidentally, resembles "Shorty" Branch on the field. The Baptists are banking heavily on this sophomore Saturday. A duel may develop between the two "Shorties."

With so many veterans back, Miller should bring the best team he has had in three years to Chapel Hill. In the fall of '27 the Deacons humbled the Tar Heels by a score of 9 to 8. And that is exactly what they will be trying to do Saturday.

NEW DORMS HAS FIRST MEETING

The occupants of New Dorms met Monday night for the first time under their new president, Wallace Shelton, for the purpose of acquainting the new men with the dormitory system, to elect athletic managers, and to appoint dormitory councilmen. The attendance was good, there being 72 men present.

George Long, who led the dormitory to victory last year, was re-elected to the position of athletic manager, with Purser as assistant. Wade Hampton will have charge of the men while at practice and during games.

The men appointed as dormitory councilmen to assure quiet at times of study are: Frank Huff, Tom Forney, Floyd Garmen, for Battle; Wade Hampton, John Andrews and Coley Williamson for Vance; and J. T. Huskins, J. O. Griffin and Hale Yokeley for Pettigrew.

END POSITION IS BIGGEST TROUBLE TAR HEELS HAVE

Brown, Parsley, Nichols and Walker Best Prospects.

With the end of the second week of practise, University line problems have narrowed down almost to a matter of filling the flank posts.

There are outstanding veterans aplenty for center and guard. Thompson, only letter tackle; McDade and Underwood, rookies; and others have been looking up consistently at tackle. Filling the flanks remains the big problem unsolved.

Head Coach Collins has four lettermen back for the flank posts, but neither these nor the several rookie candidates have shown stuff enough, so far, to satisfy the exacting Tar Heel mentor.

Brown and Parsley have been looking best of the letter candidates, and Nichols and Walker are probably the best of the rookie prospects. Other candidates are Tabb and Nelson, lettermen; and Bridgers and Davis, rookies who showed well in spring training.

Coach Collins has been concentrating attention all week on coaching his linemen at blocking and opening line gaps. The ends have been doing overtime work, and improvement has begun.

Motorcycle Runs Wild On Campus

Several fatalities were narrowly averted at noon hour Monday when a run-away motorcycle piloted by a freshman, also green in motorcycle experience, broke loose and ran down the drive back of the graduate building and back of the music building.

The freshman, who would not disclose his name, was experimenting with a strange machine, found that the thing would work and later, to his dismay, found that it worked too well and would not stop.

The machine careened madly down the alley which was thronged with patrons going to downtown lunch places and narrowly missed them, while the owner of the machine sped valiantly after.

The motorcycle turned from the alley and ran on the grass just behind the music auditorium, where it did several circles and ran into a car parked there. Neither the automobile or the other vehicle were damaged, but the latter seemed hesitant to start again.

SWARTZ LEAVES FOR WORK WITH KENTUCKY MINES

Dr. Joel H. Swartz, associate professor of geology, is leaving the University for an indefinite time to take charge of the geophysical investigations with the bureau of mines in Kentucky and Texas.

Dr. Swartz's position in the geology department here will be filled by Dr. W. R. Morse, who comes to Chapel Hill from the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College situated at Starkville, Mississippi.

DR. R. C. MILLS IS CARNEGIE PROFESSOR

Dr. Richard Charles Mills, professor of economics and dean of the faculty of economics of the University of Sydney, Australia, who arrived in New York September 12, will serve as visiting Carnegie Professor at the University of North Carolina during the first semester of the academic year 1930-1931, according to announcement by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Boxers' Notice

Coach Rowe requests that all men, freshmen or upperclassmen, who are interested in boxing come out and see what they can do. While experience is desirable, it is not at all essential, as shown by the fact that several of Carolina's most prominent boxers had no experience at all before coming to Carolina.

BOXERS TURN OUT FOR INITIAL CALL

Prospects Good for Regaining Southern Conference Crown.

Forty-five freshmen and 40 varsity men answered Coach Crayton Rowe's initial call for boxers at the Tin Can Monday afternoon to aid Carolina in regaining its crown lost to Florida last winter. Chances look especially bright at present with veterans competing for all but two positions on the varsity.

Led by Captain Noah Goodridge, classy lightweight, the Tar Heels will enter the conference this year without the title for the first time in four years. At present the welter class, left vacant by the graduation of Archie Allen, is the most doubtful position on the team. Farris, Holderness, and Jackson will have to fight this out. The other vacant position will be the lightheavy and will probably be taken care of by Platt Landis, last year's sensational freshman battler. Vaughan, Sheffield, Davis and Warren, veterans, should be able to take care of the other divisions, but will find keen competition in several members from last year's freshman squad. The most outstanding among these men is Marty Levinson who can fight either as a bantam or as a featherweight.

RUSHING RULES FOR SORORITIES

A. There shall be a truce at the opening of this college year, dating from September 18 until October 6. During this time there shall be no fraternity rushing. Fraternity rushing consists of: (1) talking fraternity matters to or before rushees; (2) making dates with rushees; (3) fraternity parties or teas at which rushees are present.

B. Fraternity members shall not have spending-the-night dates with rushees during rushing season.

C. No fraternity woman whose national has a local chapter at the University of North Carolina shall wear her fraternity badge during the truce at the opening of the college.

D. Rushing season shall end two days before bid day at which time there shall be a continuation of the first truce as qualified in section A.

E. During the truce fraternity members shall be on their bonds not to talk fraternity matters to or before rushees; after the truce there shall be no such restriction.

Alumni Association To Meet On Saturday

W. T. Shore, president of the board of directors of the alumni association, has called a meeting of that body, to be held September 27 at 11:30 o'clock at the Carolina Inn. A review of this year's activities and plans for the program of the ensuing year will be made; in addition to that, a date will be set for the annual assembly of the association.

GOLFERS HOLDING DAILY PRACTICE

Election of Captain Yet to Be Held; Those Interested Are Urged to Try for Team.

The golf team is holding practice daily and reports indicate that the golfers are showing good form for so early in the season. Al Brown, Paul Carter, Aubrey Brooks and Meade Willis, veterans back from last year's team, compose the squad. All played well yesterday and Brooks had low score with a snappy 74. As Captain Chatham did not return to school this year, the captain has yet to be chosen.

The schedule has not been announced, but the team will probably meet Virginia Thanksgiving in its first match of the year.

Golf made its debut in University athletics only a few years ago, but the popularity of the game has caused a swift turn to the sport by University students. In the last few years Carolina teams have made a wonderful record for future teams to uphold.

The golfers are looking forward to a successful season, and extend through this paper a call to all upperclassmen interested in golf to come out and try for the team.

Dormitory Service Association Meets

Due to erroneous information Saturday's issue of the Tar Heel carried a story to the effect that the Carolina Dormitory Club held its annual organization meeting last Friday night. Informants state that it was not this organization but the Dormitory Men's Service Association which convened at this time.

The Dormitory Club is composed of the presidents and athletic managers of the thirteen undergraduate dormitories while the Service Men's association has a membership of men selected to operate the service rooms in the several dormitories.

COBB TELLS OF DROUGHT PLIGHT

Geologist Returns From Extended Field Trip.

Cattle grazing in the bed of the Mississippi . . . live stock being hauled on trucks from one pasture to another . . . ferries dragging on the bottom of the Mississippi and shaking like a T-Model Ford.

Such are the stories brought back from the Mississippi valley by Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department in the University, who has just returned from a field trip extending northward along the Mississippi from Cairo, Illinois, to Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Dr. Cobb took advantage of the drought in the Mississippi to extend his studies on the loess and loess-loam soils along the Father of Waters. His work on the loess of the Yellow River in China has found its way into many of the larger text books of geography. With about two weeks more of field study, he will have completed his work along the Mississippi.

"I have seen the Mississippi shifting its bars and airing its bed," Dr. Cobb said. "At some points its width was only a few hundred yards where formerly it was two or three miles. On some of the bars grass was already growing and furnished the best pasturage for cattle to be found in the neighborhood.

"The channel of the St. Croix at Hudson, Wisconsin, was only about one-fifth of its usual width, but the exposed bed was covered with green grass. Cattle and even horses were being hauled in trucks seeking pasturage at a distance."

Dr. Cobb told of crossing the Mississippi at one point where the ferryman assured him that he was making his last trip. Drifting timber and sand bars, Dr. Cobb said, made the crossing as rough as "running a Ford in Surry county before the days of the good roads."

Speaking of sitting endurance records, the little brown hen when she makes a three-weeks' sit produces something worth while.—Florida Times-Unit.

REQUEST ISSUED FOR OLD CLOTHES

Local D. A. R. Wants Discarded Garments for Mountain School.

The Chapel Hill chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will have a box in the M System store today and Wednesday for the purpose of receiving old clothes to be sent the Crossnore school and ask that every one who has discarded clothing contribute it to the mountain school.

The Crossnore school is an institution working to educate mountain children in western North Carolna and is partially maintained by donations of old clothing. The contributed clothing is either made into rag rugs or sold to the mountain people, the profits going to the school.

The local D. A. R. chapter, and many other chapters throughout the state, contribute to this enterprise and request that students of the University and local people help them fill the boxes. This will have to be done by Wednesday afternoon, at which time the box will be sent to the mountain institution.

REGISTRATION CONTINUES

The registration of students is still continuing at a good rate, and although there is no definite record of the total number of students yet, it is certain to have passed the twenty-six hundred mark.

A large number of men registered yesterday, for all during the day there was a group wending their way to South building.

No time limit has been set for the closing of registration but it is expected that the number will decisively decline from today on.

Rushing Notice

All invitations for freshmen must be turned in to Tom Hunter at the Sigma Chi house by noon today. Those turned in after 12 o'clock cannot be delivered to the freshmen.

Engineering School Has Record Increase

Boasting of a 20 percent increase in enrollment, the school of engineering now has approximately 300 students, Dean G. M. Braune announced yesterday morning.

The major part of the increase is in the freshman class, which showed a gain of about 50 percent over the enrollment of last year. There are about 50 more freshmen in the engineering school than at the beginning of last year, bringing the approximate total of the class in that school to 150.

William J. Battle Here

William J. Battle, alumnus of the University in the class of 1888 and son of the late Kemp P. Battle, president of the University, was in Chapel Hill this week for a short stay with the Bookers.

Mr. Battle has been a member of the faculty of the University of Texas since 1894. The chief purpose of his trip to North Carolina this year was to visit his brother, Thomas Battle, in Rocky Mount, and it was on his way back to Texas that he came through Chapel Hill.

While he was here he strolled around the campus and the village, and he was particularly interested in the auditorium going up on the site of Memorial hall and in the new recital hall with its pipe organ. He was greeted warmly by many of his old friends.

COFFMAN PLANS CREATIVE WORK

Hopes for Renewal of Undergraduate Creative Writing In University.

"The University of North Carolina might well be a center for a renaissance in undergraduate creative literary work, just as it is now a Southern center for graduate work in English," said Dr. George Coffman, new head of the English department, in an interview yesterday. "We expect to have here some day a man who will direct undergraduate creative writing," he continued, "as there are always ready men to conduct special courses in play-writing and other particular branches of student literary endeavor."

"We hope to make it possible for students to really develop interest in writing," Dr. Coffman said. To accomplish this end, the English department is depending greatly on undergraduate literary publications to offer a training field to young authors.

Of this kind the University has two: The Carolina Magazine, bi-monthly supplement to the Tar Heel, which is entirely a campus enterprise.

In fact, the English department is so much interested in student publications that it intends to have its freshmen and sophomore students, in particular, study The Carolina Magazine, to use it in their class work, and to take an active interest in its publication.

With the stimulus thus aroused by the undergraduate publications and the inspiration and instruction offered by the English department, Dr. Coffman hopes to lay the foundations for a movement that will "raise North Carolina to its former standards of cultural tradition."

Judge Winston's Biography of Jefferson Davis

Judge Robert W. Winston's new biography, High Stakes and Hair Trigger: the Life of Jefferson Davis, is announced by Henry Holt and Co. It will be issued October 10.

"Thus the versatile and indefatigable former Judge Winston," says the Raleigh Times, "gives promise of adding something worth while to the literary record of North Carolina, which his former biography did much to brighten and encourage. In his Andrew Johnson he succeeded in drawing with authority, an appealing and sympathetic picture of the President of the United States who had perhaps the strangest career of any man who ever occupied the White House. For Johnson in history had been a vague figure more or less despised by tradition, both in the North and in the South. Judge Winston presented the man and his problems in a manner to add something positive in the way of verity to what up to the time of his study had been sheer confusion.

"In Jefferson Davis he had an even greater and more baffling subject. For to the North, Davis was for years the arch-traitor, and to the South, for years afterwards, the martyred hero of a saintly cause. If the North paid no attention to the Davis virtues, the South felt in duty bound to ignore failings that during the time the Confederacy was a going concern kept him a constant center of discord and faction. Now there has been time enough to come to a dispassionate appraisement with an array of evidence; and Judge Winston's Johnson holds out the hope that the task will be accomplished with satisfaction.

"Without any professional debunking, it probably is time that the real Jefferson Davis should be known. He, too, was a patriot and in the heated terms of his day a statesman. His hot temper and steely purpose are known. There runs here and there a hint of his egotism, his recklessness, the conceit of himself as a military genius which at times hampered sorely his leaders in the field. He was no man, as Woodrow Wilson, to put a sole military decision in the hands of a Pershing. All this doubtless has been handled by Judge Winston, along with the data on which the Davis reputation as soldier, statesman and Southern patriot was founded.

"This is one book we hope all reading North Carolina will tackle."

High Mark Reached In Chem Department

Instructors of the chemistry department report that they have 24 students in the graduate school, 290 in general chemistry, 43 in organic chemistry, 30 in chemistry 31, 75 in chemistry 41, and 24 graduates and 15 seniors in research work.

Of the 24 students in the graduate school, states from Pennsylvania to Mississippi are represented.

More students are enrolled in this department than ever before.

Groves' Book in Japanese

Professor E. R. Groves' book, Marriage Crisis, is now being translated into the Japanese language. Professor Groves is connected with the department of sociology at the University of North Carolina.

COMER TO REPRESENT LOCAL Y IN CHICAGO

The University Y will be represented at the national council of the Y. M. C. A. to be held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago October 19-23. North Carolina has three electoral units in the council. One of these units is the students who will be represented by H. F. Comer of the University, W. M. Upchurch of Duke and James of Shaw.

Every state and 39 foreign countries will be represented at the council. At this meeting reports of standing committees will be heard, a program for the year drawn up, and the budget compiled.

MAIL ORDER CAR WILL SOON MAKE ITS APPEARANCE

The Martin Will Be the Latest Addition to the Bantam Field.

On the heels of the nation's current mania, miniaturism, comes the first edition of the Martin, "pee wee" vehicle which is expected to make its debut in Chapel Hill in February. B. W. Lacock, of the Lacock Shoe Repair company, will have the agency here.

From preliminary observation, the power plant of the pint sized automobile will be of the same dimensions as an Ingersoll watch movement, although the agent avers that the motor beneath the hood will breathe through four lungs and will be of the air-cooled motorcycle type.

Popularly known as the "Mail Order Car," the tiny vehicle lives up to its cognomen and may be purchased through mail from the home offices of the manufacturing concern, located in Washington, D. C. $220 will bring the car, boxed in its own garage, to your dormitory steps. The Martin weighs only 600 pounds and consumes only one gallon of gas for every fifty miles of use.

Publicity circulars claim that the car will travel "fifty miles an hour across plowed ground." On this basis, the Tom Thumb machine should make Cannon Ball Baker look like a terrapin on the open road.

Two passengers may occupy the seat with ease and with every manner of comfort enjoyed in a regulation sized car. There is no chassis, no springs, no axles, and the shock absorbers are constructed of rubber.

One of the most commendable features of the Martin is its nobility in traffic. It can be virtually parked on a dime and can weave in and out of traffic while larger automobiles are forced to remain within the dimension and stay within the prescribed lanes.

LARGE INCREASE THIS YEAR AMONG SELF-HELP MEN

The Chapel Hill of yesteryear, when un-hurrying, un-worrying Southern gentlemen exposed themselves to education through contagious effect of pedantic professors, without thought of aiding in the process, seems to be changing.

The new year, with its pinch of "hard times," has developed a new studentry. The idle Southern gentlemen of the story books are gone. Students this year are not only studying but also fighting and working for an education!

The University drew a record number of freshman applications this year, but the self-help bureau did an even more rushing business.

Secretary Edwin Lanier, in fact, estimates that the percentage of students doing self-help work is larger than ever before, a fact which is readily obvious from a glance at a few local establishments.

Friendly cafeteria is probably the biggest employer of self-help students. The popular eating place employs 12 students regularly, and C. V. Cummings, remembered as a former Carolina boxer, is a new student assistant to Manager Cooley.

The other cafeterias and

DR. PROUTY GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Many Changes Made in Geology Department.

Dr. Prouty is on Kenan leave for the fall and winter quarters. He is engaged in some important investigations of the Triassic and is writing a book on engineering geology.

This being Dr. Joel H. Swartz's sabbatical year he is spending the year in geo-physical investigations for the bureau of mines. He has had charge of their field party in Kentucky during the summer and has made some important discoveries. He has been assisted in this work by W. T. Holland who holds B. S. and M. S. degrees from Carolina.

Dr. Swartz's position here is taken by Dr. W. C. Morse, A. B. and A. M. of Ohio State, student at Chicago, Ph. D., Massachusetts Institute of Technology, assistant instructor, assistant professor, Ohio, Washington University, St. Louis, and assistant geologist on several geological surveys during his summers. He comes very highly recommended by Waldemar Lindgren, professor of economic geology, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Professor Jefferson Bynum is on leave studying at Clark University. He has spent the summer in the field with Dr. Clarence F. Jones of Clark, and will shortly go on a field study of Caribbean lands. His place is taken by Irving L. Martin, who has been teaching fellow in geology for the past three years, and is now raised to the rank of instructor.

Miss Glass, assistant in human geography has gone to a position with the U. S. Geological Survey, and her place is being taken by Kenneth Byerly, a graduate of the University of Minnesota.

The registration in the department is unusually large in spite of the limit put on most of the classes. Whereas there were ten men registered last fall in Geology 3, the number registered this fall is twenty-eight. In one section of Geology 1 forty-one were registered last fall and seventy this. The total fall term registration in the department is 370 against 300 last year.

Among the graduate students in the department Chicago, Cornell, Leland Stanford, Michigan, Minnesota, Princeton, and Duke are represented.

FATHER MANLY SECURED FOR CATHOLIC CHURCH

According to an announcement received at the Tar Heel office yesterday, Father John Manly has been secured as chaplin of the local student Catholic church. Father Manly comes to the campus from the Nazareth Orphan Asylum in New York.

An Address To The Students of North Carolina

Student government has come into the colleges and universities of North Carolina to stay. A government by the students, of the students, and for the students is the most practical and effective type of government that can be instituted to guide, protect, and develop correctly all phases of student activity. Until a student has learned to govern himself properly, he is unprepared to cope with the fundamental problems of life and it, therefore, unworthy of a college degree.

In order to promote the growth and development of student government throughout our state and to improve the relations between our various student bodies, the North Carolina Federation of Students was founded. Since this is the first year of the Federation's existence, this organization will be subjected to many difficult situations and intricate problems. Knowing this fact, the Federation officials realize that they must have the united support and cooperation of every student body in North Carolina in order to succeed in making this student union a real and vital force in the life of the state and nation.

I, therefore, as president of the North Carolina Federation of Students and as the spokesman for its staff of officials, call upon the students of this great state to join our new movement for a more effective and stable student government in all our colleges and universities and for more friendliness and cooperation between our student bodies in all kinds of athletic and scholastic contests. The success with which the Federation shall meet in carrying on this much-needed work depends largely on the way in which each student in this state discharges his personal responsibility in this state-wide undertaking. It is now up to the students of this state to make this new student movement a state-wide success.

I sincerely hope that the coming of this Student Federation to this state marks the dawn of a new day for a greater and nobler student government in all our collegiate institutions and for the most friendly cooperation between all our student bodies of North Carolina.

Signed: JOHN A. LANG,
President, N. C. Federation of Students.

PLAYMAKERS GIVE PLANS FOR YEAR

Three Tours to Be Made This Season; Monthly Reading of Plays.

The Carolina Playmakers will officially open their 1930-31 season with the reading of new plays in the Playmaker Theatre Tuesday night. Tryouts will be held October 6, and the first production will be presented November 6, 7, 8.

A busy but promising season stands before them. Five major and two studio productions make up the frame of the schedule. Three, and possibly four, of these will be full-length productions including one or two American comedies. Last year "The Show-off" was presented with such excellence than an extra performance was presented to satisfy demands. It is evident that local sentiment leans strongly towards this type of play. A play chosen from a significant period will be revived and presented some time during the latter part of the year. In June the annual outdoor production will be staged in the Forest Theatre.

The big surprise and, one that will undoubtedly focalize the interest of the state, is Loretta C. Bailey's newest play, which is based upon the recent North Carolina strike agitation in Gastonia. The author shows surprising familiarity with the subject. It is a vivid, tragic portrayal of life under the potential strain of circumstances of which current news has given us but only the surface. Those who have read it agree that its characterization alone would make it "good theatre." The play is devoid absolutely of propaganda and prejudice one way or the other. With a genuine design and a wealth of characterization, it will evidently bring a large share to the success of the Playmaker's year. In the recent National Playwriting Contest conducted by the Drama League, Miss Bailey's long play, "Job's Kinfolks" won second place.

Three interesting tours are scheduled. The Northern tour this quarter will take with it the first bill of plays presented. During the winter quarter they will tour the west and in the

CO-EDS REPULSE BLOND INTRUDER

Various Theories Are Offered as To Means of Entry and Motive.

Inmates of Spencer hall were rudely awakened from their slumbers last night when a lone member of that species commonly referred to as "male" defied convention and arrest, climbed to the back porch of the dorm and indulged in a little eavesdropping and detecting on his own hook. The fair damsels who discovered him were startled—but not frightened—on no, a mere male cannot frighten a Chapel Hill co-ed, and it is to be confessed that the main thing the girls remember is the fact that the intruder was a blonde.

Four girl were assembled in a midnight bull session. One of the quartet looked out a window quickly, came back to her seat calmly, and continued the conversation casually. One of the others asked, "What's out the window?" Neither fixed nor falling stars could have produced the facial expression that provoked the question. The answer was "Nothing," but there were footsteps on the tin roof of the kitchen porch a few feet below the window. Something passed a window, and at that point one guest and one hostess passed to more thickly populated regions. One fair damsel looked out and into a man's eyes. She screamed and dropped to the floor. Another saw the man turn, and one more paleface bit the dust. The shreik brought investigators amused, annoyed, frightened, or curious. Then they experimented with the scale, and there were two score soprano screams, separately pitched with no regard for harmony. A few well ordered screams brought a sturdy representative of the law and an inquiry that would shame Scotland Yard resulted.

"Yes," one told Officer Blake who was summoned to the scene in a more or less state of dishabille, "I went to the window and gazed right into his piercing eyes and blonde curly hair."

"And what did you do then?" The law spoke, hitching his belt, with a gesture that said "justice will triumph."

"I dropped to the floor and

Playmaker Lecture To Be Given Friday

An illustrated lecture by Professor Frederick Koch entitled "Our Adventures in Playmaking" will officially open the thirteenth season for the Carolina Playmakers tomorrow night at 7:30 P. M. The lecture will be given in the Playmaker building. One hundred stereopticon slides of Carolina Folk-Plays, Forest Theatre productions, productions of professional plays, and scenes of the Playmaker tours will be shown. All students and members of the faculty interested in participating in the work of the Carolina Playmakers are especially invited, but the lecture is open to the public. Professor Koch will give a short discussion of plans for the year. All those interested in any phase of dramatic work may consult with Professor Koch, Mr. Seldon, and Mr. Westerman at the conclusion of the lecture. The first reading of plays will be held Tuesday night.

FIRST OF GRAIL DANCES SATURDAY

The order of the Grail will inaugurate its social program for the year with a dance at Bynum gymnasium Saturday night, from 9 to 12. Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels have been engaged to furnish music for the affair.

The series of nine dances which are given by the Grail during the year is in keeping with the purpose of the order to create ways for better relationships between fraternity and non-fraternity men.

The opening dance promises to be a big success owing to the fact that a large crowd will be in Chapel Hill over the week-end for the Wake Forest game.

OLD LIBRARY IS DONE OVER INTO MUSIC TEMPLE

Dedication Ceremonies for New Building and Organ to Come Soon.

The new music hall, the renovated historic old library, was opened in part, for use at the opening of the school year. This building, in its enlarged form, comprises classrooms, administration offices, seminar and practice rooms, and in the new wing, a magnificent recital hall capable of seating 900 people.

The main building has been completely rebuilt to meet the needs of the University music department. The rooms have been made soundproof, and adequate space for the growing department has been provided.

A new and more beautiful entrance has been built, and on entering, one finds stairways leading to the balcony which overlooks the lobby, which is itself circular in shape.

The stage of the new auditorium has been designed to seat a chorus of 300 people, an orchestra of 60 pieces, and yet provide ample space for pianos and the magnificent new organ console. This organ, built at a cost of over $30,000, is equipped with an electric elevator, making it possible to raise it to the level of the stage or to lower it into the pit below the stage, in which position it will be used for practice. The sound escapements are placed behind magnificent grill work which serves as a background for the stage. The hall is lighted by means of ten lamps placed on the walls in addition to the six magnificent lights hanging from the ceiling. These lights have been constructed so as to produce a color effect of French gray.

According to Director Harold S. Dyer, dedication ceremonies for the console and building will be held in the near future. Invitations will be sent out as soon as dates can be decided upon.

Henderson Speaks To Math Graduates

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the department of mathematics and nationally known writer and speaker, presented a study of the bi-quadratic equation when the four roots are in geometric progression at the first mathematics seminar held in Phillips hall Wednesday afternoon.

The mathematics seminar, composed of members of the mathematics department and graduate students working in the department, meets every Wednesday. It is a clearing-house for mathematical ideas, and in the meetings candidates for degrees give reports on theses.

Last year several members of other departments on the campus addressed the seminar and showed the connection between mathematics and other subjects.

The subject that Dr. Henderson spoke on was a study of the bi-quadratic equation when the four roots are in geometric progression and is not, as far as is known, treated in any text book.

Fraternities And New Men

There will be a number of new men who will fail to receive invitations to visit Fraternity houses during the opening days of rushing season. Contrasted to these there will be others who will receive invitations from over half the fraternities here.

It is likely that there is little difference between the two groups boys. The difference lies in the fact that some were well known as in the secondary schools, or possessed friends who were connected with the fraternities here. The others did not. Without attempting to belittle anyone'e opinion of himself we think this matter of receiving invitations is entirely a matter of luck and does not truly reflect the new man's own personality.

No doubt, some of the men invited are men well known and exteremely popular as new men go. But others, possessing equally as attractive personalities will fail to receive invitations today.

Here there are enough fraternities for every man who is so inclined to gain entrance to one. It may be a matter of time, but if a man wants to he is likely to get his bid before leaving.

So we advise those who expect to and fail to receive invitations not to be discouraged. All the invitations amount to, after all, is an introduction to a rather trying period of rushing when both new and old men alike are likely to suffer spells of brainstorm.

OPEN FORUM

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Perhaps the writer of the editorial, "Are Cheerleaders Becoming Obsolete," is correct; perhaps there has not been a cheerleader who has added distinction to student cheering since Kike Kyser gave up the honor for radio broadcasting. However, that point may rest. But may I question the writer of this critical, but little helpful, comment as to just how much distinction there actually is in leading student cheering? Does he realize that it requires endless time and effort that too often results in only a half-hearted response on the part of a rather luke-warm student body; that it entails more responsibility than the mere motions performed at the games? Regular freshman rehearsals, pep meetings, and cheer squad training are only a few of the matters that he must not only entirely arrange but personally supervise. Through each game he must be in continual action requiring the most strenuous type of physical exercise; besides this he must sustain a high state of optimistic enthusiasm, win or lose, that he might literally tear a respectable yell from the student body. And to what reward? None; not even a monogram such as given in our most minor sports. If things go all right he has merely done his duty; if not he receives much criticism and more horselaughs. I ask you then, Mister, why any one should wax enthusiastic over our cheering problem? Could you give a suggestion instead of a criticism? It would be more in line with what we need.

Finally, the student body should remember that the position of Chief Cheerleader cannot be properly handled by a sophomore. We learned this last year. And it requires more than popularity; it demands wit, ingenuity, originality and stickability.

By Vass Shepherd

The annual invasion of the campus by the freshman class is well under way. Already the sale on radiators has decreased to almost nothing. Soon these mystified youths, who have been aimlessly wandering around corridors and offices with vapid and confused countenances, will develop into the sophisticated collegians with an impromptu but acceptable excuse always ready for avoiding any 8:30 class. But between now and then must come a more confused period: rushing season, when the doors of the heretofore inaccessible lodges will open to admit the still perplexed frosh to a gullible babble of sales-talk that would make a Fuller-brush man resign and take up knitting. But go ahead, little freshman, and take it all in. You will be king for a day—if for only a day.

One of the best apartment houses in town has closed its doors to University students, due to lack of morality displayed by undergraduate tenants throughout last year. All we need to reform us completely now is an injunction against co-eds climbing in and out of rumble-seats.

Professor L. J. Bell spent last summer abroad studying European customs. He probably spent more time still studying how to get his baggage through those in New York, if he is like the majority of American travelers.

Coach Crayton Rowe demonstrated great strategy in announcing when he did the opening of boxing practice. After sampling the varsity in a light scrimmage Tuesday and Wednesday, many of the freshman football adherents are in favor of taking up boxing as a milder and more pleasant pastime.

Now that all the sororities insist on breaking faith with all Latin derivations and call themselves fraternities, what is to become of the ban on co-eds being in fraternity houses? And what's to keep us out?

The appearance of a man in the co-ed dormitory late Wednesday night is reported to have created quite a disturbance. We wonder whether the disturbance was between the girlies wanting to keep him out and those wanting to keep him in.

It has been rumored that certain fraternity men have been violating the silence period and speaking to freshmen. Now that it is illegal to speak, they insist, but later in the year, when everything is over but the shouting, they will not stoop to such a level. Oh, well, it's a small "woild" after all, and that goes for your aunt Susie!

Co-Edna Comments

By Edna Morisette

Between yawns caused by a sleepless night, a couple of heart attacks, to say nothing of mild hysteria, ye columnist, with all the eloquence she is able to muster, herewith endeavors to shame a certain blond, curly-haired male individual (identity unknown-dammit) for throwing the co-ed shack into a panic night before last by absent-mindedly climbing onto the second floor roof and consciously or unconsciously gazing into the window.

Poor Tom (of the peeping variety), if he could only have witnessed the ensuing pandemonium . Girls, dozens of girls, hundred of girls, millions of girls fell over each other in their haste to reach the source of the "blood-curdling scream that rent the midnight air" (will someone please page Philo Vance?)

It is probable that it would take the combined efforts of Sherlock Holmes, Charlie Chan, and the highly respected Dr. Fu Manchu to establish the identity of some of those pajama-clad figures. We are afraid many of the young men who were possibly at that moment dreaming of her softly waving hair and her ruby lips would have experienced a terrible jolt to see her with cold cream smeared over that "skin you love to touch," and her lovely hair invisible under a camoflauge of water-waving combs, bobby pins, and braids.

The story is told by some that the intruder must have been at least ten feet tall with great eyes as big as plates, (note the omission of the proverbial saucers) but most of us think that someone with an over dose of Orange County Laughing Water did it for a prank.

At any rate, Mr. Whoeveryouare, won't you let us know next time before you pay us such an impromptu visit, so we can look our best for you instead of catching us in all the various forms of dress and undress.

Afterthought: Measurements are being taken for the foot prints on the roof and the fingerprints on the window sill. Silly boy! Whatever made you think that tennis shoes could keep you from being overheard on a tin roof.

UNIVERSITY MADE STATE WIDE BY EXTENSION WORK

Various Activities of Division Serve Entire State.

R. W. Madry

Someone has said that the extension services of the University of North Carolina have made that institution's campus state-wide.

This does not appear to be an exaggeration when one considers the variety of ways in which the extension division has placed at the disposal of the people of the state the resources of the University.

Extension classes located in all parts of the state, radio lectures, extension library service, reading courses, community dramatics, interscholastic activities, and a variety of publications—these are some of the many agencies through which this state-wide service has been rendered. It is conservatively estimated that the division serves more than 40,000 persons each year.

Starting as a bureau of extension in 1912 under the leadership of Dr. L. R. Wilson, University librarian, the idea of University extension was clarified and expanded under the administration of the late President Edward Kidder Graham. In 1921, in conformity with standards established by the National University Extension association, the work was organized as a major division of the University by President Harry W. Chase. Chester D. Snell served as director of the division from then until 1928, during which time there took place, both in the organization and in its field of service to the state, a remarkably rapid period of growth and expansion. This growth has continued under the guidance of Russell M. Grumman, who has been director since 1928 and who was acting director from 1926 to 1928 while Mr. Snell was on leave of absence.

Extension work is now recognized by college and university administrators as one of the major functions of the modern university. The extension division at Chapel Hill is essentially the administrative agency through which are conducted the extension activities of all of the departments of the University. Within recent years, the division has developed a specialized program of adult, general and professional education unrelated to the work of the resident departments. The postgraduate dental courses are illustrative of one means of meeting such a demand. Other educational services are being offered men and women whose formal schooling has ended, but who still desire to continue their education regardless of higher academic awards. In meeting the demands of this growing group, the future of the University extension division, as an agency for adult education, holds the greatest promise of development.

At the present time, the division, which is largely self-supporting, is organized and prepared to make available to the people of the state a great many of the educational offerings now enjoyed by students in residence at Chapel Hill. More than 150 courses are offered by correspondence instruction. Many of these courses are adapted to the study habits and interests of adult students who do not wish to receive college credit. They may be pursued by any mature person, regardless of his previous education, provided he satisfies the instructor of his ability to follow the course of study profitably.

Some Concrete Examples

The phrase, "Study at Home," may well be added to Governor Gardner's slogan, "Live at Home," since the state has, in this and other ways, made provision for those who seek opportunities for more learning. The "Know Your Own State" movement is being advanced and promoted by means of home study. Extension courses, taught either by correspondence or in extension classes, bring modern topics of vital importance directly to the people. Without doubt there will be a demand this year for courses related to the present economic problem.

The experience of the division would seem to indicate that the citizens of North Carolina are looking increasingly to the University for educational guidance and assistance. Since its organization in 1921, the division has registered a total of 22,692 correspondence and extension class students. While most of these students have never been on the campus, they have nevertheless come into vital contact with the University and have profited by its existence.

There is not space here to explain the functions and accomplishments of the various departments of the extension division. Certain concrete examples, selected at randon, may serve to illustrate, however, the effective way in which this University agency is serving North Carolina.

In 29 centers over the state in which classes were conducted for teachers this year there were enrolled 1306 individuals. In the extension classes for doctors and dentists there were enrolled 905 physicians and 250 dentists. A total of 1500 were registered for correspondence courses by mail, 65 members of the faculty having assisted in this plan of offering instruction. As a part of the extension library service 6,667 packages containing 30,341 books and pamphlets were sent to individuals during the year; and 600 groups with a membership of around 10,000 were assisted with reading study courses. A total of 36,000 people attended lectures arranged by the extension division in cooperation with local organizations. Between 500 and 1,000 persons attended short courses and institutes. The University News Letter was sent to 15,000 people. Three hundred and twelve high schools took part in the annual high school debating contest. One hundred and forty-seven persons enrolled for the two study tours, one across the continent and the other to Europe.

made myself small as I could and my roommate ran out and left me. I was afraid he would shoot so I yelled some more and everybody came running. We were afraid to pass the hall windows because he might shoot through them and that's all I know!"

"Could you identfy him?"

"Well, he had blonde, curly hair!" She was very firm about the head covering.

Hours later the confusion subsided and comparative quiet reigned. The last girl had gone to her room after a final plea to roommate or neighbor to "come and sleep with me" and a final confession that "I'm going to lock my door and move my bed right by roommate's" when another shout arose. Investigation proved that the marauder had not returned for lost shoes, the fourth button of his coat, fingerprints or any other means of identification that perchance he had left behind. Instead an over-zealous maiden had locked herself in so securely that she couldn't get out and instead of being comforted that none could get in and she was safe for one night at least, she rent the air with piteous lamentations and refused to be comforted until the door was forced open with the aid of a skeleton key.

And now for those disgustingly logical people who will certainly attribute the whole affair to fertile imaginations, the information must be furnished that finger print experts were up today to take prints from the window sill.

Tar Heels Look Some Better in Scrimmage Against Frosh Eleven

Light Workouts Today and Tomorrow Preparing for Wake Forest Game Saturday.

MORE DRILLS IN BLOCKING

By K. C. Ramsay

Short scrimmage sessions for the first and third teams took up a major part of the Tar Heels' workout yesterday afternoon at Kenan stadium. Those not getting in the scrimmage spent the afternoon by continuing to rehearse blocking and charging.

The first team took the field against the freshmen and showed a considerable amount of drive. Blocking was better than it has been in recent practices, and the driving of the backs showed improvement.

The first team scored three touchdowns against the green freshmen. These markers were made by Branch running back a kickoff for a score, a steady drive of line plays for 75 yards with House taking the ball over, and an 80 yard run from the line of scrimmage by Jim Magner for the final touchdown.

Coach Collins seemed more satisfied with the showing of the varsity, but continued to remind them that they were meeting a yearling eleven which has been in heavy equipment for less than than one week.

The first team lineup included: Lipscomb, center; Newcombe and Blackwood, guards; Thompson and Underwood, tackles; Davis and Parsley, ends; Branch, quarter; Nash and Magner, halves; and House, fullback. Pete Wyrick went in at quarter for a part of the scrimmage.

Allen, center; Crew and Dunavant, guards; Daniels and Cowper, tackles; Bridgers and Johnson, ends; Ferebee, quarter; Houston and Daniel, halfbacks; and Croom, fullback was the personnel of the third team which battled the frosh. Another backfield composed of Moore, quarter; White and Erickson, halves, and McCaskill, fullback, went into the scrimmage also.

This eleven showed superiority over the freshmen, but was unable at times to gain against the yearlings, being held for downs several times.

Practice sessions for today and tomorrow probably will be light workouts, composed of signal drills and dummy scrimmage. The coaches have little to say about the Wake Forest game. Practically no news having been released from the Deacon camp, and the uncertainty of the rookies in the Tar Heel line make speculation about the game rather indefinite.

Hines, Abels Put On Impromptu Exhibition

A match such as is rarely seen around here was staged yesterday afternoon, when Wilmer Hines and Luke Abels, stars of last year's freshman tennis team, hooked up in an impromptu exhibition of tennis such as only experts can put on. The first set went to Hines by a 6-2 score, while the second ended in an eight-all tie.

Hines, national junior singles champion and ranking No. 2 on last year's freshman team, is a past master in the art of tennis, and when teamed up with Bryan Grant, national claycourts champion, and ranking No. 1 on last year's freshman team, will surely give southern conference opponents something to worry about.

Sheep were first brought to America by the Spainards under Coranado.

Fall Baseball

Coach Jim Ashmore has issued a call for men to come out for fall baseball practice. Those expecting to go out should be at Emerson field today at 4 o'clock.

M'EVER LOST TO VOLS THIS YEAR

Mack End of Famous Hack-Mack Combination Suffering From Knee Injured During Summer.

Of great interest to Carolina football fans is the statement issued from Knoxville Tuesday to the effect that Gene McEver, the nation's high scorer in 1929 and Tennessee's greatest scoring threat, will not play this season. A second injury to a knee hurt in a baseball game this summer will keep the scoring ace of the Vols out all season.

Coach Bob Neyland has a veteran team at Tennessee this year, and most of the coaches in the South have conceded the Vols the conference title, but McEver's injury has cast a shadow of gloom over the Knoxville team. However, two backs have been groomed to alternate in this position, and if they can fit into the regular backfield with Dodd and Hackman, the other member of the famous "Hack and Mack, touchdown twins," Tennessee's prospects will be very bright indeed. The men slated to take McEver's post are Ty Disney and Paul Heydrick.

Carolina, also a favorite with Southern Conference coaches in their pre-season ratings, will meet Tennessee in Knoxville, October 25, and many sports writers are prone to believe that this game will go a long way towards naming the Southern Conference champions for 1930. In this game the two most highly rated backfields in the South will meet, with the advantage probably in Carolina's favor. Nash, Branch, Magner, Slusser, House, Wyrick, Erickson, McNeil and Chandler will be cavorting behind an uncertain line, however, while the line in front of Dodd, Hackman and Company is one of the strongest in the nation. The game should be an interesting one, with strong odds favoring neither team.

TAR BABIES GET HEAVY GRID GEAR

One-Sixth of Freshman Class Out for Backfield.

The 1930 edition of the Tar Baby football team is in the making. With the largest squad in the history of the University out for practice, Coaches Enright and Farris hope to weld a powerful eleven which will carry on the record of the Carolina freshman teams of the past few years. Only a few of the 175 candidates have been issued heavy equipment, and no hard scrimmaging has been done. Coach Enright assures the candidates that each will be given a fair chance to make the team, and that he hopes to issue heavy equipment to the entire squad squad within the next few days.

The squad has been drilled for the past few days in the fundamentals of the Notre Dame system by Coach Farris, All-Southern guard on the 1929 team, in charge of the linemen, and Coach Enright in charge of the backfield.

Ellis And Ellis

Ellis Crew and Ellis Fysal are two of the Tar Heels' veteran guards who are helping to relieve Carolina coaches of their worries about the Carolina forward wall. Both are seniors this year.

FROSH ELEVEN TO PLAY MARYLAND IN OPENING GAME

Shows Up Well Against Varsity in Scrimmages of Tuesday and Wednesday.

With two days of hard scrimmaging against the varsity behind them, the 1930 freshman football team gives promise of being one of the strongest in history. Despite the fact that they are playing together for the first time with only a few days of practice, the freshmen have shown up unusually well against the varsity.

Yesterday Coach Enright led three teams into Kenan stadium where they saw action against two varsity combinations. The first varsity eleven ran over three touchdowns in a hurry, but they met with a scrappy defense by the yearling team. Against the second varsity team, however, the freshmen held very well, often throwing their opponents for losses.

Coaches Enright and Farris have spent much time in drilling the squad on fundamentals, and they hope to be able to present a formidable eleven when the season opens October 18 against the Maryland freshmen here.

HIGH ATHLETICS GET UNDER WAY

A meeting of the high schools in the eastern section of class "A" district of North Carolina will be held in Goldsboro on Monday night, September 29, for the purpose of fixing the 1931 basketball schedule for that section.

For the first time last year, the high schools in North Carolina were divided into classes according to the size of the different schools. All of the larger schools in the state were placed in class "A," and the smaller schools with over 200 students were put in class "B." This plan seemed to be very successful last year, and will be tried for the second time this year.

The opening football game for the eastern section of class "A" high schools will be staged Friday, September 26, in Durham between Rocky Mount and Durham. This is the only class "A" game scheduled for that day, the remainder of the games being played on October 3 and October 10.

Tom Young, former Tar Heel ace, is coaching for the Smithfield high school this year. According to the outlook so far, the high school football season seems to be excellent, and the fans are looking for a good year.

TRACK PRACTICE STARTS THURSDAY

Twelve Lettermen Back From Last Year's Championship Team.

Fall practice for the University of North Carolina track team, state and southern conference cinder-path champions, will begin Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock and continue until the Thanksgiving recess, according to Coach Dale Ranson.

A definite program of work for candidates in all events will be arranged by Coach Ranson later in the week. Aspirers for berths in the distance-run events will do cross-country work this fall.

The Carolina track schedule for the coming spring has not yet been definitely closed. One or two changes are expected before the card is released.

12 lettermen from last year's Dixie championship squad returned to school this fall. In the dashes Charlie Farmer, Rip Slusser and Ken Gay will answer the fall practice call. Gay and Lionel Weil will be available for use in the 440. H. R. Garrett is the only monogram man returning in the half-mile division. C. B. Phoenix, one of a trio of milers last year, is expected to return to school after the Christmas holidays. C. R. Baucom, two-miler, is back. The only member of the quartet of hurdlers returning to school this fall is Rip Slusser.

In the field department L. B. Johnson, broad-jumper, G. L. Bagby, high-jumper, E. P. Dameron, discus thrower, T. R. Brown, discus hurler and shot-putter, R. J. Ruble and B. D. Arnold, pole vaulters, complete the list of veterans that will defend the Dixie track crown next spring.

Carolina's 1930 card was perhaps the hardest schedule ever attempted by a southern conference track team. The Tar Heel cindermen defeated Georgia Tech, Duke, Penn State, V. P. I. and Washington and Lee, but lost to Princeton, the first dual meet dropped in nine years. In the southern conference meet the Carolina team scored 40½ points, leading its nearest rival, the University of Georgia, by 12½ points.

Forty-one birds' nests were found on the five Odum acres during the spring and summer.

By Hugh Wilson

Much comment is being made, both in the state newspapers and on the campus, about the prospects and present form of the Tar Heel football team. One group seems to think that the team can't be beaten, basing that opinion on last year's record. Another group is inclined to grumble and find fault with the coaches for not developing a better line. Both of these assumptions are equally asinine. The past has many times over proved that the former record of a team means little. What a team has done is of no import on the day of the game—the all important thing is that the team be "right" and ready to go when the first whistle blows. With a schedule of four or five major games right on the heels of the opening set-to, the Tar Heels are bound to meet with serious reverse if they try to play on last year's record.

On the other hand, the outlook is not so gloomy as many would have us believe. It is true that the team suffered serious losses in the line by graduation of several men. But it seems to the writer that at about this time last year much wailing was being done about the line, which later turned out to be as steady as a rock. Anyone who expects Coach Collins to turn out a new and polished forward wall in a few weeks time has never tried to do it. The blocking at present is ragged, and will perhaps still be ragged in the tiff with Wake Forest on Saturday, but it's a good bet that before long the 1930 team will be functioning like that of last fall.

Down in Georgia rumors of a pair of great teams keep sifting up. The "Bulldogs of the South," a great team of sophomores in 1929, should naturally be an even better team this year. However, their schedule maker made their road to the championship of the Southern conference a rocky one indeed, and overconfidence, the bugbear of teams largely made up of sophomores the year before, may at any time ruin their hopes.

Coach Bill Alexander, of Georgia Tech, is trying out a "fast one" this year. He has for the first time unbalanced his line on attack and placed Speer and Maree, giant tackles reputed for their size and toughness, next to each other when the play is to go in their direction. We wonder if he expects them to scare the opposing linemen off? If so, it's feared that he won't succeed, for we've yet to see anything resembling a tendency to scare the "big blue line."

DISTRIBUTION OF MAIL IMPROVING

Delay Is Often Occasioned by Wrong Addresses.

As yet, the distribution of mail from the Chapel Hill post office has not been regulated and is, therefore, somewhat unsettled.

A great deal of the difficulty experienced in properly distributing mail is due to the fact that students often change their rooming place without leaving their address. In case students move, they should notify the business office, in order that their mail may be delivered to them without delay.

The post office handles between five and ten thousand letters daily, excluding numerous parcels, bundles, papers, packages, advertising materials, and other matter. This is quite a bit of work for a small post office department to do regularly with so few mistakes.

The 881 boxes and drawers in the post office are pitifully inadequate to care for each student's mail, so mail boxes are conveniently provided in each dormitory.

Mail going West from Chapel Hill leaves the office at 1:00 p. m. and 5:30 p. m., going East at 12:00 noon. Mail going in all directions leaves the P. O. at 7:00 a. m. There is no Sunday delivery of mail, and only one delivery on each holiday.

For hurried letters, preferably out of the state, students are invited to use the special air-mail envelopes on sale at the post office. Air-mail stamps cost five cents each, and a letter sent by air-mail requires one five cent stamp for the first ounce, and ten cents for each additional ounce. An air-mail letter posted before 5:30 p. m. will be safely in New York City the following morning by 8:30.

Mr. Herndon, manager of the post office, has requested all students to place proper return addresses on all mail, which the students are desirous of getting back in case the mail should not reach its proper destination. He and the department are anxious to help each student with his mailing problems.

75 Attend Meeting Of University Band

Seventy-five students responded to the first call for tryouts for the University band at the meeting held in Person hall Monday.

Officers of the band for the coming year were elected. H. W. Jones was elected president; Bill Abernethy, vice-president; and H. A. Brooks, secretary.

The band is to be limited to sixty members, owing to lack of uniforms. On concert tours the band will have a personnell of only forty-five. Some of the instruments which are suitable for playing out-of-doors are not the type which may be utilized for concert work indoors.

Besides playing for all home football games this fall, the band will go to Charlottesville for the Carolina-Virginia game on Thanksgiving, and there is a possibility that it may go to Athens October 18, when Carolina meets Georgia, or to the Tennessee game in Knoxville on the 25th. No concert trip will be taken this fall, but there will be one in each of the following quarters. Plans are being laid for the band to play at several benefit performances at the Carolina theatre at various times during the year.

Agricultural Exhibit To Be Assembled At State Fair in Raleigh

The greatest collections of agricultural exhibit ever assembled in the state of North Carolina will be displayed in Raleigh on October 13, when the state fair opens its doors. Premiums totaling over $25,000 are being offered by the fair this year.

Agricultural experts from the staff of State College, will be in charge of each of the twenty departments. The premium list has been rewritten and revised, and special premiums are being offered for products which have been produced in line with Governor Gardner's Live-At-Home program.

Last year the State faid paid over 80 per cent of the premiums offered. This was a remarkably high record for any fair, but it is expected, that with the increased interest in modern agriculture, that it will be exceeded this year.

In connection with the State fair, the North Carolina poultry show will again be held this year, with a special building on the fair grounds for its use. The large cattle, hog and sheep barns are expected to be filled with exhibits from North Carolina and the large live-stock rasing states. Although all fair entries must be in October 11, Saturday, before the fair starts, the live stock entries will close on October 1, so that stall space can be arranged for all entries.

Two special features of the fair which are expected to attract a great deal of attention are the dog show and the pet show. They will both be supervised by Dr. W. T. Scarborough, who has been in charge of the dog show at the State fair for the past two years. The dog show will be open only to registered dogs, while the pet show will include dogs, cats and every other kind of household pet.

Co-eds To Entertain New Girls On Friday

The co-eds who were here last year will give a reception for the new girls on Friday afternoon from 4:30 till 6 o'clock in the living room of Spencer hall.

All the co-eds are urged to come whether they live in the building or not, said Reeme Moore, president of the Woman's Association. The object of the affair is for the new girls to get acquainted with the new ones.

The guests will be received by Mrs. M. H. Stacy, dean of women, Mrs. Irene Lee, matron of Spencer hall, and Mrs. Alexander Graham. They will be assisted by the officers of the Woman's Association, Reeme Moore, ate Graham, Harriet Daniel, and Adelaide McAnally.

A musical program will be given during the afternoon.

cafes; Sutton's, Pritchard-Lloyd's, and the other drug stores; Stetson "D," Jack Lipman and some of the other clothing shops; and many of the boarding houses are providing jobs in greater or less numbers.

But that isn't nearly covering the field. The self-help bureau has calls for, and fills, orders for every kind of work, from tending yards and babies to clerical and stenographic work. There must be upward of 1,500 students making all or part expenses, and every one has a different method. Indeed, Chapel Hill works to learn!

CAROLINA BANDS ARE COMBINED

Carolina Tar Heels and Jack Wardlaw's Orchestra Join Forces.

The Carolina Tar Heel Orchestra, one of the South's outstanding collegiate dance orchestras, after completing a successful summer engagement at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina has combined with Jack Wardlaw and his University of North Carolina orchestra, and is in no way connected with the Carolina Buccaneers as was erroniously stated in yesterday's issue of the Tar Heel.

What should have been stated is that only five of the former Tar Heels are now playing with the Buccaneers. They are: Freddie Clark, Bill Abernethy, Haas White, Charlie Stonestreet and Grier Todd.

The combination of the Tar Heels with Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra was legally consumuated at Greensboro, North Carolina, September 20, 1930 and is guaranteed by Alex Mendenhall, owner of The Tar Heel Orchestra. The combined orchestra is composed of the best men of both combinations, with the addition of three new men.

The Tar Heels organized in the spring of 1928, quickly became popular on the "Hill," and soon built a reputation at the better country clubs throughout North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia. They soon branched into the various Universities in the southern territory and played for German Club dances at the University of Georgia, Sewanee, V. M. I., Hampton-Sydney, State Teachers College of Virginia, State College of North Carolina, Staunton Military Academy, Augusta Military Academy, V. E. S., Lynchburg, in addition to many club dances in this territory.

Their past summer engagements include such places at Atlantic Beach, Virginia Beach, a tour of the ball rooms of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and, finally, have just concluded their most successful engagement at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina this summer.

Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra also organized in the spring of 1928, gradually grew, that year, to be one of the best known orchestras in the state, reaching their peak that year by playing for the Sophomore Hop, the Junior Prom together with the Tar Heels, and the Senior Ball at the University here.

The following year the orchestra specialized in commercial radio programs, being featured as the "Best for Rest" Kingsdown Orchestra, on the Mebane Royal "King of Sleep Hour" from W. P. T. F., Raleigh, N. C. Their summer engagements include three exhibition tours of Europe and a one month's engagement at Virginia Beach as well as a northern tour.

The instrumentation is somewhat the same as that of Jelly Leftwitch. The present combination consists of twelve men. Frank Householder and Hillard Wilson, who played together side by side for two years in the original Tar Heel Orchestra, compose the trumpet team of the present orchestra. They are recognized to be the best trumpet team in this part of the country. The orchestra is using four brass, a trombone and third trumpet completing this section. The third trumpet is none other than Art French who is one of the hottest trumpet players the "Hill" has seen in many a day. When he plays "Tiger Rag" his trumpet actually spits fire. When Frank and Hillard get together on a muted trumpet duet, there is nothing sweeter.

The saxaphone section is in charge of Colbert Crutchfield who has been with the Tar Heels since their organization. Each saxaphone player is an expert on the clarinet, one doubles violin and the section as a whole has a real sweet tone. The combination has three soloists and a singing trio that really sings.

The pianist has had six years experience with New York dance orchestras. The bass player played with the Buccaneers all last year. Billy Arthur, the "Yard of Fun," directs the band.

One Sunday night in each month will be chosen for the monthly Playmaker readings. The first of these will be Shakepeare's "Hamlet" to be read by Professor Koch. At another occasion Paul Green will read either his, "Tread The Green Grass," or "The House of Connelly." At a still later date Wilbur Daniel Steel will read "When Hell Froze Over" which he is at present producing in New York. And on December 14, the annual Christmas Carol will be read by Professor Koch.

In the middle of the season the players will stage their usual "Twelfth Night Revels" by exploding all excess energy, if they have any left. The season will be climaxed in June with the annual "Caper."

JANITOR INJURED BY GLASS DOOR

Nathan Jones, negro janitor in Bingham Hall, was severely injured about chapel period yesterday morning, when in trying to open the swinging doors of the Bingham auditorium, he shoved his arm through the glass. The arm was cut right above the elbow clear to the bone. Very soon after the accident some students applied a tourniquet, which stopped the flow of blood. Jones lost a great deal of blood and it was probably for that reason as well as the shock that he fainted. Dr. Abernathy, who was quickly called from his office, rushed him over to the hospital in Durham in his car. Up until last evening word had not yet been received as to whether the arm would have to be amputated.

Jones was about thirty years old, and has been in the employ of the University for the last twelve years. He worked for ten years in South building before being shifted to Bingham hall.

HUDGINS SPEAKS BEFORE CHAPEL EXERCISES HERE

Compares Oxford with North Carolina; Deplores Local Lack of Interest in Debating.

By Everard B. Shemwell

In an address before the freshman class yesterday morning, Ed Hudgins, University graduate and Rhodes scholar at Oxford university last year, discussed the various phases of college life in England and contrasted it with life in the American universities.

Dean Francis F. Bradshaw introduced the speaker, and Hudgins first expressed his gratifica tion at being back home. He then told of his impressions when he first reached England before entering Oxford. As he expressed it, he felt as if he were in a new world, and knew that it would take him some time to become accustomed to the change.

Hudgins brought out several differences in the educational systems of England and the United States. One remarkable difference, he stated, was the fact that the English undergraduate is much older and matured than the American student, and that the college freshmen at Oxford is fully as well prepared as the average junior in America.

Another difference, he brought out was the manner in which the class divisions were so much more tightly drawn than are our own. It seems that only the upper classes of young England receive higher education.

The methods of instructions are also very dissimilar to our own. There are no classes or class meetings of any description with the exception of occassional

GLEE CLUB WILL HOLD TRY-OUTS

Dyer Announces Office Hours, and Urges Conferences for New Year.

The glee club met Thursday afternoon at five o'clock in the music building with Mr. Dyer, who has charge of the club. A large number of old men were present, along with a much larger group of new men, made up mostly of freshmen. The work of the club for the coming school year was discussed, and one or two songs were sung just to acquaint the new men with the type of singing they are required to do in the club.

Mr. Dyer urges all men, who are out for the glee club, to drop in at his office for not more than five minutes on either Mondays, Tuesdays or Thursdays at which time he wishes to learn something about each man and his ability to sing. The men are urged to come in groups, and not wait until the last day.

Dyer has office hours of: 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., and from 1:45 p.m. to 3:45 p.m. every day except Wednesdays.

There will be no try-outs this coming Monday on account of the old club men having to practice for an engagement, but there will be on Tuesdays and Thursday of next week at the above-mentioned hours.

An extensive fall tour is planned for the glee club, along with a winter and spring tour. These will be announced later in detail.

JANITOR LOSES ARM BY INJURY

Hospital officials at Durham found it necessary to amputat the arm of Nathan Jones, colored janitor, who was injured Wednesday at Bingham auditorium. Jones, now in the Durham hospital, is in a weakened condition as a result of the loss of a great deal of blood, but no fear has been expressed as to his future recovery.

Dr. Abernathy stated that the tourniquet applied by students immediately after the accident probably saved the life of the injured man.

Jones has a wife and four children, and the loss of his arm will be a serious handicap to him. However, it is thought that he will remain in the employ of the University.

Year Book Business Staff

There will be an important meeting of the Yackety Yack business staff this afternoon at 2:30. At this meeting the staff will be organized for the year. Old members must be present and any new men interested are invited to attend.

ROOM AT SWAIN AVAILABLE SOON

Places will be available around October 17 for those who were unable to obtain places in Swain hall last week, Obie Harmon head of the co-operative dining room, announced this morning.

Swain hall has been running with a capacity crowd of boarders since the week of regitration, and a number applying for board were turned down. Manager Harmon said this morning that the places that would be available would be due to the fact that rushing season will be over about the end of the first month and a number of pledges would go to the fraternity dining rooms.

PUBLIX-SAENGER MANAGERS MEET

Officials of the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina are to meet in Chapel Hill today as guests of E. C. Smith, local director for the organization.

Among the prominent company officials in the village for the meeting are: F. W. Wilby of Greensboro, M. S. Hill of Greensboro, and Jack Barry of New York.

The semi-darkness in several of the buildings on the campus early yesterday evening was caused by a fuse being blown out in the transformer.

Pep Meeting

In an announcement before the freshman class yesterday, Ashby Penn, cheer leader, stated that a pep meeting would be held tonight at 7 o'clock in front of Phillips hall. Strud Nash, captain of the 1930 Tar Heels, will be present, as will other football stars, and Coach Chuck Collins will be invited to speak.

This is the first of a series of pep meetings which will be held at regular intervals during the fall quarter. A large attendance from all classes is expected. Tonight's meeting will be the first public appearance of this year's cheer leaders.

DEBATE COUNCIL CONSIDERS TILTS

Feature of Year Will Be Contest In Conjunction With British Students.

At the initial meeting of the debate council held last night, a most ambitious program was outlined for the year. The schedule for the fall quarter includes dual debates with N. C. C. W., State, and possibly West Virginia. The grand climax for the quarter will be the international meet with Cambridge, on December 15.

The schedule for the winter and spring quarters includes debates with Emory, Georgia Tech, Boston, George Washington, Maryland, and the University of the South. The secretary of the council was directed to make tentative plans for a trip to the University of Texas and to Northwestern University. One of these trips will be made in the early spring.

The debate with the British students is always well attended, and it is expected that it will be particularly popular this year. The subject will be "Resolved, that the energence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life." The method of debate of this question will be a novelty to most students. One Carolinian and one Britisher will be on each side of the question.

The first meeting of the debate squad will be held next Thursday night, October 2 at 7:30 in Murphey hall. The debate squad meetings are officially known as Debating 1. The class meets weekly and carries one-half course credit. The debate council urges all those interested in forensics to attend the meeting next Thursday.

Sunday Night Recital

A recital will be given at the Chapel of the Cross next Sunday night at 8 o'clock by Miss Ruth Prohl, harpist, Howard Conrad, tenor, and I. O. Kennedy, organist.

DINNER TONIGHT FOR HI-Y FROSH

Ex-Hi-Y Members to Organize During Banquet at Methodist Church.

The organization dinner of the freshman friendship council will be held tonight at 6:30 in the social rooms in the basement of the Methodist church. All freshmen who were members of Hi-Y clubs last year and all interested in Y. M. C. A. work are expected to attend the banquet.

President Frank Graham and Dean Francis Bradshaw will be the chief speakers at the occasion. The Y quartet will probably render a few selections. Jimmie Kurfees, president of the council last year, will be the toastmaster for the dinner.

For the past week or more, a sheet has been kept in the lobby o fthe Y. M. C. A. on which all desiring to attend the banquet were to place thei rnames. Fifty men have already registered on this sheet and any new men, who have failed to register but, desire later to be present at the meeting may do so by coming early to the Methodist church social room, which is in the basement of the building.

The charge for the meal is to be fifty cents, which is to be paid at the beginning of the dinner.

Plans are being made for a much larger attendance than was the case at the banquet last year. At the meeting tonight, the officers for the council are to be selected.

Last year, with an attendance of around seventy-five, the officers who were elected were: Alex Webb, president; Bob Hubbard, vice-president; Alex Biggs, secretary; and Strat Donnel, treasurer. Due to an injury sustained, however, Webb was unable to return to school after Christmas. Jimmie Kurfees was chosen to take his place.

f The freshman council, working this year without a special freshman secretary, is looking to a full year's program.

Bull's Head Book Shop Rendezvous For Litterati And Book Lovers

The Bull's Head, run by A. J. Mahler, a graduate student who has just been appointed to take charge, is a tiny shop on the second floor of Murphey hall, where all sorts of new books can be bought. This place should become familiar to every freshman book-lover. Here one can find classics in 50-cent and $1 editions. The Bull's Head concentrates on literature and nonfiction; but popular modern fiction can also be bought. If you want a book that is not in they will gladly order it for you.

One does not have to buy. In fact, more often the students lounging around there don't buy. You can come in and browse among the rich souls confined there, smoking all the while. Several students are usually there, idling among the books. One is perforce reminded of the sunny French quais, where musty book stalls offer their riches to lazying bibliomaniacs; those stalls of which Anatole France has becom ethe charming raconteur.

Books such as "Gargantua and Pantagruel" can be bought in two volumes for $2. This edition is practically a literal translation of the original French. Many fine things can be bought in the Bonibook edition for 50 cents, and in the Modern Library for a dollar; the latter is a convenient limp-leather edition of modern classics.

Freshmen or undergraduates who have not as yet made its acquaintance, be sure to pay a visit to the Bull's Head. You'll return if you go once.

NEW BUCCANEER OUT OCTOBER 15

"Have your funny-bones polished and in condition for the new Buccaneer," advises Kermit Wheary, editor of this local magazine. The first issue of the Buccaneer, which will be out October 15, will be the initial number, with a cover by Kenneth Whitsett of the Charlotte Engraving Company, and will mark the beginning of a banner year for the local comic. Many new features are being added, including a "scandal page" of personal and impersonal campus comment that is to be a permanent fixture in the magazine.

This year's bumper crop of talented artists is going to make it hard for Bobby Mason, art editor, to make the appointments in his staff after the first issue. The candidates are experienced men so the keen competition should bid for a great collection of cartoons and jokes. Just to make the competition keener, editor Wheary is offering a prize each month for the best editorial and art work. The nature of the prize has not been announced.

The Buccaneer is going to be printed at the Orange Print Shop, and anyone wishing to turn in material for the initial number is advised to have it in before September 30. The material can be left with Wheary or Mason at the office in the basement of the Alumni building between the hours of five and six any evening.

GRAHAM SPEAKS TO LAWYERS AT FIRST MEETING

President's Address Features Official Opening of Law School.

"I think that the greatest weakness of many lawyers is that sometimes in their eagerness to find far-fetched arguments in support of their cases they fail to master the facts in the case," President Frank P. Graham said in his address last night at exercises which marked the formal opening of the University law school. The exercises were held under the auspices of the Law school association.

President Graham told the law students to learn to master the details while they were in college as the weaknesses cultivated in studying would prove their greatest weaknesses in practice. He then pointed out how the lawyers occupy strategic places in the life of this state as leaders of great movements. In reviewing the history of this state one would find many instances when lawyers stepped from strategic places at critical times, he said. As an example he told of a lawyer who led the movement to defeat the Poole bill in the legislature.

"I know of no prfessions that offer a greater personal of public opportunity than law," he said.

J. A. Williams, president of the Law school association, presided. He introduced Dean McCormick, who welcomed the new men to the Law school. Then in order he called on Martin Kellog, president of the third year class, Mac Gray, president of the second year class, and Arch Al-

RUSHING SEASON TO START TODAY

Freshmen To Begin Visiting Fraternity Houses This Afternoon and Tonight.

A twenty-day period of fraternity rushing will commence today when freshmen will be received at the various fraternity houses which they have been invited to visit. All freshmen who have received invitations to visit fraternities should visit every house from which they have received invitations between two o'clock this afternoon and midnight Saturday if they expect to join a fraternity at the University of North Carolina, according to the Interfraternity Council's ruling. After these two days in which the freshmen are to be received at the houses, the rushing season will begin in earnest, with each fraternity man trying to persuade the gullible frosh that his particular lodge is the best on the Hill, in the state, or even in the country.

Some of the more important rules to which special attention should be paid by all those in any way affected by fraternities, freshmen and upperclassmen alike, are: A freshman must visit every lodge which has invited him within the next two days, or he will never be allowed to join a fraternity at Chapel Hill. No fraternity may make more than two dates with a freshman until after the closing of the formal visiting period on Saturday night. Freshmen should notice this as well as fraternity men. No fraternity men

Delay Is Often Occasioned by Wrong Addresses.

As yet, the distribution of mail from the Chapel Hill post office has not been regulated and is, therefore, somewhat unsettled.

A great deal of the difficulty experienced in properly distributing mail is due to the fact that students often change their rooming place without leaving their address. In case students move, they should notify the business office, in order that their mail may be delivered to them without delay.

The post office handles between five and ten thousand letters daily, excluding numerous parcels, bundles, papers, packages, advertising materials, and other matter. This is quite a bit of work for a small post office department to do regularly with so few mistakes.

The 881 boxes and drawers in the post office are pitifully inadequate to care for each student's mail, so mail boxes are conveniently provided in each dormitory.

Mail going West from Chapel Hill leaves the office at 1:00 p. m. and 5:30 p. m., going East at 12:00 noon. Mail going in all directions leaves the P. O. at 7:00 a. m. There is no Sunday delivery of mail, and only one delivery on each holiday.

For hurried letters, preferably out of the state, students are invited to use the special air-mail envelopes on sale at the post office. Air-mail stamps cost five cents each, and a letter sent by air-mail requires one five cent stamp for the first ounce, and ten cents for each additional ounce. An air-mail letter posted before 5:30 p. m. will be safely in New York City the following morning by 8:30.

Mr. Herndon, manager of the post office, has requested all students to place proper return addresses on all mail, which the students are desirous of getting back in case the mail should not reach its proper destination. He and the department are anxious to help each student with his mailing problems.

Seventy-five students responded to the first call for tryouts for the University band at the meeting held in Person hall Monday.

Officers of the band for the coming year were elected. H. W. Jones was elected president; Bill Abernethy, vice-president; and H. A. Brooks, secretary.

The band is to be limited to sixty members, owing to lack of uniforms. On concert tours the band will have a personnell of only forty-five. Some of the instruments which are suitable for playing out-of-doors are not the type which may be utilized for concert work indoors.

Besides playing for all home football games this fall, the band will go to Charlottesville for the Carolina-Virginia game on Thanksgiving, and there is a possibility that it may go to Athens October 18, when Carolina meets Georgia, or to the Tennessee game in Knoxville on the 25th. No concert trip will be taken this fall, but there will be one in each of the following quarters. Plans are being laid for the band to play at several benefit performances at the Carolina theatre at various times during the year.

Agricultural Exhibit To Be Assembled At State Fair in Raleigh

The greatest collections of agricultural exhibit ever assembled in the state of North Carolina will be displayed in Raleigh on October 13, when the state fair opens its doors. Premiums totaling over $25,000 are being offered by the fair this year.

Agricultural experts from the staff of State College, will be in charge of each of the twenty departments. The premium list has been rewritten and revised, and special premiums are being offered for products which have been produced in line with Governor Gardner's Live-At-Home program.

Last year the State faid paid over 80 per cent of the premiums offered. This was a remarkably high record for any fair, but it is expected, that with the increased interest in modern agriculture, that it will be exceeded this year.

In connection with the State fair, the North Carolina poultry show will again be held this year, with a special building on the fair grounds for its use. The large cattle, hog and sheep barns are expected to be filled with exhibits from North Carolina and the large live-stock rasing states. Although all fair entries must be in October 11, Saturday, before the fair starts, the live stock entries will close on October 1, so that stall space can be arranged for all entries.

Two special features of the fair which are expected to attract a great deal of attention are the dog show and the pet show. They will both be supervised by Dr. W. T. Scarborough, who has been in charge of the dog show at the State fair for the past two years. The dog show will be open only to registered dogs, while the pet show will include dogs, cats and every other kind of household pet.

The co-eds who were here last year will give a reception for the new girls on Friday afternoon from 4:30 till 6 o'clock in the living room of Spencer hall.

All the co-eds are urged to come whether they live in the building or not, said Reeme Moore, president of the Woman's Association. The object of the affair is for the new girls to get acquainted with the new ones.

The guests will be received by Mrs. M. H. Stacy, dean of women, Mrs. Irene Lee, matron of Spencer hall, and Mrs. Alexander Graham. They will be assisted by the officers of the Woman's Association, Reeme Moore, ate Graham, Harriet Daniel, and Adelaide McAnally.

CAROLINA BANDS ARE COMBINED

One Sunday night in each month will be chosen for the monthly Playmaker readings. The first of these will be Shakepeare's "Hamlet" to be read by Professor Koch. At another occasion Paul Green will read either his, "Tread The Green Grass," or "The House of Connelly." At a still later date Wilbur Daniel Steel will read "When Hell Froze Over" which he is at present producing in New York. And on December 14, the annual Christmas Carol will be read by Professor Koch.

In the middle of the season the players will stage their usual "Twelfth Night Revels" by exploding all excess energy, if they have any left. The season will be climaxed in June with the annual "Caper."

JANITOR INJURED BY GLASS DOOR

Nathan Jones, negro janitor in Bingham Hall, was severely injured about chapel period yesterday morning, when in trying to open the swinging doors of the Bingham auditorium, he shoved his arm through the glass. The arm was cut right above the elbow clear to the bone. Very soon after the accident some students applied a tourniquet, which stopped the flow of blood. Jones lost a great deal of blood and it was probably for that reason as well as the shock that he fainted. Dr. Abernathy, who was quickly called from his office, rushed him over to the hospital in Durham in his car. Up until last evening word had not yet been received as to whether the arm would have to be amputated.

Jones was about thirty years old, and has been in the employ of the University for the last twelve years. He worked for ten years in South building before being shifted to Bingham hall.

HUDGINS SPEAKS BEFORE CHAPEL EXERCISES HERE

Compares Oxford with North Carolina; Deplores Local Lack of Interest in Debating.

By Everard B. Shemwell

In an address before the freshman class yesterday morning, Ed Hudgins, University graduate and Rhodes scholar at Oxford university last year, discussed the various phases of college life in England and contrasted it with life in the American universities.

Dean Francis F. Bradshaw introduced the speaker, and Hudgins first expressed his gratifica tion at being back home. He then told of his impressions when he first reached England before entering Oxford. As he expressed it, he felt as if he were in a new world, and knew that it would take him some time to become accustomed to the change.

Hudgins brought out several differences in the educational systems of England and the United States. One remarkable difference, he stated, was the fact that the English undergraduate is much older and matured than the American student, and that the college freshmen at Oxford is fully as well prepared as the average junior in America.

Another difference, he brought out was the manner in which the class divisions were so much more tightly drawn than are our own. It seems that only the upper classes of young England receive higher education.

The methods of instructions are also very dissimilar to our own. There are no classes or class meetings of any description with the exception of occassional

GLEE CLUB WILL HOLD TRY-OUTS

Dyer Announces Office Hours, and Urges Conferences for New Year.

The glee club met Thursday afternoon at five o'clock in the music building with Mr. Dyer, who has charge of the club. A large number of old men were present, along with a much larger group of new men, made up mostly of freshmen. The work of the club for the coming school year was discussed, and one or two songs were sung just to acquaint the new men with the type of singing they are required to do in the club.

Mr. Dyer urges all men, who are out for the glee club, to drop in at his office for not more than five minutes on either Mondays, Tuesdays or Thursdays at which time he wishes to learn something about each man and his ability to sing. The men are urged to come in groups, and not wait until the last day.

Dyer has office hours of: 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., and from 1:45 p.m. to 3:45 p.m. every day except Wednesdays.

There will be no try-outs this coming Monday on account of the old club men having to practice for an engagement, but there will be on Tuesdays and Thursday of next week at the above-mentioned hours.

An extensive fall tour is planned for the glee club, along with a winter and spring tour. These will be announced later in detail.

JANITOR LOSES ARM BY INJURY

Hospital officials at Durham found it necessary to amputat the arm of Nathan Jones, colored janitor, who was injured Wednesday at Bingham auditorium. Jones, now in the Durham hospital, is in a weakened condition as a result of the loss of a great deal of blood, but no fear has been expressed as to his future recovery.

Dr. Abernathy stated that the tourniquet applied by students immediately after the accident probably saved the life of the injured man.

Jones has a wife and four children, and the loss of his arm will be a serious handicap to him. However, it is thought that he will remain in the employ of the University.

Year Book Business Staff

There will be an important meeting of the Yackety Yack business staff this afternoon at 2:30. At this meeting the staff will be organized for the year. Old members must be present and any new men interested are invited to attend.

Places will be available around October 17 for those who were unable to obtain places in Swain hall last week, Obie Harmon head of the co-operative dining room, announced this morning.

Swain hall has been running with a capacity crowd of boarders since the week of regitration, and a number applying for board were turned down. Manager Harmon said this morning that the places that would be available would be due to the fact that rushing season will be over about the end of the first month and a number of pledges would go to the fraternity dining rooms.

PUBLIX-SAENGER MANAGERS MEET

Officials of the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina are to meet in Chapel Hill today as guests of E. C. Smith, local director for the organization.

Among the prominent company officials in the village for the meeting are: F. W. Wilby of Greensboro, M. S. Hill of Greensboro, and Jack Barry of New York.

The semi-darkness in several of the buildings on the campus early yesterday evening was caused by a fuse being blown out in the transformer.

Pep Meeting

In an announcement before the freshman class yesterday, Ashby Penn, cheer leader, stated that a pep meeting would be held tonight at 7 o'clock in front of Phillips hall. Strud Nash, captain of the 1930 Tar Heels, will be present, as will other football stars, and Coach Chuck Collins will be invited to speak.

This is the first of a series of pep meetings which will be held at regular intervals during the fall quarter. A large attendance from all classes is expected. Tonight's meeting will be the first public appearance of this year's cheer leaders.

DEBATE COUNCIL CONSIDERS TILTS

Feature of Year Will Be Contest In Conjunction With British Students.

At the initial meeting of the debate council held last night, a most ambitious program was outlined for the year. The schedule for the fall quarter includes dual debates with N. C. C. W., State, and possibly West Virginia. The grand climax for the quarter will be the international meet with Cambridge, on December 15.

The schedule for the winter and spring quarters includes debates with Emory, Georgia Tech, Boston, George Washington, Maryland, and the University of the South. The secretary of the council was directed to make tentative plans for a trip to the University of Texas and to Northwestern University. One of these trips will be made in the early spring.

The debate with the British students is always well attended, and it is expected that it will be particularly popular this year. The subject will be "Resolved, that the energence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life." The method of debate of this question will be a novelty to most students. One Carolinian and one Britisher will be on each side of the question.

The first meeting of the debate squad will be held next Thursday night, October 2 at 7:30 in Murphey hall. The debate squad meetings are officially known as Debating 1. The class meets weekly and carries one-half course credit. The debate council urges all those interested in forensics to attend the meeting next Thursday.

Sunday Night Recital

A recital will be given at the Chapel of the Cross next Sunday night at 8 o'clock by Miss Ruth Prohl, harpist, Howard Conrad, tenor, and I. O. Kennedy, organist.

DINNER TONIGHT FOR HI-Y FROSH

Ex-Hi-Y Members to Organize During Banquet at Methodist Church.

The organization dinner of the freshman friendship council will be held tonight at 6:30 in the social rooms in the basement of the Methodist church. All freshmen who were members of Hi-Y clubs last year and all interested in Y. M. C. A. work are expected to attend the banquet.

President Frank Graham and Dean Francis Bradshaw will be the chief speakers at the occasion. The Y quartet will probably render a few selections. Jimmie Kurfees, president of the council last year, will be the toastmaster for the dinner.

For the past week or more, a sheet has been kept in the lobby o fthe Y. M. C. A. on which all desiring to attend the banquet were to place thei rnames. Fifty men have already registered on this sheet and any new men, who have failed to register but, desire later to be present at the meeting may do so by coming early to the Methodist church social room, which is in the basement of the building.

The charge for the meal is to be fifty cents, which is to be paid at the beginning of the dinner.

Plans are being made for a much larger attendance than was the case at the banquet last year. At the meeting tonight, the officers for the council are to be selected.

Last year, with an attendance of around seventy-five, the officers who were elected were: Alex Webb, president; Bob Hubbard, vice-president; Alex Biggs, secretary; and Strat Donnel, treasurer. Due to an injury sustained, however, Webb was unable to return to school after Christmas. Jimmie Kurfees was chosen to take his place.

f The freshman council, working this year without a special freshman secretary, is looking to a full year's program.

The Bull's Head, run by A. J. Mahler, a graduate student who has just been appointed to take charge, is a tiny shop on the second floor of Murphey hall, where all sorts of new books can be bought. This place should become familiar to every freshman book-lover. Here one can find classics in 50-cent and $1 editions. The Bull's Head concentrates on literature and nonfiction; but popular modern fiction can also be bought. If you want a book that is not in they will gladly order it for you.

One does not have to buy. In fact, more often the students lounging around there don't buy. You can come in and browse among the rich souls confined there, smoking all the while. Several students are usually there, idling among the books. One is perforce reminded of the sunny French quais, where musty book stalls offer their riches to lazying bibliomaniacs; those stalls of which Anatole France has becom ethe charming raconteur.

Books such as "Gargantua and Pantagruel" can be bought in two volumes for $2. This edition is practically a literal translation of the original French. Many fine things can be bought in the Bonibook edition for 50 cents, and in the Modern Library for a dollar; the latter is a convenient limp-leather edition of modern classics.

Freshmen or undergraduates who have not as yet made its acquaintance, be sure to pay a visit to the Bull's Head. You'll return if you go once.

Miss Susie Sharp of Reidsville has recently been appointed secretary and research assistant of the University law school. She will also act as book review editor of the Law Review.

On September 6th the laundrymen of the laundry owners association attended a banquet at which Dean Paulsen was host.

The prominent speaker of the evening was Frank Graham, who stressed the importance of cutting waste and also the great importance of education.

The feature is a powerful dama, "The Eyes of the World," which is adapted from the story of the same name by Harold Bell Wright. Una Merkel and Nance O'Neill, two actresses from the legitimate stage, and John Holland are featured. Mr. E. C. Smith, the manager, annaunced that the theatre would be hosts alternately to a fraternity and then to a dormitory. Next week occupants of one of the dormitories will be the guests of the theatre.

NEW BUCCANEER OUT OCTOBER 15

"Have your funny-bones polished and in condition for the new Buccaneer," advises Kermit Wheary, editor of this local magazine. The first issue of the Buccaneer, which will be out October 15, will be the initial number, with a cover by Kenneth Whitsett of the Charlotte Engraving Company, and will mark the beginning of a banner year for the local comic. Many new features are being added, including a "scandal page" of personal and impersonal campus comment that is to be a permanent fixture in the magazine.

This year's bumper crop of talented artists is going to make it hard for Bobby Mason, art editor, to make the appointments in his staff after the first issue. The candidates are experienced men so the keen competition should bid for a great collection of cartoons and jokes. Just to make the competition keener, editor Wheary is offering a prize each month for the best editorial and art work. The nature of the prize has not been announced.

The Buccaneer is going to be printed at the Orange Print Shop, and anyone wishing to turn in material for the initial number is advised to have it in before September 30. The material can be left with Wheary or Mason at the office in the basement of the Alumni building between the hours of five and six any evening.

Y Directory Out Soon

The Y office announced yester day that the Student Directory, published by the Y, will be ready for distribution in a few weeks. In view of the fact that there have been new registrations, alphebetizing must continue for awhile.

Grail Tickets

Grail tickets will go on sale at Patterson's and the Book X this morning. Tickets also available at rear of gym 8:30 Saturday night.

GRAHAM SPEAKS TO LAWYERS AT FIRST MEETING

President's Address Features Official Opening of Law School.

"I think that the greatest weakness of many lawyers is that sometimes in their eagerness to find far-fetched arguments in support of their cases they fail to master the facts in the case," President Frank P. Graham said in his address last night at exercises which marked the formal opening of the University law school. The exercises were held under the auspices of the Law school association.

President Graham told the law students to learn to master the details while they were in college as the weaknesses cultivated in studying would prove their greatest weaknesses in practice. He then pointed out how the lawyers occupy strategic places in the life of this state as leaders of great movements. In reviewing the history of this state one would find many instances when lawyers stepped from strategic places at critical times, he said. As an example he told of a lawyer who led the movement to defeat the Poole bill in the legislature.

"I know of no prfessions that offer a greater personal of public opportunity than law," he said.

J. A. Williams, president of the Law school association, presided. He introduced Dean McCormick, who welcomed the new men to the Law school. Then in order he called on Martin Kellog, president of the third year class, Mac Gray, president of the second year class, and Arch Al-

RUSHING SEASON TO START TODAY

A twenty-day period of fraternity rushing will commence today when freshmen will be received at the various fraternity houses which they have been invited to visit. All freshmen who have received invitations to visit fraternities should visit every house from which they have received invitations between two o'clock this afternoon and midnight Saturday if they expect to join a fraternity at the University of North Carolina, according to the Interfraternity Council's ruling. After these two days in which the freshmen are to be received at the houses, the rushing season will begin in earnest, with each fraternity man trying to persuade the gullible frosh that his particular lodge is the best on the Hill, in the state, or even in the country.

Some of the more important rules to which special attention should be paid by all those in any way affected by fraternities, freshmen and upperclassmen alike, are: A freshman must visit every lodge which has invited him within the next two days, or he will never be allowed to join a fraternity at Chapel Hill. No fraternity may make more than two dates with a freshman until after the closing of the formal visiting period on Saturday night. Freshmen should notice this as well as fraternity men. No fraternity men

English Students And Their Politics

Ed Hudgins, former president of the student body here and new Rhodes scholar at Oxford university, said recently in an interview that the English student took a greater interest in national affairs and politics than his American counsin did. At the Oxford Union, a forum for the University students, national politics and national affairs showed the interest of the students along with local topics.

Over here we exhibit only a slight interest in either. Some students take the trouble to vote, but the majority continue their efforts to condemning the conduct of officials, not realizing that either they acquiesced their selection or did nothing to prevent it.

Other than taking a cursory interest in national officials when the action of one is likely to affect the stock market or a problematical tour of Europe, most students hardly know who hold the higher positions in the national government. As to the State government the ignorance of the average student is pitiful. Actually, a student, discovering he was eligible to vote this fall, asked who the candidates for the United States Senate were. Some have read that Mr. Bailey was nominated; few know that Mr. Pritchard is a candidate.

Sports, social affairs, and other similiar interests occupy the students' attention. They have no time for government. And then those who display the least knowledge of the government and its operation are the loudest in condemning it.

England, however, knows that in the universities future statesmen, politicians and diplomats are being trained. They have discovered that this college training has given them a fine group of national leaders, shrewder diplomats, and clearer cut political issues. And they have learned that an English gentleman may engage in the game of politics without soiling his hands. That is another lesson Americans are yet to learn.

Progress In Music

The University in the past has been sadly lacking in the matter of music facilities. Such a need has extended not only to those students interested professionally in the art, but also to the many interested in the thing solely for its own sake. Recognition of the need of both instruments in music and necessary equipment was made by the University in a gesture in the direction when a small department of music was instituted. From that time to the present the department of music has progressed steadily.

Despite the lack of facilities those, such as Weaver, Dyer, and McCorkle, who have been most intimately associated with the work have done remarkably well. The glee club was once in institution of national fame and still occupies a prominent place among collegiate clubs; the orchestra and the band are also well known. Likewise, the department itself has a reputation which is admirable, as the courses which it sponsors are considered to be of an exceptionally high quality. These things are mentioned in order to show what music has accomplished on this campus, though hampered by a need of adequate equipment.

But it now seems that these needs, or at least many of them, are to be met. With the music building and its auditorium and organ nearing completion, with plans for the Morehead-Patterson tower of chimes definitely under way, lovers of music rejoice in the vision of a Southern center of music here in the University. No longer must the department be hindered in expansion by lack of space and facilities; no longer must prospective students in music seek other institutions because the University is poorly equipped in this field. The music department has accomplished much. What can it not achieve properly equipped?

Condition Of Dormitories

We have heard much comment lately about the condition of the college dormitories. Many of the buildings, still comparatively new, bear marks of wear far beyond their years. Railings have been torn down in the stairways, fixtures demolished in the rooms, and walls marred with pencil marks and other disfigurations.

It seems to us that each student should take the utmost care not to deface the dormitories, not only because of personal pride, but also in consideration for the later occupants of the room. If all students had taken this care of the buildings, these dormitories would now be much cleaner inside than they are.

The fault, however, does not lie entirely with the students. It is much harder to take the proper care of a dirty dormitory room than a clean one. If the University would use a little paint and kalsomine, matters would be helped immensely. Once clean, the dormitories could be kept so with little yearly expense.—J. D. D.

The Critical Month

Many students do not seem to realize just how lucky they are to be coming to what we will simply call, for the sake of modesty, one of the best universities in the South. A college graduate has a big advantage over others, and we hope we will be pardoned for thinking that a Carolina graduate is more fortunate than any other college graduate.

Carolina, well-known for her athletic teams, professors, equipment, and other things, is still more noted for the character and ability of the men she sends out into the world; this should be an incentive to make each student strive to build up his mind, body, and character.

The most important years of a man's life are his four years at college; of these four years, his freshman year is most important, and of his freshman year, this first month is the decisive one. College and running a mile race are not at all alike. In a mile race, a runner may start off slowly and still have a fine chance to win; in college, a man must start off right, or he may not start at all. If he does finally start, he will probably find himself so far behind that it is useless to attempt to catch up.

Now is every freshman's big opportunity, the time when he will decide, consciously or unconsciously, whether he will be a success or failure in life. If he starts right now to really study, to make the right kind of friends, and to take part in athletics and other extra-curricular activities, he is laying a good foundation for a happy and successful career in life.

Nobody is your boss here; it's up to you yourself to show that you have the guts and courage to start off like a man and not a loafer. In the future, if not at the present, you will be repaid many times for what hard work and clean sport you accomplish now. Show old man Opportunity that you hear him knocking, that you appreciate his generous offer, and that you are going to take advantage of it at once. You owe it to your friends, to your parents, and to yourself to do this.

—C. A. P.

OPEN FORUM

MAN VS. INSECT

A dormitory room normally serves the purposes of a "home" and all that the word implies. However, a dormitory room without screens installed in the windows becomes something entirely different. A veritable zoological garden often springs into being during the nocturnal hours when the occupants are in the midst of concentration and deep study.

Notable, among other outstanding examples, is a room in Steele, the occupants of which have become so attached to their nightly visitors that an interesting galaxy of specimens is being collected. These specimens are mounted and placed in a conspicious position in the room as a constant reminder of the endless struggle of man against pest.

Just another hint that dormitory occupants would be proud to boast of the possession of a set of screens in their windows.

REMINISCENCES

From the Tar Heel Files

By Jack Riley.

15 Years Ago Today

One thousand eighty students had registered for the year. Of these five were co-eds.

Football scrimmage was to start soon.

At Wake Forest 415 students had registered.

The total enrollment at Trinity was 500.

Twelve hundred students had enrolled for the year 1920-21.

D. Reid Hodgin of the Phi society won the first prize in a national contest of peace orators.

5 Years Ago Today

The University grid team had had twelve days of training for the first game with Wake Forest.

The enrollment for the fall quarter was two thousand.

Registration in the Law school this year has dropped to 104, last year's number being 120. Freshmen enrollment, however, exceeds that of last fall by six students, making a total of 48 new men in the first year class.

By Moore Bryson

Well, well, the little boy with the hatchet (not George Washington) once more starts his hunt and peck system and attempts to knock off a few more chips for the "Daily." I really haven't had the opportunity to observe very much since I arrived, so as my fellow columnist, Will, would say, "All I know is what I see in the papers."

I have seen a great many new faces on the campus this fall especially in the neighborhood of Spencer. The old place is beginning to pick up rapidly. Why, soon we won't even consider going to Greensboro or Raleigh for a date. That is if we are fortunate enough to get into the good graces of one or more of the local belles.

I know of one organization on the campus which has taken a new lease on life this year because of the bright galaxy of feminine pulchritude which is everywhere apparent, namely the "Wigue and Masque." With a new auditorium under construction and such a host of girls from which to pick the chorus, there is ample reason for the otherwise sombre countenance of Wex Malone to be wreathed in smiles.

Went down to see the Freshmen and varsity scrimmage the other day and sat with Virginia Turner and Jack Ward. They were so enthusiastic over a freshman marvel from their home-town, that I almost wished that I came from a locality where men are men and shave their heads.

Which reminds me, did you as a Carolina spectator keep in training during the summer months for the games this fall? If you were in summer school that is "Fool Question Number 99,999.

I, with the rest of the campus, regret to learn of the departure of Mr. Hubert Heffner from the campus. He has done a great work in the Playmakers. The one consolation is that his place will be taken by Mr. Sam Selden who was here as technical director two years ago. Everyone who has worked under Mr. Selden recognizes his ability and appreciates the charm of his personality.

Back to football, I sincerely hope that this year's cheerleader will be able to organize a section that will compare with the famous "Cheerios" of a few years ago. I am not a great one for the "Rah, Rah" collitch spirit, but a good cheering squad does add greatly to the color and atmosphere which make football the super-sport that it now is.

I agree with former cheerleader Chandler that the athletic association or the University should in some way recognize and reward the efforts of the man who works to see that the team has the organized support of the student body.

Bi-Lingual Star

Claudette Colbert, Paramount film star featured in the Carolina theatre attraction today, "Manslaughter," is bi-lingual—she speaks English and French with equal fluency.

The feminine lead of "Manslaughter" was born in Paris, but when only six years old, her parents brought her to the United States. At that time, she did not speak a word of English. The public schools of New York soon taught her.

However, so that she would not lose the use of her native French, Miss Colbert's parents insisted that she speak French at home.

Intramurals To Begin

With the beginning of intramural athletics close at hand, a few words of explanation concerning the significance of this part of the University's activities means should be of worth.

In the past seven years intramural athletics have come to play an important part in the school life of Carolina. Director Shepard, with the help of Mac Grey and Wallace Shelton, have done serviceable work in providing "athletics for all" on the campus.

The schedule will be conducted much the same as in previous years and with the new equipment that has been added, indications point that this year will be highly successful. Director Shepard states that the management is rushing things into readiness, and by the first of next week the intra-mural program will be under way.

BRISK WORKOUTS YESTERDAY FOR TAR HEEL TEAM

Afternoon Today Will See Kicking-Off and Running Kick-Offs.

Brisk workouts were continued yesterday as the coaches primed their football charges for the Wake Forest game on Saturday.

Aside from the regular exercising and running signals, the early part of the afternoon was taken up in practicing offensive kicking with the frosh on the defense. Five teams took part in this, each taking turn in kicking and running back punts. Branch and Maus got off some nice, long, high, kicks. Both are rounding into shape as real honest to goodness kickers and are doing much to lessen the coaches' worries. Here mention must be made of the frosh safety men who returned the varsity's kicks in good fashion.

In the latter part of the afternoon, all of Coach Collins' crew tried kicking extra points, again with the freshmen on the defense.

Erwin Walker received minor injuries and was excused from practice.

Today, practically all the afternoon will be used in kicking off and running back kickoffs. In writing, the workouts seem to the reader to be light ones. But as Coach Collins told the Tar Heel reporter, "Stick around and see how light they will be ."

WARREN-CARROLL BOUT SCHEDULED

Grudge Fight Monday at Asheville To Hold Fan's Attention.

Add Warren, Carolina's well known boxing alumnus, is now training for his revenge fight with Jeff Carroll in Asheville Monday night. Add is working hard to win the fight as it was to Carroll that he lost by a technical knockout upon the occasion of his breaking his arm for a second time. Until the accident, Warren had a slight advantage in the fight, which was close at all times. Monday night's fight is expected to be unusually hard-fought, but Warren is thought to have a slight edge due to his record this summer.

Warren has done extensive campaigning this summer with great success. He has added to his string of victims such men as Tiny Herman, Father Lumpkin, Buck Jordan, George Weiss and several others. He knocked out Weiss in 6 rounds, Lumpkin in 2, Jordan in 5, and Herman in 10. He also drew with Sid McIver.

Many Vacancies On Cross Country Team

This year cross-country at Carolina presents an opportunity to sophomores, juniors, and seniors such as has never been seen or heard of before. There is but one letter man, Captain Baucom, who has returned to school this fall. Aside from Jensen, Jones, Lumpkin, and Cordle of last year's championship Freshman team, and Watkins, winner of the annual cake race, there are no men who have had any collegiate experience in this sport.

Varsity Track

The first meeting of varsity track candidates will be held next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 in Emerson stadium. Practice will be held regularly from then until the Thanksgiving holidays.

Candidates for the distance events will work out with the cross-country team after the first few days.

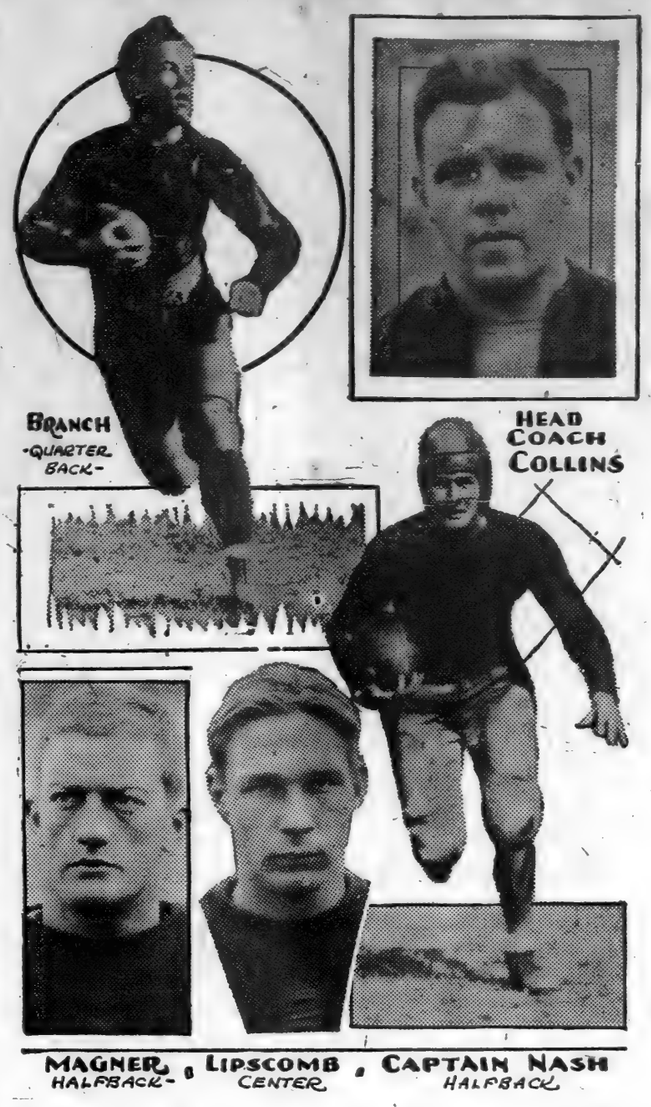
SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

With the football season but twenty-four hours off, Carolina students are thinking not of the state championship but of the Dixie title. To gain this coveted honor the Tar Heels must overcome four great obstacles, which the more one thinks about, the greater they seem. Granting that they should take the V. P. I. game, rarely an easy victory for Coach Collins' charges, the Tar Heels must hurdle Maryland, Georgia, Tennessee, and Georgia Tech, in the order named.

One consolation is that the gods are favoring the Tar Heels in every possible way. First, Maryland plays Yale at New Haven the week before they tackle the Tar Heels at Chapel Hill. This game is bound to soften the Old Liners somewhat, and coupled with two long trips, the odds should rest with Carolina.

Before engaging the Tar Heels, Tennessee encounters Mississippi at Knoxville, and the following week travel to Tuscaloosa to stem Alabama's Crimson Tide. The Vols have suffered a great loss in the withdrawal of the nation's high scoring halfback, Gene McEver, the "Bristol Blizzard;" however, the Vols have a veteran team and the injured star's place will be capably filled. To offset this, the Carolinians will be fighting to upset a jinx, as the Vols have conquered the Tar Heels the last two times that the two teams have met.



The last great obstacle to be overcome will be Georgia Tech. Here again, fortune favors Carolina inasmuch as the Golden Tornado plays last year's Dixie champions, Tulane, and precedes this game with Auburn, Carnegie Tech, and South Carolina, all formidable opponents.

If Carolina can win all these games it is reasonable to suppose that the Blue and White may go through the season undefeated, having State, Davidson, Virginia, and Duke left on the schedule.

News that the Chicago Cubs will have Rogers Honsby at the helm next year came like a bolt out of the blue to the nation's sport followers. During Joe McCarthy's five year managership of the Cubs, he lifted Chicago baseball out of the rut, turning a mediocre team into champions and making the Chicagoans one of the greatest drawing cards in baseball. This year injuries to Hornsby, Grimm, Bell, and Stephanson, climaxed by the untimely, death of Hal Carlson, wrecked havoc in the Cub camp. This would ordinarily be enough to disrupt the morale of any team and sink it in the depths of the second division, but under McCarthy's inspiring leadership, the Cubs are resting safely in second place with apparent chance for the flag. McCarthy has proven a great leader and should have little difficulty in finding another major league berth.

Some Tar Heel Veterans

Three Tar Heel backs and one lineman are some of the principal players around which Coach Collins is building his 1930 team. Captain Strud Nash and Jim Magner are two of the fastest and most elusive backs in the conference this year. Ned Lipscomb is making a great pivot man around which to build an inexperienced Tar Heel line. Johnny Branch has proved himself an able broken field runner and quarterback.

Westerman Becomes New Theatre Manager

Ralph Westerman, former business manager of the Cape Playhouse and the Cape Cinema, will succeed Hubert Heffner as business manager of the Carolina Playmakers, it was announced today by Professor F. M. Koch, head of the dramatic organization here at the University.

Mr. Westerman has studied theatre informally in Paris, Berlin, and London and has attended George Washington University, Stanford, and College of the Pacific.

His talents are not limited to the theatre alone as he has had sketches, criticisms and poetry published in the San Franciscan Monthly as well as in other magazines and papers.

Tar Heels Have Won Sixteen And Lost Nine Games Since Meeting Wake Forest In 1888

Lost to Deacons From 1924 to 1927; Overwhelmed Them In 1928 and 1929.

When the Tar Heels meet the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest Saturday afternoon in Kenan stadium they will be reviving a rivalry that is over forty years old. In 1888 Wake Forest defeated Carolina by two goals to one. This was the first intercollegiate football game ever played in the state. The two teams were composed of members of the sophomore classes.

Bob Bingham was captain of the Carolina team that year.

Wake Forest has won nine games from Carolina during this period. Carolina has come out victorious in sixteen games. Wake Forest won one game by forfeit.

In the spring of 1889 Carolina beat Wake orest 33-0. Bragaw was team captain.

Pierce Matthew's boys in 1924 struck a snag in Wake Forest College. That year they lost by a score of 7-6. The Deacons had such stars as Blaine Rackley, Riley, Fred Emerson, and Murray Greason. Pat Garrity was coach. The next year Carolina lost by the same score that they did the previous year. The Deacons won in '26 and '27. A fumble cost the Tar Heels a chance at victory in '27. Johnnie Cox, fleet Baptist quarterback, scooped up the fumble and ran for a touchdown. "Monk" Ober led the Deacon team that year, while "Bo" Morehead was Carolina's captain. It began to look like Wake Forest had a jinx on North Carolina. Impatient alumni began to wonder if Carolina would ever beat Wake Forest again.

Like a bolt out of a clear sky, the Tar Heels, opening their first season in the new stadium, buried Wake Forest under a landslide of touchdowns by a score of 65-0. The jinx was dead, long live success!

Last year the Deacons were sent to the mourner's bench for the second time in succession by the overwhelming score of 48-0. This year the Heels will be trying to cop their seventeenth victory from Wake Forest. The Deacons are hungry for some points against Carolina and will be shooting the works in an effort to wrest victory from Collins' charges. On paper the Heels should win. They should have won in '27, on paper, but they lost on the field. History may repeat itself when these old rivals play here Saturday for their twenty-fifth meeting.

Baseball Practice Calls Out New Men

Many candidates for the 1931 Carolina baseball team reported for fall practice yesterday afternoon in response to Coach Ashmore's initial call of the year. The prospects for a good season this year are a lot brighter on paper than they were last year, mainly due to the number of star pitchers developed on last year's freshman team. As the weakness of the hurling department was the varsity's greatest defect last year, it is expected that these new men will materially aid in making the season of 1931 successful.

lectures, attendance to these being strictly optional. There are no deans, nor what we would call professors or instructors. Each student has his own tutor upon whom he may call at his own leisure. Another intresting feature is the fact that all students are required to wear caps and gowns to all lectures.

Unlike American universities, and North Carolina in particular, the student body takes great interest in debating and the forensic arts. The Oxford Union, the building in which all debates and speeches are delivered, declares Hudgins, seats about 500, and at nearly all public speaking exercises is well filled. In England public speaking is considered quite an important part of education. Oxford is said to be the training grounds for English statesmen. In his address Hudgins commented upon the decline of public interest in public speaking throughout the United States, and urged its revival.

Hudgins pointed out that there is no semblance of student government in English universities, and remarks that the student has no feeling of responsibility, and that anything that can be gotten away with is all right. He closed with the remark that he is happy to have come from the University where the Honor code is respected and upheld.

Ashby Penn, cheer-leader, then announced that a pep meeting would be held in front of Phillips hall Friday night, and that the meeting would be attended by Captain Nash, and probably Coach Collins.

len, president of the first year class, for short talks.

Talks were made by professors M. T. Van Hecke and Albert Coates. Professor Van Hecke spoke on the Law Review. He reviewed the eight years of its publication and read extracts from letters of Chief Justice Stacy, J. M. Broughton, and former Attorney General Z. V. Walse. He said the Law Review had been cited four times by the North Carolina Supreme Court and twice by the United States Supreme Court. Of 2100 copies of every issue 1400 go to North Carolina lawyers, and the remainder to libraries, other law schools, and students.

Professor Coates reviewed the traditions of the Law school and said that it planned to continue its practice of having prominent attorneys lecture here.

Light refreshments were served and the association was entertained by Manager E. S. Smith of the Carolina theatre at a show.

RHODES SCHOLARS TO BE SELECTED IN NEW MANNER

Country Divided Into Eight Districts Having Four Representatives Each.

This year many important changes have been made in the Rhodes scholarships. A new system of awarding them has been adopted, and the date of awarding changed.

Beginning this year the United States will be divided into eight districts of six states each. Each of these states will each nominate two students to the district committee. The committees will select from the twelve applicants four to represent their sections at Oxford.

Colleges and universities will make their selectons before October the 11th, and send in their applications for state elections, which take place on December the 6th. The final selections are to be made by the district committee two weeks later. The Rhodes Scholars elected in December will enter Oxford in the fall of 1931.

To be eligible a candidate must: Be a male citizen of the United States and unmarried. Be between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five. Have at least completed his sophomore year in college. Qualities which will be considered in awarding the scholarships are: (1) Literary and scholastic ability and attainments. (2) Qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion, to duty, sympathy, kindliness, unselfshness and fellowship. (3) Exhibition of moral forces of character and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates. (4) Physical vigor as shown by interest in outdoor sports or in other ways.

The Rhodes scholar will be allwed the option of spending his third year at Oxford or at any other university in the world outside of his native land. The student may take his third year immediately after his first two, of work in this country. The value of a Rhodes scholarship is fixed at 400 pounds a year. No restriction is placed on the choice of studies.

Students desiring further information may obtain such from the office of Dean Hobbs.

Lutheran Students' Social Postponed

The social which the Lutheran student association had planned for this evening has been postponed indefinitely due to the fact that the fraternity rushing season opens today and upperclassmen will be busily engaged in the interests of their respective fraternities and freshmen who receive invitations are required to visit the frat houses. Regular services will be conducted in Gerrard hall Sunday morning, Sunday school at 10:00 and the church service at eleven.

WAKE FOREST GAME TODAY KENAN STADIUM

VOLUME XXXIX — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1930 — NUMBER 8

QUIET REIGNS ON HILL AS CLASH COMES IN OFFING

Experts State Tar Heels Will Have Easy Time With Deacons.

Chapel Hill and the University campus were quiet yesterday on the eve of the first football game of the season with the Wake Forest College eleven. Fraternity rushing superceded the approaching game in the interest of both freshmen and upperclassmen.

Then too, in view of the apparent superiority of the Carolina team over the Baptists this year, the contest will probably be devoid of the ordinary thrills attending a contest with Wake Forest. Since this afternoon's game will, no doubt, be little more than a practice session, it will be only a partial indication of what to expect from the blue and white varsity later in the season.

So, the crowd will probably not exceed that of last year. However, hundreds of alumni, who are to be here for the banquet in the Carolina Inn tonight, will help to augment the attendance. Other games in the state, of greater interest, will probably attract a large number of pigskin fans. The fact that advance ticket sales are low indicates this.

Traffic, before and after the game, and parking will be handled by the Chapel Hill police with the aid of a few state highway patrolmen. East-bound cars will be parked on the intramural field and west-bound vehicles on freshman field. The small size of the crowd will hardly make for any serious traffic congestion as occurs at

ALUMNI BANQUET WILL MARK NEW LOYALTY APPEAL

Graham and Gardner To Be Chief Speakers At Banquet Presided Over by Leslie Weil.

A banquet tonight in the Carolina Inn will mark the formal opening of the 1930 appeal of the alumni loyalty fund. Three hundred committeemen and class agents representing practically every county in the State and every living class are expected to attend, according to information given out this morning by Felix A. Grisette, director of the fund.

The feature of the meeting tonight will be two addresses, one by President Frank Porter Graham, and the other by Governor O. Max Gardner. Leslie Weil of Goldboro, a member of the board of trustees of the University and chairman of the loyalty fund council, will preside during the dinner, after which the meeting will be in charge of L. P. McLendon, of Durham, as toastmaster.

The committeemen and class agents will be guests of the University athletic association at the Carolina-Wake Forest game this afternoon. The banquet will follow soon after the game, getting under way not later than six o'clock, thus leaving ample time for guests who live within a reasonable distance to return home tonight.

U. N. C. ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT GIVES TECHNOLOGY AND CULTURE

Technical Schools Have Developed Along Broad Lines; Large Increase in Enrollment Marks Growth Since Establishment as Separate School in 1922

By Dean G. M. Braune

When reviewing the history of the University of North Carolina one is impressed with the early endeavor of the institution to include in its curriculum courses in engineering.

The first student to seek admission to the University in 1795—Hinton James of Wilmington—elected as a career the practice of engineering. As evidence of the sound training he received and of his engineering ability, the remains of certain dikes constructed by him in the eastern part of the state are still visible today.

In the early days of the University the faculty apparently realized the wisdom of offering some instruction in engineering, since in the catalog on 1853 is listed the "School of application of science to the arts" in which was included a department of civil engineering, naming Charles Phillips as its professor. In each catalog thereafter a department of civil engineering was listed until the University was closed in 1868. Beginning with the reopening in 1875 a college of engineering is listed in the catalog with the outline of a course of studies extending over a period of three years. This arrangement continued for a number of years, when the courses in engineering became a part of the department of mathematics, and later were included under the school of applied science.

The present school of engineering dates from June, 1922, when the board of trustees authorized the establishment of a separate school to include the various departments of engineering.

This brief history would indicate that the University of North Carolina was prabably the first institution in the South to offer engineering courses and, in fact, one of the pioneers of America to offer this type of instruction.

As it is at present constituted, the school comprises the departments of civil, electrical and mechanical engineering and the curriculum of chemical engineering. The department of mechanical engineering offers an option in aeronautical engineering in the senior year.

GRAHAM SPEAKS TO EX-HI-Y MEN

Student Leaders Heard at Banquet Also; Friendship Council Officers Are Chosen.

Before a group of about fifty boys President Frank Graham spoke at the Ex Hi-Y banquet on the importance of not neglecting to develop the moral and religious side of life during the four years of life on this campus. He pointed out that as one did on this campus during one's college careers so would one do after leaving here and entering life. "You boys who joined this organization," he said, "are taking an important step in your lives.

Preceding President Graham's speech members of the board of directors of Y. M. C. A. each in turn had a word to say to the freshmen. Various student leaders also were introduced to the group. Ed Hamer, president of the "Y", in his remarks showed the meaning and purpose of the organization that these new men were forming in the Y. M. C. A. and its meaning to them and to the campus.

The last part of the evening was devoted to the election of the officers of the Freshmen Friendship Council for the coming year. The voting for all the positions was very close. Graham McLeod of Raleigh was elected president; J. Houston Barnes, of Greensboro, vice-president; James Nowell of Raleigh, secretary; and Jack Hammer of Wilmington, treasurer.

HOWELL ISSUES ENGLISH VOLUME

Designed for Use of Practicing Engineers and As a Textbook.

John Wiley and Sons, New York publishers, have announced A Handbook of English in Engineering Usage by Dr. A. C. Howell, professor of English and Assistant Dean of the Graduate school in the University.

The book is designed as a textbook in college courses in Engineering English.

"It is time," writes Dr. Howell in the preface, "to face squarely the fact that for the majority of engineers English is primarily a tool for advancement in their profession. This book is written to serve as a guide for the engineer who wishes to make his English clear, accurate, and concise.

"Such a handbook is important for the engineer—as important as his handbooks in other branches of his work. He has such books giving constants and formulas in the scientific subjects. This little book attempts to do as much for his English."

The volume is small, clear, and compact. It is surprising the amount of material Dr. Howell has been able to assemble between the covers of its 200 pages.

One interesting feature of the book is a section devoted to writing for publication, containing valuable information in regard to preparation, submission, and proof reading of articles for the technical press.

Attention Tar Heel Reporters

All old and new reporters are requested to call by the Daily Tar Heel offices between 9 and 12 o'clock this morning. All who fail to report at the office will be immediately dropped from the staff. Legitimate excuses only will be accepted. All regular assignments must be covered for the Sunday paper.

Gov. Gardner Will Watch Game Today

Governor O. Max Gardner will attend the Carolina-Wake Forest game here this afternoon, it was learned tonight.

The Tar Heels evidently anticipated the Governor's visit, for they blossomed out in new uniforms today. The new suits weigh eleven pounds, and have knit pants and improved pads.

GRAHAM SPEAKS TO SOPHOMORES

Declares Practice of Hazing Has No Place in University Life.

President Frank Graham addressed the class of '33 in Gerrard hall yesterday morning at the regular chapel hour, using as the subject of his message the subject of hazing and its dastardliness. He told how, with a little backbone and courage, three boys, who were destined to become great men later on in life, started the fine and noble issue of abolishing hazing. He also related sad and most pathetic tragedy which was due to the effects of hazing, back in the early years of the University.

"Hazing is not only against the law of our student government but is against the law of the state of North Carolina, and shall be published accordingly," quoted President Graham. It is described by the President as an inferiority complex and, as he says, "it is sadly depreciative of the hazer's character and good judgment. Not only does hazing harm the character of an individual, but his personality is greatly impaired by being party to a thing so low in the sight of every true and loyal Carolina man."

"Hazing belongs to no place in all the institutions of learning, but if it has to be somewhere by dint of percentage, we should let the prep schools and military academies have our share, because that is truly where hazing is most prevalent and mostly carried on."

NEW DEAN

Dr. W. W. Pierson, who served as acting dean of the graduate school immediately following the death of the late Dr. James Finch Royster, is the recently appointed dean of the school.

FIRST GRAIL OF SEASON TONIGHT

Large Dance Crowd Expected By Club Officials.

With music by Jack Wardlaw and his orchestra, the first Grail dance of the fall quarter will be staged in Bynum Gymnasium tonight from nine till twelve o'clock. Tickets for the affair will be on sale at the rear door of the gym at 8:30 this evening. A ticket sale was also conducted from the Student Supply Store and Pritchard-Lloyd drug store yesterday afternoon.

The dance committee of the Order of the Grail, sponsors of the dance, have reiterated their rule that absolutely no freshmen are allowed to attend Grail dances, under penalty of being suspended from dances during their sophomore year.

This, the first dance of the fall season, is expected to be unusually well-attended by young people here for the Wake Forest-Carolina game this afternoon. If the plans of the committee are followed, the opening dance will be especially good.

Open Season For Freshmen As Greeks Begin Annual Campaign

By George Wilson

King Rushing, with his glamorous garments, and his subtle decoys, began his three weeks reign at 2:00 yesterday afternoon. Quiet, peaceful was his coronation, but when he waved his royal sceptre to give his first order, that his subject freshmen be allowed admittance at the portals of fraternities, a veritable babel broke forth.

Nor was the coming of the king unheraled. For weeks, even as far back as last spring, extensive snares have been laid to entice freshmen into the grip of the order.

The most extensive wiles began to make their appearance this week, when the phonograph records left over from last spring were replaced and the photograph album was dusted off, when pictures and banners were hung, and new crisp and clean cards were bought.

But the lodges were not the only things veneered; the inhabitants themselves suffered the fate of their houses. They were washed, pressed, repainted, and had their splotches covered. Like the curtains of the house, their best manners, tact, and good-nature were taken from the bottom of the trunk where the Bible rests now in solitude.

And the rushees, unheedful of the extent of preparation for them, were likewise, but with fear and trembling, having themselves refinished. They undertook the difficult task of making sure of themselves.

To the upperclassman, the expression is always, "These blank freshmen are nuisances;" and to the freshman the expression, "Why in the blank can't I get my bids, if any, without all this trouble?"

King Rushing will have a busy time during the remaining part of the season, for this is one of the most extensive campaigns undertaken by the Greeks on the Hill. Three thousand invitations were printed by the Inter-Fraternity Council, and every one of them was taken, whether with the partial purpose of defeating other lodges by cornering the invitations or not is unknown.

Freshmen, a goodly number of them, have shown their ignorance and excitability already. One asked an upperclassman whether or not he should go home for the week-end, or have

MOVIE MEN HEAR SIX SPEAKERS AT FRIDAY'S SESSION

Twenty-Five Publix-Saenger Theatre Managers Convene At Carolina Inn.

"With the twentieth century history has entered a new phase which has resulted in the electrification and Americanization of the world, and one of the most powerful factors in these contemporary processes is the American motion picture, as it proceeds to introduce American ideas, customs, music, and speech to all the peoples of the earth," President Frank P. Graham of the University of North Carolina told the managers of the 34 theaters represented in the North Carolina Publix-Saenger system who met here Friday.

Addressing the movie executives at their luncheon session, President Graham sought to interpret the cinema as part of a historic process, and framed his ideas around three of the world's greatest figures: Columbus, James Watt, and Thomas Edison, "as the ocean sailing ship, the steam engine, and electricity have mechanically focused three historic periods in modern

HIGH RATING ON BAR EXAM MADE IN LAW SCHOOL

Good Record of Previous Years Maintained by Students Only Two Fail.

University of North Carolina students who took the recent state bar examination again rated high in the number of successful applicants, according to a check-up made by Prof. Robert H. Wettach, acting dean.

Twenty-one University students were certified for the examination by acting dean Wettach, and of these only two failed, giving the University a 92 percentage of successful applicants as compared with a success percentage of 66 for all who took the examination. Only 89 of the total of 134 who took the examination were successful.

To be certified for the examination by the University law school, a student must study here two years and, in addition, take the regular subjects prescribed by the Supreme Court. Certification by the law school is not a prerequisite, however, for taking the examination.

Among University students who passed were Peyton Bryant Abbott, Jr., Winston-Salem; Killian Barwick, Raleigh; Walter Moore Bryson, Asheville; M. S. Benton, Sunbury; J. H. Chadbourn, Wilmington; E. L. Curlee, Chapel Hill; Rudolph Duffy, New Bern; J. G. Edwards, Jonesboro; C. O'el Grimes, Raleigh; E. K. Hagerman, Chapel Hill; Earl A. Humphrey, Jr., Goldsboro; A. B. Holmes, Hendersonville; W. S. Student Transfer And Trunks

One unofficial part of the installation of new men here did not function with the smoothness characteristic of the part handled by Dean Bradshaw and his capable staff of assistants. We refer to the Student Transfer and the handling of trunks.

Complaints against the Student Transfer can be boiled down to lack of definite headquarters, lack of proper facilities for handling the large number of trunks arriving here and to the delay and responsibility of the officials of the Student Transfer.

During the first two days of Freshman Week a desk was maintained at the Y. M. C. A. After that many of the new men found difficulty in locating responsible agents of the Transfer. Y. M. C. A. officials who have absolutely no connection with the Transfer rendered invaluable aid to the new men by aiding them to locate the proper parties.

One rather dilapidated truck appeared to be the sole means of tansporting the trunks. With a large number of trunks arriving here that week the one truck was inadequate. With a suitable truck better service could have been rendered but with the truck used by the Student Transfer new men were lucky to receive their trunks at all.

The last complaint was the worst of all. Apparently Student officials did not feel their responsibility. They accepted trunk checks and in some cases that is as far as they went. Trunks cluttered up the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. for nearly a week. In many instances trunks were not delivered for several days and in one no delivery was made. Such service may be characterized as rotten.

We suggest that in awarding a contract next year for trunk transfer that in addition to being bonded the parties be required to maintain definite headquarters until every trunk has been delivered; that the trucks used to transport the trunks be thoroughly inspected and adequate trucks to insure prompt delivery be required, and that the parties responsible be required to maintain a storage elsewhere than the lobby of the Y. M. C. A.

Perfect service is not expected, but better sevice can be secured, we think, if the above recommendations are observed.

Loyalty?

There will be 23 loyal Carolinians in the stands this afternoon to add their spirit and enthusiasm to the Tar Heel cause; only 23.

In twos and threes they dribble down Cameron avenue in front of Phillips hall, gathering silently for half an hour following the stroke of seven from the musical crier in the belfry of Old South building waiting in vain for the appearance of cheerleaders. To these few handfuls of freshmen a University pep meeting on the eve of a great game was a new thing and they wondered at the size of the crowd.

As the stroke of eight approached, someone in the little group which had been sitting patiently on the steps in front of Phillips stirred and a voice stated, "Well, let's have a meeting of our own."

One from the group volunteered his services as cheerleader and soon 23 voices hurled forth "Cro-lina, Cro-lina, Crolina, Carolina, Team, Team, Team." As if by some mysterious force, the cheer rose until the burst of sound was swelled to a mighty roar which reverberated like the crescendo of a giant organ. It might have been the voices of 14,000 loyal alumni. Again the south campus re-echoed to "Hark the Sound," and then with mumbled "good nights" the group broke up silently.

And only 23 were loyal.

Taking Care Of The Dormitories

Taking proper care of the dormitories is one of the problems that confront the new men at Carolina. Upon them rests the decision as to whether or not their rooms shall be a decent place to sleep and live in. The new man shall decide whether his room shall be a clean, neat one where he can want his friends to come for their bull-sessions, bridge games, etc., or whether it shall be a dirty, cluttered up place that no one will care to enter very often.

The janitors sweep the floors and make the beds but that alone will not make a clean room. Unsightly tables, disarranged books, and messy-looking bureaus certainly contribute very little to the good appearance of a room. It takes very little time to keep articles arranged neatly and the improved looks of the room will be gratifying.

For some reason the students, fresh from high schools and prep schools, seem to think that being away at college gives them some peculiar right to treat their rooms as they would never treat theirs at home. Certainly they would not think of cutting on the tables, chairs, and other furniture at home but often when they get away to college that is exactly what they do. Carving initials on the tables and chairs seems to be the most common practice. This is not only repulsive looking but is actually destructive to the furniture.

The most disgusting sight that is to be seen sometimes is the presence of various pencil sketches on the walls. Some of the men seem to take a positive delight in marking on the walls of the room. This looks very bad and is not likely to impress favorably anyone who enters the room for the first time.

What his room shall be like depends on the new man. He can make it a fine place to work and to play in or make it a place fit to do neither in. It is all up to him.—W. E. D.

OPEN FORUM

Deplores Condition of Buildings

Small vandalisms descrate our University. Small vandalisms are irresponsible, slightly destructive acts like writing or drawing on dormitory walls. It is readily conceded that our dormitories are not any too beautiful in some cases, but that is beside the point. The cause for complaint lies in the possibility of such actions becoming, as they often do, the seed for further degradation.

The type of person responsible for such conditions is no true Carolinian. This is proved by his inane scribblings which detract greatly from the appearance of buildings, and make hiedous, objects invested with tradition of stateliness, the upholding of which is the sacred duty, obligation, trust of every real Tar Heel. But the vandal respects nothing, let alone tradition or beauty.

Such deeds, not at all wicked or infamous in character, are not only destructive, but are the signs of a certain immaturity of thought and purpose incompatible with the ideal of the average college man. To put it more bluntly, only a moron, or a very thoughtless person would mutilate our institution. M. P. H.

CLUB YEARBOOK LISTS PROBLEMS

Dr. Hobbs Writes Foreword for N. C. Publications.

The vital problem of North Carolina's industrial life at this stage are presented and treated in the North Carolina Club Yearbook, a compact volume of 108 pages which has recently been issued by the University Press for the Extension Division.

The book, which is issued annually by the North Carolina Club, has chapters devoted to such timely topics as the labor union movement sources of Southern labor supply, the use of injunctions in strikes, North Carolina children in industry, town and farm economic relations, the present crisis in the textile industry, taxation, problems in democracy, and other similar problems. The volume is entitled Contemporary Industrial Processes.

In the foreword Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., calls attention to the fact that the papers presented in the book this year have been prepared mainly by staff members of the Department of Rural Social-Economics, the School of Commerce, and the Institute for Research in Social Science, joint sponsors of the Club program for 1929-30. Ordinarily the program is taken care of by members of the student body, under the direction of the Department of Rural Social-Economics, headed by Dr. E. C. Branson.

The chapters in this issue are contributed by President Frank Graham, and Profs. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., R. P. Vance, Wirth F. Ferger, R. J. M. Hobbs, Bulus B. Swift, G. T. Schwenning, Harriet L. Herring, H. D. Wolf, C. T. Murchison, and Gilbert Evans.

President Graham contributes a chapter on "Contemporary Economic Process," which, although written before his election to the presidency, has timely interest as the credo of the State University's leader. He pleads for the application to all our growing pains of four fundamental principles: liberty of speech and assemblage, the right of autonomous organization and collective bargaining, the technique of impartial fact-finding survey, and regulatory social legislation.

Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., in his chapter, calls attention to the advantages of industrialization as evidenced by the fact that in North Carolina the average farm worker produces $902 with his year's labor while the average factory worker creates wealth of $5,640 anually. He challenges the farmers to capture the untapped local market for 200 million dollars worth of food right here in North Caroline. He stings the pride with the assertion that "every natural advantage as an agricultural-industrial state is in favor of North Carolina as compared with Wisconsin, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, and other northern and western states that supply our tables with processed foods. The only thing they have that we do not exhibit is industry and initiative. Why should North Carolina import string beans, sauerkraut, and butter from Wisconsin, peanut butter from New York, or any of Heinz's fifty-seven varieties?"

FREE TUITION IS TO BE GIVEN TO YOUNG STUDENTS

Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild Offers $50,000 for Coach Models.

Four University scholarships of four years each and 960 other awards having a total value of $50,000 are offered to boys of high school age in the United States for proficiency in craftsmanship by the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, a new organization founded in the interests of American youth by the Fisher Body Corporation.

The purpose of the guild is to perpetuate the ideals and principles of craftsmanship as founded and developed by the craft guilds of the Middle Ages. For its problem in craftsmanship, the guild has chosen the building of a miniature model Napoleonic coach and the awards will go to the boys in the United States between the ages of 12 and 19 years inclusive who display the finest craftsmanship in building these models.

Headed by Dan Beard, national commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America as honorary president, a board of honorary judges has been selected which includes the following prominent educators from various universities and technical schools: Thomas S. Baker, president, Carnegie Institute of Technology; M. L. Brittain, president, Georgia Institute of Technology; M. E. Colley, dean emeritus, College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Michigan; Geo. J. Davis, Jr., dean, College of Engineering at the University of Alabama; W. F. Durand, professor emeritus, mechanical engineering, Stanford University; E. A. Hitchcock, dean, College of Engineering at Ohio State University; P. R. Kolbe, president, Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn; R. A. Milliken, president, California Institute of Technology; R. L. Sackett, dean of engineering, Pennsylvania State College; Rev. T. A. Steiner, C.S.C., dean, College of Engineering, University of Notre Dame; S. W. Stratton, president, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

There are no dues or entrance fees to the guild. Boys can enroll by calling at the salesroom of any General Motors dealer and they then will be forwarded the complete plans and specifications for the model coach. Winners of the scholarships will have $5,000 held in trust and given to them to defray their college expenses at any university they may choose to attend. The builder of the best models in each state will be given a trip to Detroit as the guest of the guild and a cash prize as well, and there are numerous other awards for proficiency in building various parts of the model.

Carolina To Open Season With Deacons

Large Crowd Expected Here For Annual Game In Stadium 2:30 P. M.

Deacons To Present Veteran Eleven With Heavy Forward Wall.

LINEUPS ARE ANNOUNCED

Odds Favor Carolina Because of Reserve Strength and Record of Past 2 Years.

By K. C. Ramsay

Ten thousand fans are expected here this afternoon to witness the twenty-fifth meeting of the North Carolina and Wake Forest football teams in Kenan stadium. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock.

Weather reports indicated that there will be a clear day for the game, but the unusual heat makes the day much more suited for baseball.

Both teams have been in training since Labor Day and have been drilling hard for the opening game. Little has been learned in Chapel Hill as to the strength of the Deacons, for they have been working behind closed walls and have sent out no news as to the progress of their eleven.

The Wake Forest team last year was composed largely of sophomores and puniors, and for this reason it is believed that they will present a well seasoned outfit. Their line with such men as Captain Parker and Williams is considered to be rather heavy, and they have several backs who have displayed their ability at advancing the ball. Carolina fans will remember Mills and Benton from last year as principal cogs in the Baptist offense.

Up until press time last night the Wake Forest lineup could not be obtained. However, it is believed that the following will take the field against the Tar Heels: Captain Jack Parker, center; Hicks and Levine, guards; Webb and Williams, tackles; Gregson and Brogden, ends; Quillen and Mills, halves; Benton, quarter; and Covington, fullback. Others who will probably see action in the game are: Dupree, guard; Edwards, center and Placa, guard.

Coaches Collins, Fetzer, Cerney, and Sapp have been working hard with the Tar Heels to build up a machine which will match with last year's second highest scoring team in the country. The "hundred backs" of last year have been rapidly getting into shape for the season, and looked very good in scrimmages during the latter part of this week.

Filling gaps in the forward wall has been the biggest problem for the Tar Heel coaches, tackles and end positions having to be filled with substitute and sophomore material. Blocking by the line has caused much worry for the mentors. At times it has been very good, but rather spasmodic.

Injury Hits Tar Heel Camp

Injury has already taken its tole in the Carolina camp. Fysal, letter guard, has been taking light workouts only for the past ten days because of an injury to his shoulder, and in all probably will not ee action in the game today. Chuck Erickson was out for a time with minor injuries, but is back in shape again and should get the call today.

A severe blow struck the Tar Heels Thursday afternoon when Irwin Walker, promising sophomore end, broke his arm just above the wrist. Nelson and Walker were having a battle royal for the left end post, and this position will be considerably weakened as a result of this accident.

The Tar Heels are conceded the odds in today's game, because of their great reserve strength, and record of the past two years. Anything may be expected, however, since so little is known of the Deacon's strength.

Coach Collins will probably send many more members of the squad into the contest ere the final whistle is blown.

SPORTS CHATTER

By Hugh Wilson

This afternoon the Tar Heels will tear the lid off their 1930 season when they meet the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest in Kenan stadium. Speculation is rife on the campus as to the outcome. The Deacons have had little or no press agenting this fall, the news emanating from their camp being scanty and vague. The likelihood is that will present very much snappier opposition to the Tar Heels this year than they did, but it is hardly probably that they will give the minions of Coach Collins a beating. However, the past history of the Carolina Wake Forest encounters should prevent the team and the student body from growing too confident. Time and again Wake Forest has risen to defeat the superior but overconfident Carolina aggregation, and this should certainly not be allowed to occur again this year. The support of the entire student body is needed both at this and all other games if the team is to come through the season successfully. And support does not mean mere presence in the stands—it means whole-hearted cooperation with the chearleader. Let's have everyone out this afternoon!

An air of silence seems to be pervading the Duke football camp this year. No wonder! After all that high powered publicity it must have hurt to have to watch one's team taking so many lickings by 40 points and more! As an athletic advertising scheme, it isn't so hot to get people interested in a team and then have its pants licked off!

Will 13 Be Jinx to U. N. C. Gridders?

Unless a letterman turns up or drops out mighty quickly now, the University of North Carolina football squad will start its season against Wake Forest here tomorrow with 13 home-state lettermen and six out-of-staters. Brown, Parsley, Tabb, Thompson, Fysal, Blackwood, Crew, McIver, Lipscomb, Branch, Wyrick, Maus, and House are the vets from the home province. On the six lettermen in camp from other states, Nelson and Eickson are from Illinois, Captain Nash is from South Carolina, Rip Slusser is from Virginia, Red Gilbreath comes from Kansas, and Jim Magner is a Pennsylvanian.

Monogram Ends And Tackle To Start Today

Herb Nelson and Red Parsley, ends, and George Thompson, tackle, are three reserves upon whom Coach Collins will depend today to fill three of the positions left vacant by Holt, Koenig, Adkins, and Fenner last year.

Nelson will be remembered for his stellar work against Georgia Tech last year. Parsley and Thompson showed up well when sent in to relieve Holt and Adkins last season.

State Vs. Davidson Tonight

SOUTH CAROLINA VS. DUKE TODAY

Wolfpack To Meet Davidson Wildcats at Greensboro Tonight.

Football in North Carolina gets into full swing today with all of the big five teams in action and several of the little seven elevens as well. Over in the new Duke stadium this afternoon the Blue Devils are meeting the South Carolina Gamecocks. State and Davidson will battle under the flood lights in Greensboro tonight.

The Wildcat-Wolfpack tonight promises to draw an unusually large crowd since this will be the first big five game ever to be played at night. Both State and Davidson are in good shape for the game, and seem to be well matched also, if comparative scores mean anything, for Davidson defeated Elon 38-0 last Saturday, and High Point lost to the Wolves 37-0 on the same day.

Duke and South Carolina will clash today for the first time in many years, and a hotly contested game is expected between the neighbor institution and Billy Laval's Gamecocks.

The other game in the state today is Catawba vs. Atlantic Christian at Salisbury. Catawba officials were hoping to have this contest played tonight, but inability to get lighting equipment installed in time for the game made it necessary for them to change plans for the annual meeting of the two teams. Catawba was winner last year by the score 18-6.

Sandlapper Captain For Tar Heel Eleven

What the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina may be changed this year to something like this: "North Carolina thanks South Carolina for a mighty good football captain." Strud Nash, who leads the Tar Heel grid forces this year, is a native Charlestonian, and the first South Carolinian to lead a University of North Carolina eleven in many moons.

There seems to be very little unemployment among persons who make a business of relieving something.—San Diego Union.

FROSH SCHEDULE INCLUDES TIGERS

There is a big turnout of candidates for places on the University freshman football squad this year.

One reason is that for the second time in three years the Tar Babies are going to meet Princeton in the young Tigers' own lair. It will give the Tar Babies an opportunity to match brawn and wits with freshman gridders who are rated among the country's best, not to mention a fine trip to New Jersey.

Two years ago the Tar Heel frosh journeyed up to Princeton and gave the Baby Tigers a good licking, thanks to the line plunging of one Bill Suggs and the fine teamwork of his mates. The Tar Babies earned their victory and since then they have commanded a great deal of respect in Princeton town.

The Tar Babies are to play a five-game schedule this year, according to announcement tonight by Graduate Manager Charles T. Woolen. Maryland, Virginia, N. C. State and Duke are the others to be met.

The complete schedule follows:

October 18.—Maryland at Chapel Hill.

October 25.—Princeton at Princeton.

November 1.—N. C. State at Raleigh.

November 11.—Duke at Durham.

November 22.—Virginia at Chapel Hill.

Nash First Back to Lead Tar Heels in Nine Years

For the first time in nine years the Tar Heel grid forces of the University of North Carolina are to be led by a backfield star. Captain Strud Nash, who leads the 1930 Tar Heels from right half, is the first captain picked from the backfield since the captaincy of Runt Lowe in 1920.

DOPESTER PICKS U. N. C. TO PLACE HIGH FOR SEASON

Believes Tennessee's Chances Hurt By Loss of McEver.

By Laurence Pegram

Somehow, the warm weather which we are having at present, does not, as one would expect, dampen the spirits of football enthusiasts. On the other hand, it tends to make them more loyal and devoted to their Alma Mater. This is easily noted by the fact that whenever a scrimmage is held down at the stadium there is always a large number of fans present to get the "dope" on who's who on such and such a team, who's playing "heads-up" football, and who is not.

These keen-eyed, watchful fans, composed of students, professors, business men, and residents of Chapel Hill, with a "darkey" or so on the back ground, are far beyond the scope of any discerning critics considering efficiency in pointing out and correcting the obvious errors of the team while it is in action. "Boos" and utterances of sarcasm follow a bone-head play, while at the same time, some Knute Rockne protege is yelling at the top of his lungs, words of encouragement, criticism, advice, all of which float across the field to be lost in the bleachers on the far side of the gridiron.

Every student who goes down to the stadium to watch the

GENE M'EVER TO PLAY THIS YEAR

Rumor That Tennessee Star Was Out of Game for Season Is Unfounded.

(Late Special)

The famous "Hack and Mack" combination may work together this season. Following close on the heels of an announcement that Gene McEver, Tennessee's all-American halfback, would not be able to play this year on account of a second injury to his knee, hurt this summer, comes a statement from Knoxville that the scoring ace of the Vols has returned from Youngstown with the injured knee in good condition. Following the announcement that the star's knee will be as good as new within ten days Tennessee's grid prospects began soaring, and Coach Bob Neyland has visions of a conference championship at last.

It is to be remembered that Tennessee has not been defeated since 1926 when the Vols bowed to Vanderbilt 20-3, and now they possess the longest unbeaten record of any major team in the nation. Since 1926, however, Tennessee's path to the conference title has been blocked by a series of ties. In 1927 Vanderbilt played the Vols to a 7-7 deadlock, and in 1928 and again in 1929 the Kentucky Wildcats fought the Knoxville team to a standstill, first by a scoreless tie and then by the score of 7-7 on a snow-covered field. This season Tennessee will be fighting to keep her record clean and rid it of the pesky tie jinx. Her path is not a bed of roses, however, for the Vols must play strong teams as Alabama, North Carolina, Vanderbilt, and Kentucky, any one of which is liable to spoil any team's spotless record.

Parsley Rated Strongest Defensive End at U. N. C.

If one asked the Carolina coaches which of their ends was hardest to take out of a play, he'd probably get the answer "Aubrey Parsley." The tow-headed Wilmington senior has been making life hard for the blocking halfbacks, and if he continues picking up on his offensive play, he should make an outstanding flankman in this his final season.

times." These three periods he described as the "Europeanization of the world, the Britification of the world, and finally the Americanization of the world."

Showing how the movie had played a major role in bringing about American supremacy, Mr. Graham said, in part: "For better or for worse the American movie is conquering the world. You are charged with a great responsibility, and we believe that standards are rising with mechanical and human technique, as you not only multiply contacts but also have the opportunity to potentially enrich the content of our lives."

Other speakers representing the University were Business Manager Charles T. Woolen, who, invited the managers to be guests of the athletic association at tomorrow's game; and R. B. House, executive secretary, who praised the recreational and educational value of the movies. Greetings from the town were extended by Mayor Zeb Council and Dr. E. A. Abernethy.

The managers were the guests of E. Carrington Smith, the popular manager of the Carolina Theatre here. The discussions were led by H. F. Kincey, manager of the Publix-Saenger system, and M. S. Hill, his assistant. Twenty-five managers were present.

Mr. Kincey said the talkies had passed the experimental stage and that the producers were now securing the services of the most noted playwrights and authors. He thought that television would come eventually, but that it was a long way off.

"The greatest thing about the talkie," he said, "is that they are bringing to every town in the country that which heretofore we have only been able to see on Broadway, and at a cost within reach of the average person."

ceived in Mr. Grisette's office, the banquet promises to be one of the largest and most enthusiastic events of its kind ever held here. For many of the visitors it will provide their first opportunity of hearing President Graham since he became the head of the University. There will, of course, be much of the jolly renewing of friendships which always is a feature of any gathering of old Carolina students.

Interest in the success of the alumni loyalty fund is reported at a higher point now than at any time in the history of its existence. Mr. Grisette attributes much of this to the fact that the money received during 1930 will be used for student loans, a form of aid which apparently appeals to every one.

Visiting class agents and committeemen who did not receive their game and banquet ticket before they left home may obtain them by calling at Mr. Grisette's office, 209 South Building.

N. C. Engineering Department Gives Technology Course

Program of Study

The course of instruction for all departments extends over a four year period. The program of study has been designed with the thought in the minds of the faculty that the training of professional engineers should be something more than instruction pertaining merely to technical subject matter. The professional engineer of today will not only be called upon to design and to construct great engineering projects, but will be required to contribute in a large measure to the material welfare of the human race and will be selected more and more to fill places requiring much administrative ability.

The engineering courses, therefore, have been developed along broad and cultural lines and the necessity for cultural training as a part of a thorough technical education has been kept constantly in mind. The program of study has been arranged so that the students will receive instruction in English throughout the four-year period, and also provides for courses in history, economics, business administration and management.

How the Cooperative Plan Works

In order to provide means for developing the observation and initiative of the students and to give them an opportunity for contact with the industries, the young men alternate on quarterly periods (about twelve weeks) between the University and the industries during the junior year. This alternation commences immediately following the end of the sophomore year, and continues through the junior year to the commencement of the fall term of the senior year. During employment by the industries the students are paid a certain amount of compensation for their services.

Under this cooperative schedule the scholastic subjects of the engineering curriculum are as much or more than that contained in a regular four year resident course. It is felt by a group of educators and practicing engineers that this method of education provides for various advantages which cannot be obtained in a regular four year resident course.

Well-Equipped Laboratories

A marked characteristic of the school is its well-equipped laboratories. Laboratory instruction is recognized as an important element of an engineering education and with the excellent laboratory facilities the students are enabled to study the fundamental laws of engineering. Although the laboratories for each division are modern and comprehensive in every respect, particular attention should be called to the laboratory of the sanitary engineering division. This laboratory is of very recent construction and is probably unique in providing unusual facilities for undergraduate and graduate instruction in the field of sanitary engineering. During the past year this division has enrolled as graduate students a Rockefeller research fellow from South America, an instructor from Oregon State college, and a graduate from North Carolina State college for special study in sanitary engineering.

The establishment of the engineering school in 1922 as a separate entity has been fully justified by its healthy growth and development, the increase in enrollment (from 155 to 253 in the last five years), and the excellent quality of the young graduates who have been sent out into the engineering world.

scrimmage of the varsity team gets a thrill out of seeing a smoothly-run team "click" with perfection and accuracy, and he is by far one of the best examples of boosters, on or off the campus. When this boy writes home to the "folks" he tells them that we have a fine team, which, although known by most people who take any interest at all in the sport section of the state and out-of-state newspapers, is not known by some who disregard the sections of papers which deal solely with sports. Naturally, the boy's mother or dad will talk about his or her boy off at school, and in the course of conversation will tell Mr. So. and So that Carolina is going to have probably the best team in the state, and one of the best in the country. This may be called indirect boosting, which was unknowingly started by one of the student's letters to his parents.

Abstractly, we might say that we will have a fine chance to win the Southern conference football crown this year, if we can but subdue Georgia, Georgia Tech, and Tennessee on successive and strenuous weekends. One morsel of pre-season dope in our favor is conceded the opponents of Tennessee through an injury sustained by Gene McEver, brilliant scoring ace of last year's memorable battles. This awkward injury will keep "Mac" out of the running until next year, although he may be in form to play later in the season. We understand that the mentor of the team, Coach Bob Neyland, will not enter him in any game, so that his eligibility for next year can not be questioned. McEver has several worthy running-mates, of which Dodd Hackman, and Heydrick, a new-comer who will replace McEver. Heydrick is said to be a very able ball-carrier, and broken-field runner, not to mention his other accomplishments of passing, punting and blocking. Therefore, let us not underrate Mr. Heydrick's abilities when we meet him for the first time in Knoxville.

From further South in the conference, there lurks, in the camp of Coach Alexander of Georgia Tech, a rumor that a husky, named Frank Speer, of All-American fame, is back on the war-path, and will fight heroically for Tech's lost honors of last year. Thus, as some people would put it, Tech will invade our campus with a psychological one-man position supremacy. But the "Blues" are not at all quelled until they have something more than dope to depend on, and by-the-by the bigger and more renowned they are, the harder and more disastrous their fall.

Harkening unto the University of Georgia for a moment, we hear about an imposing array of junior players, which were, of course left over from that surprising sophomore team of last year, the team which surprised us and themselves, too, for that matter. From goings on around the campus. I should emphatically say that the Blues are out for revenge when they meet the Bulldogs in Athens this year, and they will need a plenty good combination of teams to stop us this year. We want more and sweeter revenge, and we are out to get just that. AND HOW!

Of our games in the state, we have little worry, obviously, except that we encounter State, Davidson, and Duke after having to do battle with three of the most dangerous foes in the Southern conference, and if we happen to get through these three games unscathed, the team will be sorely used up; thereby, giving our opponents in the state a somewhat decided advantage over us.

Of course, the big blue team will strain every ligament, nerve, and muscle endeavoring to win her contests, while at the same time trying to cut injuries down to a minimum.

By having a lucky season with, we hope, very few casualties, and taking advantage of the breaks, we will be prepared on the 6th day of December to administer a whipping to the Duke team that it will never forget.

Therefore, let every Carolina man boost and pull for his team to the utmost by going to the pep meetings, doing his share in cheering, talking our team up to a pinnacle of fame, and simply by being a darn good sport.

ALUMNI BUILDING

VOLUME XXXIX — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1930 — NUMBER 9

DAILY TAR HEEL TO HAVE LARGE STAFF THIS YEAR

Will Meet Tonight in Alumni Building for Tryouts; Awards For Exceptional Work.

Meeting for the second time this year, the staff of the Daily Tar Heel holds its usual weekly meeting in the basement of the Alumni building at 7 o'clock tonight. All old reporters and those who started this year are requested to attend the meeting. All men interested in journalism who have not yet tried out for the staff will be given opportunity to do so tonight.

Jack Dungan, managing editor of the paper, states that he is planning to have one of the largest reportorial staffs that has ever worked on a Tar Heel, and for this reason there will be room for a large number of reporters.

Competition for the past week has been exceedingly keen among the new men, and any man trying out for the staff will be required to work hard to keep his position. Work on the paper affords an excellent opportunity for all men interested in journalism to secure actual experience in work of this kind.

At each meeting of the staff on Sunday nights free passes to the Carolina theatre will be given to the men doing the best work for the preceding week. For men doing exceptional work during the entire year, a credit course in journalism will be given. A gold charm is also awarded to men who turn in good work over the period of a year.

A staff of old men has already been appointed but changes will probably be made from time to time according to the type of work handed in by these men.

MRS. VINING IS AUTHOR OF NEW ADVENTURE BOOK

Wife of University Man Writes Of Scotch Highlanders In America.

Mrs. Morgan Fisher Vining—whose pen name is Elizabeth Janet Gray—had no sooner got back from a trip with the University Extension Division's transcontinental study-tour than she was notified of her publishers, Doubleday, Doran and Company, that her latest novel of adventure was ready for release September 1.

The book, entitled Meggy MacIntosh, tells the story of a girl with a gentle manner and adventurous spirit who, rather than lead a drab life in Edinburgh as niece of a titled uncle, fled to North Carolina to find her heroine, the celebarted Flora MacDonald.

Meggy reached Wilmington in March 1775, only to find the colony in an uproar with talk of war and freedom, and Flora MacDonald more than a hundred miles away.

"The story of Flora MacDonald and the Highland clansmen in America is one of the most romantic and fascinating episodes of that period of American history," the press announcement states. Mrs. Vining tells how her heroine, Meggy, rode to the back country where she found the Highlanders, and how, at last, she saw clearly where her heart lay.

2720 IN STUDENT BODY

The number of students to register at the University this year exceeds all other records of registration. Records in the registrar's office show that more upper classmen have registered for the year of 1930 than ever before. The freshman class has shown a great increase from 1929 but the exact number of freshmen to register is not known. It is thought that the freshman class exceeds eight hundred. There are 2720 members of the student body which is a record for previous attendances.

BOOK ON COTTON OFF U. N. C. PRESS

"King Cotton Is Sick," by C. T. M. Murchison, Is Latest University Publication.

The latest book to come from the University of North Carolina Press, King Cotton Is Sick, by Claudius T. M. Murchison, professor of economics, deals with the serious depression in the textile industry since 1923. The book claims that the stock market crash of 1929, although intensifying the depression, did not cause it. It states that the sale of cotton products has not decreased. While a good many types of textile products have lost favor with the consumer, there are new products to take the place of those which are not selling.

Over-production has increased and the uneasiness of disappointed financial structures are intensified just as much by the employers with humanitarian interests who continue to run their plants and manufacture goods when the market is already glutted with such products, as by speculation in buying of raw cotton, running mills at night, and the labor of women and children—many of whom have the choice of working in the mills or depending upon charity, according to this volume.

King Cotton Is Sick further states that a large section of the public thinks the cotton mill owners and operators are all slave-drivers by their own free will and choice, and a considerable number of cotton mill owners have been convinced that the leaders are incapable of understanding or sympathizing with the real difficulties which face the owners and operators, and that liberalism in American life is a corrupting, brain, softening influence. Such general and obviously erroneous ideas as these, when held by influential groups, cannot fail to have an unfortunate effect on an already irritated situation, their total result is merely to add confusion to confusion. The book claims to give an unbiased representation of the situation.

It seems to imply that the industries with their present mode of operation cannot and are not paying reasonable returns to either capital or labor. It attempts to explain the couses of the condition, and proposes a method of correction which has been proven successful in practice.

Epworth Addresses

Owing to the pressure of University affairs, President Frank Graham will be unable to address the Epworth League of the Methodist church tonight, as was announced last week.

SCHOOL OF COMMERCE COMBINES BUSINESS TRAINING WITH THE ARTS

Dean Carroll's School Offers a Liberal Business Education for Those Who Aspire for Jobs Above the Ordinary Commercial Level

If your boy wants a course that embraces merely stenography and typewriting with a bit of bookkeeping thrown in, don't enter him in the school of commerce at the University of North Carolina, Send him instead to some commerical school where he will be able to master these subjects in short order and be on his way.

The school of commerce at the University has no attitude of snobbery toward these subjects. Indeed, Dean Dudley D. Carroll will tell you quite frankly that he wants all his graduates to have a mastery of shorthand and typewriting before he lets them go, but he regards training in these subjects as merely a sideline to the main purpose of the school of commerce, "which is to give its students an understanding of the forces and prinicples of business without sacrificing that essential element of breadth and culture that an educated man ought to have."

The school of commerce, in other words, is not interested in training men to hold down $100-a-month jobs. Nor does it emphasize the view that all of its graduates must be executives. But it does hold that the men who hope to make a real success in this day of severe competition must have a broad and comprehensive understanding of the underlying principles of business.

There's nothing new about the idea organized 11 years ago of having a school of commerce as one of the major divisions of the modern university. Leading institutions all over the country in recent years have set up such divisions. Among the outstanding schools in the east are those to be found at Harvard, Columbia, and Pennsylvania.

Here at the University of North Carolina the plans for such a school were first laid by the late President Edward Kidder Graham. Former President Harry W. Chase carried out the idea and with the approval of the Legislature and the trustees, the school of commerce was formally organized in 1919. Courses in economics and in certain business subjects had been offered for many years before that, however.

The regular course of study, which covers a period of four years, is designed to give a foundation of broad and general culture, and, at the same time, supply a definite and practical training to those who intend to engage in any of the great lines of Solicitors for memberships will be placed in the field after the latter date.

Resolutions on behalf of the alumni association, expressing thanks to John M. Morehead and Rufus L. Patterson, donors of the memorial bell tower, were passed. A resolution expressing regret for the death of Dr. C. O'H. Laughinghouse, formerlly vice-president of the association.

Dr. William deBerniere MacNider, Kenan research professor of pharmacology in the University of North Carolina and one of the world's leading authorities on diseases of the kidney has just been elected a member of the National Board of Medical Examiners, it was learned here recently.

The national board of medical examiners is composed of 12 eminent physicians selected from various sections of the nation to represent the different branches of medicine. Dr. MacNider was elected by the board for a period of six years, and he is to represent the pharmacologists of the country.

The chief function of the board is to make up examinations which, when successfully passed, entitle physicians to practice in 40 different states and in several territorial possessions.

The board meets once or twice a year in different parts of the country. The last meeting was held at Detroit. The board was created in 1915 and has been in operation ever since. Dr. Garrey of Vanderbilt University is the only other member from the south.

Among the other members of the board are Dr. Walter L. Bierring, president; Dr. Louis B. Wilson, director of the Mayo Foundation of Rochester, Minn.; Major-General M. W. ALUMNI ENDORSE LOYALTY DRIVE

Two Hundred Prepare To Campaign For $5,000,000 Endowment.

With Major L. P. McClendon as toastmaster, a dinner was given last night at the Carolina Inn to 200 Alumni for the purpose of endorsing the alumni loyalty fund.

Frank Graham, president of the University, outlined the needs of the institution, and impressed upon the audience the increasing demand for private financing. He pointed out that the University must absolutely have greater endowments, funds for increased faculty salaries $15,000,000 in five years in endowment for permanent improvements if the school is to hold its own.

Tyre C. Taylor, secretary of governor, spoke in the place of the governor, who was called at the last minute to Shelby on account of the illness of his father-in-law, Judge James L. Webb.

Dewey Dorset, chairman of the industrial commission, moved that the assembly endorse the work of the loyalty fund, and agree to solicit funds for a period of two weeks beginning Monday. The two-week period will end on University Day.

The meeting closed with an actual demonstration of how solicitations should be made, by F. F. Bradshaw and Felix Grisette.

Dyer In Charlotte

Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the University music department, is attending in Charlotte this week-end a meeting of the state Federation of Music Clubs, in which he is director of choral music. Dr. Dyer expects to return today.

Directory Addresses

The Y. M. C. A. urges all students who have moved since registration, or who had not secured rooms before registration to leave their correct addresses at the information desk at the Y immediately. Delay in this matter will delay publication of the student directory for two or three weeks, and make it impossible for friends to locate students on the Hill.

ORGAN RECITALS ARE PLANNED BY NELSON KENNEDY

Two Series Outlined for Rest of Year; Guest Artists to Play Every Other Sunday.

Immediately after the opening exercises and dedication of the University's new organ, there will begin two series of organ recitals, in which an interesting program has been planned. SOCIAL PLEDGES REPLACE ANTICS OF GREEN FROSH Campus Agog With Inane Actions of Sophs; 35 Pledged To Three Orders.

With the pdelging of thirty five men of the class of '33 to the three sophomore social organizations Friday, the campus will be afforded quite a bit of amusement for the coming month of more.

The Minotaur and their "coo-cooing," the Sheiks with their "thirteen, sir, the missing link" will take the place of the green freshmen who have been causing no little laughing by their queer looks and foolish questions for these first few days of school.

The freshmen who will be rushed by the fraternities will begin to think that they are really somebody after the frats have finished "glad-handing" them, whereas these thirty-five social order pledges, will be given the merry "ha-ha," as were the frosh for the first week or so.

The Sheik pledges, who will probably live on their knees for the next two weeks or more, have the largest number with thirteen. The "13" club comes next with twelve, and the Minotaurs or the "Bulls" with only ten.

Those pledged to the Order of the Sheiks are: Fred Laxton, Zeta Psi; Julian Baker, Zeta Psi; Erwin Walker and Robert Mebane, D. K. E.; Kemp Yar-

Female Styles and Male Legs

Women began to invade man's domain of business in alarming proportions shortly after the Great War. Up to that time there had been women in business but they were rare. When the invasion began men either smirked or groaned, depending on their previous contact with the female element.

Feminine attire was discarded for more masculine apparel about this time. In some instances the change was for the better in other it made the ludicrous ridiculous. The groans did not decrease with the advent of the new styles.

Then came bare legs. Men didn't mind the women parading bare-legged if the legs retained their beauty. The women were wise for those who did not possess an admirable pair kept them clad in silk.

Lately we have noticed a reappearance of feminine curves; and the disappearance of masculine attire is noted with satisfaction.

Up until the advent of the bare-leg fad no attempt of men to emulate women in the matter of dress had been recorded. But now one sees on all sides grotesque pairs of bare legs supporting heavily bearded boys. They are not beautiful, they aren't even nice to look at. Some and most of them are funny looking, Knickers extending half to the ankle disclose legs curving to meet the shoes or extending outward as from knock knees. One is instantly reminded of the menageries of a circus.

We do not disapprove of the new male fad. Never having admired the female unclad leg we hope that they will resent the attempts of men to steal their thunder. And perhaps they will return to the silk hose. Then one will enjoy strolling and we think the hosiery manufacturers will see the dawn of better days.

Psyching The Freshman

A psycho-analysis of the average Carolina freshman gives one some interesting observations. By a serious study of his instincts and initial tendencies one comes to understand more clearly his position in university life, the problems and obstacles that inevitably confont him, and his natural means of rising to meet situations. Upperclassmen should have a sane and comprehensive understanding of him in order that they may not hinder him in his attempt to adapt himself to their society. The majority do, but there are those whose raillery and indiscretions sometimes set the man off to a bad beginning. Diplomacy and prudence should be exercised in his behalf.

For our purpose we might place the freshmen in the category of the extravert or the introvert. The introverted type being the man who dreams, who meditates, and tends to withdraw from the outer world and others into a world of his own, and the extravert as the individual of action, sociable, and well adapted to the world and its ways.

In other words, we have the man who comes to the University, seemingly destined to be "green." Green in a sense of incongruity, of a lack of a harmonous relationship. He appears to lack the ability to adapt himself, and to all appearances is self-conscious of his actions.

On the other hand, we have the man who readily establishes himself, apparently without difficulty or effort. Such an example simplifies the explanation of the extraverted type. He is the man naturally endowed with initative and originality. His problems are of a less serious nature; therefore his case is of lesser importance.

At the outset the "green" freshman is faced with the problem of creating new friendships. He lacks initiative, and therefore finds it difficult and often embarrassing. He realizes that he must fall in with the normal routine of university life, but his lack of initiative and adaptability make this a trying experience. His natural shyness often causes him to fail adequately to express himself in classroom recitation.

Collectively, his is a situation to demand a sympathetic understanding from those of more fortunate endowments; those whose trials have been met and passed leaving behind an attitude of nonchalance. It is they who look upon the freshmen with a critical discrimination.

Analyse him as a type, not as an individual, and by so doing you will give him a fairer, more sporting opportunity to make himself an ideal university man. Too, by adopting this method you will make yourself a more sensible, more worthy observer of human nature.— W. T. L.

ALUMNUS PICKED FOR HIGH HONOR

George McDaniels Chosen for Standard Oil Executive School.

Coming as a distinct honor to himself and to the University, George McDaniel, of Albany, Ga., Carolina alumnus, has been selected by the Standard Oil Company of New York as one of forty men whom the company hopes to train for its future executives.

Mr. McDaniel, formerly of Henderson, received his A.B. degree from the University in 1927. For the past two years he has been attending the law school here, and holding a position with the University Consolidated Service Plants as manager of one of its departments during his course of study.

During his undergraduate days he played varsity football for two seasons, 1926 and 1927, was a member of the track team for one year, and participated in other campus activities.

Representatives of the company this year interviewed seniors in fifty-five leading colleges and universities in the country in order to select forty men of which McDaniels is one. In some of the larger institutions as many as 200 men were interviewed.

Hanes Collection Exhibits Early Methods Of Writing

Egyptian Cuneiform and Papyrus Incriptions Are on Display in New Library; Mediaeval Book-Binding and Copy Of Gutenburg's Bible Shown.

Material from the Hanes Foundation on the Development of the Book and from the recently acquired Pettigrew Collection is now on exhibition in the first floor corridor in the general library.

The material from the Hanes Collection in the middle exhibit case is chosen to illustrate the early method of producing written records. Here will be found a collection of twenty Babylonian and Sumarian clay tablets. The scribes of these early peoples who inhabited the Mesopotamian valley between what is now Arabia and Persia, wrote by means of a stylus on a handful of moist clay. The method of making paper had not yet been discovered at that time, nor was rock, wood, or other commonly used material for receiving writing available in this country along the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. Clay, however, there was in abundance. By pressing the corners of a reed into a soft lump of clay, a little wedge-shaped mark can be made. This triangular impression became the basis for a method of writing known as a cuneiform. Cuneiform means wedge-shaped, and the style of writing is so called because the reed impression takes the form of little wedges. The information on the tablets is mostly concerned with commercial transactions, receipts for the delivery of wool or sheep, etc.

Particularly interesting are two tablets which represent the method of preserving the writing from harm. The Sumerians used envelopes for this purpose, just as we do, except for the fact that their envelopes were made of clay as was their writing material. One tablet is concealed in a clay envelope bearing the impression of a cylinder seal. The other tablet has had the clay envelope partially chipped away. These tablets date from about 2300 years before the beginning of the Christian era down to about 600 B. C.

The Egyptians introduced a considerable improvement into the methods of writing when they discovered ink and the means of making a kind of paper from the papyrus reed.

DR. MEYER EDITS HANDBOOK SERIES

A. S. Barnes of New York Issuing Series of Booklets on Extra-Curricular Activites.

Dr. Harold D. Meyer, of the Sociology department in the University of North Carolina, is editor of an interesting series of small hand books entitled "The Extra Curricular Library," which is being issued by the A. S. Barnes and Company, New York publishers.

According to a statement issued by the publishers ,the series contains "practical, specific and modern material based upon sound educational policy with suggestions for definite outline of practice and procedure." The volume is a survey of what is being done in the field with respect to activities now usually designed as extra curricular.

"The series is being issued in response to the feeling which has been prevalent for some time that general books now in print on extra curricular activities do not entirely satisfy the demand for material," Dr. Meyer stated.

Each book is bound in limp leather and contains about 150 pages, dealing with some specific topic in the field of extra-curricular activities. Eight volumes, some of which have already gone into the second edition, have been released from the press. Many others are now in preparation.

Those already published are: "Financing Extra Curricular Activities," by Harold D. Meyer and S. M. Eddleman; "Thrift Through Education," by Barobel Murphey of the Edison Junior High School of Los Angeles; "Commencement," by Gertrude Jones, of the Lincoln (Nebraska) High School; "Student Publications," by George C. Wells, secretary of the State Board of Education, and Wayde H. McCalister, of Oklahoma; "The Organization and Administration of Extra Curricular Activities," by C. V. Millard, superintendent of the Dearborn (Michigan) public schools; "Home Rooms: Organization Administration and Activities," by Evan E. Evans, principal of the Wingfield (Kansas) High School, and Malcolm Scott Hallman, principal of the Washington Senior High School of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; and "Assembly Programs," by M. Channing Wagner, assistant superintendent of Wilmington, Deleware.

School Of Commerce Combines Business Training With Arts

commercial and industrial activity. For those desiring more intense specilalization, the school offers courses leading to a higher degree.

Method Not Stressed

Technique and method are not given special emphasis, the students being given only enough to understand how the principles apply. The reason, Dean Carroll explained, is that methods change rapidly and no two firms use exactly the same method. There is the danger that if a student is taught too much about technique and method, he will make a failure when he goes out into the business world, for he may insist of his particular method which may not coincide with that of the firm he happens to be working for. Sometimes, it must be remembered, it's more difficult to unteach a man than it is to teach him.

During freshman and sophomore years, students in the school of commerce follow a path of study which closely parallels the liberal arts course. There is some specilalization in the junior year and a great deal more in the senior year.

Rapid Growth of School

In establishing such a school at Chapel Hill the University authorities had in mind the fact that the phenomenal industrial growth in the South in recent years has produced an imperative need for trained business men. The school has been provided with a large and able corps of instructors, with spacious quarters in Bingham hall, a new building, and thoroughly modern teaching facilities.

Students in the school of commerce major in the department of economics and commerce, and this department has grown from three men in 1919 to 17 regular faculty members, two teaching fellows, and five assistants in 1930. The enrollment of the school of commerce has grown from 140 in 1919 to 625 this year. The freshman class this fall numbers 220.

Graduates Making Good

The school does not attempt to maintain an employment bureau, but through their own initiative and with the assistance of Dean Carroll and other members of the faculty, its graduates have been entering fields in all lines of business for which the school gives training. They begin as apprentices, of course, but have been quick to make good where there have been openings leading to executive positions.

Dean Dudley DeWitt Carroll, the school's hard-boiled Dean—for it's a mighty tough school for those seeking crip courses—is a native of Stokes county. He was educated at Guilford and Haverford Colleges and at Columbia University. At Haverford and Guilford he and Dean A. W. Hobbs were classmates. Before coming to Chapel Hill he was Dean at Guilford College where he had been a member of the faculty for five years. It may be safely assumed that his wide policies have been largely responsible for the growth of the school of commerce here.

LOCAL PROFESSOR GIVEN PLACE ON MEDICAL BOARD of the Hygienic Laboratory of the United States Public Health Service; Dr. Otto Folin, professor of biological chemistry in the Harvard University Medical School; Dr. Louis A. Conner, professor of surgery in the Washington University School of Medicine at St. Louis.

The election of Dr. MacNider to this important post is regarded as a high honor for both the University of North Carolina and the man the board honored in honoring itself. Dr. MacNider has just rounded out 30 years as an instructor in the University medical school, including the two years that he was student assistant.

In recognition of his achievements the trustees appointed him Kenan research professor of pharmacology.

Carolina Wins From Wake Forest 13 to 7

Tar Heels' Line Unable To Open Many Holes In Heavy Wake Forest Line

Collins Uses Many Substitutes, But Offense Fails To Function Well.

By K. C. Ramsay.

Carolina's "346 point" offensive team failed to get going in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon, barely defeating the Wake Forest Demon Deacons by the close score of 13-7. A crowd of eight thousand witnessed the game which was played under a hot September sun.

Blocking and tackling by the Carolina line was rather bad at times and the Deacons ripped off several long gains for from 15 to 30 yards. The Tar Heel backs worked hard and showed their usual ability when they were able to get an opening, but holes were hard to tear in the heavy and powerful Baptist forward line.

Wake Forest's team was great ly different from the eleven which visited Kenan stadium last year when the Tar Heels were victorious to the count of 48-0. Their backs were able to find the holes in Carolina's line easily, making their only score by short consecutive gains through the line.

Wake Forest Kicks Off

Wake Forest kicked off to the Tar Heels and they failing to gain punted out to the Deacons. Practically the whole first quarter was played within Wake Forest territory without either team making decisive gains.

Coach Collins' men drove to within striking distance of the opponents goal several times Branch's punts twice went outside on the five yard line, but Benton succeeded in warding off a Tar Heel touchdown by getting off good punts within the shadow of his own goal.

Early in the second period the Tar Heels advanced deep in the opponents' territory by a series of passes and line plays. Magner passed to Parsley for a first down on the 13 yard line. McNeill hit the line for five yards. Slusser went off right tackle for eight yards and a touchdown. It was a well executed play with the line blocking well.

Magner went back to place kick with Branch holding the ball. It was good and the score was Carolina 7; Wake Forest 0.

Carolina kicked off to Wake Forest with Branch booting the ball. Benton received the ball and returned it to the Wake Forest 45 yard line. A pass Benton to Mills was good for a gain of 35 yards and a first down on Carolina's 20 yard line. After another pass Benton to Mills, Mills went off tackle for another first down.

Gilbreath was offside on the next play and Carolina was penalized 5 yards. It was first down on the four yard line.

DUKE LOSES TO SOUTH CAROLINA

Durham, Sept. 27.—Forcing the pigskin to within several yards of South Carolina's goal line on successive occasions in the early part of a hard fought battle here today, the Blue Devils of Duke University fell before the onslaught of the sturdy Gamecocks 22 to 0, lacking the necessary scoring punch at the crucial moment.

Tennis Enthusiasts Have Ideal Weather

Tennis at Carolina appears to be almost as popular as football. Although it is the latter's season, it is ideal weather for the former. Anytime any day the twenty some courts that are in condition at this time of the year are filled wih devotees of the sport.

The popularity of the sport here is only a result of the interest that is growing all over the country. Crowds of heretofore unheard of magnitude have been flocking to the matches in this country and abroad. It is hoped that this year greater numbers than ever before will be in attendance at the local matches.

We have coming up from last year's championship freshman team, such nationally known players as Bryant Grant and Wilmer Hines. Also coming up from the frosh, there are Lenoir Wright and Luke Abels, whose ability at racquet weilding make them a menace to all who aspire to varsity berths. From last year's varsity such stars as captain elect "Sonny" Graham, Hendlin, Yeomans and others.

Every afternoon finds these players locking horns, or rather racquets, with one another in matches that are perhaps more replete with action than are the real matches.

In the good old days, the man who saved money was a miser. Now, he's a wonder.—Louisville Time.

STARS OF YESTERDAY'S GAME

JOHNNY BRANCH

JIM MAGNER

HENRY HOUSE

NED LIPSCOMB

Ned Lipscomb, Jim Magner, Johnny Branch and Henry House showed up best for the Tar Heels in the opening game of the season yesterday. Branch's 65-yard run and House's line plunging were features of the contest. Lipscomb's defensive work was very good and Magner's passes were important in deciding the game.

FRESHMAN SQUAD PRACTICES DAILY

With one hundred and seventy-five freshmen working out daily, Coaches Enright and Farris face a very difficult task: the task of giving everybody a chance. Some of these men are experienced, and some have never played the game before-some come here with a reputation, while the rest are just one of the crowd. Nevertheless, the men that give the coaches what they want are the men that will get the position, whether they have ever played the game or not.

After three teams and a few substitutes had been taken to the stadium to do battle with the varsity yesterday, the rest of the squad worked out on the freshman field under Coach Farris. He had the men running about seventy-five yards in an effort to discover any new possibilities. Everyone is getting a fair trial.

The first game of the season for the freshmen is less than a month away, and by the time the Maryland game comes around a powerful team should be ready to take the field.

a special feature, will render several of the world's best sonatas for organ, with piano accompaniment.

It is an interesting fact that the University will follow in the footsteps of such universities as Michigan, Cornell, Minnesota, Chicago and others, where scheduled organ recitals have long been an accepted institution in campus activity. Dr. Dyer expresses the hope and expectation that these recitals will be supported by a distinct interest on the part of both students and visitors, and looks forward to a large attendance at the performances. Everyone is urged to attend both series of recitals, and there will be no admission charge.

V. P. I. Record Of No Losses In Home Stadium Menaced By Invasion Of N. C. Tar Heels

Gobblers Have Such Veterans As Green, Swart, Spear And Captain Byrd.

Special to Daily Tar Heel

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 27.—University of North Carolina's Tar Heels acclaimed worthy successors to the Blue and White avalanche which amassed 346 points on Dixie gridirons last year, imperils V. P. I.'s long record of victories on home fields.

Only twice since 1915 has a V. P. I. football team bowed to an opponent at Blacksburg. University of Maryland triumphed by a score of 7 to 0 on old Miles Field in 1920 and University of Virginia won by one touchdown in 1924 on the same battleground Miles Satdium, the new arena where Tar Heels and Gobblers are to clash October 4th, likewise has tales of victory to tell. In its four years as the stronghold of V. P. I. elevens, the turf of the stadium has never been trod by a triumphant invader. Major elevens, such as Washington and Lee and Virginia—the only Southern Conference teams to play the Techmen on their home field—have been held scoreless in the homecoming games of the past four years.

But the early-season invasion will be something else to conjure with. V. P. I.'s untarnished record in Miles Stadium is threatened as it never before has been threatened in stadium annals. Into the teeth of the Carolina team in defense of this record Neal and Clark, new Polytech coaches, will hurl an eleven which carries seven of the men who waged a losing battle at Chapel Hill a year ago. Buckner Green and Jim Swart, veteran tackles, were in the lineup that day in the Tar Heel lair, as were Red Jones at guard, Gene Brown at center, Phil Spear at halfback and Captain Bird Hooper at quarterback. Others who did not race downfield at the kickoff, yet took part, are Harry Stark, now at guard, Mark Ritter, big tackle, and Mit Owens, fullback.

These veterans, with a squad of new varsity men, will be the center of V. P. I. hopes next week. Intensive preparations will get under way Monday to battle the strongest invader ever to play on the home battleground of Tech teams. With four and a half new sections of concrete stands all ready for use, graduate manager C. P. Miles is making ready to accomodate a crowd which may eclipse the dedication throng that watched V. P. I. and Virginia battle in the first big game four years ago.

ATHLETICS-CARDS MEET IN WORLD'S SERIES TUESDAY

St. Louis Eager to Avenge Past Treatment of National League Entries.

The champion Philadelphia Athletics go into baseball's classic, the World Series, Tuesday to do battle with a new challenger, the St. Louis Cardinals. By one of the most astounding drives in major league history Gabby Street brought his high-flying Cards out in front to win the most hectic of the hectic National League pennant scrambles of recent years. Needing only victory out the three games remaining to be played, to clinch the pennant, Manager Street ordered full steam ahead, and the Cards responded by driving out a 10 to 5 victory over the troublesome Pittsburgh Pirates in St. Louis Friday.

Out of their 55 games since August 1, the Cardinals have won 43 and risen from a poor fourth place club to the championship position. St. Louis, in winning the pennant, has met the opposing teams at their own games; if the opposition slugged, the Cards slugged too, and if the opposing pitchers decided to curtail the supply of hits, the Card pitching staff agreed by allowing less hits. This St. Louis team was not to be denied, for they possessed an indomitable fighting spirit that kept them in the fight when all hope of victory seemed lost.

With the Chicago Cubs, Brooklyn Robins, and New York Giants ahead of them on August 1, and apparently fighting among themselves for the flag, the Cards overcame all opposition and came out on top. This team enters the World Series to encounter another team with a famous fighting spirit. It would be hard to forget those stirring late inning rallies of the Philadelphia Athletics that carried them on to victory in last year's series against the Cubs. Thus, this year two teams enter the World Series with wonderful fighting spirits and with strong incentatives to win. St. Louis is seeking to avenge the treatment of National League entries by American League champions in the past three World Series, and the Athletics, under the wizard Connie Mack, are seeking to carry on for the American League.

Out of the thirteen World Series games of the past three years, the National league clubs combined have won only one game. Will Philadelphia hold the Cards back and continue this record, or will the worm turn, as he sometimes does, and the baseball world crown St. Louis champions? Time will tell.

Tar Heel Line Unable To Open Many Holes In Wake Forest Line

Mills made the necessary yardage for Wake Forest only touchdown, and Quillen dropkicked for the extra point.

The Deacons kicked off to Carolina after making the score even. The half was nearly over and Carolina was trying hard for another touchdown, but gaining through Wake Forest's line could not be accomplished. The half ended with the ball in Tar Heel's possession deep in the opponents territory.

Second Half

Carolina received the kickoff from Wake Forest, and it was first down on the Tar Heels' 25 yard line. Three successive first downs were made with House, Magner and Nash alternating at carrying the ball. Magner passed to Nash twice for substantial gains. It was first down on Wake Forest's 10 yard line. Carolina's ball. House hit the line three times for short gains, and Magner made one yard for the final touchdown. Magner tried for the extra point by the place kick method but it was wide.

Branch Runs 65 Yards

Johnnie Branch, late in the third quarter, ran back a Wake Forest punt, from his own 20 yard line, for 65 yards, placing the ball on the Deacon's 18 yard line. Branch, in his usually good form at broken field running, shook off tackler after tackler and was finally pushed outside after slipping past many would-be tacklers. House fumbled on the next play while hitting the line and the Deacons recovered, kicking out to safety.

The final period was scoreless for both teams, neither eleven being able to gain sufficiently for another touchdown. Coach Collins sent in many of his fleet backs, but none of them were able to get away for decisive gains. Numerous passes were thrown by both teams, but the defensive backs succeeded in grounding them. The game ended with the ball in Carolina's possession on Wake Forest's 40 yard line.

Wake Forest must have been doing some hard work since Labor Day even though they haven't let it be known through the press. Their team showed marked ability for the first game of the season. Benton, Captain Parker, Mills, Bradley, did the best work for the Deacons. Bradley showed exceptionally ability at hitting the "Big Blue" line, and Mills made many long gains from off tackle and from receiving Benton's passes.

Ned Lipscomb showed up well in the Tar Heel line, both at covering passes and at stopping line thrusts. Magner, House, McNeill, Branch, and Slusser made nice gains for Carolina. Captain Nash failed to get away except for several short gains, being covered closely by Wake Forest.

ORGAN CEREMONY TO TAKE PLACE IN COMING WEEK

Three Auditions May Be Given On Account of Large Audience.

Beginning Monday of next week, tickets for the dedication exercises of the new organ will be available on application, Dr. Dyer announces. At several convenient places down town and on the campus, the locations of which will be published later, blank forms are to be distributed and persons desiring to attend these exercises must fill out blanks stating the number of tickets wanted, as well as other information, so that a classification may be made of the probable audience.

It is absolutely necessary that everyone expecting to attend the ceremony fill out the application blanks, since the limited capacity of the music auditorium will require a repetition of the dedication at least once, and possibly twice, depending entirely upon the number of guests expected, and the music department hopes to be able to accomodate the large crowd expected without overcrowding at any one performance. As the applications are filled out, the tickets will be numbered, the number of which will determine the night on which it is valid. Each ticket is good for only one performance. Tickets are free to everyone upon request.

It is planned to divide the nights into a University night and an outsider's night, with the possibility of an even division of the two groups, if the number of tickets warrants it. At the outsider's night, the members of the American Association of Guild Organists will be special

HEAVY DOCKET IN RECORDER COURT

Fines, Donations, and Free Services to the County Exacted on Variety of Counts.

Recorder's Court held in the old Pickwick Theatre building yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, netted the city's administration $40 in fines, $100 in the form of a donation, and $35 to help defray expenses of the court; while the county will receive gratis the services of one man for thirty days in the furtherance of its road-building program.

Wilson Caldwell, colored, was charged with manufacturing spirits. He returned yesterday morning from an impromptu sojourn of four months in New York to answer the charges. Officers declared that the small copper still he used was the neatest outfit they had ever seen in these parts. Wilson stoutly denied that he manufactured the beverages for public sale, declaring that his products were for a select group of private individuals. He asked that he be allowed to donate $100 to charity, and the court acquiesced but also inserted a clause charging him with the costs.

Mark Farrow, colored, charged with public drunkenness, was sentenced to one month on the county roads. Mark was fined last Saturday for a similiar offense, only to fall into the clutches of the law that very night for again being in an intoxicated

STORY OF GAME WILL APPEAR IN ALUMNI REVIEW

Featuring the issue of the Alumni Review which comes off the press October 1 will be four pages devoted to the Carolina-Wake Forest football game of Saturday, September 27, it was announced last night by Glenn Holder, assistant to J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary of the University. The pages devoted to the game will have scenes taken from the game and other photographs of interest concerning the event.

Another feature of interest that will appear in this issue will be statistics on the freshman class, showing among other facts that for the first time there are more Baptists than Methodists in the class and that here is approximately 30 per cent increase in the number of out-of-state men in spite of the increase in tuition for out-of-state men.

The Alumni Review appears every month except August and September. This will be the first issue of the new year.

Deadline Notice

Open Forum Letters Must Be Signed.

The deadline of the Daily Tar Heel for all news stories is 4 o'clock on the afternoon of publication. Managing Editor Dungan expects to enforce this ruling. In accordance with a custom of long standing, no Open Forum letter will be published unless accompanied by the name and address of the writer. This does not mean, however, that the name will be published if the writer objects and the letter contains no attack upon individuals.

Costa Rican Student Impressed With American University Life

"Friend, artist, gentleman." Such is the worthy tribute accorded to Senor Numberto Umana C. by a former professor.

After taking special courses at the Universities of "Laeco Salinos" and "Leco al Costa Rica," Umana traveled thousands of miles to enter the University of North Carolina as a pre-medical student. As a reporter to his native country he wishes to send propoganda in favor of this school, urging his countrymen to come here to study. "American boys are so friendly," he says, " and the American girl, she is beautiful, but I cannot understand her. Her character baffles me." He is touched by the kindness accorded him since arriving here, and is amazed at the high calibre of the profession. "They too, are so friendly, and the instructors of Spanish speak the language better than I."

As a keen observer of the educational system he makes an interesting comparison of the university of his country and the American university. "In my country," he explains, "the student body is organized into a association for the protection of student rights. The associations in various universities throughout Europe keep in constant communication. If a professor proves unworthy, we make a big protest resulting in his being asked to resign. We assert our rights, and the association is very powerful. This, in a measure, replaces your system of student government.

On holidays the students attend bull fights instead of football games. Our major sports are soccer and jai alai, a game of Spanish origin. Boxing is prohibited by the government as inhuman, while bull fights are sponsored. I have never seen a football game."

Umana, an orphan, entered the University with a lump sum of fifty dollars. Is that not spunk? Is his example of zeal for knowledge not a worthy example for any American boy? He is an aspirant for the glee club, and plans to compile a composition on the comparison of the American university with the universtiy of his country. This, he intends to send to students in Costa Rica as a method of creating within them a longing to follow in his tracks, and to pursue their studies in this country. He promises to present this composition to us for publication, and we wait with anxious anticipation the completion of the work.

"I find the English language very hard to speak, but much easier to understand. I have been in this country one year, and could not speak a word of English when I arrived." His English is good but his vocabulary is limited, and he spends three hours on the preparation of a lesson to our one.

He sends each edition of the Tar Heel to friends in the schools he attended, so that they might learn something of the system used here, and keeps in constant communication with them in this respect.

"There are no co-educational schools in Costa Rica," he continues, "though there is a move-

HOUSE SPEAKS AT FROSH Y COUNCIL

Executive Secretary Talks on Friendship; Committees Appointed in Other Cabinets.

Secretary of the University Bob House gave a short but impressive talk on friendship at the second meeting of the freshman friendship council last night. Mr. House gave a number of the world - famous examples of friendships in his talk and stated that one of the most important items of college life was the friendships created on the campus.

The meeting was opened by President Graham McLeod, who appointed a program of 15 men. Pat Patterson, of the senior cabinet, and Edwin Lanier, self-help secretary, were appointed advisors. Mr. Lanier gave a short talk on the purpose of the council.

The sophomore and junior-senior cabinets met in short sessions for the appointment of committees. President Ed Hamer announced that for the remainder of the rushing season the cabinets will meet at 7 o'clock.

FRESHMEN HEAR SOCIETY LEADERS

Messrs. Albright and Medford Urge New Men To Join; Bradshaw Speaks.

"Come hither all you debaters and public speakers." Thus spoke Messrs. Mayne Albright and W. C. Medford, representing the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies respectively in freshman chapel yesterday. Tuesday night both societies will meet and anyone wishing to join should appear at their places of meeting at seven fifteen.

Albright of the Di began the program by telling something of the past history of literary societies at Carolina. At one time, it seems, everyone enrolled in the University had to belong. During this time the two societies between themselves practically ran the school's student activities. As time went on, however, and the number in attendance here increased, they gradually lost control, and have now returned to their original function, of that of purely literary organization.

The second speaker, Mr. Medford, told something of the value of these societies in the lives of their members. "Besides the rather obvious ones, such as training in saying what you have to say clearly and defenitely, it affords an opportunity for making more friends," he said.

After they had finished, Dean Bradshaw made a short talk, telling about some of the prominent Americans who owe a large part of their success to early training in public speaking, and recommending these societies to anyone at all interested.

Year Book Business Meeting

SEASON TICKETS FOR PLAYMAKERS SELLING RAPIDLY

Nine hundred Playmaker season tickets went on sale yesterday for the seven productions that the dramatic association will put on this year. The book of tickets, which contains one to each of the seven different performances, are one dollar and fifty cents.

Although the tickets have been on sale but half a day, already over half of the number have been sold. It will be necessary for all desiring season tickets to purchase them early. Students are covering the campus and town with the season books, and everybody will be given an opportunity as long as nine hundred will last.

The seven performances to be put on this year by the Playmakers will consist of two student productions and five major ones. The type of plays that will be given, in order, are: a new Carolina play, a comedy, an original full length play, a student play, another new Carolina play, a student play, and the seventh and last will be the Forest Theatre production.

PLANS MADE FOR RHODES CONTEST

Many important changes have taken place in the Rhodes Scholarships. Commencing in 1930, the forty-eight states will be divided into eight districts, comprised of six states each. During every year each state will compete. State committees will choose two representatives to be sent to the district meetings. There the district committees will be allowed to select the four best candidates to be sent to Oxford. Thus, in accordance with the merits of its nominees, a state may either gain two scholarships or none.

Another new and important innovation begins in 1930. A Rhodes scholar will be allowed to choose between spending his third year at Oxford or at any other university in the world which he may select as best fitted for the pursuit of his work. A second provision to this is granted. They will be permitted to take their third year immediately after their first two or after a lapse of some years spent in working in the United States.

This year state elections will come on December 6 and the district committees will convene in a period of ten days to two weeks later. All students sending applications should do this by October eighteenth; applicants from colleges and universities should be chosen by October 11. Students selected in December, 1930, will enter Oxford in 1931.

Chemical Engineers' Reception

Chemical engineers and B. S. chemists are invited to a reception given by the A. I. C. E. at 7:30 tonight in Room 206 Venable Hall.

FIRST AUTHORS' READING TO BE HELD TONIGHT

New Carolina Plays Will Be Read At Playmaker Theatre At 7:30 P. M.

The first authors' reading of new Carolina plays will be conducted at 7:30 sharp this evening in the Playmaker Theatre. This is the first reading of the year and an important one since the three plays chosen by the faculty play committee from those which will be read are to make up the first bill for the season. Following their three-day presentation here they will be carried North on the Playmakers' annual tour through Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and possibly New York.

Anyone is eligible for parts in these plays providing they can show the required talent. As a rule, previous experience is not taken into consideration in the selection of casts or in the selection of members for positions in any of the other varied phases of the work. It is essential that those wishing to try out for parts in the plays chosen attend the reading tonight and familiarize themselves with the plays.

Five of the following available plays will be selected by Professor Koch for the reading: Arthur P. Hudson's "Get Up and Bar the Door," a comedy of the backwoods of Mississippi; a new play by Loretta C. Bailey, as yet untitled, which treats of the recent mill agitation around Gastonia; Louise S. Perry's mountain tragedy, "One Fine Day"; a comedy of eastern Carolina by Horace Ward entitled, "Settin' Up"; Irene Fussler's comedy of

The success of our school of commerce in combining the arts with its regular business training is extremely gratifying in this period of high specialization. The avowed purpose of the school, "to give its students an understanding of the forces and principles of business without sacrificing that essential element of breadth and culture that an educated man ought to have,' recognizes the many factors which make necessary the more liberal training.

Most important is the fact that the school prepares men for executive, not clerical positions. While the curriculum does embrace clerical studies, these are subordinated to business principles. Would-be stenographers and clerks can receive their training at special institutions with a much smaller expenditure of time and money.

Any professional training which may be sacrificed in favor of general culture is not lost. First, a graduate has a better opportunity to acquire business training, than he has to acquire the finish which is so mandatory in "meeting people." Then, too, there is post-graduate work for those who desire to specialize further. Some of the more progressive corporations have instituted schools for executives, such as that of the Standard Oil company of New York which George McDaniel will attend.

The Carnegie Foundation general culture test which was given at the University of Pittsburgh last year revealed the needs of the average student, particularly those of the professional schools. A common question on the Pitt campus after the results were given out was, "Well, did you make the barbarian level, or are you just a plain savage?"

Dean Dudley D. Carroll is to be congratulated on his broad-minded policies in this era of commercial growth when over-specialization is the tendency. —E. E. E.

Come On Cheerios!

After the game Saturday there was a good deal of complaining from both alumni and undergraduates in regard to the way the team had played against Wake Forest. These grumblers as usual are the ones who always stand back and watch other people work. The best team in the world occasionally strikes a bad spot and needs a bit of cheering. Carolina hit quite a few of those bad spots Saturday but did they get the cheering—no! In the face of this, I cannot see where any one has the right to criticize the team's failure to roll up a large score.

Any self-respecting high school would have been ashamed of the cheering which came from the Carolina stands. Wake Forest's student body, which numbers about a fifth or sixth of Carolina's enrollment, cheered ten times louder, oftener, and better. This is no problem involving mathematics; its solution is really quite simple. The most important thing in cheering is a concentration of sound, and with students scattered over some 15,000 seats it is little wonder that their efforts showed so pitiful a result. Cheering is no wild bedlam of discordant yells, it is an organized shouting of fairly intelligible words. To shout intelligible words one must first know them. Did those few that knew the cheers yell? No, it was a very warm day and why run the risk of overheating oneself. And then these enthusiastic fans expect men carrying eleven pounds of uncomforable equipment to romp and gambol on the green for touchdown after touchdown. Finally, the cheerleaders. I was given to understand that leading cheers is a science, an art, a beautiful thing to watch, but judging from the untimed, halting gyrations of the young gentlemen who were supposed to lead Carolina's attack on the Wake Forest ear drums, I am afraid that someone has been misinforming me.

There is no reason why Carolina should not have a "Cheerio" section that would equal any in the country. All that is needed to make the "Cheerio" section a reality is enough students to fill a section of the stands; enough students that would be willing to rehearse a few times and who would sit in a compact group at the games. Better cheer leaders would be available if there were some means by which men would gain recognition for their hard work. A charm or monogram would serve the purpose.—O. S. S.

Where Is The Man?

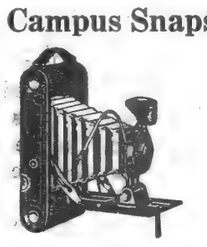
The Carolina Cheerios that were so well-known over the south a few years ago . . . what has become of them?

The answer comes: Kay Kyser organized the Cheerios here and when he left they were disbanded for lack of leadership.

Spectators and students at the game last Saturday were struck by the appalling lack of unity in the cheering section on Carolina's side during the game. It was not the fault of the cheerleaders for they worked hard; nor was it the fault of the students, for they would have gladly followed the cheers had there been a unified group who knew the cheers well enough to lead them.

Then the question comes, has Carolina not one man out of her large enrollment who can organize a cheering section equal to the one of several years ago? The answer is No, until Carolina men with their loyalty and spirit volunteer to reorganize and become bigger and better Cheerios for N. C. U.—L. Mc. W.

What Price Beauty?



At present we have 130,000,000 people in the United States and upwards of 130,000,000 bushels of wheat too many. Bruce Barton, noted advertising expert and philosopher, recently suggested to the federal farm board that the problem of the American wheat farmer could be solved if the government would persuade people through the right kind of propaganda to eat white bread in large quantities.

The great barrier in the path of such a program is the firmly entrenched position which the slim silhouette holds in prominent social circles. Perhaps Barton's suggestion will be acted upon by the farm board. But be this as it may, we will rally to the cause if there remains a spark of patriotism in us. True, it will be hard to watch the passing of the perfect profile. Looking at the matter from another angle, however, the passing of this vain institution of fashion would signalize the coming of better times to the wheat farmer directly, and to the whole people eventually.

Well may we inquire whether plumpness could not become as fashionable as slimness is at present. There was an era when such was the case.

There is no term in all the English language which has so many dreaded connotations as that little word "fat." We feel that this situation is derivitative entirely of fad and fancy. But regardless of what one thinks about the institution of fatness we ask: Is any sacrifice too great when it affects the destiny of a nation, and the destiny of every citizen thereof?—J. C. W.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

Whither, Oh Whither?

Whither indeed have our Cheerios gone? The startling lack of cheering at the Wake Forest game Saturday made us look back and long for the days when organized cheering was the style at Carolina. 'Pears like our organization needs are not confined to politics.

Merely a Recess

Fraternity war-horses will give their tired, rushed freshmen a little recess tonight while the venerable Di and Phi meet for the purpose of receiving new members. Strange as it may seem, the majority of the freshmen initiated pay their fees and seldom attend another meeting. This seems like a waste of money until one stops to consider how dignified and important the words "Dialectic Senate" or "Philanthropic Assembly" look under one's picture in the Yackety-Yack. Well may we inquire —What price statistics?

Chapel Hill—The Great!

No longer can slanderous sojourners call Chapel Hill a small country village. That period of the town has past; the period of the Great City is about to be ushered in. Soon massive structures will pierce the horizon. What is the proof of this epoch-making transformation, you may ask? Indeed, a start has already been made in that direction. The esteemed town aldermen have seen fit to pave the sidewalks on the hither side of main street. 'Tis even rumored that a project for extending the city limits is under way. We look forward to the day when Chapel Hill will be a great city.

We Observed

Bill Koenig and Pap Harden, varsity football players of last year, were in Chapel Hill Saturday for the occasion of the Wake Forest game. (Columnist's note: We do not know that these men were together.)

Charlie Price and Crawford MacKethan were also in Chapel Hill. (Columnist's note: We know that these two were not together!)

Forensic Strategy

The University debate council is a keen group, it would seem after all. At the meeting the other night, the proposition of a local debate with Cambridge University came up. The councilmen finally decided to make it a split affair. At any rate, we must give them credit for fixing the situation so that the local debaters can't lose. Sounds like good business to us.

Criticism

Criticism has a place in the acquisition of improvement which cannot be filled by any other type of comment. Yet foolish and ill-chosen criticism is one of the silliest things that the human imagination can fashion.

The above remark is made in lieu of certain unfavorable statements which have been meted out to this and a sister publication. The Daily Tar Heel and The Carolina Magazine are here as a laboratory for the undergraduate with journalistic inclinations. We can only smile at the superficiality of criticism which goes so far as to set up professional standards for amateur work.

Today's Question

Can the use of profanity any longer be classified as an art?

Although initials are usually assigned definite meanings, there is no reason why there should not be a flexible system of meanings. When Carolina journeys to Blacksburg to tackle Virginia Polytechnic Institute next Saturday, the initials "V. P. I." will mean one of two things. We ask you which:

state. The court believed that an abstinance of a month would help cure the addiction.

Lawrence Flynn, University student, was fined $5 and costs for speeding at a very unorthodox rate along the main thoroughfare of the village.

McKinley Stewart, colored, charged with public drunkenness fined $10 and costs. Witnesses alleged that he struck a colored woman while in a drunken state.

Monroe Galaspie, colored, was fined $15 and costs for illegal possession of whiskey.

Joe Andrews, white, was charged with making questionable remarks and otherwise being ungentlemanly in his conduct towards two Carolina co-eds while in a drunken condition. He was riding along Hillsboro street between the co-ed shack and the quadrangle when he steered his car directly at the girls, who were returning from the tennis courts. He had not proceeded far in his conversation before the girls realized that his intentions were not above reproach. Officer Blake was immediately summoned and after questioning the girls for a description, he soon apprehended Andrews, who had fallen asleep in the car. When the Judge announced a fine of $10 and costs, Andrews gave a disgruntled "ugh." His Honor retaliated with an increase of $5 in the fine. However, after court, Andrews apologized and impressed the judge with his fight to keep up his family. The fine was brought back to $10.

James Warner, white, 70, possessing whiskey for sale, case continued until October 11th.

Joe Brown, colored, reckless driving and injury to property, case continued to October 11. Brown is in the hospital as a result of his adventures; however, hospital attaches expect him to be able to come up for trial on October 11.

William Garrett, white, 60, public drunkenness, case continued until October 4th.

Gobblers Depending On Sophomore Linemen To Check Tar Heel Attack

V. P. I. Team Determined To Continue Winning Streak On Home Field.

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 29.—Sophomores, new to varsity togs, showed the way to an unblemished record in Miles stadium, where Virginia Polytechnic Institute will battle the Tar Heel eleven of Carolina, Ocober 4, and sophomores again will be a center of Polytech hopes when Carolina comes to town.

Just as V. P. I. counted on Frank Peake and his hard-riding knights of the Pony Express backfield to turn back Virginia at the great dedication battle here in 1926, so will V. P. I. count on sterling linemen to clear the way in Tech's big game this week on the home battleground. Three, perhaps four, sophomore forwards, who cleared the decks to the tune of a state title in yearling colors, will start in the newest Southwest headliner of the Old Dominion gridirons.

Johnny McIntire, scrappy 170 pounder, will conjure with Coach Chuck Collins' title aspirants at one end while his prep school buddy, Al Seamon, guards the works at the other flank. Like all youngsters just starting big time competition, both have things to learn about varsity ball but both are stout-hearted recruits of rich promise and will be at their best against the veteran wingmen of the Tar Heels. McIntire is fast under punts and his wing-mate is as versatile as any forward V. P. I. has claimed in years. Seamon tips the scales at 185 pounds, is rugged and clean, and now is completing his round of all line positions, having served in turn at center, guard, tackle and end since he donned his first helmet in high school seven years ago.

Gene Hite, 180-pound six footer, has taken a guard berth right away from a veteran monogram wearer and will receive his first real test at the hands of the Tar Heels. Bill Grinus, another new lineman, ousted a tackle veteran from his place in preseason practice, only to adorn the bench with a hand infection in the opening game with Roanoke last week but is expected to be ready for his turn against Carolina. Like Hite, he achieved brilliant records both on the athletic field and in the class room last year.

Rocky Mount Wins

The first game of the Eastern Carolina high school class A football conference was played between Rocky Mount and Durham. The result of the game was a 31 to 0 victory for Rocky Mount. On Saturday of this week Rocky Mount will meet Wilmington at Wilmington for the second game of the season. No other games have been scheduled yet.

The Western conference begins October the third when Asheville plays Gastonia.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

"I Wonder What's Become of Primo" adapted to the tune of that old favorite has been taken up lately by sports fans throughout the country, for our daily papers seem to have ommited the name of the Vast Venetian from their columns for the last few weeks. Since we spent the summer handing that portly gentleman what is commonly known as the razz, the gradual fade-out of the Italian sores us to no little extent. Despite the calibre of Mr. Carnera's ability, he is always a source for attack and provides many a columnist with material on idle days.

According to the boxing commission, the Man Mountain, Ambling Alp, known for better or for worse as Primo Carnera, has been granted a stay of execution or stay of something or other in this country. Latest reports have it that a huge Chinaman is now on his way west to combat Primo, this fact appearing to us as a certain criterion of Senator Mussolini's warnings of the Oriental menace. Surely, nothing but world war could result if these two should match gloves, so immense would be the devastation wrought by flying fists the size of baby tanks.

Despite ill fabled rumors, we have evidence to prove conclusively, garnered by the Tar Heel sports department under cover operative GHQ 9H, that the Ponderous Pummeler has been retained in the domain of Uncle Sam for the sole purpose of detecting the man who wrote the "Stein Song."

Early in the summer his manager gave it out that Primo would keep in training this winter by playing football with some American college team but it was found that Primo could read and write so that let him out.

It seems that Il Duce is desirous of organizing a new army corps and that was the original reason for calling Primo back to Italy early in the year. The addition of the big boy to the Italian army would call for a disarmament treaty as gunboats the size he wears are prohibited by the London Naval pact. Jealous of all the publicity that Great Britain and Germany are getting over the R-100 and the Graf Zeppelin, it is rumored that Car-

FOOTBALL

(By K. C. Ramsay)

NOW THAT THE SCARE from the Demon Deacons has passed on with the Tar Heel score unscarred, Coach Collins is more than ever driving and drilling the Tar Heels to get a smoother and better working combination. Saturday's game proved that the head mentor has a right to be gloomy and pessimistic about coming up to the standard set by last year's eleven.

Coach Pat Miller is firmly convinced that "silence is golden," or that "actions speak louder than words," for those Demon Deacons, after working behind closed gates on Gore field, presented one of the smoothest working elevens that they have shown here in many years.

DAVIDSON'S WILDCATS showed that they are not to be sneezed at this year. Their triumph over State College was won by stubbornly driving and fighting a strong and heavy Wolfpack forward wall. Joe McCall will bear watching this season, and careful watching too. He picked his way through the State defense for many excellent gains. Coach Collins predicted that there would be trouble from the Wildcats this year; he seems to have spotted the opposition. That will be a good game at Davidson November 15, probably the deciding game in the championship race of North Carolina.

SOUTH CAROLINA made the most impressive showing of the conference teams last Saturday by decisively beating Duke. The Gamecocks must have improved considerably over last year's team.

TAR HEEL FOES ran up some very large scores against weak opposition. Tennessee didn't miss Gene McEver one bit in the opening game with Maryville, Ty Disner being a capable substitute for the all-southern star. Coach Neyland doesn't seem inclined to let the loss of the great back upset his chances of a conference title.

Geogia got revenge on Oglethorpe to the count of 34 to 6. It looks as though they will be as hard or harder to beat than they were last year, but Coach Collins and every man on the Tar Heel squad are out for revenge. Look out Georgia!

V. P. I. barely emerged victorious over Roanoke, 9-0. Whether it was the weakness of the Gobblers or the strength of the opposition, we do not know. But the Techs have a record of having never lost a game in their stadium, and they say that they do not intend to have it ruined by Carolina.

VANDERBILT more than ever impressed the South that they are making a strong bid for conference honors. Chattanooga, S. I. A. A. champions for two years, fell before the Commodores 39 to 0.

Wallace Wade started off his last year at Alabama with a sweeping victory over Howard, 43-0. He must intend to move to Duke with additions to his past glory.

Tulane started off to retain the conference title by running up the largest score of the weekend, 84-0. Southwestern Louisiana institute was the swamped team.

MANY TRACKMEN TO REPORT FOR PRACTICE TODAY

Pre-Season Prospects Look Good For Another Championship Team.

Chances of the Carolina cinder-men retaining the Southern conference track crown appear to be bright, judging from the material Coaches Bob Fetzer and Dale Ranson will have on hand when fall track practice opens this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

In addition to the return of 12 lettermen, a host of reserves from last year's squad and a collection of stars from the 1930 freshman team will strengthen Carolina's defense of the Dixie title this spring.

In the dashes, Farmer, Slusser and Gay, veterans, will have to show plenty of speed to retain their normal berths in 100 and 220 divisions, for Drane, Geiger, and Wornam, last year's freshman speed merchants, are due to offer a good amount of competition.

In addition to the dashes, Gay will also seek to retain his place in the 440 run. Weil, quarter-miler who featured in the Tar Heel victory over Penn State this past spring, will report for fall practice. More talent in the 440 will likely be found in the persons of Case, Medford, reserves from last year, Mitcham, Watkins, Brock and Evans sophomores.

The half-mile rank, weakened by the loss of four lettermen, will depend mainly on Garret, only monogram wearer returning in that department, Brock, Watkins, Jones, and Jenson, comers-up from the freshman squad.

Coaches Fetzer and Ranson will have to depend entirely upon green material for milers unless Phoenix, Greensboro boy, returns to school after Christmas, as he is expected to do.

Farris, Cordle, Hubbard and Pratt will be candidates for the two mile run along with Baucom, the one wearer of the UNC returning in the two mile rank.

Only Slusser is back for the hurdles. Goodwin, Davis, and Stafford will make strong bids for positions in the run and jump race.

For the high jump the Carolina coaches will seek material from the quintet of Owens, Hamlet, Stafford, Newland and Linde man, to team with Bagby, holder of the University high jump record.

Pole vaulters Ruble and Arnold are back, and this event will be further strengthened if Martindale, Harrell, and Sheppard, performers with the bamboo team, come through with the goods.

Brown, letterman, Parson, reserve on the 1930 team, Chandler, Donnell, and Henry, sophomores, compose the Tar Heel javelin throwing force.

Brown will be out for a shot put position, and also Underwood, reserve, aspires to a regular post in the shot-put division.

Veteran discuss throwers will be found in Dameron and Brown. Thompon, Gilbreath, Davis, Hodges, Redding and Henry will also be candidates for a varsity position in that event.

Broad jumpers Johnson, Linde man and Iser will report for practice Tuesday afternoon. Johnson is the only letterman of that trio.

Track Notice

Varsity track practice will begin this afternoon at 4 o'clock, according to Coach Dale Ranson. All candidates for positions on the squad are expected to start work from the first.

FRESHMAN BOXERS ROUND INTO FORM

Fifty Candidates Work Out Daily Under Coaches Rowe And Allen.

Under the tutelage of coaches Rowe and Allen, the freshman boxers are beginning to round into shape in spite of the intense heat in the Tin Can. With fifty candidates, most of whom are inexperienced, the coaches have their hands full, but are making steady progress.

Candidates for lightweight and bantam are in the majority, with a total of twenty-eight men fighting for these two positions. However, only ten have had previous experience, and coach Rowe expects a battle royal before either of these positions is definitely filled. At present, there are no aspirants for the heavy and light-heavyweight berths, but with the end of the freshman football season the coaches expect several promising men to put in their appearances.

All cadidates are mixing it up daily now and the usual quota of bloody noses will soon begin to make its appearance. The inexperienced men are going through sessions of jabbing and hooking while the more advanced candidates are going a few rounds in the ring each day. Coach Allen has been offering opposition to several of the welterweights, and they are already beginning to show improvement.

Although the regular boxing session is still a good way off, Coach Rowe is working to develop successors for the five varsity stars who will be lost by graduation at the end of this year. Every man is getting personal attention and competition is keen.

DEACON CONTEST TEACHES LESSON TO U. N. C. TEAM

More Than Half of Squad Repaired to Kenan Stadium Sunday for Workout.

With a good lesson learned from the Wake Forest game, the Carolina football squad is taking matters more seriously this week in training for its opening Southern conference game with V. P. I. at Blacksburg Saturday.

More than half the squad, without orders or directions, got together and repaired to Kenan stadium for a workout Sunday afternoon. The same spirit pervaded the snappy workout yesterday. Wake Forest taught the Tar Heels and their supporters that past reputations don't roll up 34 points a game, and the Tar Heels are working now because they need work and know it.

The Tar Heels only beat Wake Forest 13-7, when they were odds-on favorites to win 20 to 40 points. The Tar Heel line fell down noticeably, especially the tackles and ends. The supposedly star array of Carolina backs did gain 409 yards from scrimmage to Wake Forest's 142, but lagged in the "pinches" when gains meant scores.

It was just a case of over estimation of Carolina strength and under estimation of Wake Forest's power. But the myth is bursted now, and the Tar Heels know it's going to take hard work and more work, drive and more drive in the Saturday game with V. P. I. and the hard row of five conference games that follow.

V. P. I. beat Roanoke 9-0 Saturday, without allowing the enemy a first down, and showed great power. The Gobblers have seven veterans headed by Captain Hooper, 180-pound quarterback, who got off a 90-yard punt Saturday, and will be defending a record of no losses on the new home field, dedicated four years ago. Games follow with Maryland, Georgia, Tennessee, Georgia Tech, and N. C. State. No wonder the Tar Heels are inspired to work!

TENNIS OUTLOOK GOOD WITH MANY REGULARS BACK

First Match With Virginia at Charlottesville Nov. 26.

Prospects for Carolina's tennis team are brighter this year than ever before; for the tennis squad promises to be one of the best group of players ever assembled in one school.

All the members of last year's state championship team are back except Merritt, last year's captain, who was lost by graduation. "Sonny" Graham is captain of this year's team and promises to be a very able leader. Phil Liskin is the other mainstay back from the team of '30. There are other men back who are expected to make a good showing.

From last year's crack freshman team come two tennis stars on whom Tar Heel fans are counting to bring national honors to Carolina. They are Bryan Grant of Atlanta, Ga., and Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C. Bryan, school champion, has just returned from a hard summer campaign with many new titles the most notable of which is the national clay court championship which he won at Kansas City by defeating such stars as Emmet Pare, former clay court champion, Fritz Mercur, fifth ranking player in the United States, and Wilbur Coen, former Davis Cup star and said by Bill Tilden to be the greatest prospect in the United States. In winning the Southern tennis title for the fourth consecutive year, "Bitsy" beat Clifford Sutter of Tulane, national intercollegiate champion, for the fourth straight time. In Wilmer Hines, Carolina has another national champion. Wilmer carried off the national junior championship at the tournament in Indiana. He also paired with Judge Beaver of Gainsville, Ga. to capture the national doubles championship. Hines annexed almost a score of titles during the past summer. Lenoir Wright and Lucas Abels are other stars from last year's frosh team who are expected to make strong bids for a position on the team.

Coach Kenfield will be back at school on the first of October, and the fall tennis tournament, which will go a long way in deciding the members of the varsity team, will be held during the first week of that month. The boys are out working every day and are getting in shape for the tournament.

The schedule has not yet been completed, but it promises to be the strongest ever taken on by a North Carolina team. The annual match with Virginia will be played at Charlottesville on the day before Thanksgiving; and as this is a very important match, it is being looked forward to with a great deal of interest.

Extension Teaching Staff Holds Meeting

The extension teaching staff of the University Extension division held a two day meeting Thursday and Friday of last week preparatory to the opening of extension classes this week. Organization plans were discussed and outlines of each of the courses to be taught this year were presented.

Dr. W. J. McKee is in charge of the in-service teachers training program of the division. The following are the regular members of the extension teaching staff: Dr. Roy W. Morrison, Dr. George Howard, Mrs. Grace P. Woodman, Miss Cecelia Bason, Miss Gladys Angel, Mrs. C. E. McIntosh, and Mr. Leroy Jackson. Classes for teachers are being organized this week at thirty centers in the state.

DI INVITES NEW MEN TO JOIN AT MEETING TUESDAY

The second meeting of the Dialectic Senate, to be held tonight at 7:15, will be devoted to the initiation of new members. All freshmen, especially those from the western part of the state, are invited to join. As in the last meeting the initiation fees and dues were reduced to three dollars. This is payable at the time of initiation.

A committee has been appointed to determine the exact status of the senate and to recommend a program for this year. This committee will make its report a week from today, and discussion of its suggestions will make it impossible to initiate new men at that meeting. Therefore, it is necessary for all new men to present themselves at the meeting tonight.

BRAUNE EXTENDS PIPE RESEARCH

Check Made Upon Experimentation Of Dean Marston at Iowa State.

Credit is given Dean G. M. Braune, of the University Engineering School, by Searcy B. Slack, bridge engineer of the Georgia State Highway Department, for checking and extending the work of Dean Anson Martson at Iowa State College in determining the loads supported by pipe culverts under fills.

Writing in the current issue of the "Engineering News-Record," Mr. Slack points out that "until the epoch-marking work of Dean Anson Martson and his associates at Iowa State College, there was very little information on loads actually supported by pipe culverts under fills.

"This work, which has been carefully checked and extended by Dean G. M. Braune of the University of North Carolina, explains many failures of the rigid-type culverts under deeper fills and formulates a method of calculating the loads to be carried by culverts under various installation conditions."

The Tennessee State Highway Department undertook in 1925 an extensive field inspection of culverts and in carrying out this work a method of expressing the appearance of each structure by a numerical value rating was developed.

The Tennessee report held that "all culverts ultimately failed structurally, but that two distinct paths of deterioration led to final failure. The corrugated-metal or flexible type usually, but not always, deteriorated more rapidly materially than it did structurally. The rigid type, including vitrified clay and concrete pipe, usually, but not always, deteriorated more rapidly structurally than materially."

VARSITY PRACTICE WITH FROSH SQUAD

The big Carolina freshman football squad went through a brisk signal drill yesterday afternoon on the freshman field. Two teams were drilled on V. P. I. plays which they will run against the varsity this week. Although quite confusing with the various shifts and unbalanced line, the V. P. I. plays were quickly learned by the frosh, and the varsity will probably get a idea of how the Pony Express tries to reach the opposing team's goal.

The other freshmen were given new plays and spent the afternoon running them.

Coaches Enright and Farris are still hesitant about saying what the prospects are for a powerful team or how the first team will line up. There are so many candidates out that the coaches have not had ample opportunity to determine who will make the team.

Dr. Knight Writes On European Education

Reports on European Education is the title of a recent book by Dr. Edgar W. Knight, professor of education in the University, which deals with what the author calls "one of the most influential forces of all those at work in behalf of public education in the United States during the second quarter of the last century."

The volume, which has just been published by a New York publisher treats of the impressions and observations reported by John Friscom in 1819, on his year in Europe; the translation of the report of Victor Cousin, a Frenchman, in 1831, on education in Prussia; and the report of Calvin E. Stowe which was made to the legislature of Ohio in 1837.

The report of Stowe was reprinted by order of the legislature of North Carolina in 1839 and seems to have had influence on the principle of public education in this State. It was also reprinted in several other states.

Extension Division To Offer A Night Accounting Class

The extension division will offer an evening course in accounting, at Chapel Hill, beginning Thursday night of this week. The organization meeting will be held in room 301, Bingham hall, at seven thirty. Professor Robert H. Sherrill, of the school of commerce faculty, will be the instructor.

The class will meet once each week for sixteen weeks.

Persons interested are asked to notify either Professor Sherrill, telephone 5311, or R. M. Grumman, director of the extension division, telephone 3216.

COACHING SCHOOL WELL ATTENDED

Ninety-three coaches and athletic directors attended the ninth annual coaching school held at the University the last two weeks in August. The school was in charge of R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics, and his corps of assistants.

Sixty-of the 93 enrolled were North Carolinians. The other 33 were from 12 different states as follows: Virginia 8, South Carolina 5, Tennessee and Georgia 4 each, Maryland 3, Connecticut and Ohio 2 each, and Alabama, Kansas, Mississippi, New Hampshire, and New York one each.

The 93 were alumni of 42 colleges and universities. Forty-seven of them were members of one or more varsity teams while in college.

The steady growth of the school is a striking tribute to the efforts of Coach Fetzer, Secretary Ralph Rankin, and the other members of the staff of instruction.

Ten certificates were awarded by the University to men who had attended the school two summers.

Final Registration Figures In October

Ben Husbands, of the registrar's office, states that October will be the earliest possible time for the release of a complete statistical report of this year's student enrollment. So great has been the influx of students that at the present time no definite time can be placed for the cessation of registration.

However, Husbands states that at present there are over 800 freshmen enrolled, and that the total enrollment far exceeds any other in the history of the University.

DEBATERS WILL TACKLE WOMEN

Forensic Council Decides to Engage More State Schools Here.

The debate council at its last meeting decided upon a policy of debating many schools within the state, thus saving the finances of the debaters so as to allow two or three long trips to be made during the year. The debaters hope to schedule some contests with girls schools. This will be a radical change from the old policy of the past, when the only girls teams debated were those from England.

Attention is called to the fact that co-eds are eligible to debate on Carolina teams, and it is hoped that some will avail themselves the opportunity this year. The key-note of the policy of the new council is to make the debates interesting to the student body. Questions are being selected with this in view.

At any rate, it would be a cheaper proposition for his fatherland if Primo remained in the United States because with the war debt and all that, think of the immense sum it would take to buy all the chow that Human Hill could gobble in one day!

The Playmaker season officially opened the other night when Professor gave a vivid and interesting illustrated lecture on "Our Adventures in Playmaking." A large attendance heard the details of the origin of the Carolina Playmakers which in 1917 began activities without so much as a stage upon which to present their rough productions. Within a short time they were granted the use of the high school auditorium, and later the old law library which now stands as the Carolina Playmaker Theatre, the first state-owned theatre in the country.

PLAN PROPOSED TO COMBINE TWO ECONOMIC CLUBS

Branson and Hobbs Would Combine North Carolina Club and N. C. Social Conference.

Professors E. C. Branson and S. H. Hobbs, Jr., acting for the North Carolina Club, have proposed a plan to Hugh MacRae, president of the North Carolina Social Conference, which has the idea of effecting a consolidation of the two organizations this year. The plan has not yet gone through, but is under consideration and will probably materialize.

They have in mind the blockout of a complete program and choosing people to be responsible for each section. Assignments will be made and the respective speakers will be invited to report before the North Carolina Club, one speaker every two weeks during the academic year. Papers will be discussed at the club meeting which the speakers will revise before presentation at the annual conference meeting. The proceedings will be published in the year book. They think cooperation could be obtained from State College, North Carolina College for Women, the state department of agriculture, the University schools of commerce and public welfare, and from the North Carolina unit of the Southeastern economic Council.

The chief object of the year's work is to analyze thoroughly the agricultural and rural life situation in North Carolina and work out a long-time construction program.

PHI SOCIETY HAS SECOND MEETING

Holding its second meeting of the year, the venerable Phi Society started off with a burst of enthusiasm. After the meeting had been called to order by Speaker Albright, the roll was called and the minutes read by Secretary McDuffy. Speaker Albright welcomed the new members and extended a special invitation to any would be members. Representatives Pratt and Kelly were then appointed to serve on the refreshment committee. Mention was made by Treasurer James of the fact that initiation fee is two dollars and dues one dollar per quarter.

The resolutions discussed during the evening were as follows:

Resolved:

That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring Monday holidays instead of Saturday holidays;

Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring night football at the University;

And resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring admission of freshmen to all dances.

Quite a few speakers expressed their opinions on these resolutions pro and con, provoking much interest. When the vote was taken, the first resolution was defeated; the second resolution was adopted; and the third resolution having aroused so much interest, due to a lack of time was carried over to the next meeting. Speaker Albright again invited all prospective members to be on hand for initiation next Tuesday night, and he especially invited the co-eds to become members of the forensic body.

Cheerleaders

The cheerleaders will meet with George Brown at Kenan stadium this afternoon at 3:30 for practice. Any new men desirous of trying out for the squad are invited to attend.

COFFMAN ISSUES BOOK OF PLAYS

New English Head Has Volume Brought Out by Thomas Nelson and Sons.

Thomas Nelson and Sons have published a volume of Five Significant English Plays, edited by Dr. George R. Coffman, new head of the University of North Carolina English Department. This collection, invaluable for a sophomore survey course, contains Marlow's Dr. Faustus, Dekker's The Shoemaker's Holiday, Steele's The Conscious Lovers, Sheridan's The School for Scandal, and Pinero's The Second Mrs. Tanquerey.

There are several methods of becoming acquainted with English drama. In any case, Shakespeare must be in a separate and distinct course. That is a fact that can be denied for no sensible reason. It would be sacrilege to include him in any survey course. But for the rest —It is possible to study everything, the result of which is neither order nor perspective. It is possible to study a little in detail and much in outline. There is order but not perspective. It is possible, and best, to concentrate on some few representative plays. Dr. Coffman must have borne that fact in mind, for he begins with the man who, when there were two types of drama, stiffly starched tragedy and ragged clowning, brought some order into the theatre. He continues logically and chronologically until he comes to a man who, born into a well-ordered world, does not make the theatre less ordered, but only less conventional than it was a decade before him. The whole is no cycle; it is a development.

Year Book Photos Must Be Made Now

Individual pictures of all juniors and seniors for the class sections of the Yackety-Yack will be taken during the next two months. Desks will be set up in Sutton's, Pritchard-Lloyd, and in the lobby of the "Y" Appointments may be made at the "Y" during chapel period, or at the downtown booths between 1 and 2, and between 6:30 and 7:30.

The desks will be open beginning today, and Travis Brown, business manager of the annual, requests all juniors and seniors to have their pictures made immediately. The senior section must be completed by November 5, while the deadline for the junior section will be December 1.

The business staff is not yet complete, and any new men desiring to try out for positions should see the business manager at 304 Old East.

Record Enrollment

The Registrar's office today set the total number of students enrolled at 2749. This is an increase of more than a hundred over the enrollment of three years ago, which was, until this year, the largest in the history of the University.

Figures on the enrollment in the different schools have not been compiled yet.

Education Department Emphasizes Important Aim of Teacher Training

By R. W. Madry

"No other professional body of men and women can possibly affect so profundly the entire civic, industrial, and spiritual well-being of a state as can a competent staff of teachers, supervisors, and administrative officers in the public schools. These institutions reach and serve all the children of all the people."

This statement was made by Nathan W. Walker, acting dean of the University's school of education, which for all practical purposes is the teachers' college division of the University. When he made the statement, he must have had in mind the high purpose of the Scool of Education, which is to educate teachers and to train them for their profession in accordance with the demands of the highest modern University standards.

That this division of the University is keenly alive to the needs of the schools and the school workers, and carries on many lines of work designed to meet their particular needs, is evidenced by its steady growth.

Purpose to Train Teachers

Teachers and undergraduate students who intend to teach, register in this division of the University for the degree of A. B. in Education just as those who intend to become engineers register in the school of engineering and those who intend to follow some line of applied science register in the school of applied science. It is that division of the University to which teachers and other school people look when they desire the services of the institution that are peculiar to their profession.

On the graduate level education is organized as a department of the graduate school and is administered by the education staff in accordance with the regulations governing the requirements for the higher degrees.

Undergraduate students in the school take three-fourths of their work in the usual academic departments of the University. In other words, the various departments serve all the undergraduate schools, the introductory courses being the same for all, with the more specialized and advanced courses designed to meet the needs and requirements specialized interests and professions. The standards for passing courses and for graduation are the same as in the other undergraduate schools.

The school of education was organized in 1913, although

DR. G. G. JOHNSON WRITES OF LIFE ON SEA ISLANDS

Social History of Islands Published by Social Science Institute.

If a writer fully intends to do a brief study, finds undreamed-of material, becomes interested enough to have the archives of the United States Treasury opened, and writes a volume instead of a paper, there is the assurance that a reader can find an absorbing interest. And the reader is not obliged to handle old family papers with the dust and mold that always attend.

Dr. Guion Griffis Johnson of the institute for research in social science of the University of North Carolina is the first person to make a finished drawing of the Sea Islands of South Caroline and Georgia under the Federals from 1863 until the close of the Civil War. A Social History of the Sea Islands, with Special Reference to Saint Helena Island, South Carolina was written under the authority of the institute for research in social science of the University of North Carolina and the social science research council. There are other books to cover the period not treated by this volume.

The book begins with a single chapter of leading-up-to history. The other chapters, eight of them, form a chronicle of an imported group of settlers, most of them forcibly imported. It does not single out individuals. It records the cultural development until the end of Reconstruction of that part humanity that lived on the Sea Islands and was black. White influences are taken into account, but it is not a history of white culture. There are the results of plantation culture, which results, by the way, seem indelible in that part of the world. There are the results of the teaching of earnest and conscientious negrophiles and, if you will, abolitionists.

GRADUATE CLUB CHOOSES RALPH LYON PRESIDENT

Other Officers Elected at Organization Meeting; Plans For Year Discussed.

At the organization meeting of the Shirley Graves Graduate Club which was held in the lobby of the Smith Building on Monday night, Ralph Lyon of Abbeville, S. C., was elected President; Frank Cauble, High Point, Vice-President; Ned Coker, Columbia, S. C., Secretary; and George Metz, Fayetteville, Treasurer.

Briefly, but masterfully the history of the club was explained along with a picturesque survey of the social life of the body by J. Willis Posey, manager of the Shirley Graves Graduate Club, who has just returned from an extended visit to the state of Texas. Posey was called there by the sickness of his mother some time ago, and returned home this week to be present at the funeral of his aunt, who had been ill for some time.

After the club's history and social functions were described by J. W. Posey, a house committee was elected. This committee will be composed of W. O. Puckett of Davidson, N. C., as chairman, with W. E. Fort and Cecil Abernathy of Birmingham.

An entertainment committee was then elected by the members of the club. S. J. McCoy of Holly Hill, S. C., was elected chairman with three assistants, who are D. F. Martin, Jr., of Flemington, Ga., H. N. deWick of New Haven, Conn., and E. C. Morgan of Spartanburg, S. C.

A finance committee was elected, and after counting votes, it was found that George Metz of Fayetteville, N. C., was chosen as chairman with two assistants, Hugh Campbell of Waynesville, N. C., and W. J. Mattox of Clinton, Mississippi.

The work of the club is to be

ODUM PLANNING S. S. CONVENTION

Local Professor First Southerner To Head Organization Convening in Cleveland.

Professor Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina, is now completing the program for the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the American Sociological society of which he is president.

The society will pass the quarter century mark this year with a southern professor as president for the first time. Cleveland, O., has been selected as the convention city of the organization.

Previous presidents have been selected from Columbia University, University of Kansas, Brown University, University of Pennsylvania, Indiana University, Ohio State University, University of Missouri, University of North Dakota, and the University of Minnesota. Three have come from the University of Chicago and two from the University of Wisconsin.

The tentative program provides for the presidential addresses on Monday evening. Meeting with the American Sociological Society will be the Americal Political Science Association and the American Economic Association for the presidential addresses. On Tuesday evening President Hoover is scheduled to address the joint meetings of all societies, or in case there is some emergency intervening, there will be an appropriate substitute. On Wednesday evening the annual dinner of the American Sociological Society will feature a sort of twenty-fifth anniversary with representatives of other social sciences in joint discussion of the development of sociology and its prospects.

Country Club Board Of Directors Meets

The board of directors of the Country Club held a meeting last Sunday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, at the home of Mr. H. D. Meyer, who is president of the club this year. The board discussed plans for the academic year, but no definite decisions were reached.

Some time ago, the entertainment committee of the club planned a club supper which will be given Friday evening at 6:00 o'clock for the entertainment of members and new people. Mrs. Louis MacMillan and Mrs. H. C. Nolen will be hostesses.

To Speak To Alumni

Felix A. Grisette, director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund, Coach "Chuck" Collins, head football coach, and Bill Cerney, coach of the football backfield, will speak this evening in Greensboro before the Greensboro Alumni Association, which will meet at the Hotel King Cotton at 6 p. m.

ENTERTAINMENT TO BE STAGED IN NEW MUSIC HALL

New Chimes Not To Be Installed Until Thanksgiving 1931.

The committee in charge of the Entertainment Program for this year is confronted with more than its usual difficulties. The new Auditorium is not yet ready for occupancy, so that the chief problem is that of securing a hall.

While the Committee has not yet held an official meeting this fall, Professor Harold S. Dyer of the Music Department reports that the members he has consulted consider it feasible to use the Music Auditorium during the fall quarter. Since this hall has only about half the required capacity, the committeemen plan to divide the ticket-holders into two groups, A and B. Those holding A tickets would, if this plan is adopted, be admitted to first-night performances, and the B patrons to a second night program. While this system necessarily entails a repetition of all entertainments, still it offers the only practical solution to the problem. It has been tried with success at such prominent institutions as the Universities of Chicago and Michigan and Ohio State.

Orders for seats went in yesterday, and their delivery is expected sometime after October 15th.

The committee rightly feels that the Student Entertainment series should be continued, since it constitutes the chief musical, lecture, and dramatic events on the campus. In addition to the policies already mentioned, the Committee will probably deside at its next meeting upon a plan to group the larger events during the winter quarter, when the new auditorium will probably be available. A fine musical or dramatic event will be provided as an opening feature.

The new chimes are even more distant in the future than the auditorium. Charles Woolen, business manager of the University, hopes, however, that they will be installed by Thanksgiving week of the next school year.

Delayed Judgment For Tennessee

The executive committee of the Southern Conference Monday ordered the University of Tennessee to show cause why it should not be suspended for failure to observe regulations governing freshman football. According to newspaper reports a group of prospective freshman football players gathered at Knoxville, received equipment and more-or-less began early practice.

If the reports are true Tennessee clearly violated the Conference rule prohibiting freshman practice of any sort before the opening of the institution. These reports originated during the latter part of August when an Atlanta newspaper reported that a mail clerk had seen players practicing at the University of Tennessee. After several days the matter was dropped and until yesterday morning's papers announced the action of the Conference executive committee nothing was heard of the reports.

Evidently the reports were investigated by Conference officials. An investigation was necessary after the statement of the Atlanta mail clerk, for he seemed positive in his published statement that organized practice was under way at Knoxville.

The reports seem to indicate guilt on the part of someone. But hasty judgment should not be given. A thorough investigation should be made and when the Conference meets here if Tennessee has violated conference regulations a stiff penalty should be inflicted.

Hasty judgment cannot aid matters and this seems to be an occasion for deliberation.

Scotchmen Take Blame For Bare Legs

Man has been accused of invading the sacred realm of feminine attire. This went on record in last Sunday's Tar Heel for the first time in history. All grades of bare-legs have been observed—tanned, hairy ones, matching the beards of their owners, knock-kneed, menagerie specimens, curving inward or outward; it seems there is not a perfect pair of masculine legs on the campus. However, there are hundreds of pairs of legs, concealed in the darkness of 34-inch trousers capable of making the feminine heart beat faster. The aforesaid heart should take hope, for the fad is spreading, and the great open spaces between knickerbockers and shoe-tops are becoming wider every day.

The women just referred to have accused man unjustly of usurping this fad. A few hours spent in the library proved this to be untrue. Centuries ago men were walking the streets of Athens and Rome bare-legged while their wives were at home letting out the hems of their last year's robes. Not even the tips of their sandals were allowed to show! Many a Roman leg has projected from a toga, as its master reclined at a feast. In fact, women did not have legs, except in private, until the turn of the twentieth century when the invention of the tandem made bustles and trains impractical. From the Spartan to the Flora Dora girl is a long hop.

Let us pass on down though history from the golden age of Rome to the thirteenth century. We find Robert Bruce amusing himself by plucking superfluous hairs from his bare knees, while absently letting the cakes burn to a cinder-track on the hearth.

This brings us to another great group of men who have toasted their knees over campfires for centuries—the Scotch. Bare-handed and bare-legged they have wrested a living from the stony fields of Scotland, repulsing all invasions, keeping themselves a free people against great odds.

Think of the millions of pounds of yarn they have saved through the years by leaving a gap between the sox and the kilt. And think of the wear and tear on their sheep the highlanders have avoided by this simple expedient. This is enough to make every contemporary Scotch heart beat for such keen-witted, economical forefathers. It was probably some Carolina "Mac" who started the local boycott on stockings. With "sox" selling at two dollars a pair, the sons of Carolina should not be too heavily criticized for not wearing them, those thick, fuzzy, itchy cylinders of wool that hold the leg in a vise-like grip.

Besides being economical and more comfortable, the fad is healthy, allowing ultra-violet rays to enter where they have not been since the bare-foot days of youth. While it has not yet been tested and approved by the "Good Housekeeping Institute," it certainly has the "star" of approval of every Scotchman on the campus.—D. B. F.

OPEN FORUM

LET'S HAVE A BETTER SPIRIT!

Last Satuday afternoon when Carolina played Wake Forest the cheering from the Carolina side was very weak. There were about six times as many students in our cheering section as there were in Wake Forest's. Still the cheering, as a whole, from our side was much weaker. Of course there were times when one could hear the Carolina side come out strong, but every time the Wake Forest section sounded out one could hear the distant echo which came as a result of extraordinarily loud cheering.

I think it would have been quite different if Carolina had started piling up points right off the bat. The reason I say this is because I witnessed the Wake Forest game two years ago when Carolina won by a 65 to 0 count. The cheering that year was two or three times as good as it was this year, still there was a much smaller freshman class that year.

It is easy enough to yell when your team is winning, but the test comes when it is losing, or when it is in a tight place. When the team is struggling to keep out in front, then that is the time for us to give our loyal support, and not when we are in front by six or seven touchdowns. Of course, it is a good policy to keep on yelling no matter how far in front we happen to get, but I say the real test comes when we are losing. Then is the time that the team needs our help.

Let's see if we can get a little more pep and spirit into the cheering section. It can not do anyone any harm and it will let the team know that we are back of it and will give it more courage to fight harder. Next Saturday when we play V. P. I. let's give cheers that the team can hear all the way to Virginia. Everybody together now, let's go!

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

After reading the article in your paper entitled "Co-eds Repulse Blond Intruder" dated September 25, 1930, I wish to call your attention to what I consider a most erroneous piece of phaseology and which, I feel sure, after careful consideration, you will also. You referred to an assembly of girls grouped together for casual conversation as a "bull session." Don't you think, Dear Editor, that a feminine assemblage should be called a "cow session"?

This is not a publicity scheme but is done entirely in the interest that I have in the school. If you feel you were correct in your phrasing do not hesitate to inform me, but if you are wrong or in doubt please correct it in your next issue.

THIS AND THAT

By

PHIL LISKIN

During the past week my alarm-clock has lost all its predestined utility, and it is now as useful as a picture on the wall. No, it has not ceased to run. It still tick-tocks as clamorously as ever, but its momentous function of awakening me at exactly 7:30 every morning has been usurped by a character which, up to this time, I had always considered of minor significance. It it the Musca Domestica, more commonly called a house fly, and still more more commonly called merely a fly.

It first began last Tuesday morning. I awoke from a deep slumber to the realization that someone was standing on my left ear and buzzing in a sweet and gentle voice. From there it flew over to my other organ of hearing and repeated its throaty emanations. Its next point of contact was the tip of my nose where it sat down and rubbed its hands with evident satisfaction. By this time I had grown tired of the performance. I attempted to slap the intruder into the happy hunting grounds of its ancestors but, due to my sleepiness, it was my nose that received most of the result. I was fully awake by then, and as I turned to consult the clock, it suddenly quivered, and then delivered a feeble Braaaaang! It had already seen its Waterloo.

Since that morning, at precisely 7:25 A. M., my winged friend has awakened me with his cheery greeting. And every morning, at precisely 7:30 A. M., the alarm-clock moans its daily Braaaaang! But it is too late. I am already awake.

Now that a night football has come into its own, one doesn't have to bring his liquor to the game in a Coca-Cola or ginger-ale bottle. A black or brown flask is almost invisible in the dark.

The lack of hearty cheering at Saturday's game was rather noticeable. I do not know whether the spectators were too interested in the game to cheer, or whether it was too warm to yell. However, I have a plan whereby the Carolina cheers can be sent roaring and crashing into the stands as never before.

At the next game, when it is time for a cheer, two loyal Tar Heels should approach the gentleman at the amplifying apparatus. One should have the strongest pair of arms in Carolina and the other the strongest voice. Strong Arms will ask the gentleman with the microphone for a match. As he reaches into his pocket, Strong Voice will grasp the "Mike" and proceed to knock the spectators off their seats with a mighty Carolina yell while Strong Arms will do his duty by holding the surprised announcer to the ground during the rendition. Kenan Stadium will then be treated to the mightiest yell of its existence.

There is only one drawback. The announcer may say:

"Sorry, I don't smoke!"

Monday's Greensboro Daily News tells us that $50,000,000 in cash has been rushed to Havana to stop a run on Havana banks. The University of North Carolina could also use several million dollars to stop the running of some of its best faculty members to other institutions.

CO-EDS DISCUSS BULL SESSIONS

There is a legend that a freshman was wandering about this campus aimlessly, trying to solve a disturbing problem. Finally he called on an upperclassman for consultation—"Why did a bell ring every hour?"

Now here is a story about one of the much maligned co-eds. Three of them, one old and two new, were making their nightly pilgrimage to the library. The moon and the stars were up, which is quite beside the point. Suddenly there was one Gabrielic blast of a horn. The conversation turned to strange wind-instrument sounds. One girl spoke of a set of bewildering calls she had heard. The second year co-ed asked if it had sounded like a cow. She in her wisdom knew it was the fire alarm. But before she could begin her spiritual work of mercy by instructing the ignorant, a new girl had volunteered. She said, "You know, I'm not sure, but you have heard of bull sessions. I have. I think maybe that's part of the ceremony."

quite naturally the University had been giving courses in education all along. The enrollmen has increased steadily. During the last nine years it has conferred 325 bachelors' degrees and 88 masters' degrees. Five doctorates have been conferred in the last four years, two being awarded this year. Last year the resident enrollment numbered 422 and the graduates 94.

There are seven members of the school of education staff who devote their entire time to giving instruction at classes held regularly at various centers over the state, under the auspices of the University extension division. Classes in extension are conducted on a semester (half-year) basis. During the first semester of 1929-30 seven full-time and three part-time instructors conducted 56 professional courses for teachers in 28 communities of the state. There were 917 individual students enrolled and 1564 registrations, which meant that some registered for more than one course. The figures for the second semester were equally impressive. The total registrations for the year was over 3,000. Those were professional courses conducted for teachers in service. Of the 1172 teachers in schools who were taking correspondence courses last year, 793 were enrolled in the school of education.

The University's training school has been made possible through the generosity of the General Education Board of New York. In May, 1926, this board granted the University an appropriation of $75,000 for a five-year period for the purpose of enabling the school of education to improve its facilities for the training of high school teachers. The school of education officials immediately entered into an agreement with the Chapel Hill school board to make use of the local public high school as the training institution for the school of education.

Other important adjuncts of the school of education include the bureau of educational research, which under the direction of Dr. M. R. Trabue conducts and encourages scientific research in the public schools; the teachers' bureau under the direction of Secretary I. C. Griffin, which annually registers from 300 to 500 teachers desiring positions and places the majority of them; the High School Journal, which goes to high school teachers and libraries in 43 states and eight foreign countries; and the departmental library which has more than 2,000 volumes and several thousand reports and pamphlets.

These were all influences working on the negro, only. It is not a history that a negro could have written of his race. It is infinitely too orderly in form and substance.

The book represents a new system of though that is about to prevail over an old. Not so long ago we generalized incessantly and catalogued unreservedly. Then, we would have asked Dr. Johnson, "'Is the negro happier in his isolated home?" And we would have demanded an answer of a single word, without any qualifying sentence. The answer would have been half right and half wrong, an exceedingly dangerous answer. Dr. Johnson explains that no reply is possible.

FALL BASEBALL PRACTICE BEGINS; PROSPECTS FAIR

Return of Nine Lettermen Offsets Loss of Maus, Lufty, And Other Stars.

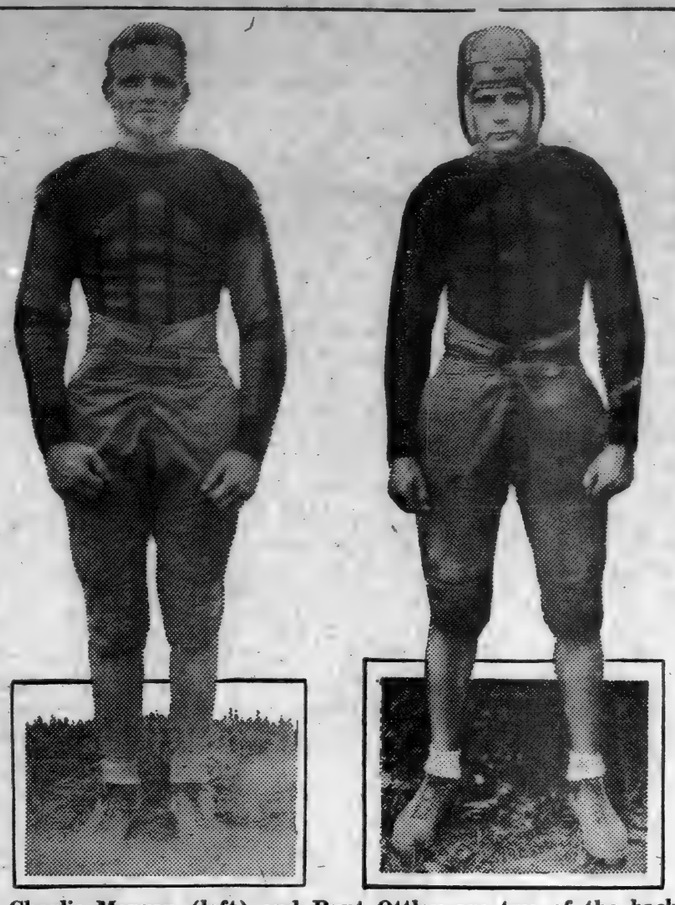
The same trouble that handicapped the Tar Heel baseball team last year will visit us again in 1931—lack of pitchers. Coach Jim Ashemore has issued a call for candidates for fall practice and fourteen men, among them one letter man, two veterans, three newcomers and the remainder, freshmen have answered the call. They are: Josiah Johnston, C. McKinney, Billie Powell, Cook, Howard Auman, Glenn Dixon, Aaron Bloom, Joe Strusinski, "Dutch" Leonard, C. Smith, Jim Griffith, Paul Edwards, "Stew" Scarrboro, and "Pat" Pattisoll.

At that the outlook appears to be brighter than last year, when Carolina won thirteen games and lost twelve. Coach Ashemore has lost six lettermen. Heading them is Jimmy Maus, one of the finest receivers to come to Carolina. In addition to this, the failure of Bob Kushner to return this year costs Coach Ashemore a likely prospect. Nap Lufty, Carolina's slugging third baseman and clean-up man, also graduated and will leave a big hole at the "hot corner." Marshall Rand, key stone guardian has not returned to school, and Frank Fleming, pitcher, Phil Jackson and Billy Brown, infielders received their degrees last June.

To offset this loss, Carolina will boast nine lettermen: C. E. Blythe, Branch Paxton, Auburn Wright, and Henry House, outfielders; Cecil Longest, J. D. Shields, and Paul Edwards, pitchers; "Piggy" Potter, catcher and Captain Burgess Whitehead, short-stop; Clyde McKinney, Johnny Branch, Jim Burt, Jim Johnston, Josiah Johnston and Paul Dunlap are the returning "Vets."

Coach Bill Cerney's successful freshman team will be up there offering the varsity plenty of aid with four first class pitchers: "Stew" Scarrboro, J. D. McNeill, Jim Griffiith, and T. F. Adkins. In the line of infielders the freshmen will offer "Smoky" Ferebee, McCaskill, and Billy Powell. "Pat" Pattisoll, caught, and Croom, Lew Whitehead, Dixon, and Daniel made up the outfield.

VOLS ACCUSED OF VIOLATING RULE



It is possible that the University of North Carolina will lose one of its strongest foes, when it lines up its schedule for 1931; at least the Executive Committee of the Southern Conference has called on the University of Tennessee to explain its action of having freshman football practice before the opening of the scholastic session, in opposition to the rules of the Conference. Coach Neyland has admitted that the charge is true.

This demand was the result of widespread reports on the subject, and it is to be answered at the December meeting of the Conference. Thus far this is the extent of the action taken by the directors, which is the most drastic since their founding.

Information was brought to the committee that late in August, the freshman team had been practicing under the direction of the head of Tennessee's freshman coaching staff, Bob Neyland, and that they had been issued uniforms in direct opposition to the orders of the conference.

If Tennessee's explanation is not satisfactory, the conference may suspend them for the following year, when it meets at Chapel Hill, this winter.

TWO GOBBLER HALFBACKS

Charlie Morgan (left) and Bunt Ottley are two of the backs upon whom V. P. I. will depend the great offensive strength of North Carolina's Tar Heels. They are working behind a young Gobbler line which has proved itself to be very powerful at making way for the ball carriers.

Team Prepares Defense For Va. Poly Plays In Workout At Kenan Stadium Yesterday

Air of Pep and Enthusiasm Evident as Tar Heels Get Ready For First Conference Game.

Coach Chuck Collins drove Carolina's second team through a hard and long scrimmage against the frosh yesterday afternoon in preparation for the game with V. P. I. Saturday. The defensive play of the team looked better in spots although it was still very ragged. The offensive play looked poor at times. The linesmen were not opening up holes for Wyrick and his team mates in the backfield.

"Rip" Slusser got away for a long run after receiving a pass for the feature of the afternoon's workout. The coaches had the team concentrate on bucking the line. The frosh broke through to smear many of the plays before they got under way.

The coaches decided to let the first stringers have another day of rest, and they did not scrimmage. However, they worked out at the end of the stadium. The first team will probably get a big dose of scrimmage today.

The line that scrimmaged yesterday was composed of Larry Johnson, L. E., Frank Hodges, L. T., Ellis Crew, L. G., Red Gilbreath, C., Jack Dunavant, R. G., McDade, R. T., and Bridges R. E. The backfield running behind this line had in it, Pete Wyrick, Q. B., Jimmy Maus and Rip Slusser at halves, and George Houston at full back.

There are a great many rough spots to be polished off on both the defense and offense before the team lines up against the Gobblers on Saturday.

Meanwhile reports are coming in from the Techmen's camp at Blacksburg that they are preparing a warm reception for the Tar Heels. Orville Neale, the Gobblers new coach, wants to keep the tradition still intact that the Gobblers have never lost a game in Miles Stadium. They have a hefty line and a fine pair of ends. V. P. I. beat Roanoke College Saturday, 9-0. The game should be close and hard fought.

A writer complains that nowadays popular tunes get on the wireless, on the gramophone, and on the talkies. And, he might have added, on the nerves.—London Humorist.

CODY'S STAGE CAREER SETS HIM FOR TALKERS

Lew Cody, whose first appearance on the talking screen is in support of Gloria Swanson in "What a Widow!", her new United Artists comedy offering coming to the Carolina theatre today, is particularly well equipped for audible picture work as a result of long training on the stage prior to his experience in silent pictures.

He was born on Washington's birthday in Berlin, New Hampshire, where his father was a well-to-do merchant, the family name being Cote. The early part of his life was spent in Berlin, but he received his advanced education in McGill University in Montreal, Canada, where he studied medicine.

Deserting the medical practice for the theatre, Cody became well known in stock and later toured the United States in vaudeville.

His first role in pictures was as leading man to Bessie Barriscale in "Mating" in 1915, under the direction of Thomas Ince. Among the last silent pictures in which he played stellar roles are "His Secretary," "Sporting Venus," "Adam and Evil," "Baby Cyclone," "Beau Broadway" and "The Single Man."

Cody seems to have shown a preference for whimsical comedy roles, but confesses to a secret ambition to do sophisticated roles.

His favorite sports are swimming, golf, tennis and riding. The theatre affords his principal diversion, he is regarded as being exceptionally well read, and is an accomplished pianist.

CROSS COUNTRY HARRIERS ROUND INTO GOOD SHAPE

Star Sophomores and Reserves Depended Upon to Help Captain Baucom Win Conference Championship.

With the rapid rounding into shape of cross-country candidates, chances for a fifth consecutive Southern Conference championship for the Tar Heels increase materially. With only one letter man back from last year's team Coach Ranson is having to depend largely on candidates from last year's freshman team to fill the gaps left by graduation.

Of the nine letter men only Captain Baucom has returned this year. Barkley, Lowry, and Cohen were lost by graduation. Phoenix and Pierce, letter men, were eligible but have not returned.

Jensen, Jones, and Corlde, from last year's freshman team are being counted on to furnish strength. Watkins, sophomore, is out for the first time this year, but his achievement of winning the cake race last fall and proving one of the best freshman quarter milers makes him a good bet.

Jensen led last year's freshmen and broke several course records. Jones won the mile in the State high school meet here year before last, and was a consistent performer as a freshman here. Cordle was a regular point earner for last year's freshmen, and turned in good marks in the two mile run.

Joe Pratt, who placed second in the cake race last fall, is also showing up well and others who are regarded as possible point winners are Farris, Lumpkin, Zelly, and Hawley.

By Hugh Wilson

Now that the first game is over and the pre-season tension relieved, it is time to take stock of what really happened Saturday afternoon. Because of the low score, a great many Carolina fans have already given up hope for a successful season. If they should stop to think for a short time, they would realize that the outlook is not so gloomy as they think. In fact, the smallness of the score may very likely be just the thing to spur the team on to greater effort, for it is not likely that the team now retains any overconfidence it may have had—and it was pure overconfidence that led to Carolina's sole defeat at the hands of Georgia last October.

It should also be taken into consideration that Wake Forest is no easy team to beat. A pair of fast and hard tackling ends, as good a pair of tackles as there is to be found in the South, good guards, and a fighting center made up the line; their backs lacked the calibre of the Deacon line, but were big, fast and alert. There are many far larger colleges than Wake Forest whose teams would have bowed to the Demon Deacons had they played them Saturday.

It might be pointed out also that Carolina at all times had the situation well in hand, despite the fact that for a time the Baptists were on an even par in scoring. Carolina made 17 first downs although the Tar Heels used but four of five very simple plays, Coach Collins wisely keeping his better tricks in his bag for future use against more formidable opponents. It its true that the ground gaining machine broke down often when it neared the goal line, but the frequency of substitutions, in themselves a necessary step to give the reserves some varsity experience, made it well nigh impossible for one combination to get working smoothly before the next new man came on the field.

And lastly, football men the world over know that a small college team with a squad of twenty five or thirty men can get under way in early season more smoothly than a large University squad of seventy-five or eighty men.

TRAVELERS BACK HOME FROM 9000 MILE STUDY-TOUR

Record Interesting Incidents of Adventures in Seventeen States.

Thrilled by the experiences of a 9000-mile transcontinental tour, a party of 136 faculty members, students and school teachers participating in the University extension division's travel-study tour, are back in Chapel Hill, telling of a journey of many adventures through scenic spots in 17 states.

The trip was accomplished by automobile, in two sections; the first, with nine busses, a cook car, a baggage car, and a pilot car, was under the command of Russell M. Grumman, director of the extension division; the second, with five busses, a cook car, a baggage car, and a pilot car, was under the command of Morgan F. Vining, associate director of the extension division.

Many episodes occurred that served to add variety to the expedition. When the first section was in the Yosemite Park in California, the cook car failed to come into camp at night. The tourists, weary and famished, descended upon restaurants in quest of food. It was later discovered that the cook car had first lost its way and had then broken an axle. It did not come up for two days.

Then there was the night journey over a New Mexico desert. Mr. Grumman and his party had taken six hours to go through the celebrated Carlsbad Caverns. When they emerged the sun had set. The road onward to El Paso, the next stop, was the roughest stretch of road on the entire trip, and the city was not reached until 2 o'clock in the morning.

In addition to these incidents, a few axles were broken, a few tires blown out, and a few bearings replaced; but for the most part the project was carried out according to the original plan and the travelers enjoyed themselves immensely.

The caravans passed through Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky.

Twenty-five Chapel Hill people made the tour. In the first section were Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Grumman, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Preston, W. F. Prouty and his three sons; Miss Lilian Burch, Edwin Winkler and I. M. Tull. In the second were Mr. and Mrs. Morgan F. Vining, J. M. Lear and his sister, Mrs. Russell Young, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Brooks, Merritt Lear, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald McCarthy, Miss Letta Church, Miss Agnes Andrews, C. A. Hoyle and William Uzzell.

on a larger and more extensive scale than ever before, and each member is urged to do everything in his power to further the interests of his fellowmen and his club. New men are encouraged to join the club.

Not only is an extensive program being forwarded by the club, but there are to be a number of social events during the Fall which will make the organization more alluring and attractive than ever before. The biggest thing on foot so far in the line of social functions is a large reception to the faculty and their friends which will be announced sometime in October. The club will also give an informal dance along with the reception.

A four page booklet will be issued each week by the alumni office on the Carolina football games this season, according to Glenn Holder, assistant to Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders. The first booklet will be included in the regular issue of the monthly Alumni Review. After the first of October a football leaflet will be isued each week for the benefit of the alumni.

U. N. C. MEDICAL STUDENTS RANK HIGH IN EXAMS

Thirty-Two of Eighty-Five Successful Applicants Are University Products.

Thirty-two of the 85 successful applicants who appeared before the state board of medical examiners recently for licenses to practice medcine were graduates of the University medical school, according to a check of the records made by Dean Isaac H. Manning.

The man making the highest mark, Dr. L. A. Crowell, Jr., of Lincolnton, and the applicant making the second highest, Dr. R. E. Nichols, Jr., of Durham, were both graduates of the University medical school. Dr. Crowell made an average of 94 and Dr. Nichols a grade of 92 4-7.

Further, a survey of the records reveals that Carolina men have led the board 24 times during the 34 years the examinations have been given, for 70.6 per cent of the possibilities.

One year there was a tie between three Carolina graduates.

Dr. Crowell took his last two years of medicine at Tulane and Dr. Nichols at Pennsylvania.

The faculty of the medical school here takes just pride in the fact that its graduates have always ranked so high. Dr. C. S. Mangum of the present faculty led the board the first time the examination was given in 1896.

The 32 Carolina men licensed, in addition to Crowell and Nichols, were:

E. N. Boseman, Penn. '30; W. E. Cook, Washington, '30; J. M. Cooke, Penn. '30; L. T. Chance, Md. '30; J. F. Crumples, U. and Bellevue, '30; E. W. Franklin, Jr., Penn. '30; D. E. Forrest, Md. '30; W. H. Harmon, Jeff. '30; W. C. Highsmith, Cincin. '30; A. L. Hill, Penn. '30.

W. B. Hooks, Penn. '30; M. V. Jackson, Md. '30; M. D. Kemp, Washington '30; L. C. Liles, Med. Col. of Va. '30; J. L. McElroy, Washington '30; N. H. McLeod, Penn. '30; E. C. Moohlman, Penn. '30; R. D. Oliver, Md. '30; L. S. Owen, Md. '30; Z. D. Owens, Md. '30; M. H. Rourke, Minn. '28; C. W. Robinson, Penn. '30.

H. G. Strickland, Md. '30; C. E. Simons, Med. Col. of Va. '30; H. O. Tucker, Johns Hopkins '29; W. P. Wheless, Rich. '30; H. A. Watson, Med. Col. of Va. '30; N. C. Wolfe, Vanderbilt '29; C. H. White, Tulane '30; E. V. Tucker, Med. Col. of Va. '30.

Car Set On Fire Saturday

The only call the local department has received within several days came Saturday when an enthusiastic football fan, eager to reach the game in time for the kick off, put his car in a burning condition. The fire was extinguished without difficulty.

Conditions must be improving. Folks who talked in terms of $2 steaks are again eating hot dogs with a loss of dignity—Little Rock Arkansas Democrat.

HENDERSON WILL PRESENT FAMOUS MATH PROBLEM

Geometric Proposition Will Be Given at Mathematics Seminar This Afternoon.

A famous problem in elementary geometry will be presented this afternoon in the mathematics seminary, when Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department, will address the group on a problem of much interest to mathematicians.

Dr. Henderson will discuss this problem at length at the seminar and will present some solution of his own, both direct and indirect.

The problem is one of the most famous known and has been taken up by the greatest mathematicians, including Sylvester, Toddhunter, Birkoff, and many others. It attracted attention in 1842 and has been studied in some of the larger mathmatics journals.

This problem presents mysterious elements of unusual difficulty and yet is the converse of a very simple geometric proposition.

In its most simple form, it may be stated as follows: "If the bisectors of the base angles of a triangle are equal, the triangle is isosceles." In its more general form, it can be stated as "If two lines dividing the base angles of a triangle proportionally are equal, then the triangle is isosceles."

Maybe some day things will come to the point in this country where the nation will feel that it should erect a monument to the unknown pedestrian.—Albany Evening News.

HANES COLLECTION IS NOW ON DISPLAY

Material from the Hanes Foundation on the Development of the Book and from the recently acquired Pettigrew Collection is now on exhibition in the first floor corridor in the general library.

The material from the Hanes collection in the middle exhibit case is chosen to illustrate the early method of producing written records. Here will be found a collection of twenty Babylonian and Sumarian clay tablets. The scribes of these early peoples who inhabited the Mesopotamian valley between what is now Arabia and Persia, wrote by means of a stylus on a handful of moist clay. The method of making paper had not yet been discovered at that time, nor was rock, wood, or other commonly used material for receiving writing available in this country along the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. Clay, however, there was in abundance. By pressing the corner of a reed into a soft lump of clay, a little wedge-shaped mark can be made. This triangular impression became the basis for a method of writing known as cuneiform. Cuneiform means wedge-shaped, and the style of writing is so called because the reed impression takes the form of little wedges. The information on the tablets is mostly concerned with commercial transactions, receipts for the delivery of wool or sheep, etc.

Particularly interesting are two tablets which represent the method of preserving the writing from harm. The Sumerians used envelopes for this purpose, just as we do, except for the fact that their envelopes were made of clay as was their writing material. One tablet is concealed in a clay envelope bearing the impression of a cylinder seal. The other tablet has had the clay envelope partially chipped away. These tablets date from about 2300 years before the beginning of the Christian era down to about 600 B.C.

The Egyptians introduced a considerable improvement into the methods of writing when they discovered ink and the means of making a kind of paper from the papyrus reed. There are on exhibition reproductions of Egyptian painting and sculpture showing scribes at work. There is also shown an Egyptian writing palette with two depressions for holding red and black ink. A facsimile of an Egyptian papyrus, the earliest work on surgery, illustrates one kind of Egyptian writing.

Although papyrus and parchment were used by the early Greeks and Romans for receiving writing, more of their inscriptions on stone have survived to the present day. There is exhibited a plaster cast of a very early Greek inscription.

Some typical examples of mediaeval German book-binding are shown in this exhibit in another case, along with two characteristic and important early books, both in facsimile. The University will probably never own a copy of the Gutenberg Bible, generally regarded as the first printed book. It has, however, an admirable facsimile of this Bible which is here displayed. Attention is called to the remarkably fine reproduction in color of a manuscript copy of Dante's Divine Comedy.

Of particular interest to North Carolinians is the material drawn from the recently acquired Pettigrew Collection, which is a part of the Southern Collection in the University library. This material was originally collected by the Pettigrew family formerly of Bon Arva Plantation, Tyrrell County, North Carolina.

Among the items displayed are several early North Carolina newspapers, portraits of two distinguished members of the Pettigrew family, manuscript and printed copies of several pamphlets. Of considerable human interest is a handbill distributed by a candidate in the First Congressional District in 1839 denying allegations made by one of his opponents and proclaiming this man a liar and rascal.

SENATE INITIATES LARGEST NUMBER IN SEVEN YEARS

Twenty-nine Men Present Themselves for Membership Tuesday.

Twenty-nine men were iniatiated into the Dialectic Senate Tuesday night, to make the largest number ever to be taken into this literary society at one time during the past seven years.

Meeting for the second time this year, the society held the informal iniatiation in the Senate hall. After discussing some of the most important business on the calendar, the program was turned over to the committee in charge of initiating the new men.

For the past few years the interest in the Di Senate has been lacking, but with the initiation of these twenty-nine senators, the officials of the senate are looking forward to a successful year.

The initiation fee this year, Treasurer Dungan states, will be two dollars less than it has been in the past. Although the senate has a full year's program, the cut of two dollars in each member's fee will not affect the program that has been planned, states the treasurer of the senate.

The men who were taken in at the Tuesday's meeting are:

N. A. Townsend, Jr., Charlotte, N. C.; T. S. Royster, Bessemer City, N. C.; G. W. Chandler, Winston-Salem; R. S. Crum, Jr., Gatum; C. Z. Panama; R. P. Howell, Jr., Wilmington; J. O. Griffn, Reidsville; G. D. Lively, Reidsville; S. O. Mageure, Jr., Elkin; Clyde Deitz, Belmont; D. J. Olive, Chapel Hill; J. D. Durand, Asheville; T. S. Whitaker, Black Mountain; Wm. Eddleman, Gastonia; U. Daughtridge, Rocky Mount; Walter Zerest, Jackson Heights, N. Y.; T. B. Johnson, Vale; C. B. Lowder, Winston-Salem; Howard Lyon, Glade Valley; Robert Durand, Asheville; Fred M. Harris, Elkin; S. M. Carpenter, Durham; John Entwistle, Rockingham; C. A. Pratt, Greensboro; E. C. Johnson, Hickory; P. R. Hayes, Greensboro; J. C. McNeill, Charlotte; J. C. Kitchen, Jr., Asheville; W. L. Higdon, Jr., Franklin; E. M. Pickard, Burlington.

CIVIL ENGINEERS HOLD FIRST MEET

The University branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers will holds its first meeting of the year in Room 319 of Phillips Hall at 7:30 tonight. Professor T. F. Hickerson, sponsor of the branch society, will address the group.

Old members of the society are urged to be present, and members of the freshman class in civil engineering, who automatically become members when they register, will also attend.

The subject of Professor Hickerson's address will probably be on the work of the society.

Graduate Convocation

The first convocation of the graduate school will be held at eight o'clock Friday night, October 3, in Smith Building.

President Graham and Dr. W. W. Pierson will be the speakers. This meeting is open to all graduate students and the faculty of the University.

Cheerios

All students interested in organized cheering either turn in name and address to Billy Arthur at Theta Kappa Nu house or sign with address on Y. M. C. A. bulletin board.

DEAN OUTLINES CHAPEL EVENTS

Program for Year Details Appearance of Many Campus Notables.

F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students and chairman of the chapel meetings committee, has announced the chapel program for the ensuing quarter.

These programs are conducted mainly for the introduction of prominent figures about the campus to the freshmen and sophomores. Those attending chapel this quarter will hear many interesting speakers.

Tomorrow and Monday the cheerleaders and candidates for this office will hold sway in order that the new men will have chance to decide for whom they will cast their votes. There will probably be cheer drills at each of these meetings. Within a short time, Coach Bob Fetzer will appear, followed by the Playmakers, and the Glee Club. A morning will be devoted to each of the publications, and the Y. M. C. A. will frequently have charge of a program.

Members of the faculty who have become traditional figures at the University will be present. President Graham will frequently be present.

Since October 12 is the birthday of the University, the celebration will probably take place in chapel on Monday the 13th.

KIWANIS DISCUSS COUNTY LIBRARIES

The Kiwanis club held its regular weekly meeting in the Hut of the United Church Tuesday evening at 7:00 o'clock. The club observed library night and discussed the library of Orange county. The Kiwanians had as their guest Miss Mary Hyman, supervisor of schools in Orange county, who gave the history of the county library movement. She told also how the Parent Teachers' Association became interested in the movement and something of what they have done. It is interesting to note that President Frank Graham suggested the idea of organizing the county library in his talks before P. T. A| meetings and has been instrumental in the development.

Dr. L. R. Wilson talked on the progress of the county library movement throughout the state. Dr. Wilson spoke favorably of the prospects for the Orange county library.

The members of the club brought to the meeting books and magazines which they contributed to the collection, and they will contribute further from time to time.

NEW BOOK CLUB LOOKS TOWARD CLOSER RELATIONS WITH ALUMNI

Unique Lending Library Is Made Possible Through The Cooperation of Three University Agencies.

A new venture in the field of adult education, designed to continue intellectual relations of the alumni with the University after graduation, was inaugurated in the October issue of The Alumni Review, which came off the press yesterday.

Known as the Alumni Book Club, the new service is a unique lending library, circulating at a nominal cost a list of new books selected and recommended by the university faculty. Three university agencies, the Alumni office, the Extension Library Service, and the university library join with the university faculty in creating this new service.

A list of five new books which may now be borrowed through the Library Extension Service is furnished the alumni. Each book will be mailed to the borrower, accompanied by a critical commentary written by a member of the university faculty who has a special interest in the subject of the book.

Not an ordinary book review, this commentary is designed to evaluate the book, to show its relation to other books on the subject, or to furnish interesting information about the author and his work—in short, to chart the position of the book in the sea of literature.

Books now available include A History of Modern Culture, Vol. 1, The Great Renewal, 1543-1687, by Preserved Smith, reviewed by Louis B. Wright of the department of English; Man And His Universe, by John Langdon-Davies, with a commentary by J. J. Slade, Jr., of the school of Engineering faculty; Crucibles, by Bernard Jaffe, reviewed by F. H. Edmister, of the department of Chemistry; Shepherds in Sackcloth, by Shelia Kaye-Smith, with a commentary by Richmond P. Bond, of the department of English; and Desert Islands, by Walter de la Mare, reviewed by Donald Coney, of the university library staff. More books with commentaries will be added to the circulating library during October.

Efforts to provide post-diploma education by institutions of higher learning have attracted considerable attention in this country during the past few years. An interesting experiment is underway at Lafayette College and the University of Michigan, where numbers of alumni attend classeh held every year for their benefit during the week following the commencement exercises. Seminars for alumni and other methods of continuing intellectual relations have been utilized recently at Amherst, Dartmouth, Vassar, Mount Holyoke, Smith, North Carolina College for Women and other institutions.

BAD CHECK RULE TO BE ENFORCED

Ruling Worked Out by Student Council and Changes for This Year Explained.

The procedure involved in the handling of returned checks, worked out by the Student Council and J. A. Williams last year, will be carried on this year under the same direction in 204 South building. The procedure is as follows:

1. When a student gives a check that is returned for any reason, his name is given by the local bank to the Dean of Student's office. A notice is delivered to the student, requiring his personal signature for the receipt thereof, together with the time of the delivery. The giver of the check is allowed 48 hours from the receipt of the notice to make the check good and bring the cancelled check or a receipt of payment therefor to J. A. Williams during his office hours. If the check is not made good and the receipt produced within the specified time, the giver is placed on check probation, no matter what the cause of the return of the check. This penalty is given for lack of attention to the 48 hour limit.

2. When the giver carries the cancelled check or a receipt to J. A. Williams, the reason for the return of the check is explained. If it is found that the check was returned due to circumstances within the control of the giver, he is placed on check probation. If the check was returned thru error or other circumstances not within the control of the student giving it, the student is excused.

3. If a student does not report within 48 hours after the receipt of the notice, the extreme

CO-EDS HOLD FIRST MEETING OF YEAR

Women's Association Plans Discussed for Coming Year.

The Women's Association held its regular business meeting for the fall quarter last Tuesday, in Spencer Hall, with President Reeme Moore presiding. Mrs. Marvin F. Stacy, Dean of Women, welcomed the new girls. As Treasurer, Harriet L. Daniel made her report and explained that the one dollar per quarter association dues had been added to some, but not to all, bills. She requested all women students to look over their receipts, and if in the rush of registration the dollar fee had been omitted from the regular bill for tuition and matriculation to pay it immediately.

The president explained various constitutional provisions, among them the provision calling for a house president in each house in which as many as ten girls live. These house presidents will be members of the council of the Women's Association. She remarked that as yet only three residences, Spencer Hall, Mrs. J. T. Lawson's, and the Pi Beta Phi sorority house are entitled to house presidents. She announced the election of Ruth Underwood as President at Mrs. Lawson's.

Mrs. Stacy and Ida Currie explained plans for girls athletics. They hope to offer voluntary volley ball, tennis, horse back riding, basket ball, and possibly swimming. The association will petition the university for necessary funds.

Reeme Moore read a letter from J. C. Williams of the Carolina Magazine welcoming the women students to the campus and to the staff of the magazize.

Art Club

All those interested in forming an Art club please meet at Dean Bradshaw's office, 205 South building, at chapel period, 10:23, today to elect a president and make plans for a studio.

PLAY COMMITTEE PICKS FIRST BILL

Select "Get Up and Bar the Door," "Cloey," and "Pop, The Fireman"

Following the reading of five one-act plays by their authors in the Carolina Playmakers' theatre Tuesday night, the play committee consisting of Professors A. C. Howell, English Bagby, W. E. Caldwell, George McKie, M. T. Van Hecke, and Dr. A. S. Lawrence, elected "Get Up and Bar the Door," "Cloey," and "Pop, the Fireman" for the first bill of the year. These plays will be presented in Chapel Hill on November, 6, 7, 8 and carried on the Northern tour soon afterwards.

"Get Up and Bar the Door" is a comedy based on the life of the hill folk of Mississippi and written by A. P. Hudson last spring in Professor Koch's playwriting course. "Cloey" is another of Loretto Carroll Bailey's contributions. But Loretto has made her characters satisfied with life this time. In fact she has made 'Katherine' a man-tamer. "Pop, the Fireman," or "Samuel Hinckle, Fireman," by Joseph Fox may be a good comedy of New England life. It has possibilities.

"Desert Shadow," a unique and striking play by Laurabelle Dietrich, and "One Fine Day" by Louise Perry have been reserved for revision and try-out performances in the playwriting and producing classes.

Typoscript copies of the plays selected for production will be available in the library later in the week for the use of students and others who wish to try out for any of these parts. Try-outs will be held on Monday, October 6 at 4:30 and 7:30 P. M.

A dress rehearsal will be given on November 1 for the benefit of the Southern Educational Association.

First Senior Smoker To Be Held Tuesday

The senior class will inaugurate the series of class smokers by holding their initial meeting Tuesday night at 9 o'clock in Swain hall, according to a decision reached at the meeting of the executive committee last night.

There will be several good speakers and the "Carolina Buccaneers" will furnish music for the occasion. All seniors are especially urged to be present as an outline of the year's program for the class will be given at this time.

Infirmary List

Those who were confined to the Infirmary on Wednesday are: Herb Nelson, Worth Baldwin, and Allen Robert.

Geometry Coaching

All persons desiring to take plane geometry with a tutor are asked to meet in room 203 South building Thursday evening at 7:30.

U. N. C. PRESS HAS PUBLISHED OVER A HUNDRED BOOKS

University Publications Deal With Great Variety of Subject Matter; Dr. L. R. Wilson Heads Directors.

By Virginia Douglas

It seems well now and then to outline for the benefit of the students the history and nature of various university organizations. The University of North Carolina Press, well-known enough to the learned world, may need some explanations to the students on the campus.

The press was formed in 1922 for the purpose of publishing scholarly works. Dr. Louis R. Wilson was then and is now director, but W. T. Couch has been acting head since 1925. As to the rest of the organization, there are a board of governors of ten faculty members and three alumni, a manuscript committee and a finance committee. The board of governors is the final authority.

The press has published in all over 100 volumes, and averages now from 15 to 20 works a year. It is the University of North Carolina Press, but it is not avidly and rabidly North Carolinian. It is not a narrow publishing house for the benefit of faculty members alone. Indeed, over half the volumes are work of outsiders. Nine of the 16 books on the fall list are by outlanders.

If a book can be correctly made in North Carolina, very well, it is. But if for any reason Belgium or Wisconsin can print a particular manuscript more satisfactorily, Belgium or Wisconsin does it. Or if New York should handle the printing, New York does. However, most of the work is divided between Durham and Raleigh.

The press publishes a good many books having to do with social subjects, but it does not restrict itself. It has published everything from text books for adult illiterates to works on Egyptian art. And its markets are as far apart as the North Carolina mountaineers are from the dead Pharoahs.

MEETING TONIGHT OF DEBATE SQUAD

The first regular meeting of the debate squad will be held tonight at 7:30 in Murphey 201. All undergraduates, both men and women, are invited to come out. Attendance at squad meetings counts a half-course credit.

The meeting tonight will be devoted to organization of the squad, and to an address by Dr. Horace Williams, founder of debating at Carolina. Dr. Williams will tell something of the history of debating and the value to be derived from forensics.

Teachers' Jobs For One Hundred Ten

According to data compiled by I. C. Griffin, of the school of education, of 110 graduates and undergraduates who applied for positions, 86 have been placed by the University. Aside from these, 42 former graduates of the University succeeded in getting jobs through the teachers' bureau during the summer. From the 83 graduates of the school of education in the class of 1930, all except three report that they have secured satisfactory positions.

Advantages For The Sub-par Athlete

Intramural athletics here have expanded in recent years until now practically every student is offered some form of sport in which he may participate. The opportunities range from fencing and other indoor sports to tag football and track.

Last year participation was gratifying to the Intramural department. More men than ever before participated in the various contests offered, and the teams appeared more evenly matched than ever before.

If the dormitories and fraternities respond with the same enthusiasm this year there is no reason why the intramural department shouldn't enjoy another good season. Attractive awards are offered the winners in the various departments, and more important still is the idea back of all intramural athletics—a chance for every man to engage in some sport.

The time has not yet arrived when players will graduate from the intramural league to varsity teams. That will not happen until the competition in the Intramural league becomes more intense and until more men participate in the contests.

Residents of dormitories and fraternity houses can make this fall's tag football season interesting as well as enjoyable if they will give the Intramural department their cooperation. Prompt appearance at playing fields and observance of schedules will go a long way toward improving the season and will encourage those interested in providing a sport for everyone.

Inter Dormitory Yells

It seems that down in the old quadrangle composed of Ruffin, Manly, Mangum and Grimes dormitories it has become customary during the last few days for the residents of the different dormitories to exchange opinions by way of long shouts and at a time when all good students should be vigorously studying. At first consideration this desire on the part of the students of one building to give their thoughts and ideas to fellow students in an adjoining dormitory seems the acme of good fellowship and cooperation among students. But when one remembers the manner of communication one begins to have a little doubt because even the best ideas lose something in being shouted from an open window without apparent regard for destination.

Should one hear, and I certainly hope one does not, I'm afraid he would immediately lose all belief in the high mindedness of college students and perhaps revert to that all too popular concept that they're in college for no good after all. After consigning each other individually and collectively to the nethermost regions of the hottest place pictured by the imagination of man, they branch out and take in other subjects and past and future generations. When the final accusation has been made and refuted virtual quiet reigns, broken only by occasional verbal sallies.

Through all this bombardment of words there have been some, in fact a majority of students of the dormitories who have been sitting impatiently waiting for a little silence so that they could study or otherwise concentrate. It is regrettable that many should be bothered by a few but as long as the many with the strength of numbers submit to the tyranny of a few then it's not up to the disinterested spectator to extend sympathy. Rather let the majority rise in their righteous wrath and obtain their silence by any means known to them that doesn't include first degree murder.—D. L. C., Jr.

Higher And Higher

The new University of Pittsburgh is nearing completion. When we speak of a university we at once think of a spreading campus with numerous buildings sprawled over it; however, the new University of Pittsburgh is not so. This structure, upon completion, will be 42 stories high and will be known as the Cathedral of Learning. In reality it will be a whole University in one building.

This idea of a whole University in one building is a new one and not only keeps pace with modern inventions but is going ahead of the times. Times were when the highest building on a campus was only two stories high (witness Gerrard Hall) and the students were intimately acquainted. But now the buildings have grown higher as if to keep pace with the slogan—"A Higher Education for All."—J. J. P.

OPEN FORUM

PRAYERS FOR THE TEAM

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

I have read with interest the many editorials in your paper concerning the lack of cheering during the recent Carolina-Wake Forest game. The editorial writers come to the conclusion that if there had been better cheering the result might have been different. With that conclusion I cannot agree. The score of 13-7 represents the true difference between the two teams and no amount of cheering could vary that score.

I do not believe that too much emphasis should be laid on cheering. The football player knows that if he doesn't do his best he will be yanked out of the game. Cheer number 19 or 69 will not help the players very much. Each member of the team is sensible to the fact that honors await him: class offices, fraternities, clubs, and last but not least, the smiles of our fair co-eds. Is not that encouragement enough?

Cheering annoys the student body as well as the players. The players are too intent on the signals of their quarterback to pay much attention. A football play moves swiftly and a senseless cheer No. 42 robs the spectator of the fine points of the play. If there must be cheering why not confine it to the period of "time out" or during the halves. Cheering during the half will have more effect on the tired players in the locker room than during the actual play. I do not mean to discourage cheering altogether during the play; if a particular piece of good work is done by a player, by all means let him have a hearty hand. There is no need to call on Cheer 14 to let him know of our approval. And in the same way, if a piece of bad work is performed—let him know of our disapproval. All this can be done better by the individual spectator rather than by organized cheering.

Since the Y. M. C. A. is getting credit for practically every activity on the campus why not turn the cheering activity over to them. A few hymns, a couple of Biblical yells, interspersed with a few prayers might do wonders. At any rate it will be a great improvement over our present system as it now stands.

AT THE CAROLINA

The Four Marx Brothers are back on the audible screen again in another merry mad, wild and woolly musical comedy picture said to be even funnier than their first talking comedy, the well-remembered laugh sensation of last season, "The Cocoanuts." Their new comedy is aptly called "Animal Crackers," and like "The Cocoanuts," is the audible screen's hilarious adaptation of The Marx Brothers' own most recent New York musical comedy success.

In "Animal Crackers," The Marx Brothers do and say all those things that so delighted audiences who saw them in "The Cocoanuts." But in addition to their well known, inimitable table comedy antics, these popular entertainers, adding brand new situations and gags to a really laughable story, seem more carefree and gay than ever before. Playing with their tongues in their cheeks Groucho, Harpo, Chico, and Zeppo again should score favorably with audiences of all ages and tastes.

The romantic feminine lead is charmingly and gaily played by Lillian Roth, Paramount's up coming ingenue who recently scored an outstanding success in "Honey." Miss Roth, in addition to making merry with the Marx Brothers, introduces a new song hit, "Why Am I So Romantic?", a number that just suits her personality.

George Kaufman and Morris Ryskind, popular Broadway playwrights, wrote the story of "Animal Crackers," which comes to the Carolina theatre today.

By Moore Bryson

I am still looking for a little scandal to write about but either the campus is quiet or I am not on the job. My personal opinion is that the members of the School of Scandal have given it up as a bad proposition since the failure of the vigilance squad to discover the identity of the girl with the black hair.

Ah, ha. A very attractive girl in an orchid dress just told me that she, with two other girls, has been put on probation for the week-end. But alas, it is the same story; there was really no reason why they should be discriminated against.

I have heard of professors sending out of their class in order to get the students to attend, but this year is the first time I have ever heard of the reverse being done. What is more, even the radio was brought into play in order to locate the missing prof. Don't know whether Burn's Detective Agency was brought into action or not. Our only comment is, "Welcome home, Mr. Posey."

Ed Scheidt, checker player extraordinary, is apparently casting his amorous glances toward new fields since the departure of last year's Law School secretary. Don't you think, Ed, that out of respect the period of mourning should have been just a little longer?

If the Four Marx Brothers are as funny in their coming picture, "Animal Crackers," as they were in "The Cocoanuts" (and I hear they are.) then we all might as well prepare to listen to puns for the next three months.

"Bootie" Uzzell said that he would have gone to see "The Passion Play" but he was tired of those blamed sex dramas.

Passing by the Engineering Building the other night, I noticed that the boys were working a la nude, that is they were as far as I could see. It is probably for the best that there still remain a few schools on the campus that have not been invaded by the co-eds.

"Goat" Randolph, an old Carolina foot-ball star, is half of the firm of Randolph-McDonald which has taken over the old Pritchard Patterson location. I'm mighty glad to see "Goat" on the Hill for he is one of the few clothiers who hasn't tried to sell me a light brown suit.

From the amount of cheering at the Wake Forest game it seems very appropriate to have Billy Arthur as one of the Cheerleaders.

Have you noticed the large number of high-powered "motors" on the campus? Now in my day, a boy was lucky if he could hire a horse and buggy to take his girl to the Gimghoul.

Which reminds me that in my day the Freshmen had a lot more fun than they do today. Why, there were First Year men that didn't learn the admission price to the "Pick" until after rushing season was over, and as for paying for a "dope," it was unheard of.

Carolyn Cox passed through town yestarday enroute to Winston-Salem. Shades of Summer School!

One of the church sign boards tells that "You can't steal first base." I can hardly wait until next week to learn how to play foot-ball.

Taking Electrical Convenience From Ol' Man River

THE total capacity of waterwheel generators built by General Electric in the last ten years is more than enough to supply light and power for twenty cities of one million population.

Installed in power houses along the waterways, these machines transform the strength of mighty rivers into useful electric energy for homes, for industry, and for transportation.

The vision and skill of college-trained men are largely responsible for the continuing leadership of General Electric in its service of furnishing machines and devices that provide the swift, sure convenience and the economy of electricity — on land and sea and in the air.

Cards Outhit Philadelphia 9 to 5, But Bunch Hits Off Grimes for Win.

By Jack Bessen

The mad onslaught of the St. Louis Cardinals stopped abrubtly when they dropped the first game of the World Series to the World Champion Athletics, 5-2 yesterday before a capacity crowd at Shibe Park, Philadelphia.

The batteries for the opener were: Grove, the speed ball king, and Cochrane for Philadelphia; Grimes, the Cardinal hurling ace and veteran "spitter," with Mancuso doing the receiving.

The A's scored first in the second inning when Foxx doubled and came home on Miller's sacrifice fly to Blades.

The Cards came into their own right in next frame tallying two runs on four singles. From then on the Cards were held scoreless while the A's increased their total in the fourth, sixth, seventh, and eighth innings.

The Athletics, although outhit 9-5, scored on well-bunched hits and also homers by Cochrane and Simmons, while the Red Birds bunched their hits in the fruitful second inning. The fielding of Joe Boley and Max Bishop featured in the victory of the World Champions.

SPORTS STAFF TO MEET 1:30 TODAY

A meeting of the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel has been called for this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the offices of the publication in the basement of Alumni building. All reporters and editors must be present at this meeting as some very important matters are to be taken up.

Reporters who are absent will be dropped from the staff unless they can give a legitimate excuse.

There are several vacancies on the staff for those who are interested in the work and have time to cover their beats regularly.

Wrestling Call

Freshman wrestlers, experienced and unexperienced, and upperclassmen, who wish to join the wrestling squad, have been asked to meet with Coaches Abbott and Quinlan at 7:30 in Gerrard hall tonight.

WRESTLING TEAM TO MEET TONIGHT

Candidates for the freshman wrestling squad are to meet Peyton Abbot, coach, in Gerrard hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Abbott is to outline the squad's work for the fall and to speak on other subjects in connection with wrestling.

At the meeting the names of those attending will be taken and equipment will be issued over the week-end, so that the wrestlers can begin work by Monday. Every freshman interested in the sport, regardless of previous experience, is urged to attend. Upperclassmen who have never participated in wrestling here, but wish to do so, are also invited to the meeting. Coach Chuck Quinlan, of the varsity team, will speak briefly.

The freshman grapplers will probably meet the State, Duke, V. P. I., V. M. I., Washington and Lee, and Davidson freshmen and the Oak Ridge team.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR GOLF TEAM

The golf team is rapidly rounding into shape in its daily practice on the Hope Valley golf course. The players showing up especially well are Joe Adams, Aubrey Brooks, Alex Brown, Paul Carter, Meade Willis, Fred Laxton, Billy O'Brien and Burhead Chatham. All these have been showing exceptionally good form and have turned in some fine scores. Brooks, Carter, Brown and Willis have been playing steadily around 75 so far this season, par on the course being 71. With a little more practice and when the greens are mowed, these players should shoot par golf. Coach Kenfield hopes to pick a team from this squad to make the Virginia trip Thanksgiving.

The prospects for the freshman team look quite hopeful. Allen Smith from Asheville and John Burroughs from Savannah will probably make the grade, and Michaels from Greensboro is expected to make a strong bid for a position on the team.

BELL AND VENABLE SPEAK AT CHEMISTRY RECEPTION

At a reception given last night for chemistry students, Dr. F. P. Venable, who was introduced by Dr. J. M. Bell, gave some reminiscences of chemistry as it was in other times. Dr. Bell in his introduction of Dr. Venable, mentioned a few of the traditions of the chemistry department and said that he hoped the new men would uphold these traditions.

Varsity Line Shows Strength Against Tricky Plays.

A fighting bunch of freshmen engaged the varsity in a lively scrimmage yesterday. Using a set of V. P. I plays, the freshmen were not able to do any consistent gaining. At times, however, the frosh made several neat gains, mostly by passes from Wollen to Matthews. In general the line plays were stopped for little or no gain. The inspired varsity line held the fighting freshmen back in spite of their tricky plays, but the yearling team gave a good account of itself, both on offense and defense.

Matthews, plucky little end, was the outstanding man in the freshman line. He was in on every play, often smearing varsity plays behind the line of scrimmage. One of his favorite acts was to break through and get Magner. Matthews showed great aptitude for catching passes, hauling them in from all angles. Woolen-to-Matthews should make a formidable passing combination. Parker, Shore, and Brandt also showed up well in the frosh line. Woolen and McShain did well in the backfield.

The two teams scrimmaging the varsity were composed of Parker and Spencer, centers; Shore, Barkley, Wilson, and Sherrill, guards; Strickland, Crane, McLeod, and Schmukler, tackles; Brandt, Matthews, and Grossman, ends; Woolen and Totts, quarterbacks; Eanes and Kline, fullbacks; and Snead, McShain, Whitener, and Reynolds, halfbacks.

Many Are Enrolled In Psychology Courses

In keeping with the growth of the other departments of the school, the psychology department announces a large increase in the number of students enrolled in their classes.

Due to the departure of Mr. Barkley, who has gone to Illinois, two new laboratory instructors have been secured. Mr. L. E. Rackley, a graduate of Peabody College, Tenn., who did graduate work at the University of Chicago, and J. G. Killinger, graduate of Wittenburg College, Ohio, are the two new men. Mr. DeWick is to remain with the department.

One other change in the teaching personnel of this department is the addition of N. W. Lyon as a teaching fellow. Mr. Lyon graduated from Columbia. Miss Zorn of New York University is the new depatrmental secretary.

Big Send Off Being Planned for Team in Front of Swain Hall at 8:15.

SCRIMMAGE YESTERDAY

First Team Battles Freshmen For Hour at Stadium in Last Stiff Workout.

Coach Collins and thirty-three Tar Heels will entrain tonight for Roanoke, Virginia, where they are going to workout tomorrow in preparation for their first conference game with V. P. I. Saturday. A light workout will be held at the stadium before the squad departs from Swain Hall tonight.

Billy Arthur and Ashby Penn, in charge of cheering until the coming election, have called a pep meeting for 8:15 P. M. in front of Swain Hall and urge that the entire student body turn out to give the "Big Blue" team a good send off. They are playing a hard game Saturday and will need the support of the student body.

Yesterday's Workout

The first varsity team scrimmaged the freshmen for an hour yesterday afternoon at the stadium, and showed improvement in punch and drive, running up many scores on the yearling eleven.

Those not getting into the scrimmage session spent the afternoon drilling on taking out tackles and ends. Backfields and ends were lead through offensive blocking drills by Coach Sapp, and showed improvement at making way for the ball carrier.

The varsity eleven mixed up many plays against the freshmen and made gain after gain from scrimmage, but the passing attack was a bit ragged. The blocking by the line during the session was better than usual, but showed at times something of the lack of drive which

Paul Wolfe, center on the V. P. I. football team, is said to be an able pivot man. He will be up against two of the finest centers in the south, Ned Lipscomb and Red Gilbreath, Saturday afternoon at Blacksburg when the Tar Heels invade Miles stadium.

Football Loses Out for Time Being To Announcing of Game by Graham McNamee.

Although the curtain has been drawn up for the 1930 football season, many Carolina students gathered around the various loudspeakers and listened intently to the reports of the World Series game being broadcasted from Philadelphia by none other than the illustrious Graham McNamee. For the time being, shouts for touchdowns gave way to yells for home runs, and those around the radios were just as excited as the spectators themselves. The final score was 5-2 in the favor of the redoubtable Athletics.

The students seemed to be of divided opinion as to ther choice of the winner. Some were betting on the Cards and some evi-

Theatrical Publication Arouses Unusual Comment and Praise

Nothing has aroused so much interest in the literary sphere of the theatrical world lately as the recent publication of Stage Scenery and Lighting by Samuel Selden and Hunton D. Sellman. This book, a complete and thorough study of theatrical scenery and lighting, answers the many complex problems which directors, producers, and stage technicians are constantly facing.

From the incessant praise which critics, reviewers, and renowned theatrical artists have bestowed upon the contribution, it appears that Selden, who is now associate director of the Carolina Playmakers, and his collaborator have, by a single stroke, immortalized their names in their professional field.

Hubert Heffner has said, "In the future, I feel that the little theatre in America will look upon this book as 'the authority' in technical stagecraft." The Theatre Arts Monthly magazine states, "Occasionally a book is published that immediately enters the category of essentials. To the students of the mechanics of the theatre this is such a book .... It is seldom that a reviewer may honestly indulge in superlatives, but this book deserves them. It should be, and no doubt will be, in the library of every progressive small theatre." It is this type of criticism which the book has merited from the very beginning.

Albert Bliss, former technical director of the famous Bonstelle Stock company of Detroit and now a noted New York stage designer looks at it in this manner, "Without a doubt the most comprehensive study of this subject, it presents information that heretofore has only been passed around through word of mouth by the finest craftsmen in the business. Quoting for Ralph Sargent Bailey's review in the Theatre Magazine for October, "Sit down and think up any question you like which the twin subjects of lighting and setting might be expected to cover—or might not. I assure you without, as the lawmakers have it, fear of successful contradiction that you will find your answer between these covers."

The general purpose of the authors is to supply a need for a short, but comprehensive and practical handbook covering the field for college, school, and community theatres. Although it is directed primarily to those who are designing, building, painting, and lighting scenery and is complete to the dot in its project, there is something of interest for the director and even the actor.

Lee Simonson has recommended it for a text for students in drama all over the country and further states, "Any amateur who thoroughly masters the contents of this book will, in fact, no longer be an amateur."

Samuel Selden, who returned to the Carolina Playmakers this fall after a year's absence during which time he studied in the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts, graduated from Yale in 1922. He was connected with the Cape Playhouse at Dennis, Mass. Later he bace Assistant technical director and stage manager of the Provincetown Playhouse, The Greenwich Village Theatre, and The Intimate Opera Company.

BILLY ARTHUR TO REVIVE CHEERING

Cheering has come to the fore again and promises to compete with that of the now-legendary Kay Kyser. Look to your time-dusted laurels, Kay! Billy Arthur has, by dint of much effort and time, secured permission for special seats for an organized cheering section for boys who will Rah! Rah! Rah! in the way that is most effective and inspiring to the team.

Editorials, letters, and columns have sprung from the press condemning the students who refuse to test their lungs in any other way than to see how long they can keep a bottle to their lips without coming up for air. Now Billy takes it all upon himself to do something about it, and has sent in a call for volunteers to help him by yelling to the best of their ability, and then, if all goes well, and the specimen is husky and has a voice that sends encouragement to the players, he will have a seat on the line at the Maryland game and all home games following.

Billy has worked and has accomplished what no other would take the time to do. He has the spunk, and the get-up-and-go of a real cheer-leader such as the University has needed for years and sought in vain. It is up to everyone to give him time and support. M. M. D.

Directory Completed

The master directory for the University has been completed, with the exception of a few changes of addresses, it was announced yesterday. The new directory will go to the printers today. All students are requested to leave their change of address at the 'Y' today.

was evident in the Wake Forest game.

June Underwood and Red Parsley broke through several times to throw the frosh for losses, and George Thompson was tackling and smearing interference well also. Henry House showed his usual drive at hitting the line and got away for several long gains. Magner, Nash, and Branch also looked good in the scrimmage, Branch returning punts and receiving passes for substantial gains.

The passing attack showed considerable weakness. The receivers were able to get clear of the freshman defense but were unable to hold on to the ball. Branch caught Magner's passes consistently, but the ends failed to do so.

Coaches Cerney and Fetzer were working hard with the first eleven yesterday, Coach Cerney drilling the backs, and Coach Fetzer showing the linemen their mistakes.

The varsity lineup included: Lipscomb, center; Kerr and Newcombe, guards; Thompson and Underwood, tackles; Tabb and Parsley, ends; Branch, quarterback; Nash and Magner, halfbacks; and House, fullback. Others who saw action in the scrimmage were: Crow, guard; Tabb, end; Hodges, Daniel, Adkins, and McDade, tackles.

WEAK FORWARDS WORRY ASHMORE

Coach Is Conservative on Basketball Team's Chance of Victory.

Coach Ashmore on his return to Chapel Hill refused to make any except the most conservative of statements concerning the prospects of this year's basketball squad. The old reliable bromide "if the sophomores come thru" holds good for the Tar Heel's basketball team.

Seven letter men are returning to the squad. Ashmore's main task is in finding a few reliable forwards who will carry the brunt of the scoring. Captain Marpet and Tom Alexander comprise one of the strongest pair of guards in the Southern conference. Sandy Dameron and Paul Edwards, centers, are back in school and will serve as reliable cogs in the Carolina offense. Ashmore sees possibilities in Slater, a substitute forward of last season. Page Choate, guard, will play in a supporting role to Marpet and Alexander.

Hines, star of last year's freshman quint, with a little more polish on his defensive work, will probably be doing a lot of work at one of the forward positions. Henry, lanky guard, turned in some good basketball with the frosh and will give the regulars something to worry about in holding down their positions. Beale, who did the jumping for the frosh, is also back. Six other sophomores who won their numerals returned this fall.

The lack of forwards makes the situation grave enough to warrant Coach Ashmore's call for candidates in the middle of October, which is a bit earlier than usual. Unless some undiscovered luminaries in the guise of forwards make their appearance before the beginning of the season, much shifting of men from one position to another may be done to balance the outfit. The exact schedule is a mystery still in the hands of the business manager.

New Book Club Looks To Closer Relations With The Alumni

The University of North Carolina has made several contributions to this movement, including an extensive report by Daniel L. Grant, formerly Alumni Secretary of the university, under the direction of a committee on the Study of the Continuation of Intellectual Relations between Colleges and Alumni of the University. Recently an introductory survey of alumni and adult education was undertaken by the American Association of Adult Education in co-operation with the American Alumni Council, and a complete report upon it, including a number of highly interesting revelations and plans, has been prepared and issued by Wilfred B. Shaw, field representative of the adult education association.

The Alumni Book Club ,however, is an entirely ne wand distinct contribution to the field.

Frank Graham, president of the university, states that the Alumni Book Club "will meet a real need in the life of our alumni. It will make available what is best and most recent in literature, philosophy, economics, sociology, history and the sciences. Through this club University education carries on beyond the college walls and the college years to meet the deeper needs of the human spirit. The university, through this library and faculty service, with non-commercial and discriminating interest, becomes a new focus of intellectual and spiritual life of her sons and daughters everywhere."

Alumnus Wins Prize

Judah Shohan of Greensboro, who received his A. B. degree here last June, has recently been awarded second prize in a national contest sponsored by the Morris Plan Bankers association. His essay, "Industrial Banking, the Focal Point of Consumption Credit," won $100 in prize money.

limit allowed him to report is 10 days. (Will probably be reduced to five this year.) If he does not do so within that time, he is required to appear before the Student Council and explain his reason for not appearing and explaining the return of the check.

4. When a student is placed on check probation, either for giving the bad check when he could have controlled the circumstances causing its return, or for not reporting within the specified time, a notice of his probation is sent to his parents or gaurdian, informing them of the reason for his probation.

5. Second offences draw automatic suspension from the University, with right of appeal to the Student Council. A notice is sent to the offending student, advising him of his suspension, and informing him of the time of meeting of the Council. If his appeal is not made at the first meeting after his suspension, he loses his right of appeal, and his suspension becomes absolute.. A notice is sent the Registrar and the Dean of the School of the expelled student, at the time of the expulsion. These appeals will be heard by the entire Student Council this year. Last year, until the Spring quarter, they were heard by the secretary.

This procedure, with slight variations, has been used for the last four years and has proved satisfactory. One cafe owner reports that before the Student Council accepted the responsibility of enforcing payment of returned checks, he lost from one to four thousand dollars a year. Last year he lost approximately two hundred dollars, most of which was from transient check flashers and forgers.

It is gratifying to note that 90 percent of the student checks given are good. Of the ten percent returned, only one percent are returned due to the fault of the students.

The University has guaranteed enforcement of these rules, and in return the merchants of Chapel Hill have made the following agreement with University officials:

1. To cash checks (which includes accepting checks in payment for goods sold, etc.) for only such University of North Carolina students as they actually know or have identified as bona fide students in good standing.

2. To assure themselves in every case before accepting a University of North Carolina student's check that such check is properly made out.

3. To refuse to accept or hold post-dated checks of University of North Carolina students. (Except in cases of special contract arrangement between the parties. In such cases the holder expressly accepts the risk of loss.)

4. To discourage the use of counter checks by University of North Carolina students, particularly those counter checks that are printed with a bank's name on them.

5. Never to take a check from a University of North Carolina student simply as evidence of his obligation to pay money when they know or have reason to believe that such check is not backed by a sufficient deposit with the bank upon which it is drawn.

This agreement is signed by Dean Francis F. Bradshaw, J. A. Williams, as Secretary of the Check Committee, and Ralph C. Greene, as President of the student body, representatives of the University, and forty one merchants of Chapel Hill.

Not a single one of the merchants approached refused to sign the agreement. Some expressed doubts and said that they were afraid that they might offend some of the students by requiring identification, in some cases, but they were reminded that fair-minded students would realize their situation and would be glad to cooperate in establishing their own credit with the merchants. Also, athletic pass books may serve as identifiers, as it is supposed that most students will retain possession of their own pass books.

INVESTIGATION SHOWS COLLEGE PAYS DIVIDENDS

Latest Study Made by Members of Telephone Company.

By R. B. House

The fate of America is tied up with business. For better or worse this is a business man's civilization. Certain able critics of American life such as Charles A. Beard, James Truslow Adams, Harold J. Laski and Stuart Chase, realizing that business is in the saddle, set themselves to examining our whole business structure with a view to its improvement. Their articles, appearing in various periodicals, make stimulating and interesting reading. But no one, critical or otherwise, dreams of any progress in America that ignores the structure of business in any particular.

When we think of college education, therefore, one main question we ask, Does it make for success in business? The answer is, Yes. Some years ago President Lowell of Harvard made a study of "Who's Who" to see if there was any connection between success in college and success in business. He found that success in college and success in business did go hand in hand.

How Education Pays

Corroborations of this study have been appearing ever since. The latest is "Success in College and Business" by Harold S. Bridgman of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. This company has made a specialty of employing college graduates and watching them. Mr. Bridgman made a study of 1310 graduates who had been out of college four or more years and who had spent at least half of

ALUMNI REVIEW FOR OCTOBER IS NOW OFF PRESS

Picture of Old Well on Cover; Contains Pictorial Account Of Wake Forest Game.

In accordance with the plan inaugurated last year of featuring a scene of the University on the back of the Alumni Review, the October copy which went into circulation Thursday morning, has the picture of the Old Well on the cover. The backs are made of a heavy enameled paper with the inner sheets made of a lighter grade of the same paper.

Statistics showing that the freshman class has included in it this year a larger percentage of out-of-state members than the class of last year is a feature of the introductory story of the magazine.

Attention is called to the numerous faculty replacements of this year and to the new deans, Dr. Allen Wilson Hobbs of the college of liberal arts and Dr. Wilson W. Pierson, Jr., of the graduate school, and especially to the special feature of the Alumni Book Club. Two interesting features of the Review include an account of the occupations of the members of the class of '30 in two parts by Glenn Holder, assistant alumni secretary, and the football feature giving an account of the Carolina-Wake Forest game played here September 27. The latter feature

More Than Hundred Education Freshmen

There are 103 freshmen enrolled in the school of education, according to official count. For each individual freshman the University has compiled a sheet showing the score he made on high school intelligence tests, and also the grades he made on each subject. This is done with a view to comparing the grades made in high school with those made in college. At the end of the year the findings will be turned over to the University authorities.

SAVILLE CHOSEN TO MAKE STUDY

Appointed by Government to Determine Means of Combating Coastal Erosion.

Professor Thorndyke Saville, member of the faculty of the engineering school, was recently appointed by the chief of the government engineers one of the seven members of an newly created board to determine effective methods of combating coastal erosion.

The rivers and harbors act of 1930 authorized the Chief of Government Engineers to have investigations and studies made to determine effective means of combating coastal erosion and specified that a beach erosion board, made up of four engineer officers of the army and three state engineers.

The appointments made by the War Department were Col. E. I. Brown, Col. W. J. Borden, Lieut.-Col. Elliot J. Dent, and Major Gordon R. Young. The state engineers appointed are: Richard King Hale, of the department of public works in Boston; Victor J. Gelineau, chief engineer of the New Jersey state board of commerce and navigation; and Mr. Saville.

This board has the power to make studies under the direction of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers of the erosion of the shores along the seacoasts of the United States and in the Great Lakes territory.

Mr. Saville is chief engineer of the department of conservation and development of North Carolina, and has made researches upon the subject of coastal erosion.

Sketch Club Meets With Mrs. Caldwell

The Sketch club, which is the art division of the Community Club, met at the home of its chairman, Mrs. W. E. Caldwell at 412 Rosemary Lane, Thursday afternoon, October 2, at 3:30 o'clock.

The club members made sketches of some of the old trees on Rosemary Lane, and then went to Mrs. Caldwell's home for an hour of study. The art of watercoloring was studied, with special attention paid to color combination.

The club plans to study modern American paintings this year, and hopes to be studying the paintings of Chase and Sargent by the end of October.

COUCH ON TRIP TO S. C.

UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS TELL OF COLUMBIA SUMMER SCHOOL

Drs. Bagby, Knight and Jordan Spend Summer Teaching in New York; Differences in Northern and Southern Students And Nature of Courses Described.

Last summer three University profesors, Dr. English Bagby of the psychology department and Drs. Jordan and Knight of the educational department, taught at the Columbia summer school in New York. Each tells of his classes there:

Dr. Bagby taught a course in psychology of personality. This course, which involves the discussion of emotional disorders, becomes more important yearly as the number of neurotic cases mounts rapidly. The neurotic woman is an important character in contemporary literature.

Dr. Bagby said that practically all neurotics are women, wealthy women, that have no children, or that leave the care of their children, usually just one child, to the impersonal care of a governess. The narrowness and superficiality of their interests causes the mental diseases so prevalent among society women.

The class numbered about a 100 regulars and 10 to 15 visitors daily. The students were older and more mature than our boys; and the Columbians had a different reason than we for studying psychology. The New York students were taking it in order to advance themselves in their vocations, to learn the technique of handling cases of mental pathology. Our students study psychology for cultural reasons.

Dr. Jordan's course, which is general psychology, concerns mental development, the psychology of teaching and the processes of human learning. Dr. Jordan has said, "Environment, more than heredity, shapes our characters; but science, as yet, cannot fix the proportion. We are certain though that there is such a thing as inherited structural characteristics; that is, what the human animal does not have to learn, inherited reflexes." Also, "One-third of the seriously insane could have been cured by proper treatment in childhood."

While at Columbia the professor used a text book that he has written, which he also uses here. The doctor taught three types of students there: those training for teaching, nursing or those interested in social work. His classes, just asall others, were very large, comprising around 175 students.

Dr. Knight says that summer school at Columbia is not the makeshift affair that some critics claim it to be; this summer school is an educational center seething with activity and intellectual curiousity. 14,000 students enrolled there last summer.

The school is like a melting pot of education; different types come from all parts of the country: "unlicked cub professors" from the west, sedate department heads of eastern schools, fresh bachelors of art from the South and superintendents, supervisors, principals and teachers from public schools. The students are independent, for they choose their own teachers and quickly drop them if their teachers are unsatisfactory.

HEAVY RUN MADE ON LOAN FUNDS

Two Hundred Students Draw $12,000 in First Two Weeks.

The office of dean of students has already aided students by loans totaling more than $12,000, aiding more than two hundred students, according to figures announced yesterday by F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students.

Fifty freshmen, forty sophomores, forty-eight juniors, forty-three seniors, six law students, three medical students, three special, and eight graduate students make a total of 201 students who have received loans in this way.

The first loan fund was established in 1879, four years after the re-opening of the university, by Charles F. Deems who had been an Episcopal minister here. The gift, of $300, was in memory of Theodore Disosway Deems, the son of the donor.

Later, Dr. Deems made an additional gift of $400, and in 1881 William H. Vanderbilt contributed $10,000 to the Deems fund through the original donor. By 1908-09, the fund had more than doubled in value and the last report, in July, 1929, showed it to have a principal of more than $80,000.

The second fund established was the Martin fund, when Thomas D. Martin of Raleigh, N. C., donated $7,400 in 1908-09. Since that time, 13 other funds have been added making a total value of $170,000.

DEBATERS HEAR HORACE WILLIAMS

Largest Debate Group in University History Attends Meeting.

At the first meeting of the debate squad held in Murphey Hall last night 37 men, the largest group ever to come out for debate, heard Dr. Horace Williams, who was responsible for Carolina's start in the forensic field in 1897, tell something of the history of debating at the University. Dr. Williams, in order to show the value of debating, cited such men as Aycock, Graham, Roberts, Parker and Stacy. He quoted Judge Stacy, winner of the Mangum Medal, as saying that he had been able to overcome men of much greater experience because of the ability gained through debating here. Dr. Williams closed with this statement: "In debating you take a question and seek to see what the truth is. Isn't that what life is?"

Judge R. W. Winson, also a winner of the Mangum Medal, made a short impromptu address in which he emphasized the need of logic in debate and urged the debater always to master the principles underlying the questions which they discuss.

Following the meeting of the squad the debate council met to consider an invitation to debate from the University of Porto Rico in Rio Piedras, P. R. This invitation will probably be accepted and the debate held here during the spring quarter.

Faculty Orchestra To Meet Thursday

The faculty orchestra will commence its third year with a preliminary meeting in Pierson hall next Thursday evening, October 9, at 8 o'clock. The organization has been fortunate in securing Lamar Stringfield, the composer, to conduct it during the coming season. Dr. D. A. MacPherson, who has been conducting the orchestra for the past two years, will become concertmeister. It is urged that all faculty members, especially newcomers, who play any orchestra instruments, attend the meeting Thursday night.

FACULTY RULING PUT INTO EFFECT

Motion Adopted Last Spring Relative to Courses Passed Will Be Enforced.

An important ruling of the undergraduate faculty, passed last May, goes into effect this fall, Dr. A. W. Hobbs announced this morning. The ruling has to do with a slight change in the number of courses a student must pass in order to remain in college.

The part of the regulation applying to freshmen requires that a freshman pass two courses in the first two quarters and five courses in the first three quarters. This is practically the same rule that was in effect last year except for the fact that a freshman had to pass one course each quarter.

After the freshman year, a student must pass at least one course each quarter, four courses in two successive quarters and seven courses in three successive quarters. By two succesive quarters is meant the last two quarters of residence and by three successive quarters is meant the last three quarters of residence.

Deficiencies may be made up by correspondence or in summer school. In either of these cases, only credits exceeding one course credit so obtained shall count for readmission.

C. B. Robson Given Research Fellowship

Last August C. B. Robson received from the University his Ph.D. degree in the field of political science and history. The subject of his dissertation was "The Influence of German Thought on Political Theory in the United States in the Nineteenth Century."

Dr. Robson has been awarded a research fellowship which will enable him to study in the Huntington library located at Huntington Beach, Calif. Dr. William W. Pierson, acting dean of the graduate school, made the following statement concerning Dr. Robson.

"I regard Dr. Robson as one of the most brilliant students I ever had the pleasure of teaching. Robson has written a dissertation of fine research quality that should bring him high reputation."

The distinguished honor given to Dr. Robson recalls the visit to this University of Dr. Max Farrand in the spring. Dr. Farrand was very much interested and impressed by the research activities of the University. That he and the authorities of the Huntington library selected Dr. Robson is not only a compliment to Dr. Robson but to the graduate school as well.

ARTISTS PETITION AUTHORITIES FOR CHARTER GRANT

North Room in Person Hall Is Suggested for Meeting Place.

A petition to Frank P. Graham, president of the University, made public yesterday afternoon revealed the formation of an art club with the "purpose of providing mutual criticism and appreciation in working in the graphic arts."

The chief purpose of the petition, which was in the form of a letter, was to secure a hall in which the newly formed Art club could hold meetings. The place designated by the organization, was the long north room in Person hall, which was conidered well adapted to the purposes of the club because of its central location, its size, and its abundance of light.

In the letter, the petitioners described themselves as members of the student body and members of the community of Chapel Hill. The purpose of the organization is "to hold regular meetings and provide for mutual criticism and appreciation in working in the graphic arts."

The petition continued in speaking of the work of the club: "We are confident that our enterprise will go steadily on and enlist more and more interest in the whole student body. There are many students who have some artistic interest and ability who would be glad of an opportunity to express and increase both during their study here in the University."

The petition laments the fact that there is no training progressing in any college in this state where studies in the graphic arts may be continued, although the high schools are increasingly providing some train-

PLANS UNDERWAY FOR STATE WIDE DRAMA FESTIVAL

Executive Committee of Carolina Dramatic Association to Discuss Annual Contests.

At eleven o'clock Saturday morning, October 4, the executive committee of the Carolina dramatic association will meet in the green room of the Carolina Playmaker theatre to discuss the work of the coming year.

Annually the committee meets in October to discuss their work and organize their plans. At the meeting Saturday the most important subject of discussion will be the annual dramatic tournament and festival which is held during the spring. At this gathering dramtic clubs from all over the state present plays of their own production. Prizes are awarded to the winners of the various classifications.

On the program are plans for the meeting of the dramatic directors to be held in Chapel Hill next January, and the day of the meeting decided.

Throughout the state interest in dramatics is being manifested more than in previous years. The office has received many requests for information from new schools that have never been affiliated with the association before. Although the regular period for registering in the spring festival is customarily the month

Senatorial Snoopers In North Carolina

Congressman Pritchard and his fellow Republicans aspiring to represent North Carolina in Congress will doubtlessly welcome the threatened visit of Senator Nye and his fellow investigators to North Carolina. Timed as it is to occur just before the general election in November and the visit of President Hoover the Republican leaders possible anticipate gathering a few dissatisfied Democrats of a type into the Republican field—that promised land of privilege and prosperity.

We, despite the press reports emanating from Washington, cannot put much faith in the purpose of the committee's investigation of North Carolina's primary. Perhaps 70,000 votes were stuffed into the ballot boxes and perhaps thousands of New York dollars were poured into North Carolina, but it is highly improbable. It's too much like the talk Mr. Pritchard has been passing around on how the Democratic party has departed from the principles of Jefferson and Jackson and has sold its birthright to the Pope, General Motors, and the Empire State Building.

The whole affair smacks of Republican propaganda and Republican schemes to capture a place in the Senate and to retain their two rather precarious seats in the House. It's good campaign talk for Mr. Pritchard. But it doesn't ring true. North Carolina has managed to run its elections decently enough for the past thirty years without the aids of Sherlock Holmes' only rivals. In fact, fraud and corruption are almost foreign to North Carolina.

But at least we do not need the Republican high priests to tell us how to conduct a Democratic primary. We'd like to know just why they're so interested.

A Better Penal System

Within the past year instances have occured which have aroused a storm of criticism among the citizens of this state. And rightly, too, if the element of justice is to be considered at all. The penal system of North Carolina is badly in need of a complete revising and installation of better and more capable officers.

Last summer during the intense heat, a young negro convict died, his death allegedly resulting from the horrible treatment he received from the convict camp bosses. This prisoner was serving a sentence of ninety days for violating the prohibition laws, and yet he paid the highest penalty exacted of man.

In another section of the state it was reported that the convict bosses were found in a drunken condition. The superintendent was ordered to discharge them, but this was not done until a second order was given. At this same place the prisoners stated that the treatment they received was anything but human, some of them being tied to trees, deprived of food, and tortured with other outrages.

Such a state of affairs is indeed deplorable. No matter what a prisoner's crime may be, he should be regarded as being at least a human. And when a state with a government like that of North Carolina cannot produce a better penal system than that of the present, then something needs being done.

OPEN FORUM

HOPE FOR THE FRESHMEN

This year's array of freshmen is fast becoming adjusted to the strangeness of their new surroundings. With the first quarter well under way, the new men are showing unmistakable signs of casting off the feeling of novelty, and are falling in like old-time veterans. Without mercy, the professors have launched forth their initial plunges into the realm of learning.

Whatever he expected, the new man soon realized that it was more or less a matter of do or die with him, so that by now the majority have formulated definite ideas of the meaning of college, and have decided that after all there are other things of importance than football and co-eds.

Aside from learning that only a conscientious application of one's abilities will make the grade, he has been thoroughly drilled in the method of distinguishing between a "bull session" and a "cow session," the purpose of the arboretum, the logic of being school spirited, the literary merits of the Carolina Buccaneer, the beauty of male bare legs, et cetera.

In fact, not a stone has been left unturned in the effort to give him a big send off, and with such preparation, we are hoping that he will find few obstacles to deter him in making his first year a very profitable one.—W. T. L.

WRITE ANGLES

By Vass Shepherd

The bootlegger is fast becoming as much, if not more, of a social asset as any of our lawyers, doctors, and preachers. Just the other day Wilson Caldwell, owner of the most modern and efficient still in Orange county, avoided prosecution by contributing $100 to charity. Such a donation in these hard times is not to be spurned. What the state needs now is bigger, better and more philanthropic bootleggers!

The campus cops will soon be baffled, no end. It is hard enough for them to keep the battalion of motorcycles from using the sidewalks as highways, but with the introduction of Austins to the town, and the appearance of the Sears and Roebuck speedster in the near future, there will be no way of keeping the library porch from being a parking garage and the lower campus paths a racetrack. Probably the Old Well will be used as the only safety zone in the University.

There is still a mystery shrouding the process by which the Chapel Hill law prohibiting "leg shows" in the neighborhood of the village can tolerate co-eds.

However, our fair sister-students have had a very beneficiary effect upon heretofore slothful students. The library, once a place to be avoided, is now thronged by students and sightseers. The Salvation Army itself could not effect a more complete round-up.

Mandeville Webb has introduced the new "library glasses" to the campus. One lense is focused for short ranges, such as is useful for studying History. The other lense is for long distance observation, such as is useful in studying anatomy unter the table ten feet away. His motto is: Let not thy right eye know what thy left eye ogles at.

The University was host to some very brilliant ladies, apparently from Durham, the other day at the football stadium. Among the high-lights of the repartee were such remarks as, "I can't say it's as pretty as Duke's but it's right pretty, though. . . . You know, my dear, I can tell twice as much about a team from watching them practice than I can in a game; look at that man in the back changing his hat. I wonder why they all have to fall down; it would be so much better to look at if they did a little bit more running around than lying down all the time. . . . Hasn't Mr. Collins got pretty legs." And still they let 'em vote!

Musing over cigarette ads, one could wonder if Old Golds would help the Carolina cheering to any great extent. Also, "On the field it's grit; in the spinach it's terrible." Pardon it please, Mr. Chesterfield.

Co-Edna Comments

By Edna Morisette

The latest wrinkle in the Romeo and Juliet racket seems to be to serenade the sweet young things by telephone. On Tuesday night a group of "wandering" minstrels called the second floor of Mrs. Spencer's Hall and gave us a little musical treat—two numbers to be exact. So sweet of them! But that isn't all. They didn't want the rest of the girls to feel slighted so they came around in person, parked their T-model (or what have you) on the side next to the president's mansion and proceeded with their vocal exercises. We give them a rising vote of—well, call it appreciation.

"If you have the radius and one point on a circle given, how do you get the equation of the fool thing . . . hello Sally . . . nothing much, just math . . . have some candy . . . yeh, I heard it, but I simply can't believe it . . . y'know anybody that's going to Durham this afternoon? I have some shopping to do . . . sh-h-h, there goes the phone . . . it's so provoking with two more Ednas on the very hall with you . . . for me? Thanks. Hello-o-Who? . . . Jus' fine . . . what . . . I'll ask her but I'm sure she has a date . . . I'm sorry, goo'bye . . . New, let's see, you use one of these formulas. . . Naw, I don't mind, go ahead and play it . . . put on "I Still Get a Thrill." . . . I just love that . . . aren't you crazy about Maurice Chevalier's "Sitting On a Rainbow." . . . What! You'd be crazy about him sitting anywhere? . . . that's' too much. I'm going down on second and get Mary to help me with this math . . . I've studied over an hour and I simply don't understand it . . . I just haven't got a mathematical mind.

Tea And Repartee At Co-ed Social

The co-eds of Spencer Hall 'tee-ed off' yesterday afternoon at four o'clock with a record throng of femininity parading their Sunday-best to their next-door neighbor, proving the old, old statement that a dress looks better when on than hanging in the closet next to the old wash dress hat's four years old. The usual line of chatter went its rounds, and the ball of conservation was deftly passed from one to the other, with no one holding a buttered statement too long for fear of having waited so long that the damsel in the next chair had had time to think of a long-winded experience about a trip to Washington when she saw, yes, actually saw Lindbergh! And he smiled at her! Yes, she knew he did because nobody else was around at the time.

In deference to the teas in the North or the Teas in France and England tea was served. Don't ask me what they serve in the aforementioned place because I don't know—I've only heard—but there is always a chance. The cakes were good and the decorations tastefully arranged—but whether they were noticed is another story and for a more expert writer. The conversation was the thing and now everybody knows about everybody else and next Wednesday they'll meet again to report—not that it matters but gives one an excellent chance to tell secrets and talk about ones-self.

GOBBLERS SHOW IMPROVEMENT IN LATE PRACTICES

V. P. I. Hopes to Turn Back Tar Heels With Fast Backs And Heavy Line.

Special to the Daily Tar Heel

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 2.—An eleven which refuses to stop short of the goal line is the sort of team Orville Neal, head coach at V. P. I., is moulding to meet North Carolina's onslaught in Miles stadium here Saturday.

That is what the Gobblers are doing in scrimmage this week. Two backfield combinations are plugging away at a stubborn defensive eleven with a speed and dash which augurs a bitter struggle when the Tar Heels invade the stadium, where V. P. I. team has yet to meet defeat after four years of campaigning.

Half of the laurels now adorning the varsity brow belong to Neal's linemen, who are clearing the way for the ball toters not unlike the powerful forward array which burned up Old Dominion gridirons under Ben Cubbage back in 1922. The Gobbler forwards apparently have uncovered the final punch which too often was not there in the opening game with Roanoke College last week. The Gobblers are playing the sort of ball they played Saturday in midfield and not the brand they displayed at the goal line.

Coach Neal is running Gene Hite, big sophomore, in one guard and is alternating Harry Stark and Red Jones in the other. Earl Dyke, the lightest of the guard quartet at 180 pounds, also is showing lots of drive and is forging to the front in the battle for places in the Carolina encounter. All V. P. I. knows that the Gobbler forwards have the weight. The big question is, "Have they the speed of a first class line?" Neal believes that they have, for the usual lumbering tactics of the first game are not evident in Miles Stadium this week. The small army of Gobbler followers who watched the squad in action through four weeks of preseason toil and trouble are just as sure that the forwards will carry through in the big games. It is true that a trio of the seven are new to varsity ball but they pack an average weight of close to 190 pounds from tackle to tackle and better than 180 pounds from end to end.

For the first time V. P. I.'s eleven is confronted with a foe of superior deeds in the home stronghold. Small wonder that the linemen are charging and blocking in keeping with the best traditions or that Coach Neal is tuning up his pass defense and spurring his backs to a desperate charge at the Tar Heel ramparts!

FRESHMEN CLASH WITH MARYLAND

The freshman football team will begin its schedule when it meets the Maryland frosh on October 18. The contest ought to be a hard fought and an interesting one.

The U. N. C. squad is composed of about a hundred and fifty men and they seem to be rounding into fine shape. With such a large number out, Coaches Enright and Farris will have a hard time selecting those who will play.

Each man on the squad has been given a chance to show his ability, and several good players have come to the front. One of the reasons for the strength of the team is that there are a number of capable reserve men. The present selection is only temporary.

Carolina Team Leaves For First Conference Game With Va. Tech

Ernshaw's Hurling and Cochrane's Hitting for Athletics Too Much for Cardinals.

The Tar Heels left last night at 8:15 to open their first foreign invasion of the season Saturday in Miles stadium at Blacksburg, Va. Before leaving, however, Collins gave his men another stiff workout. The third team scrimmaged against the strong freshman outfit, while the first and second teams drilled at the West and East ends of the stadium respectively.

The frosh looked very good against the third team. The work of Weisner and Hackney in the backfield and Gus McIver in the line stood out. Norman Hackney is the brother of Bunn and Rube Hackney, both former Carolina athletic stars. Jimmy Moore showed up well. He made several long gains and threw a lot of pretty passes.

Archie Davis was at left end on the varsity line. Ellis Fysal was back at his old post, left guard, with McIver at the other guard position. The remainder of the positions were unchanged. Davis probably will start at left end as Nelson is in the infirmary. There is a possibility that he will leave today. Bob Blackwood, veteran guard, was left behind because of a bad leg. The rest of the squad is in fine shape for the Gobblers.

The squad will have a light workout at Roanoke, Va., this afternoon. They will spend the night there and go to Blacksburg tomorrow morning. The following men made the trip: Johnson, Tabb, Davis, Parsley, Brown, Bridgers, and Nichols, ends; Thompson, Hodges, Underwood and McDade, tackles; McIver, Crew, Kerr, Fysal, Newcombe and Dunavant, guards; Lipscomb, Gilbreath and Allen, centers; Wyrick, Branch and Moore, quarterbacks; Magner, Maus, Chandler, Nash, Erickson, Thompson and Slusser, halfbacks; House, McNeil and Houston, fullbacks.

Stringfield Records To Be Available Here

Records of Lamar Stringfield's latest composition will be available on the Hill in a few days, it was learned here last evening. Stringfield is a native Carolina musician and composer who has recently joined the Chapel Hill literary colony and is connected with the University for research purpose.

Regulation priced records have been ordered and will be for sale in a few days of "Cripple Creek." This selection is a favorite in the new music world of classical music. It has been featured in New York by the Roxy Theatre orchestra recently.

Intramural Notice

All independent teams, not affiliated with a dormitory or fraternity, that wish to enter teams in the tag football league or in the fall tennis tournament, must see Mac Gray in the intramural office at Emerson field between 3 and 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon. This is the last chance.

The regular season for the tag football league will start Monday, October 6. The tennis tournament will start later in the week.

MAC GRAY.

New V. P. I. Coach

Coach Orville Neale, new head mentor at V. P. I., is installing the system of play which he used at Western Maryland for many years. The system contains many tricky formations and plays, and the Tar Heels have been busy preparing a defense for it.

WRESTLERS LOSE ONLY ONE STAR FROM LAST YEAR

Coach Quinlan Anticipates Successful Year for Carolina Grapplers.

While Coach Quinlan is busying himself with the football squad, several of his veteran wrestlers are getting themselves into condition for the coming season by taking frequent workouts in the Tin Can. These men are part of a contingency of ten letter men returning from last year's state championship team.

Bob Zealy was the only man lost by graduation last June, and with Captain Fred Stallings leading the assault, this year's team has hopes of copping the southern conference crown. All divisions will be well cared for by veterans with three of them working in the 148-pound class. Wayne Woodard, ex-captain, will be back in the 135-pound class with Mayne Albright, while Fred Ferguson, one of last year's most dependable men, will be in the unlimited, making both classes exceptionally strong.

In Captain Stallings the Tar Heels have one of the best men in the south. During the past season Stallings won all of his regular matches and made a good showing in the southern meet in spite of injuries. Marion Cowper, veteran 160-pounder, is now out for football and will probably work in the light-heavy class this year. He is a senior and has starred consistently for two years. Moore, Saunders, Houghton and Usher will again be in togs and can be depended upon to give a good exhibition at all times.

Although the letter men appear to be favorites in pre-season doping, several of last year's reserves and freshmen will have to be dealt with before any man clinches his position. Carolina may well hope for the best team in her history.

ST. LOUIS LOSES TO PHILADELPHIA IN SECOND GAME

Squad To Have Final Practice In Roanoke, Virginia, This Afternoon.

The Athletics continued their winning ways, crushing the Cardinals yesterday 6-1 at Shibe Park, thus making the present standing 2-0 in favor of Philadelphia.

The game, a Comedy of Errors, was poorly played and lacked the usual thrills of the fall classic.

Philadelphia started off in the first inning, tallying twice on three hits, among them Micky Cochrane's secord circuit blow of the series.

St. Louis made it a ball game again in their half of the second, scoring their lone run on Watkin's homer. This blow incidentally marked the youngster's first appearance in a world series and he made the most of it.

George Ernshaw, righthander, hurled for the champions and had little trouble in holding the Cards in check. Flint Rhem started for the National League champions and pitched good ball, lack of support behind him being the main reason for the Card loss.

Today the teams will travel to St. Louis where the next three games are scheduled and, if need be, the last two will be played in Philadelphia.

Play by play description:

First Inning

Cardinals: Douthit lifted one high to Dykes. Adams flied to Simmons in left. Frisch doubled to right. This hit broke the tie between Frisch and Eddie Collins for total hits in a world series. Frisch's new record is 43 hits. Bottomly flied to Haas.

Athletics: Bishop flied to Douthit. Adams made a pretty pickup and throw to retire Dykes. Cochrane drove out his second homer in two days, crashing one over the right field fence. Simmons singled over second. Foxx doubled to left, scoring Simmons. Miller out to Bottomly.

Second Inning

Cardinals: Hafey flied to Bishop. Watkins hit one over the wall for a home run. Mancuso singled to short. Gelbert's hard grounder to Bishop took a bad hop and went for a hit. Rhem fanned. Douthit flied to Bishop.

Athletics: Haas fanned. Boley popped to Frisch. Ernshaw flied to Hafey.

Third Inning

Cardinals: Adams flied to Miller. Frisch's grounder went through Boley's legs for an error. Bottomly struck out. Cochrane's throw to catch Frisch was bad and on the error went to third. Hafey fanned.

Athletics: Bishop grounded to Bottomly. Dykes fanned. Cochrane was safe when Frisch fumbled his grounder. Simmons doubled to right, scoring Coch-

V.P.I. Game Reports On Grid Graph

With reports coming directly from Miles Stadium in Blacksburg, Virginia, where the V. P. I. and U. N. C. football teams play tomorrow the Grid-graph will show the progress of the game in the Tin Can at 2:30 o'clock for those unable to make the trip to the Virginia institution.

Extensive plans have been made by Mr. G. Wallace Smith, of the faculty of the school of engineering, to have the best possible service for the patrons of the Grid-graph. A special telegraph line has been constructed from the telegraph lines in Blacksburg direct to the field in order that reports can be ready relayed without delay.

In spite of the fact that the cost to show this particular game will probably be greater than any other the Grid-graph will show during the season, Mr. Smith announced this morning, the admission will be 25 cents, a reduction due to the fact that those in charge of the game-indicator wish to introduce the board to the new men on the campus, at an attractive rate.

The Grid-graph consists of a large rectangular board with a space marked off as a football field. The position of the ball is denoted by a movable light. The scores, downs, and yards to gain are indicated by lights above the field and the kind of play by lights below. On each side is a line-up of the opposing teams, with lights indicating the ball carrier and the tackler.

Herb Nelson Hurt

Herb Nelson, first-string end on Carolina's varsity football squad was taken to Watt's Hospital in Durham yesterday afternoon to undergo treatment for stomach trouble. Nelson was a mainstay on one of the flanks of Coach Collins' championship aspiring team, and his absence will make a great difference in the outcome of the important game with V. P. I. at Blacksburg on Saturday. Herb was hurt in the game with Wake Forest, it is thought, last weekend, and as his stomach began giving him more trouble, he was removed to the hospital in Durham.

INTRAMURAL TAG FOOTBALL SEASON STARTS MONDAY

Fall Intramural Tennis Race To Be Held Also, Starting October 8.

The opening of the intramural sports will take place on Monday, October the sixth, on which date the first intramural tag football game will be played. This campus sport enjoyed a most successful season last year, several hundred students competing in the intra-dormitory and fraternity contests. Last year the New Dorms aggregation won the dormitory championship, and Beta Theta Pi won the fraternity championship. In the match between the Betas and New Dorms for the campus championship, the Betas were the victors.

Athletic managers of the different dormitory and fraternity teams received tag football entry cards several days ago. These cards were to be returned to the intramural department not later than yesterday. Any managers who have failed to turn in their entry cards should turn them in sometime during the day if they wish to be included in the schedule which will be announced in the Tar Heel Sunday morning.

On Wednesday, October the eighth, the fall tennis league matches will get under way. A great deal of interest was manifested in intramural tennis last spring, and this year it was decided to run the league this fall. The tennis and football schedules will be arranged so that there will be no conflicts between the two sports. New Dorms was the dormitory winner in this sport also, and Beta Theta Pi again won the fraternity league. In this sport, as in tag football, the Betas defeated New Dorms for the campus title.

For the last seven years the Grail Cup has been awarded to the best all-round intramural athlete. Donald Waugh was winner of the cup last year. Waugh was a performer in four different sports: football, track, fencing and baseball. The Grail Cup is something worth working for. All Carolina men are invited to make a bid for it.

SEVEN CAROLINA STUDENTS ENJOY EUROPEAN TOUR

Trip Under the Direction of Dr. Lyons This Summer Proved Very Successful.

Seven students of the University under the direction of Dr. J. C. Lyons, of the French department, made a tour of Europe this past summer for the purpose of studying French in a few of the French universities. The students from here who made the trip were: Bob Brawley, Dave Craig, Tom Craig, Bill Draper, Tom Wright, D. C. McCotter, and J. M. McCotter.

From reports, however, it was only a few women-school teachers, who also made the tour, that did any of the studying in the famous French universities. The remainder of the crowd seemed to have gone sight-seeing, which from all reports, was enjoyed by those taking part.

At midnige on June 13, the tour was to begin. Very much excited over the trip, the crowd went to bed early, expecting to awake in the morning on the ocean. But, much to their dismay, when they awoke the following morning, they were in the same position that they had been the previous night. And, because of a heavy fog, the trip did not get under way until midday of the 14th.

After ten days of bad sailing, due to the roughness of the sea, the ship, The Amsterdam, docked in L'Harve, France. Going from there to Paris, the party remained a week or so in France's capital, enjoying the sights of the city as well as the night cabarets.

At Grenoble, the next stop, the party was divided; the school-teachers and those wishing to do work in the universities there ,remained, while Tom Wright, Tom and Dave Craig, and Bill Draper took a special two weeks tour of Italy. These four toured all of the important Italian cities, and also went up into Austria and Hungary.

The party was united again at Grenoble for a four day trip up the French Reviera. At Monte Carlo, few of the party tried their luck, but did not fare so well.

Grenoble was visited again, and the party then made a short tour of Italy. Dr. Lyons stated that he was very much surprised with the cleanliness with which the streets of Italy were kept. He commented on the police service, stating that practically no beggars were allowed on the streets now, whereas formerly, the avenues were thick with them. He was of the opinion that Mussolini had made Italy one of the big countries in the world today. To use his expression, the French professor declared that Italy was "hitting on all four" at present.

Leaving Italy behind, the group made a trip over to Switzerland. The party was carried up the Jungfrau, which was covered with snow in the middle of the summer. It was here that Dr. Lyons was the receiver of someone's snowball, a wound which he nursed for quite a while.

Thence the party went to Munich, Heidleberg, down the Rhine to Cologne, to Brussels, and then to Holland, where, they spent a week-end. The tour did not include the Dutch trip, but the party did not regret taking it. They were fascinated with the queer costume of the Hollanders.

After spending two days in England, the party took a boat for the "States," and landed in New York on the 23rd of August. Part of them, however, remained longer in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and came home on the 2nd of September.

As a whole, the party enjoyed Switzerland and England best of the countries visited.

COMMITTEE PUTS OFF EXAMINATION OF THE BUDGET

At Monday's Meeting Trustees Will Consider Only Matters of Routine

The executive committee of the University's board of trustees will meet at 11 o'clock Monday morning in the Governor's office in Raleigh.

It was expected that the budget would be considered at this meeting, but it has not yet been made up. All of the state institutions are filing their budgets later this year than two years ago. Monday the trustees' attention will be directed principally to matters of routine, such as appointments to the faculty, resignations, leaves of absence, and the admission of students who do not comply with the strict requirements as to age but who, according to established practice, may be admitted if the trustees approve.

In a notice sent out from Raleigh early last month by the state budget bureau, of which Governor Gardner is chairman, the heads of all institutions were informed of the condition of the state's finances and were directed to cut their estimates to the lowest possible figures.

With the notice was a statement to the effect that the estimates of state revenue for this fiscal year (1930-1931) was lower by about $2,140,000 than the estimate made when the state budget was prepared two years ago. However, a report from the revenue commissioner for the first quarter of this fiscal year (July, August, and September) does not indicate such a large decrease. This report, published in summary in the newspapers of day before yesterday, shows a decrease of $79,000 in the collections for the general fund in the quarter just ended as compared with the collections in the corresponding three-months period of 1929. For last year the figure was $3,163,000, for this year it is $3,084,000.

this time in the Bell System. He found that high scholarship in college, substantial activity in writing, debating, athletics and other campus affairs, early graduation from college and immediate employment all had a direct connection with success in this business. To put his findings into advice, we arrive at four precepts: (1) Make high grades on your work, (2) Get into the work and play on the campus, (3) Go to college as soon as you can, and (4) Get into your job as soon as you can.

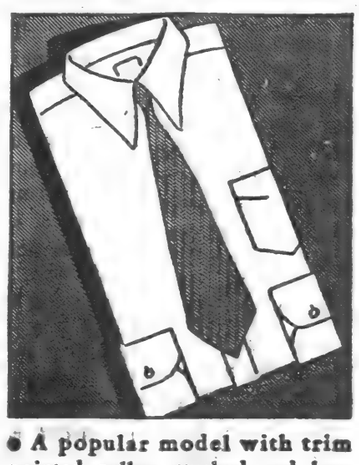
The first precept knocks in the head an old fallacy to the effect that a boy can loaf in college and then get down to work later. He may do this, but all his after life he will pay the price of this loafing period in the formative years of his life.

The second precept offers encouragement to the boy who fears that he may not have time for campus activities outside his studies. He must learn to work both in the classroom and on the campus.

The third precept will clear up the fears of many parents that their boys are too young for college. Those who enter college early succeed best in college.

The fourth precept encourages the college graduate to find his job without delay.

An interesting and important development in modern education is the vocational guidance and placement in college students. We are making great progress in this field. The colleges and the business organizations of the country are working together on the problem of getting good men, training them, and getting jobs for them.



It is becoming increasingly important for boys to get into college and to do good work in college.

Those confined to the infirmary are as follows: S. S. Eanes, W. D. Merritt, Worth Baldwin, Robert Greenburg and C. E. Boyle.

UNIVERSITY DAY CELEBRATION TO BE OCTOBER 11TH

R. R. Williams and L. P. McLendon Announced as Speakers by President Graham.

The University will celebrate its 137th birthday with appropriate exercises in the Methodist Church auditorium next Saturday morning at 11:00 o'clock. Because October 12th, which is University Day, falls this year on Sunday, the ceremonies are to be held on October 11th.

Speakers at the exercises will be R. R. Williams, of Asheville, and L. P. McLendon, of Durham, both prominent alumni, announced President Frank Graham yesterday. It is an established custom in University Day exercises at Chapel Hill to invite prominent alumni to deliver the addresses.

R. R. Williams is a graduate of the University class of 1902. Later he studied law in 1903-04. As an undergraduate he was prominent in student activities and in scholarship. A varsity football player, yet he maintained a Phi Beta Kappa average in his studies and was elected to membership in that organization. Following his graduation he taught in the Bingham School until he returned to the University for his law. He located in Newton, his home town, but removed to Asheville in 1906 where he has since practiced law. During the World War he captained Battery C of the 316th

TWO GRADUATES ON LEGAL BOARD

Two Law School Graduates Are Investigating Federal Courts.

Two graduates of the law school of the University have been recommended to do work in connection with the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement. Neil S. Sowers of Statesville and Henry Bane of Durham are the men recommended and have received appointments to make investigations and studies in the North Carolina Federal District Courts

The National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, of which Geo. W. Wickersha mis chairman, was appointed over a year ago by Herbert C. Hoover, President of the United States, to carry on an investigation of crime. The Commission has recently entered upon a study of Federal litigation.
Federal Courts.

This group has selected a number of judges, and law school teachers under the chairmanship of Dean Charles E. Clark of the Yale Law School to organize and carry through this study of federal litigation.

At the request of Dean Clark, the University of North Carolina law school has recommended the appointment of Messers Sowers and Bane, recent graduates, as investigators to conduct this study in one or more of the N. C. Federal District Courts. The young men will devote eight months to this work.

The young men will make detailed studies of the cases with respect to the classes of litigation, number of cases, and the length of time required to dispose of each of them, and will cover the business of the Federal courts during the last five years.

NUMBER OF MEN IN ENGINEERING WORK INCREASED

According to Dean G. M. Braune, of the school of engineering, that department has a marked increase in enrollment this year. In the school as a whole there is about 20 per cent increase, and in the freshman class about 70 per cent.

The school was first listed in the catalogue of the University in 1853 as the "School of Application of Science to the Arts" and it included a civil engineering department headed by Charles Phillips. The department continued its work, suspending only during the time the University was closed from 1868 to 1875. The separate school of engineering was established in 1922 and at present includes departments of civil, electrical, mechanical, and chemical engineering.

LARGE STAFF IS ORGANIZED FOR DAILY TAR HEEL

Almost Fifty Persons on Largest Reportorial Staff in History; New Policies Outlined.

The managing-editor of the Daily Tar Heel has chosen almost fifty persons to serve on the reportorial staff of the publication, which number is the largest ever to serve the paper. Membership on the staff will depend, because of the competition that such a large number naturally means, upon consistency and faithfulness in the performance of duty. All beats will have to be covered each day.

Any reporter failing to have copy accepted for publication during any two week period will be dropped from the staff. All members of the staff are required to attend weekly twenty-minute meetings which are scheduled for 7:15. City editors will meet at seven o'clock each meeting night.

It is the planned to have the assignment editor stay in the office every afternoon from 1:30 until 3:30. All reporters who fail to get any news from their beats will be requested to report to the assignment editor between these hours. He will assign stories to all who failed to secure any from their beats.

Although the present staff of reporters seems to be rather large, there is still room for good writers. Persons desiring to join the staff may do so by applying to Jack Dungan.

Those who are now on the staff of the Daily Tar Heel in addition to the editor and managing editor are: city editors J. M. Little, W. A. Shulenberger, G. E. French, Rhoulac Hamilton, Wm. McKee, and E. C. Daniel. Those on the editorial staff are: Beverly Moore, associate editor; J. C. Williams, associate editor; Vass Shepard, Elise Roberts, J. H. Davis, and E. F. Yarborough.

The reporters are: Mary Marshall Dunlap, B. L. Coobs, Delmore Cobb, F. W. Ashley, Phil Liskin, A. Alston, Bob Betts, D. Edmunds, W. T. Lasley, Louise McWhirter, Virginia Douglas,

STATISTICS OF FRESHMAN CLASS SHOW MANY INTERESTING FACTS

First Year Class Is the Largest in History—Besides Being Largely Self-Supporting; Many Out-of-State Students Enrolled; Charlotte Leads North Carolina Cities.

In numbers the largest on record, self-supporting to a great extent, with more Baptists than Methodists and with more merchants' sons than farmers' sons for the first time, and with 25 per cent of the new men coming from other states, the present freshman class at the University possesses many unique characteristics, according to a survey of the new students made by the Alumni Review, magazine devoted to the interests of former students. The conclusions were based in a careful study of matriculation cards.

To begin with, the class set a new record in enrollment. The number of around 900, whereas the previous record, set in 1927, was 845.

Many Self-Help Students

The exigencies of the present financial situation is reflected by the fact that more than 30 per cent of the class have applied for loans from the student loan fund. Up to a few days before registration 840 applications for work had been received by the self-help bureau of the Y. M. C. A.

Dean of Students F. F. Bradshaw, who is in charge of the loan funds, says that many cases of desperate financial plight have been discovered among the new men. One of the most pitiable was that of a freshman who came into his office and confessed that he had eaten only one meal in three days. He had come to the University with only enough money to pay his way down here, confidently expecting that he would immediately secure enough work to enable him to pay all his expenses. He did not land a job as quickly as he had expected to, and hunger was becoming a terrible reality when he met a Jewish boy from Brooklyn who volunteered to lend him two dollars. Fortified by a good meal, he summoned enough courage to go to Dean Bradshaw's office, and he has been taken care of through the student loan fund and the self-help bureau.

How They Are Helped

Another freshman ad saved $200 during the summer, but lent it to his father with the understanding that it was to be repaid during the boy's first week at the University. Adverse circumstances, however, prevented the father from repaying the money, and the boy was faced with the prospect of losing the money he had expended for matriculation and room rent. His situation was relieved through the loan fund, and the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club has taken steps to secure more money for him from the Kiwanis Club in his home town.

Another unusual fact about the incoming class is that 200 of

MEMORIAL BUILT TO WESTINGHOUSE

Founder of Great Electrical Industries Honored by His Employers.

There has been erected in Schenley Park, Pittsburgh Pennsylvania, by those who were associated with him and by the 60 thousand employes of the world-wide industries he founded, a memorial to George Westinghouse as an evidence of their esteem and affection.

George Westinghouse was one of those great figures who at rare intervals cross the pages of history.

It is impossible to measure him in terms that apply to ordinary men.

He patented over 400 inventions, including one of the most important of all inventions—the air-brake—but he was not primarily an inventor.

He founded scores of successful companies, but he was in no sense a promoter.

He made millions for himself and others, but he cared nothing for money for its own sake.

He directed many vast engineering undertakings, but he cannot be considered merely an engineer.

He was a great creative force—a constructive genius—and he applied his gifts of vision, courage, and ability always for the benefit of humanity.

The purposes of this memorial are:

To pay tribute to the inventive genius of him who contributed so greatly to the material development of his country, and the world at large, in adding to the happiness, comfort and security of its people.

CHAPEL DEVOTED TO CANDIDATES

Aspirants for Chief Cheerleader's Job Give Short Talks.

At sophomore chapel exercises held in Gerrard hall yesterday morning, the three candidates for premier cheer leader, namely Howard Henry, Billy Arthur, and George Brown gave short and snappy talks on cheering and sportsmanship together with several famous Carolina cheers. Each man talked about the different principles of the cheering phase of athletics, and told what he would do if elected chief cheer-leader. Billy Arthur explained to everybody present that if he was elected or if he was not, he was going to make a cheering section out of the student body of which every college in the south would be envious. He also claims that there have been too many pessimists writing in the papers about Carolina's apparent lack of enthusiasm, and reminded all those present that we had quite a bit more cheering at the the game with Wake Forest than the game of last year. Monday is election day for the cheer-leaders.

After the three politicians had eulogized themselves up to a pinnacle of publicity, John Lang, president of the State Student Federation gave a short talk. His subject was magnanamous sportsmanship, and how and when to demonstrate it. He told briefly of the efforts of the State Student Federation to bring about a feelin gof closer friendship between the colleges of North Carolina and to further the art of being a gentleman of whom the University of North Carolina might well be proud.

NEGRO BOY SHOT WITH 'UNLOADED' PISTOL THURSDAY

An "unloaded" gun cost the life of Fletcher Strowd, 14, popular colored youth of Chapel Hill. The pistol was accidentally fired by Claude Revis, 18, the bullet entering his head, while the two were handling it Thursday afternoon. The tragedy occurred about four o'clock, and the lad was rushed to the hospital in Durham where he died at nine o'clock that night.

Claude told authorities that magazine of the automatic had been taken out to see if any bullets were in the weapon. However, the boy did not know that one still remained in the barrel. He is being held in the local jail pending the outcome of an inquest which will be held in the old Pickwick theatre building this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

PLANS MADE FOR RED CROSS MEET HERE THIS FALL

A. B. Andrews To Preside at Opening Session; Graham To Speak.

The eastern division of the North Carolina Red Cross will meet in Chapel Hill Wednesday, October 8, for the annual state conference. Plans for this meeting have been announced by the University extension department, aiding Mrs. Elise Mulliken, national field representative of Washington, D. C.

The conference will last one day. There will be morning and afternoon sessions and at noon a luncheon at a local cafeteria. Two hundred delegates are expected to attend the meeting.

In addition to the North Carolinians there will be two men sent by the national Red Cross to speak. The keynote speech of the morning session will be made by William Carl Hunt, Assistant Manager of the Eastern Area. The theme of the conference is "Red Cross in the Home." Its objective, to raise the standards of the home enviroment, helps to carry out the live-at-home program of Governor O. Max Gardner.

Miss Mabel Boardman will be guest speaker for the luncheon, while President Frank Graham will make the introductory remarks. Judge Fracis D. Winston will act as toastmaster, and Bishop Thomas C. Darst will pronounce the blessing.

A. B. Andrews will preside over the opening session, and Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt will extend the greeting to the delegates. In the afternoon T. E. Cheek of Durham will act as chairman while F. H. Koch and his Carolina Playmakers will furnish the entertainment.

Other speakers on the program are Miss Katherine Cameron, Red Cross nurse from Burlington, who was the first to inform the outside world of the Porto Rican disaster; and Miss Mary Taylor of Oteen Hospital, who will tell of the service being done there under Colonel Dodge.

Members of such patriotic organizations as the Colonial Dames, D. A. R., Women's Auxiliary and other clubs are invited to attend. Those persons wishing to attend will please notify Mrs. Mulliken, who is in charge of the dining arrangements.

Another feature of the conference will be the meeting of the Junior Red Cross.

DIRECTORY WILL APPEAR WITHIN NEXT FEW DAYS

New Arrangement Is Made of Book, Which Is To Contain Complete Information About University Community.

According to an announcement made yesterday by the Y. M. C. A., the new 1930-31 directory will go to press within the next week. By the looks of the plans that have been made for this new directory, it will be superior to any that has yet been published for campus use.

The directory this year will have practically the same sort of cover as last year. One change will be made, however, in the arrangement of the secretarial and clerical staffs. In the edition published in 1929 the staff of the library was classed under the secretarial and clerical staffs. This year the library staff will be put under a separate head of its own.

A speed typist was employed by the "Y" to make four copies of the directory in order that it might be sent to press. These copies have been turned in to the "Y," and one of them will be available for public use within the next day or so. One of the three remaining copies will be kept in the Y as a master directory, a second will go to the post office to help simplify mailing troubles there, and the third one will be sent to the printers as soon as it has been corrected.

LUNCHEON TO BE FEATURE OF MEET

Waseford and Riis To Speak at Southern Education Conference Luncheon.

One of the features of the Southern Conference on Education, which is to be held here at Chapel Hill beginning Thursday October 13th, is a luncheon which will be given for the delegates at one o'clock Friday in the Carolina Inn. This luncheon will be devoted to the discussion of the "College Graduate and Southern Industry."

The program for this meeting will consist of two speeches. Cator Woolford, president of the Retail Credit Association of Atlanta, Ga., will make the first talk on "The Value to Georgia Industry of the College Placement Bureau" as his subject. He will be followed by General Robert Riis, of the New York American Telephone and Telegraph Co., which has chosen, as his topic of discussion, "The Value of College Graduates to Industry."

The personnel of the conference will be made up of industrial and scholastic heads of the south.

Our Feelings Are Hurt

To those who persist in quoting critics of the Daily Tar Heel we have only one reply: if anyone has recommendations which will aid us in our efforts to produce a good paper we will appreciate their telling us.

The Daily Tar Heel is a student publication. It is owned, controlled and edited by students. As such any student is eligible for a place on the staff. There is no closed door policy. Every student possessing ability and a willingness to work is urged to become a member of the staff. One thing only is demanded—loyalty.

As there are no professionals connected with the staff we hardly expect to produce a perfect paper. We are striving to do so. We can if those who criticize will aid us. But when they persist in criticizing without offering remedies we demand that they either show us how and where we are making mistakes or shut up.

We are not defending the mistakes of the past nor offering alibis for the mistakes of the future. We are asking for aid. As a part of the University student life the Tar Heel is entitled to such aid.

But we do not want rah-rah boosting. We want constructive criticism or silence. Any fool can find something wrong with almost any organization here but we doubt if many can suggest applicable remedies.

When you begin to pick flaws in the Daily Tar Heel remember for a moment that the editorial officials of the paper will appreciate it if you will either drop by the offices in the afternoon or drop the editor a note. You needn't even sign your name unless you want the criticism published.

OPEN FORUM

DOWN WITH SOCIAL ORDERS

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

Even the most casual observer on the campus must have noted the unusual increase in the believers of the Islamaic faith, not to mention the sudden popularity of red cravats, delapidated straw hats, and decorative undershirts. The great majority of the inhabitants of Chapel Hill and the vicinity have had the curiosity to investigate the reason for the idiotic conduct of the various and sundry pledges to the social orders.

I, being more inquisitive than most, asked how long this procedure would last, and found out that it usually continues till Thanksgiving. This rather took me aback, for it is not usual that initiations last this long.

At first, like everyone else, I was very much amused to see one of my fellow students get down on his knees and salaam, but by now it has become boring. Even the less frequent "Coo-Coo's"' have lost most of their charm, and the chain gang are rapidly going the same way. Furthermore it is most disturbing to have these various coming in late to class, and causing a commotion, to say nothing of continual interruptions of any studying that one may attempt by vociferous "Allah is almighty" 's.

I appeal for relief, not for the pledges, but for the rest of the rest of the student body. "In pace requiamus."

YO-YO FOOTBALL

From the Phi Assembly floor the question of favoring night football at the University was being debated. It was a game of wits. And then apparently an oracle was speaking through a student. Certainly the tones were oracular. "Night football is only a fad. Soon it will be as passe as the yo-you." The solemn announcement was icomprehensible, for what was a yo-yo? "As passe as a Yo-you." And then the ghastly scenes of a year ago came back.

Strong men were suddenly crazed by a bit of string and painted wood. Brilliant men were staring intently at a bit of string and painted wood, while one hand moved slowly up and down in a movement infinitely graceful, infinitely purposeful. And the painted wood climbed the string. And always the right hand moved slowly, slowly up and down. There was a repressed frantic glee about it all. It was a hidious monomania.

But in a year a man can forget anything. He can forget any mania, and even the source of the old mania. No yo-yo had been seen in Chapel Hill in a year.

So night football would soon be as passe as the you-yo. Perhaps the oracle was misinformed, or perhaps but an imposter. The prophecy was made on Tuesday, and on Thursday three boys were seen playing with a yo-yo. "As passe as the yo-yo"—and the yo-yo was not passe at all. Prosaic, common sense, ordinary mortals will pronounce it a coincidence. We fortunate, superstitious people who can believe what we will to believe will bet our patrimony on the future of night football.

The Aye's And No's Of The Campus

By George Wilson

Divorce—No Wedding

Some of the instructors have unique ways of announcing grats. For instance, one said recently: "I regret I cannot be here tomorrow; I must be best man in a tonsil operation."

Professionalism

Another clue for the Carnegie Committee on subsidization of athletics, whose reports astonished the country last fall with well-known facts:

A nearby campus has approached Boss Hill and is making him enticing offers.

Boss Again

It's strange, but the big dogs on the Tar Heel accuse the writer of being lazy. This decadent state does not apply only to the writer then, but to the whole staff, for twelve issues of the Tar Heel have come out, and not even one feature story on Boss has appeared.

Freshman

The choice story of the incoming freshman class we have heard:

A freshman descended from the "State University Limited" in Carrboro's new Union Station. He looked around bewildered, and entered a drug-store. After buying a dope, he looked at the clerk several times questioningly and finally asked, pointing to the Carrboro manufacturing units: "Which dormitory is Old East?"

Birds of Unusual Color

The sophomore orders are in full operation; desert sounds are heard all over the campus, while another species chimes the hour. We don't understand why one of the orders is named bulls, for they utter quite un-bullish sounds. Witness a bull with bullish proportions speaking "cuckoo"' in a high C voice.

Good Bet

The latest bet that has struck the campus is this: We'll bet that if we take the sum of Carolina football scores and double it, the result will be greater than the product of the opponents' scores, multiplied together.

Off-hand, we will make the same bet about last year's scores, and we'll even let you square the result of opponents' scores.

A Freshman Writes

"Compared to last year's record up to this time, the fire department has had very few fires to extinguish." This astounding statement was included in copy for the Tar Heel.

We have been unable to determine, as yet, whether the fire department has a number of excellent fires on hand and whether there have been numerous fires, but the local department has extinguished very few, and then under compulsion.

Here's to the Co-eds

There comes a time in the life of all U. N. C. columnists when they must mention the co-eds. Here's our: Our hats off to them (in some cases).

Inverting an expression of Groucho Marx': "All the wisecracks can't be bad."

The plan of the Alumni Book Club to "chart the position of the book in the sea of literature" will be a great help to students as well as alumni. It might well be adopted in the field of literature by some disinterested person who was more interested in the book as an unchartered ship than in its possible sales value.

When the reviewer can't say it is bad for fear of hurting someone's feelings, especially if it wouldn't be diplomatic to do so, or doesn't want to say it is good because of personal dislike, then the object of literature "has possibilities."

Fifteen Years Ago

The registration for the fall quarter had reached 1,112 by September 24, 1915.

At the first meeting of the Y. M. C. A. for the year, Mr. Frank Graham made an address on "The Battle-ground of Character."

The U. N. C. Tennis Association elected its officers for the year, and the membership fee was lowered to one dollar per annum. It was rumored that the Association had combined with the Athletic Association, but the Tennis Association wished to make it clear that they were still a separate organization.

It was announced that the long anticipated electric car line from Durham to Chapel Hill would be begun immediately. This had been the dream of Carolina students for years.

"North Carolina is the third most illiterate state in the union," said Mr. Crosby of the state educational department. A movement was begun to establish moonlight schools to decrease illiteracy in this state.

A pep meeting was called in preparation for the game with the Citadel on Saturday.

Ten Years Ago

Corydon P. Spruill of the class of '20 was elected as one of the two Rhodes Scholars from North Carolina.

The Theatre Magazine for October had an article entitled "The Carolina Playmakers," by Phillip Hettleman, manager of the Tar Heel.

Thirty per cent of the freshmen registering for the year were in the school of commerce, which was only two years old.

Seventy-four men were initiated by the campus fraternities. This was the largest number to be initiated in several years. Three new fraternities appeared on the campus, Delta Sigma Phi, and Theta Chi, national fraternities, and Delta Psi Delta, local.

Five Years Ago

Venable Hall, named for Dr. Francis P. Venable, the former University president and head of the chemistry department, was opened for use. The building, totally fire-proof and covering over an acre, is considered the best in the south and one of the best in the nation.

Frank P. Graham returned to the history department after three years of study in Chicago.

Gimghouls were to get the Valdesians from Burke county to build their pre-Arthurian castle out in Battle Park. They wished to secure these workers because of their skill at stone masonry.

The Carolina Playmakers added a new system of lighting to their equipment. The fixtures were installed by Monroe Pevear of Boston, who has superintended the lighting of such theatres as the New Guild and Yale University theatre.

have changed their addresses since they registered, the directory editors request that these persons call at the "Y" office, and have their addresses corrected on the master directory which is to remain there. Many times telegrams and long distant telephone calls come in for students who have changed their addresses without notifying the "Y" of this change. When such calls come in, it causes the association secretary a great deal of trouble trying to get in touch with the student.

The divisions which will be made this year in the 1930-31 directory are: Univeristy administrative officers, other officers, colleges and schools, heads of departments, faculty and administrative people, institute for research in social science, extension division, library staff, secretarial and clerical staffs, directory of fraternity houses, Chapel Hill graded school teachers, Chapel Hill ministers, explanation of the fire alarm system, student roll, town management, city directory of Chapel Hill, and a directory of business houses and public buildings.

When these directories come off the press they will be distributed to the dormitory rooms, fraternity houses, business houses, local homes, and to any one who has any real need of one personally.

It has been rumored that the weaker sex were the stronger in argumentative circles; however, with the invitation of Speaker Albright of the "venerable" Phi Society to the Co-eds to join that august organization, their superiority and skill in that branch of discourse is now given due recognition and confirmation.

Oh, No! A Tar Heel fan didn't want any publicity when he asked whether a co-ed "bull" session shouldn't be called a "cow" session! Here's betting that it wouldn't take a fine toothed comb to find out this facetious one's name.

Gobblers Ready for Invasion of Tar Heels

GOBBLERS HOLD EDGE IN SERIES WITH TAR HEELS

Have Won Nine and Lost Three Games With Carolina Since Game in 1896.

By Bob Betts

When the North Carolina eleven takes the field this afternoon at Blacksburg, Virginia, they will not only be trying to clinch their first Southern Conference game of the season, but they will also be trying to even up some old scores. For over three decades teams representing these two institutions have met on the gridiron, and the Techmen hold a big advantage in games won and lost. Since 1896, when these teams clashed for the first time, the Gobblers have won nine games and lost three. There have been five scoreless ties played.

The first time Gobbler met Tar Heel in 1896, neither team would allow the other to score, thus ending 0-0. The next year, however, V. P. I. eked out a 4-0 victory. In 1898 the Tar Heels thoroughly trounced the Blacksburg boys by a score of 38-0. Edward Vernon Howell, now a member of the University faculty, was on the team that year, and Rogers was captain. The present governor of North Carolina, O. Max Gardner, played on the team of 1905, but that did not keep Carolina from losing, 35-0. The captain that year is now a well-known physician of Durham, Dr. Foy Roberson. Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, was one of the players on the team that succeeded in holding V. P. I. to a scoreless tie in 1900.

From 1913 to 1928 the Gobblers and Tar Heels failed to meet in any football games. In 1928 the Techmen, led by the famous Frank Peake, beat Carolina 16-14. The Virginians had a great team that year. They had such players as Pattie, Captain Bailey, and Green in the line; in the backfield there were such ponies as Peake, Monk, Mattox, Mitt Owens, Phil Spear, and Byrd Hooper who is this year's captain. Peake could do anything with a football—punt, pass, smash the line.

The lead changed hands several times in this game, but Byrd Hooper's right toe booted the ball through the uprights, from Carolina's ten yard line, for a field goal and the game. Last year the Tar Heels, stinging under so many defeats, smothered the Techmen under an avalanche of touchdowns to win their third game from them in thirty-five years by a score of 38-13. With the exception of Georgia, V. P. I. was the only team to score more than one touchdown on the Tar Heels. The "Big Blue Team" scored twenty-six points in the second quarter alone last year. Jimmie Ward, who rounded out his four years last June, made a long forty-five yard pass to Theron Brown who was standing over the Gobbler's goal line.

Today will be a great day for Rip Slusser, as he will be performing before the "old home folks." Slusser is a native of Blacksburg. All indications point to a tight, hard fought game.

TAR HEELS ARE PREPARED

Coach Collins Sends Team Through Light Workout In Roanoke.

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 3.—Preparations have been made to handle a capacity crowd here tomorrow afternoon in Miles stadium when the University of North Carolina football team comes here to meet V. P. I. in the principal event of the annual homecoming celebration.

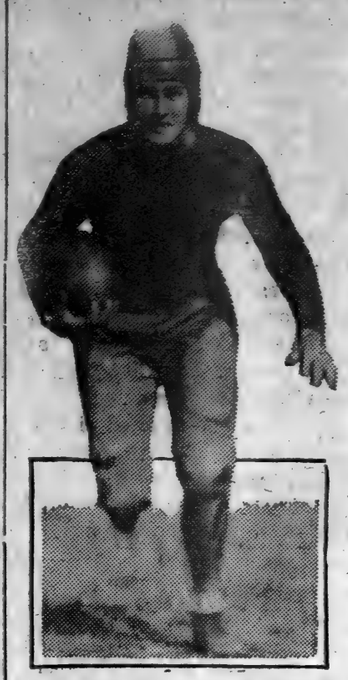
Coach Chuck Collins and 34 Tar Heels will motor over to Blacksburg for the game tomorrow morning from Roanoke where they took a light workout this afternoon and spent the night. According to reports received here the North Carolinians went through a very peppy signal drill and are in excellent shape for tomorrow's game.

Coaches Neale and Clarke are pointing to the game with North Carolina, with the idea of defeating one of the favorites for 1930 conference honors. The Gobbler line is some five pounds per man heavier than the Tar Heel forward wall and proved itself able to stop Roanoke college last Saturday without a single first down.

The Gobblers will take the field tomorrow afternoon with the following starting lineup: Paul Wolfe, center; Gene Hite, and Harry Stark or Red Jones, guards; Bill Grinus will be at one tackle; the other hadn't been announced at press time tonight; Johnnie McIntire and Al Seaman, ends; Frank Howard, Captain Byrd Hooper, Charlie Morgan and Bunt Ottley, backs.

Workout In Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 3.—The University of North Carolina football squad, arriving here this morning, went through a light practice session and spent the night here before proceeding to Blacksburg tomorrow where the Tar Heels are to open their conference race in what is slated to be a nip-and-tuck struggle with V. P. I.



Coaches Neale and Clarke of V. P. I. have picked the Tar Heels as their favorites for Conference honors and groomed the Gobblers accordingly. Coach Chuck Collins of the invaders, interviewed today, said that he had brought a squad of 34 men, full strength except for the veteran linemen Blackwood and Nelson, who are out with injuries, and intimated that he expected the Gobblers to give the Tar Heels one of their toughest games of the year.

"V. P. I. held Roanoke without a first down in its opening game," Collins pointed out. "Carolina opened unimpressively with a 13-7 win over Wake Forest. We have been working hard this week, both on our seasoned ball-carriers and our unseasoned linemen. We expect a hard, close game, and hope to make the best showing possible."

The Tar Heel backs looked mighty good in the light final workout here this afternoon. Johnny Branch, the broken-field ace, and Pete Wyrick, heady senior, look like a fine pair for quarter. Captain Nash, Jim Magner, Jimmy Maus, Rip Slus-

Tar Heel Captain

Captain Strud Nash will lead the Tar Heels through the present season. Strud is one of the fastest and best ground gainers in the conference. He scored over 40 points last season.

KENFIELD STARTS TENNIS PRACTICE

Veterans and Star Sophomores Compete for Places on Racquet Squad.

With the return of Coach Kenfield, tennis practice took on an entirely different air. The preliminaries of getting in shape being over, the players are getting down to serious work.

The competition for positions this year will be especially stiff by virtue of last year's undefeated freshman squad and no one is sure of his position.

While there is no definite spring schedule, an extensive northern trip is planned, on which the Tar Heel racquet wielders will play the leading teams in the East, among them Princeton, generally judged as the best intercollegiate squad in the nation. Because of the trip north, the teams that were played last year on the southern trip will probably come to Chapel Hill for matches.

Three matches are on the fall schedule, the first to come off Monday with an open invitation tournament for colleges. These matches will be played at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Nine colleges, among them Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia, will compete for the unofficial championship of the three states. The week following there will be an open tourney, but the Carolina netmen will be unable to particpate because of lack of time. In the week of October 25, the Tar Heels will enter the open collegiate tournament at Pinehurst, and the day before the Carolina-Virginia football game at Charlottsville will see the annual match between Carolina and Virginia.

When a man loses 14 pousds of avoirdupois in a football game it's a sure bet the man's been putting out everything he had. That's what George Thompson, Carolina left tackle, did against Wake Forest, and this same fighting 195-pound wrestler will be one of the big hopes in the young line Carolina sends against V. P. I. today.

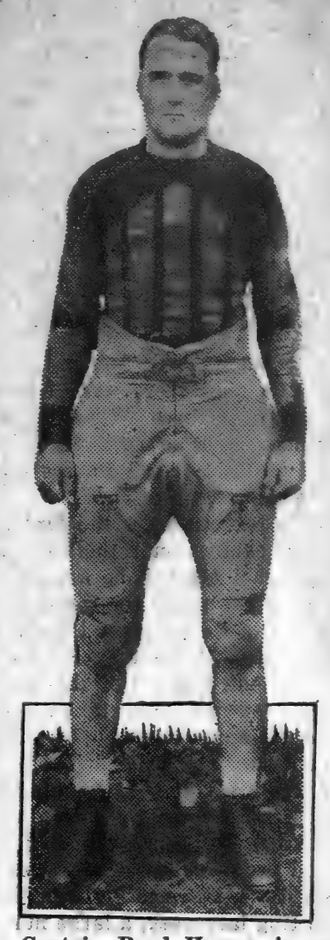
Jack Bessen

The National League seems to be jinxed whenever the supremacy of both leagues comes up in the fall classic. Since the 1926 World Series, the last time that the senior circuit has emerged as victor, the American League entry has won fourteen games and lost only one. In addition to this the American League hung up a record of ten straight before the Cubs could break through the junior circuit's defense. The best team in modern baseball, the New York Yankees, established the most enviable record of any team that has participated in the October classic. In 1927 the Yanks took four straight games from the Pittsburgh Pirates and repeated against the St. Louis Cardinals the following year. In 1929 the Athletics carried on the work started by the New York club and defeated the Chicago Cubs twice before the Cubs turned the table; the A's came back to take the next two contests and the Series. This year the Athletics have captured the first two games and appear to be in a good position to carry on for the junior circuit.

For the past three years the National League entry has been handicapped by the torridness of the pennant race. Every one of the first division clubs had a mathematical chance for the bunting, up until the final week of the season. Unlike the American League entry, they have had no chance to give their over-worked pitchers a chance to rest nor have the players had a chance to settle down from the high tension of a 154 game schedule.

The American League on the contrary has had a chance to single out one team, which usually had an advantage of from eight and a half games to twelve when the championship season terminated. Late August and early September usually found an American League champion and from then on most of the regulars were given a rest for the crucial October series.

Trades will figure importantly this winter in the rebuilding of most major league teams. Even the managers have not escaped the wrath of the magnates who are disgusted with continually financing losing teams.



The most notable of the managers to be released is Joe McCarthy, late manager of the Cubs. McCarthy in his five-year regime in Chicago has lifted a degenerate second division club to league champions and constant contenders. However McCarthy will still continue in the majors, and will take over the reins of the New York Yankees of the American League.

Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has announced that twenty of his pitchers, catchers, and infielders will be placed on the block, either to be traded or to be released via the waiver route.

All of the teams in both leagues will rebuild by trading most of their age-worn veterans and buying youngsters from the minors. At any rate there will be plenty of new faces to receive the plaudits of the fans.

Scene of Series Shifts To St. Louis as Winning Streak of Athletics Continues.

The scene of the World Series battles shifts to St. Louis today where, before a home crowd, the Cardinals will make a desperate attempt to halt the mad rush of the Philadelphia Athletics toward their second consecutive world's championship. Relying on his left-handed ace, "Wild Bill" Hallahan, to silence the heavy bats of the Athletics while the Cards bring theirs into action, Gabby Street, the loquacious St. Louis manager, is confident that his club will stem the tide and win the series yet.

The odds are overwhelmingly with the Athletics, however, and fans are looking for them to make short work of the remainder of the series. The Cardinal hopes are falling, and their confidence has been swept away. They are desperate. In short, the Cards are about licked.

The Athletics have swept on to two victories due to excellent hurling by their two aces, Grove and Earnshaw, and heavy hitting when hits meant runs. The Mackmen have made only twelve hits, but eleven runs have resulted from them. St. Louis has made fifteen hits good for only three runs. Here may be seen the cause of the Cardinal downfall—a lack of punch in the pinches. Grimes pitched a better game than Grove in the opener and deserved to win, but his mates couldn't give him the runs he needed. The veteran spitballer pitched his heart out in an effort to win but his habit of throwing extra-base balls to Cochrane, Simmons, Dykes, Fox and Haas cost him dearly. Grove, on the other hand, held the Cards at bay in the pinches.

Little more can be said of the two Athletic victories except superb fielding by Bishop and Boley aided Grove mightily in his

U. N. C. vs. V. P. I. — TODAY 2:30 P. M. — Tin Can

WATER SHORTAGE FEARED; CAREFUL USE IS ADVISED

Usual Consumption Is 600,000 Gallons Daily, and Supply Is Nearly Down to That

Because of an abnormally light rainfall for several weeks the Chapel Hill community is threatened with a water shortage.

The normal consumption is 600,000 gallons a day. The flow of the two creeks from which the University and the village get their water was only 700,000 gallons day before yesterday, and this represented a decrease of 200,000 gallons in four days. In times of plentiful rain the streams have a flow of as much as 2,000,000 gallons a day—nearly three times the present volume.

The narrow margin of 100,000 gallons will be wiped out unless it rains soon.

Consumers are urged by J. S. Bennett, superintendent of the electric and water division of the University Consolidated Service Plants, to be as sparing as possible in their use of water. Rationing will not be resorted to, of course, unless it is made absolutely necessary as an emergency measure.

"If everybody will practice the utmost possible economy in the use of water," said Mr. Bennett yesterday, "we may get by without curtailing the service. The most important means of reducing cosumption is to stop all leaks in the plumbing. And it will help a great deal if householders will not use water on their lawns.

"The course to be adopted depends upon the weather. We are hoping for rain."

If the supply continues to decline, and rationing becomes necessary, the water will be turned off during certain hours of the day and the use of water for sprinkling streets, walks, lawns, and gardens will be forbidden under penalty of the law. The town government is legally competent to enforce such a rule under the health statutes of North Carolina.

Experience in Chapel Hill and other communities has shown that, of all causes of water waste, leaky toilets take the lead. It is astonishing what a vast loss will result from even a tiny leak. Here is an illustration: if there is a hole in a pipe a quarter of an inch in diameter, and if water is flowing through the pipe at a pressure of 65 pounds —which is the pressure here— the leakage will amount to 499 gallons, or about 10 barrels, an hour. This 11,976 gallons, or about 240 barrels a day.

A professor in the University came back home last month after an absence of several weeks. When he had unlocked the front door, entered, and started upstairs, he heard a familiar trickling sound. A toilet was leaking, and a day or so later the professor was officially notified that his house had consumed 200,000 gallons of water during his vacation. It cost him $50.

The standpipe in the southwest part of the village, near Pittsboro street, has a capacity of 200,000 gallons; so a volume of water equivalent to a standpipe full passed through the leaky toilet in the professor's house.

The standpipe is kept full all the time as a reserve to be drawn upon in case of fire.

Never will the water problem here be really solved until the University builds a dam and creates a reservoir. The legislature has already made an appropriation of $100,000 for the project, and the University has acquired all, or almost all, of the land it needs out on Morgan's creek.

HOLD PLAYMAKER TRYOUTS MONDAY

Anyone desiring parts in the plays selected for the first bill of the 1930 Carolina Playmaker schedule are invited to attend the try-outs Monday at 4:30 and 7:30 in the evening, in the Playmakers Theatre. The three plays, the casts of which are to be selected, are: "Get Up and Bar the Door," "Samuel Hinckle, Fireman," and "Cloey." There are about fifteen parts available.

HOUR IS CHANGED FOR Y MEETINGS

President Ed Hamer announces that there will be a meeting of three "Y" cabinets Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:00 P. M. All members will note the change of hour.

The programs for the junior-senior cabinet and the sophomore cabinets will be a discussion of the plans for the year 1930-31. It is urgent that all members of these two cabinets be present, because of the business that will be taken up, states Hamer.

Graham McLeod, newly-elected president of the friendship council, states that the program committee of this group has a good program planned for the Monday night meeting. At the meeting last week, a large number of freshmen were present, and the "Y" officials are hoping that such interest continues.

All men who are interested in "Y" work of any kind are asked to be present at the meetings tomorrow night. The "Y" affords an opportunity for the class of 1934 to get into the campus activities.

ALUMNI MAGAZINE PLANNING EXTRAS

Publication of a weekly football edition of the Alumni Review, official monthly magazine of the University of North Carolina alumni association, was begun this week when the first issue was mailed to members of the association and subscribers to the Review.

Ten issues of the football extra will be published, covering all of the games on the schedule of the Tar Heels. Several action photos of the Wake Forest game including detailed statistics and a number of sidelights and a complete account of the game are included in the first issue.

In the three regular issues of the Review during the football season the four center pages will be devoted to news of the football season. On weeks when the Review is not published, the four-page football edition will be issued, according to J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary.

Carolina Theatre To Be Host To Everett Dormitory Tonight

Still, as Collins says, V. P. I. will outweigh the Tar Heels by about five pounds to the man, and Carolina's rookie line may or may not play a good supporting role for those star backs.

COMMUNITY CLUB LAYS OUT WORK

Departmental Heads Make Reports, and Year's Activities Are Announced

The Community Club held its first meeting of the season last Friday afternoon in the Episcopal parish house.

There was a general discussion of the club's proposed program for the coming year. Departmental chairmen told of their proposed activities. One of the most important projects, highway beautification, will be carried on by the citizenship department headed by Mrs. J. M. Valentine.

The sketch club (Mrs. W. E. Caldwell, chairman) had its first meeting yesterday. This month it is to study modern American paintings. It will meet at 3:30 every Thursday at Mrs. Caldwell's.

The health department (Mrs. George B. Logan, chairman) will meet this (Friday) afternoon in the parish house to discuss, in particular, the tuberculosis seal sale. The members of this group will engage in the making of surgical dressings this year.

Angel Pavement, by J. B. Priestley, will be reviewed by Mrs. N. B. Adams at the first meeting of the literature department at 8 o'clock next Tuesday evening in the Methodist church social rooms.

The music department announces a program of Scandinavian music, vocal and instrumental, in room 3, the University's new music building, at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon, October 15. Mrs. G. A. Harrer will be in charge. There will be piano selections by Grieg.

Mrs. Ralph Trimble will entertain the home department at 3:30 Tuesday afternoon, October 14.

The officers of the club are as follows: president, Mrs. R. M. Grumman; 1st vice-president, Mrs. J. N. Couch; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. W. C. George; secretary, Mrs. W. A. Olsen; and treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Preston.

The department heads are: art, Mrs. W. E. Caldwell; citizenship, Mrs. J. M. Valentine; health, Mrs. G. B. Logan; home, Mrs. R. M. Trimble; literature, Mrs. P. C. Farrar; and music, Mrs. F. H. Edmister.

Fire Prevention

Chief John L. Foister Appeals to Public for Cooperation

Next week is Fire Prevention week.

Fire Chief John L. Foister has issued an appeal to the citizens to co-operate in all measures designed to reduce the fire danger.

"The town is not in a financial position to put on more men or to purchase additional equipment at the present time," says Mr. Foister, "but with your help we can handle the situation reasonably well without any additions. However, if you fail us, you may expect even greater losses than in the past."

A questionaire is being sent out to all householders asking if they will agree to clean basements, attics and outhouses of inflammable matter, to examine and clean out smoke pipes, to prevent the accumulation of leaves and other trash in the yard, to make sure there are no explosives in the house, to have only good fuses in electric fixtures, to give the fire apparatus plenty of space on the streets when a fire is being fought, and to do certain other things for the prevention of fire.

The Russells Are Here

Mrs. Lucy Phillips Russell and her son, Charles Phillips Russell, came from Rockingham this week. Mrs. Russell is at Miss Cornelia Love's and Mr. Russell is at Mrs. Klutz's.

NORMAN TROUPE TO APPEAR HERE

It is hoped that arrangements can be made to have Jack Norman's ten show artists appear here under the suspices of the Carolina Playmakers. Professor Frederick Koch, Samuel Seldon, and Ralph Westerman recently witnessed one of the performances given by the troupe in Pittsboro and were so delighted with this unique band of actors, which include three generations of the Norman family, that arrangements were considered for a presentation of "Ten Nights in A Bar Room" and "The Lure of The City." If negotiations are completed, these plays will be enacted in the Playmakers Theatre sometime this month.

Field Artillery in the 81st Division, serving in France in 1918-19. Popularly known as "Rail Road," Mr. Williams has always been a loyal alumnus. He has served as president of the Asheville alumni.

Like Mr. Williams, Mr. McLendon is also a lawyer and an ex-service man. A graduate of N. C. State, he came to Chapel Hill to enter the Law School in 1910. He won the LL. B. degree in 1912. As manager of the football team in his senior law year, he was so efficient that he was asked to continue another year as graduate manger of athletics. Also he was a member of the University debating team. Locating in Durham for the practice of law, Mr. McLendon at the entrance of the United States into the World War organized Battery C of the 113th ield Artillery, 30th Division, commanding that company during the St. Mihiel and Argone offensives in France. He was promoted to the rank of major because of distinguished service. As solicitor of the 10th judicial district, Major McLendon achieved an enviable record before the bar. He is now devoting his time to a large law practice in Durham. Towards the University he has shown deep affection, being now president of the Durham alumni club, and serving at one time as a member of the Board of Directors of the General Alumni Association.

The program for October 11th in Chapel Hill will conclude in the afternoon with the Maryland versus Carolina football game, played in Kenan Stadium.

Throughout the State alumni groups are holding University Day celebration on October 10th. This date was designated by W. T. Shore, president of the Alumni Association, in a letter sent recently to all local alumni club officers. Also out-of-the-state alumni groups have planned meetings in celebration of University Day.

Those groups that have communicated their plans to J. Maryon Sanders, alumni secretary, include: San Francisco, Chicago, Miami, Jacksonville, and Atlanta, out of the state. Those in North Carolina include: Charlotte, Greensboro, Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Goldsboro, Tarboro, Lumberton, Fayetteville, Edenton, and others.

Statistics Of Freshman Class Show Many Facts

the 773 freshman matriculation cards examined were for out-of-state students, or about 26 per cent of the entire class.

Students from New York head the out-of-state delegation, as last year, with 45. New Jersey has displaced South Carolina for the runner-up position with 21 students to the latter state's 19. Virginia has 13 while Georgia has 9. All other states, with the exception of North Carolina, have 93 students enrolled with the first-year class.

Charlotte Heads the List

Charlotte, with 28 students, followed closely by Greensboro with 27, heads the list of North Carolina towns represented. Winston-Salem is third with 19, while Asheville has 17, Wilmington 12, Raleigh 11, Tarboro 9, and High Point 8.

Sons of merchants predominate over farmers' sons in the freshman class for the first time in the University's history. Parents of 130 are merchants while 127 are farmers. There are 69 sons of salesmen, 61 of manufacturers, 35 of lawyers, and an equal number of physicians.

In the past the Methodists have been well in the lead of representatives from religious bodies, but the Baptists seem to have forged ahead this year. Of the 773 matriculation cards studied, a total of 177 freshmen designated their church preference as Baptist, while 170 stated they were Methodists. Presbyterians total 141, and Episcopalians 101. Hebrews are next with 52, Catholics 21, Christians 15, and miscellaneous denominations 50.

Several of the freshmen are sons of well known educators. Ulric B. Phillips, Jr., is the son of the noted Yale professor and historian. Haywood Daggett is the son of Parker H. Daggett, formerly head of the department of electrical engineering here and now dean of the engineering school at Rutgers University.

Charles Brantley Poe, son of Dr. Clarence Poe of Raleigh, editor of the "Progressive Farmer," is among the newcomers listed.

Former Governor Angus W. McLean and J. C. B. Ehringhaus, who is being prominently mentioned as the next governor, ave sons in the class. The fathers are both alumni.

Many other alumni have sons entering the University this year. Among those old grads are John H. Andrews, Raleigh; M. V. Barnhill, Rocky Mount; A. L. Brooks, Greensboro; W. H. S. Burgwyn, Woodland; Curtis Bynum, Asheville; M. L. Cannon, Charlotte; Claiborn McD. Carr, New York City; Dr. W. B. Chapin, Pittsboro.

W. J. Cocke, Asheville; Fanning Craig (deceased), Windsor; Dr. Alva Simpson Cromatie, Fayetteville; J. H. D'Alemberte, Pensacola, Fla.; Alfred Settle Rockery (deceased), Rockingham; E. L. Gavin, Sanford; Thomas S. Gold, High Point; A. H. Eller, Winston-Salem.

Louis I. Guion, Jr., Lugoff, S. C.; Dr. Douglas Hamer, Sr., McColl, S. C.; Dr. B. S. Herring, Wilson; J. W. Horney, Greensboro; W. S. Howard, Tarboro; Col. R. P. Howell, Wilmington, Del.; Ira R. Humphreys, Reidsville; J. P. Irwin, Jr., Charlotte; J. M. Lipscombe (deceased), Durham.

LARGE AMOUNT SUBSCRIBED TO LOYALTY FUND

Total Collections For Past Week Are Even Greater Than Those of Past Year.

The end of the first week of the 1930 appeal of the alumni loyalty fund has witnessed a larger number of subscriptions and a larger total of money than was received during the entire of last year, according to information given out yesterday afternoon from the office of Felix A. Grisette, director of the fund.

Although it was impossible to announce the exact totals, the response for the first week was better than the most optimisic predictions had estimated. The most surprising of all the developments to date is the fact that the so-called economic depression is having no ill effects on the number of alumni who are giving and very little effect on the amounts of their gifts.

The organization set-up of the appeal this year is different from that of previous years. The work of the fund is brought to the attention of alumni through a chairman for each class and also through committeemen who have been organized in every county throughout the State.

The class chairman work through correspondence, and the local committeemen personally solicit the alumni who live in their community. The class representatives work exclusively with the members of their class irrespective of their residence, whereas the local committeemen are concerned with the men who reside in the same town, irrespective of their class affiliation. The individual alumnus is thus approached by two different representatives of the fund.

The correspondence appeal consists of two letters to every

ABBOTT ACTS AS TOWN ATTORNEY

University Law Student Appears In Local Recorder's Court Saturday Morning.

Peyton Abbott, University law student, acted as town attorney in the absence of Bonner Sawyer in recorder's court yesterday morning. Abbott carried out the duties very efficiently in place of the regular attorney who is ill.

Emma Sowell, colored female, public drunkenness, fined $2.50 and costs. This was the first woman ever to appear before Judge Hinshaw on a charge of drunkenness.

Zella Fearington, colored, 45, was fined $10 and costs for appearing in public in a drunken condition.

The case against Elmo Taylor, who is charged with passing a worthless check, was continued to October 11.

Rubin Winston, colored, was found guilty of threatening the life of Charlie Ruffin. He was required to give a $100 peace bond guaranteeing good behavior for six months. Rubin acted as his own lawyer, and although he had a hard time getting the witnesses to answer his questions, he seemed well versed in the tactics of the bar.

Jim Broskwell, assault and battery, case continued to October 11.

Charlie Baldwin, colored, larceny from Friendly Cafeteria, and assault with deadly weapon on Hollis Snipes. He was found guilty and sentenced to 60 days on the road in each case, the sentences to run concurrently.

William Garrett, white, 65, two charges of public drunkenness. Garrett was given a suspended sentence of six months last December on condition that he would not drive a car in Orange county for 12 months. In the first charge he was fined $10 and costs. However, in the second, he had driven a car while he was in an intoxicated state, so the suspended sentence of six months automatically went into effect. He was also given four months on the road on the second charge. The terms will run concurrently.

COUNTRY CLUB GIVES SUPPER

On Friday evening, October 3, at 7:00 o'clock, a supper was served in the Country Club house to about 150 members and guests of the club. Several towns people and newcomers to the University community were guests. The hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nolen and Mr. and Mrs. Louis MacMillan.

It was announced that the club house will be open from 3:30 to 5:30 each week day afternoon, with a hostess present to entertain members who may come in. It will probably be patronized most by golfers, but all members will be welcome. This plan will be tried during the months of October and November.

Cheerio Notice

There will be a called meeting of the Cheerio section Monday afternoon at 3:30 on Emerson field. Billy Arthur asks that all men who pledged their support be present and that each man bring three companions.

PIERSON SPEAKS AT CONVOCATION

Graduate Dean and Coney Speak At Meeting of Graduate School.

The convocation of the graduate school took place Friday night in Smith Building. A large crowd attended and both faculty and student body were well represented.

The program began with a speech by Mr. Donald Coney, assistant librarian, who talked of the [illegible] the library offers to the [illegible]ate student. In the course of his discussion he brought out a most interesting fact concerning the library. The University library and certain others throughout the country have a system by which they exchange books among themselves. A student can turn in the name of a book and if it is not in the library here it will be secured from one of the other libraries.

Dr. W. W. Pierson spoke next and outlined the growth of the graduate school since its reorganization under Dr. E. M. Greenlaw. He brought out the fact that the University of North Carolina was the first southern university to be elected to the Association of American Universities which is the oldest group in the United States that works toward the highest standards of education.

In outlining the functions of the graduate school, Dr. Pierson set forth two points. One function of the school is research, without which there can be no intelligent progress, and the other duty is to prepare skilled educators and send them out into the world.

President Frank Graham, who was to talk, was not able to attend the meeting.

A short business meeting of the graduate club and the serving of refreshents brought the convocation to an end.

The King's Daughters

Charitable Organization Prepares to Make Appeal for Funds

The King's Daughters, who not only carry on their own work for the relief of suffering, but also serve as the official charity wing of the town government, are preparing to make their annual appeal for funds.

This is not one of those high-powered spectacular campaigns like the "drives" of war time. It is a quiet and orderly appeal to the community to give aid to the unfortunate. All contributions, large or small, are gratefully received.

Mayor Council and Town Manager Foushee issued a joint statement yesterday urging the public to respond to the appeal. "The King's Daughters are doing splendid work," they said, "and we urge all citizens to help it along. The municipality refers to the King's Daughters many cases of poverty and illness, and these are always properly investigated; and of course there are many other cases which the organization attends to on its own initiative. Contributors can be sure that the money they give will be used where it is really needed."

Miss Annie Bell Durham is the treasurer.

Aldermen to Meet Wednesday

The board of aldermen will hold its regular October meeting at 8 o'clock next Wednesday evening, October 8.

Staff Meeting

The regular weekly meeting of the entire editorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel will be held tonight at 7:15 o'clock in the Alumni building basement. All unexcused reporters and city editors must report at this meeting if they wish to remain on the staff. City editors will meet at 7 o'clock.

Carolina Magazine Editor Announces Change of Policy

According to the editor of the Carolina Magazine, the publication will come out this year on Tuesdays instad of on Sunday, as was done last year. Because of the fact that many of the students are away on week-ends, it is felt that the magazine will be more widely read if it is published on a week day.

The Christian Printing Co., of Durham, is printing the Carolina Magazine this year and the editor states that the general appearance of the publication will be much better this year than ever before.

The first issue will have fewer book reviews, and poems, the pages gained to be taken up with short stories and essays.

The Phi assembly after its initiation of new members Tuesday night will discuss the following resolutions:

1. Resolved: That the Phi assembly go on recrod as favoring the resolution that freshmen be allowed to attend Grail and other dances given here.

2. Resolved: That the present business depression is the result of the incompetency of the President.

3. Resolved: That only athletes be allowed to have the self-help jobs available at athletic contests in Chapel Hill.

NOTED GERMAN ECONOMIST TO LECTURE HERE

Professor Bonn Will Speak Here On Economics and Politics In Modern Germany.

The Department of Economics and Commerce announces a lecture on Thursday, October 16th by Dr. M. J. Bonn, Professor Economics and Director of the Institute of Finance at the Handelshochschule in Berlin. Professor Bonn is an internationally famous lecturer and author; an authority on important world problems, especially reparations and international loans, modern capitalism, Pan-European problems, and modern democracy. The subject of his lecture, Economics and Politics in Modern Germany, is one of especial interest at this time, when political developments are moving so rapidly in Germany. These movements, which were reflected in the recent election, are of world-wide interest and importance; so it will be an exceptional opportunity to hear them discussed by such a student as Professor Bonn.

Professor Bonn has had unusually broad experience in practical politics and economics. He acted as economic expert at Versailles in 1919, and in the same capacity at Spa, Brussels, and Genoa in 1920-21. He is a member of the International Gold Commission of the League of Nations, and a member of the Advisory Committee of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Since 1914, Dr. Bonn has often lectured in this country. He has twice acted as leader of a Round-Table at the Williamstown Institute of Politics, and has given special series of lectures at the Universities of Wisconsin, California, Cornell, and Laland Stanford. He is a member of the Administrative Board of the

Steene Says America Leader In Art; Praises Modern School

"America is now passing through the golden age of its art," says Mr. William Steene, the prominent artist of the Chapel Hill community.

"Up until the last ten or twelve years there have never been any characteristics peculiar to American art alone. The old masters, Stuart, Walker, Whistler, and their contemporaries and followers, studied under the English and German group of portrait painters. In England, they were influenced by Reynolds and Gainsborough, and in Germany by the Duseldorf Group. Even though Whistler did unusual work, he can hardly be classed as an American artist, and certainly his work embodies none of the American characteristics.

"In the last few years, however, there has grown up an American school of realists that are as individual in their work as the Italian school was in its, or the Pre-Raphaelites were in theirs. Their art is representative of the people of the United States; it is colorful, realistic, big; and possesses a dash that is all its own.

"The south has always tended to use its brains, and shy off of anything that pertained to the use of the lands, but in recent years there has been a breaking down of this, and now there are many southern men, of the younger set, studying in the northern schools, who are making a fine name for themselves. This interest has also been aided by the formation of art clubs, for example the newly organized one at U. N. C.

"In speaking of the growing attention that is being paid to art in America, one must mention the work of the modernistic school. There are in this country several outstanding painters of this group. Although this school may not be producing any masterpieces, it is certain that they are attracting a great deal of attention to themselves, and consequently to the art world in general. Their work is something new, and that is what the world is looking for.

"The United States is passing through the most prosperous stage of its history, and therefore its citizens have more time to give to the fine arts; so a young artist of talent does not have to go through the poverty that once attended the novices in that profession. This means that men of ability can afford to give their whole time to this profession.

"Besides this, there is a great deal of very excellent work being

L. M. Brooks Gives Positive And Negative Value Of Press

By Elise Roberts

The place of the newspaper in community life has become so much of an intricate part of that community's life that the strict analysis of its place is almost forgotten in the everyday occurrence.

Louis M. Brooks, member of the University sociology department, comments upon two phases of its work, namely its positive and negative value.

The fact that the paper appears every morning at one's breakfast table or may be found awaiting in the porch in the evening is accepted. The day when there was a doubt of a newspaper's success because one paper was considered enough for the American colonies has long ago been forgotten. Now it is a question of its relative value, positively or negatively.

"The positive value that the press has done for the small village of Ocracoke on the coast of North Carolina may be seen in the obtaining of a physician for that community not so long ago," said Mr. Brooks. "For several years there was an interesting character who served as doctor, family comforter, et al. He was supported partially by the government. After his death there was no physician or medical resources for some times. About August, 1929, the North Carolina press began printing stories about the peculiar situation at this isolated point on the coast. So much interest was taken throughout the country that by December a qualified physician was obtained and supported by the government there. This is certainly a notable example of what publicity of true conditions by the press can do."

"On the otherhand the press has been used especially by feature writers to express an idea picturesquely rather than truthfully. One interesting incident in this is when a young lady was invited to visit in a small and picturesque community. She was given every opportunity to see the place as it was. Sometime later after her return home the feature story came out. Nearly every point was brought out in the story was erroneus, She had written around one or two freaks, which any community is prone to have, a number of generalities as the typical conditions of the village. True it was small, a picturesque place, but there were a majority of educated people there who resented bitterly her treatment, of their hospitality."

"It is such writer," said Mr. Brooks that makes people wary of anyone who even has the semblence of a reporter.

An Ideal Location For Conventions

Chapel Hill and the University are becoming well known throughout the south as an ideal place for conferences. The third annual Southern Conference on Education will be held here the latter part of this month. Other such meetings will likely be brought to Chapel Hill before the conclusion of the present scholastic year. And all are familiar with the numerour conferences conducted here last year.

Although not located ideally in respect to railroad facilities, Chapel Hill holds more than an advantage with respect to roads. Highways from every bordering state lead directly here and direct roads to several nearby cities make railroad transportation almost as convenient as if railroads centered here.

The library, several excellent small meeting halls, and the Carolina Inn provide all facilities necessary for a small convention. The faculty is composed of men famous in almost every field. Combined, the facilities and the faculty give Chapel Hill a great advantage over many cities and university centers as a natural convention center.

But more appealing to many is the location of the University. Situated away from the noise and bustle of mills and factories, away from the hurrying noonday and five-o'clock mobs those who come here have complete freedom of action and time. There are no conflicting interests to attract the attention of those attending a convention here. When the University stages a convention it is a convention and not shows, golf matches, and sightseeing tours.

Why A Liberal Education?

Much has been written about education. All its phases have been scanned, its statistics laboriously compiled and its trends anxiously observed. The proponents vociferously declare that the educated man succeeds much more easily in his life work, and the antagonists name business moguls that have never had any formal school training. And all the while, the callow college undergraduate blithely follows his path, wondering why anyone should trouble himself with mathematics or history or English. For him, doubtlessly, the studies are of no utility.

The purpose of this article is merely to tell of an incident we observed. Passing before the new Memorial Hall, we noticed a young worker eyeing an idling student, obviosuly a freshman. The actual reverence and eager desire we saw in the labourer's eyes embarrassed us; the prospect of the education that awaited the raw freshman, enobled him to the workman. We, who have every opportunity to get a good education, take everything for granted. We do not intend to extol the praises of education, because often a half-baked education does harm; and the average college graduate has no thorough education. The graduate must needs be a dilletante of learning; he has a ready, clever smattering of general knowledge.

Ever since that little occurence our composure has been shaken, we've been wondering. What do you think?

alumnus from his class agent. The first letter was mailed so as to be received on Monday, September 29. The second letter was mailed yesterday to all alumni who had not sent in their subscriptions at that time.

The local committeemen, of which there are nearly 500, are each making a personal visit to 10 other alumni who reside in their county. The canvass was planned to start within two or three days following the receipt of the letter from the class agent.

Alumni who have already contributed to the fund during 1930 will not be solicited during the present campaign, either by letter or in person.

The response so far has come almost entirely from the letters of the class agents, according to Mr. Grisette. Reports from throughout the State indicate that the local committeemen are seeing their entire quota of 10 alumni before making their reports. As a result the largest number of subscriptions are yet to come.

Mr. Grisette said yesterday that the most encouraging feature of the campaign so far was the fine spirit of cooperation which he has found among alumni everywhere.

Judge Winston Writes New Life Of Jefferson Davis

By Virginia Douglas

Judge R. W. Winston's High Stakes and Hair Trigger, the much touted life of Jefferson Davis—unexpurgated and unextenuated—is daily expected from the presses of Henry Holt and Co., New York. Since the judge, '79, was staying at the Carolina Inn for a day or two, we interviewed him.

"What is your idea, Judge?" we asked.

"Why I guess my title is the best answer. Davis was playing for the highest possible stakes, and he was going to win the horse or lose the saddle . . . . But for Davis, the Democratic party would not have split in 1860, Douglas would have beaten Lincoln and become president. And there would have been no civil war.

"Jefferson Davis was indeed a puzzle and a paradox. He dared the North to elect Lincoln; if they did the South would secede at once. (But he made that election inevitable by splitting the democratic party.) The dare was accepted, Lincoln was elected. The South seceded. Hell broke loose. Yet Davis insisted he was always for the union." He was indeed a paradox.

"The confederate president was as antiquated as Moses. He really though slavery was ordained of God. With Governor McDuffie he exclaimed 'I trust my children will never live except in a land of slavery'." This slave empire was to include Cuba, Yucatan, the Islands of the Caribean, and Mexico. He would have them by purchase if possible. If that failed, he would try the more or less subtle method of filibustering. If that failed, he would openly seize them. And they would be slave states where he could preserve intact the southern industrial system. The born-to-the-beard patriarchs would contiue to live gracefully, ministered to by the negro slaves.

The author reassured us on the matter of Davis's loyalty to the country. "Of course Davis loved the union and would preserve it, provided slavery was admitted into the new territories. But because slaves were not admitted into California, and would probably be excluded from Kansas, Nebraska, etc., the Union must slide."

"Was he a fit president, Judge?" we asked.

And he answered. "None fitter." He qualified that—nobody could have been fitter for that particular position of preserver of a regime that was to fall. He continued. "He fought till hell froze out and then proposed to fight it out on the ice. He railed at Lee for surrendering. And at Greensboro in 1865 he attacked Joe Johnson and called him a recreant for laying down arms to Sherman. Mrs. Davis actually charged that Johnson surrendered in a great big hurry so her husband could be captured."

And then Judge Winston put this complex, neurasthenic, new Jefferson Davis into three summary sentences: "Of Davis it must be said he was the pen of the Revolution, as Yancey was its voice. Dignified, erect, brave, self-centered, a hard student, Davis was stubborn, "wranglesome" as Rhett charged, unable to forgive or forget. Dying, he shot back that he cared nought for the cost of the war, lives lost, treasure squandered, and blood shed; if he had it to do over again he would do just as he did before. "Of course he was never pardoned. He was a man without a country.

"Was he a safe adviser, Judge?"

His answer was puzzling. "Wait and see."

Carolina Wins From V.P.I. Gobblers 39-21

Tar Heels Prove Their Superiority In Great Offensive Grid Tilt

Johnny Branch and Henry House Star With Several Long Runs; Captain Hooper and Spear Play Well for Losers; George Thompson Shows Up Well in Tar Heel Line.

Miles Stadium, Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 4.—The University of North Carolina football team came, saw and conquered Virginia Polytechnic Institute here today by the score of 39-21 before a homecoming crowd of 5,000 persons, and broke the Gobblers' record of never having been defeated in Miles Stadium. The Tar Heels also upheld the "homecoming" tradition of upsetting the home eleven before the alumni.

Johnny Branch was the star of the day with his many long runs, his passing and brainy work as a field general. Along with Branch will be remembered the names of Jim Magner and Henry House.

In the Tar Heel line credit is due to George Thompson, tackle, Larry Johnson, end, and Red Gilbreath, center. The entire line was functioning well today, however.

Captain Byrd Hooper and Spear played superb ball for the losing Gobblers and are deserving of credit for their work.

First Quarter

Hooper kicked to Carolina's thirty yard line. Branch receiving, was downed in his tracks. Branch lost seven yards on an attempted end run, then punted to mid-field. Two short Gobbler passes advanced the ball to Carolina's ten yard line and Harwick took it around end for a touchdown. Hooper placed kicked the extra point. Score V. P. I. 7-N. C. 0.

After an exchange of punts Carolina got the ball on her own thirty yard line and Branch completed a sixteen yard pass to Slusser. Slusser passed to Branch who twisted and wriggles through the V. P. I. team the remaining 55 yards for the Tar Heels' first score. Branch made the extra point, tying the score at 7 all.

Toward the end of the first quarter Hooper made a poor punt, the ball going out at V. P. I.'s forty yard line. Branch, Slusser, and House advanced the ball to V. P. I.'s twenty-five yard line. Magner replaced Maus and on the first play passed to Branch for seventeen yards. House made two yards through tackle and Magner passed to Parsley for a touchdown. Branch kicked the extra point. Score Carolina 14-V. P. I. 7.

Second Quarter

An exchange of punts put the ball on Carolina's thirty-one yard line where Magner circled left end for nine yards. On a fake play, House smashed his way through left guard for sixty yards and a touchdown. Branch kicked the extra point. Both teams played evenly until near the end of the half when V. P. I. had the ball on North Carolina's three yard line. The end of the half stopped an almost certain V. P. I. touchdown. Score: Carolina 21—V. P. I. 7.

Third Quarter

The Gobblers threatened Carolina's goal with a series of passes thrown by Captain Hooper and advanced the ball to the visitor's five yard line where Carolina took possession of the ball. Branch made a poor kick, the ball going out on his thirty yard line. Hooper made nine yards around end and two through the line; then Spear passed to McIntosh for a touchdown. On the play Nash was hurt but continued to play. Hooper made the kick good.

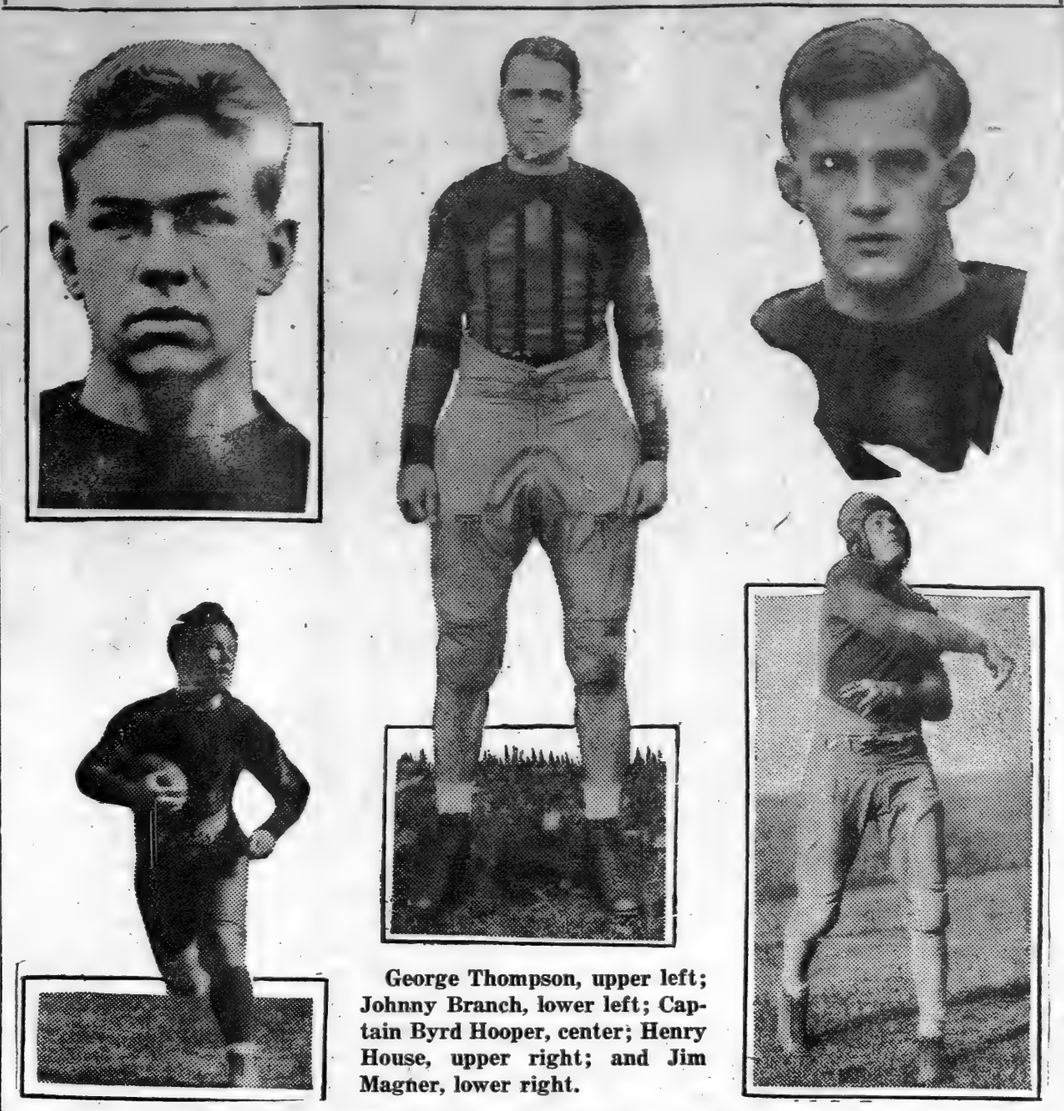
The most spectacular play of the game came when late in the third session Hooper kicked off to Branch on his own twenty yard line. Branch zig-zagged his way through the entire home team, shaking off tacklers like flies, and traveled eighty yards for a touchdown. Branch's attempt at goal failed. Score: Carolina 27—V. P. I. 1.

On the very next play, Branch kicked off to V. P. I.'s twenty yard where Spear fumbled the ball and Thompson recovered for the Tar Heels. Magner went nine yards around end. House went through center for five yards for a first down, placing the ball on the six yard line. Magner plunged through center for a touchdown. Branch's attempt at goal was blocked. Score: Carolina 33—V. P. I. 14.

Fourth Quarter

In the final session both teams tallied once. V. P. I. tallied first when Branch's punt to midfield was run back to Carolina's thirty-six yard line; Harwick passed to Hooper for fifteen yards. Another pass from Owens to Pall gained seven yards, putting the ball on the fifteen yard line. Pall plunged three yards over center for first down. A penalty for offside put the ball on Carolina's four yard line and Owen went through right guard for the remaining four yards and a touchdown. Hooper made his kick good. Score: Carolina 33—V. P. I. 21.

Carolina scored towards the end of the game. A series of line bucks brought the ball to V. P. I.'s 34 yard line. Magner passed to Branch who was run out of bounds on the two yard line and in the next play Magner went around end for the last two yards. Score: Carolina 39—V. P. I. 21.



At The Carolina

The management of the Carolina Theatre announces a rare treat for its patrons beginning on Monday.

Ruth Chatterton and Clive Brook will appear in another fascinating talkie—one which is said to contain an even greater amount of dramatic and romantic punch than the two earlier successes of these capable favorites.

The picture is "Anybody's Woman." It is the story of the vagrancies of a misfit marriage.

Luminaries Of Carolina-Gobbler Game

Johnny Branch played a wonderful game for the Tar Heels yesterday, returning one punt for 80 yards and a touchdown. Jim Magner and Henry House were powers in the backfield for the Tar Heels also, making many long gains which resulted in score. George Thompson played a very consistent game at tackle.

Captain Byrd Hooper continued to show his superb ability at booting the ball. His punting, passing and running were all very good for the losers.

Duke Blue Devils Swamp Virginia With 32-0 Score

Entire Duke Team Functions Perfectly During Game in Home Stadium.

THOMAS IS VIRGINIA STAR

Special to The Daily Tar Heel

Duke Stadium, Durham, Oct. 4.—Duke University's Blue Devils smothered the University of Virginia here this afternoon by the score 32-0 for the biggest upset of the day on the grid. The whole Duke team clicked on every play, running beautiful interference on the offense, and smothering every effort of the Cavaliers.

Bill Thomas, halfback for Virginia, was without doubt the outstanding star of the game, both in advancing the ball and stopping Duke backs under the shadow of his own goal. The Cavalier halfback got loose from scrimmage once for a run of 58 yards, placing the ball on Duke's 17-yard line, but four thrusts at the line failed to net a first down and Duke took the ball. He ran back punts for considerable yardage several times with a minimum of interference.

Selecting individual stars for the Duke eleven would be a difficult task for the starting lineup on down to the last substitute clicked smoothly and did his part.

Duke Kicks Off

Virginia won the toss up and elected to receive. Bill Thomas took the ball and brought it out to the 35-yard line. The Cavalier offense worked smoothly on a drive up the field, but lost the ball on the 20-yard line by fumbling.

Duke took the ball and started a drive down the field which was only the beginning of the massacre which followed. A series of plays, Warner reverses off tackle, fullback through the line, and end runs, placed the ball on Virginia's 15-yard line. Bill Murray took the ball, ran wide around left end and stepped over the goal line just inside the edge of the line. "Kid" Brewer hit the line for the three yards and the extra point. The score was Duke 7, Virginia 0.

Virginia received the ball again but was unable to make any substantial gains and kicked out to Murray, who was playing safety for Duke. A stiff battle continued for the rest of the period with the ball deep in Virginia's territory. Duke missed a touchdown by inches just as the first period ended.

On the first play of the second quarter the Blue Devils made it 13-0. Neither team was unable to advance the ball for another score during the rest of the first half, and the second period ended with the score 13-0 in favor of Duke.

Second Half

Virginia kicked off to Duke to open the third quarter and the Blue Devils received on their 20-yard line, returning it 15

ANCIENT RIVALS BATTLE ON GRID NEXT SATURDAY

Maryland University Will Come Here To Meet Carolina For 12th Time.

The University of North Carolina football squad stays at home this week to meet an ancient rival. The Tar Heels and the Old Liners of Maryland have been meeting on the gridiron at intervals over a 31-year period, and Saturady will mark their 12th renewal of an argument that started in 1899.

North Carolina won that game in 1899 by 6-0. There was no renewal of the series until the fall of 1920, when Maryland won a 13 3to 0 victory. Each year since has brought another of the "dog fall" battles, all close and hard fought, with the margin of victory small, except for last year, when Carolina's star backs won 43-0.

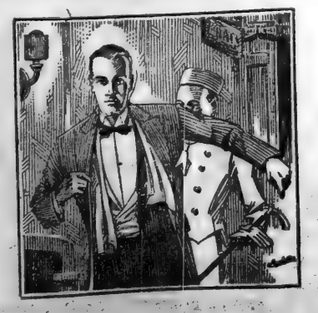
The entire series show the Tar Heels leading in games won and lost by 7-4. Carolina has won its three game margin in the last three years, while Maryland has been upsetting all dope and tying Yale's Bulldogs regularly, 13-13 last year, after taking a 43-0 drubbing from the Tar Heels.

Carolina won by 7-6 in 1927. The Tar Heels jumped into an early lead then the heavens opened and deluged the field, and Billy Ferrell's great punting preserved the narrow margin. Ward, Magner, and the other star backs led Carolina to a 26-19 triumph the next year, and these same backs ran the margin up to 43-0 last year.

Maryland won a 14-6 decision in 1926 in the face of a brilliant 93-yard touchdown return by Gus McPherson, Carolina's sprint ace. Sides and Jenkins, Carolina reserves, rose to victory to lead the Tar Heel "mudhorses" to a 16-0 victory in 1925, and before that it was a nip and tuck series of close games with the tide of victory shitfing almost every year.

The approching contest bears all the pre-game earmarks of another epic struggle. Maryland showed tremendous offensive power in an opening 60-0 win over Washington College.

Chapel Hill Wins From Hillsboro 13-7



The Chapel Hill High School football team won the second game played this year when Hillsboro high was defeated by a count of 13-0. Dick Dashiell, fleet half-back, of the local high school team, scored two touchdowns, while captain Ray grabbed a pass to score the extra point.

Chapel Hill's touchdowns came in the first and fourth quarters as the results of passes from Dashiell to King. Dashfield made the two touchdowns.

Hillsboro was on the defensive throughout the game, the ball being in their territory practically the whole game. Chapel Hill seemed to be able to gain at will.

Dashiell, King, Pendergrafh, and McKnight starred on the lo-

State Has Opportunity to Become Nation's Greatest Game Preserve

An opportunity for North Carolina to become the Union's leading state as a home for game birds has been opened up by Joseph P. Knapp, the multi-millionaire publisher who came down from the North a few years ago to make his home in Currituck county.

W. O. Saunders, the Elizabeth City newspaper editor, who has written stories and articles for Mr. Knapp's magazines and has been a close acquaintance of his for many years, was in Chapel Hill last Friday evening and talked the project over with E. C. Branson, head of the University's department of rural social economics. Earlier in the day he had been in Raleigh in conference with President Brooks of State College and J. W. Harrelson, head of the state department of conservation and development.

Mr. Knapp has got about 25 wealthy men to join him in establishing a foundation called "More Game Birds in America." A million dollars has already been contributed, and the amount is to be raised later to $10,000,000. This group of men, if they can obtain the proper cooperation in the way of protective laws and regional protective associations, will select North Carolina as the state in which to carry through their enterprise. They favor it because of its natural advantages as a home for game birds; it has mountains, hills, vast areas of unsettled fields and woods, and flatlands, swamps and bays; it is easily accessible to the most populous sections of the country; and Mr. Knapp and his associates think that its people and its government have a progressive spirit that will move them to take a deep interest in a venture that promises such great benefits to the state.

Governor Gardner is giving his enthusiastic support to the project, and all the state officials, educators, business men, and farmers to whom it has been explained hold the opinion that it will augment the material wealth as well as the prestige of the state. It will bring sportsmen and their families here, it will increase the value of lands, and it will constitute a new source of revenue for farmers who maintain shooting preserves, breed bird dogs, serve as guides, and provide quarters for visitors.

Among the men associated with Mr. Knapp in the foundation are Harry B. Hawes, former United States senator, president; Thomas W. Lamont, treasurer; William E. Corey, M. Hartley Dodge, Felix duPont, Richard F. Howe, Ogden M. Reid, George Whitney, and Francis D. Bartow.

Mr. Knapp has made a start in game preservation and development on his own estate in Currituck county. Last year, for example, he collected 6,000 duck eggs which produced 3,500 ducks. He plans to continue his breeding on a far more extensive scale.

W. O. Saunders, who has had the advantage of a close-up view of what Mr. Knapp has accomplished on his own land and water holdings, has volunteered his services to bring the project to the attention of the people of the state to the end that there may be general enlightenment on the subject before the legislature convenes in January.

"The results of such an undertaking are not a matter of surmise," said the editor when he was here last week, "because we have already before us what European countries have achieved by their efforts at game preservation. In Great Britain, for instance, it has been a science for centuries. Owners of Scottish moors get $10,000,000 as rentals for land which is valueless for anything else except grouse hunting. If our farmers will give their cooperation, the thing is going to mean not only better shooting but also many millions of dollars in increased revenue every year."

One demonstration the foundation has in mind is to send a field representative into a quail region, where would be explained to a group of farmers the advantage to them—the profit in dollars—of forming themselves into a "shooting preserve club." The individual farmer with 100 or 200 acres cannot kill vermin, take care of quail and keep off trespassers at any profit, but a group of them owning collectively 10,000 to 20,000 acres at once become important. It can put game birds onto these acres, can kill off vermin, can thoroughly discourage trespass and can make extra money off their acres by doing this.

Next, the Foundation will loan to this community club the necessary funds to erect a hatchery with incubators, brooders, etc., thus starting the community club game farm. The loan made by the foundation would be repaid out of part of the profits, as and when made by the community game farm. If money be lost, the foundation is the loser and not the farmer.

The principal source of profit to the farmer will come from his proportion of the sale of shooting privileges on the shooting club's preserve. Permits for these would be obtained by visiting sportsmen probably at designated stores in the central town and would be based upon a minimum daily charge with probably an extra charge per bird killed.

Guides would be furnished, and dogs, if desired, at given rates per day.

yards, but on being tackled the receiver fumbled the ball. Poss, tackle for Virginia, recovered, making it Virginia's ball, first down on the 35-yard line.

With Thomas and Beury carrying the ball the Cavaliers got a first down, but the Duke line stiffened and it was the Methodists' ball on the 23-yard line.

Ershler met with little difficulty in carrying the ball over by a drive over center for the third touchdown of the afternoon. The extra point was good when Brewer hit the line for the three yards.

Thomas Runs 45 Yards

Duke kicked off to Virginia with Thomas receiving. Thomas took the ball on his ten-yard line and shook off tackler after tackler, finally being downed on Duke's 45-yard line. But again the Cavalier offense failed to function because of the weaknesses in the line and Duke got the ball on downs.

Late in the third quarter Murray and Mullen alternated at carrying the ball and drove down to the one-yard line by off-tackle plays and line bucks. Kid Brewer again took the ball across Virginia's last white stripe. A line buck was unsuccessful for the extra point.

The final score of the game came about the middle of the final period when Brewer made his third score of the day. Brewer was too much for the center of the Cavalier line, which never stopped him for less than two or three yards. The extra point was not made this time.

Duke did not attempt to kick a single extra point during the game, but succeeded in getting two of the points through the line.

After the final tally Coach DeHart sent in many substitutes, as did Coaches Neale and Tebell. The game ended with the ball in Duke's possession at mid-field, and the final score was Duke 32, Virginia 0.

Election Notice

The regular election of chief cheerleader will take place tomorrow.

Chapel Thursday and Friday has been turned over to the candidates who lead a few cheers to show their ability and said a few words about their aims if and when elected. Monday's chapel will be similar to the two preceding, and Howard Tenry, Billy Arthur, George Brown, and Dan McDuffie are scheduled to perform so that the second half of the freshman class may have a chance to see the cheer leaders.

The election will be held in the Y. M. C. A., or in front of it, and will be under the direction of Red Greene, president of the student body.

Friendship Council Will Meet Tomorrow

The principal feature of the meeting of the freshman friendship council tomorrow night will be an address by Dr. G. T. Schwenning of the school of commerce. The rest of the meeting will be devoted to committee organization and devotional exercises.

The junior-senior cabinet will complete appointments to committees, and discuss additional program work.

Planting along Street

Stretch of Business Block Will Be Beautified with Grass and Trees

Grass is to be planted at once along the south side of Franklin street, from the Columbia street corner down beyond the bakery, and trees will be planted later on in the fall. This is the stretch where the regrading of the sidewalk has just been completed.

An unpaved strip was left between curb and sidewalk, according to the aldermen's resolution authorizing the improvement, so that the trees which had to be cut down could be replaced. The municipal street force has put on a good thick layer of top soil.

W. C. Coker, University botanist, is in charge of the planting. He will confer with the aldermen before deciding what kind of trees to set out. A determined effort will be made to protect both grass and trees. Mr. Coker is much pleased by the provision made for planting and believes that this part of the business block can be made beautifully green.

Y WILL SPONSOR FOREIGN SERVICE CONVENTION HERE

Junior-Senior Cabinet Plans for State Student Volunteer Meeting in February.

At the meeting of the junior-senior Y cabinet last night tentative plans were made to hold the State Student Volunteer Convention here the middle of February. The convention will be attended by about 250 delegates from all the colleges in the state. It will last three days.

The student volunteers are students who are interested in all kinds of foreign service. They are sent out by the church boards, the Y, and all such organizations. It is distinctly an organization of youths and every profession is represented. Mr. Comer says of the organization, "It goes on the norm of sharing life and rendering service."

A preliminary committee-meeting to consider plans for the convention will be held in Winston-Salem October 18. The Carolina delegates to this meeting are B. C. Moore, Sam Gorham and Doug Kincaid.

The sophomore cabinet meeting was devoted to a discussion of their program. They plan to hear two speakers a month and to discuss the substance of the talks at their third meeting.

The freshman friendship council decided to revive the "Hello" tradition on the campus. Pat Patterson, senior advisor of the club, suggested the motion to the council and it was adopted by the 60 freshmen at the meeting. Patterson told the group that the spirit around the campus was growing more and more like that of less friendly colleges. The group decided to try to speak to everyone on the campus and create a spirit that prevailed at the University some years ago.

Dr. G. T. Schwenning gave a short but interesting talk on individuality. He stressed the idea of being yourself and not becoming a "stamped" or "trade-marked" person.

Several committees were appointed and the time for their respective meetings announced.

EXPERIMENT IS TRIED OUT WITH FRESHMAN CLASS

This year an experiment was tried in the romance language department in order to facilitate the placing of freshmen. Placement tests were given in French and Spanish. Formerly, a student entering with 2 units credit in French could normally take course 3. These tests show just what work the student can do. They showed in many cases that the preparation of the freshmen was so good that he could take a course higher. This will prevent the waste of time by the student in taking a course he already knows.

The professors in the department think that these tests will prove valuable in placing the freshmen where they belong, both to the advantage of the student and the professor.

Cheerleaders!

All persons wishing to try out for cheerleaders' jobs are asked to attend a meeting in Kenan stadium at 4 o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of trying out for the squad.

Senior Smoker

A program combining the appearance of R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, and Ty Sawyer and his Carolina Buccaneers, will feature the initial senior smoker of the year at Swain hall tonight at 9:15 o'clock.

INCREASE MADE IN ENROLLMENT

Graduate School Members Found To Represent Twenty-Three Different States.

According to Dean W. W. Pierson, the enrollment of the graduate school in the fall quarter is encouraging. The number is 223 as opposed to 204 of the corresponding time last year. This enrollment shows on analysis that the students came from twenty-three states, and shows also academic training in undergraduate work drawn from one hundred institutions. Eighty of these graduate students already have masters' degrees. There are sixty-eight women and 155 men. The departments in which enrollment is heaviest are: English, fifty-two; history and government, thirty-two; chemistry, twenty-five; education, nineteen; sociology, eighteen; romance languages, sixteen; economics and commerce, eleven.

From June 1929 to June 1930, there have been 731 different registrations in the graduate school; 454 in the summer session of 1929, and 277 in the regular academic session. In the summer session of 1930 there was a marked growth in enrollment, the number being 578, or an increase of 124 over that of the preceding summer quarter.

Since June 1930, therefore, the graduate school has had an enrollment of 801 students. The University, through the school, has awarded during the last year, 115 degrees, a greater number than ever before. Of these twenty-seven were Ph. D. degrees.

Mr. A. C. Howell, associate professor of English, is the new assistant to Dean W. W. Pierson. Dr. R. C. Mills, Ph. D., who is economics professor and dean of the faculty of ecenomics in the University of Sydney, Australia, is a Carnegie visiting professor in the school, assigned to the University of North Carolina for the fall quarter of 1930. Dr. Mills will give lectures to the students in the department of economics, the school of commerce, and the department of history and government.

Phi Mu Alpha Makes Plans For The Year

Meeting Sunday night for the first time this year, Phi Mu Alpha, musical fraternity, made plans for its work in the near future, with the purpose of identifying itself prominently with University musical activities. The meeting was held in the music building.

At present, the fraternity has 29 active members, including five faculty men: Dr. W. M. Dey, of the French department, Professor Fred McCall, of the law school, and Professors Dyer, McCorkle, and Kennedy, of the music department.

The next meeting will be in the form of a smoker, to be given sometime early in November.

Hazing Seen To Be Making A Last Stand At The Principal Colleges

N. S. F. A. News Service

All over the world during the few hectic weeks, the Class of 1934 has found itself alternately paddled and patted on the back. It has been deluged with advice from deans and from seasoned upperclassmen about where to eat and what courses not to take.

A few important facts stand out from the whirl, the first is that there are more freshmen than ever this year. Colleges in the middle west and on the Pacific Coast note that the business depression did not have its expected effect on the enrollment, as the class of 1934 will probably be larger than any previous one.

The attitude toward freshman hazing seems to be changing gradually. At the University of West Virginia, the Student Council has officially abolished hazing, and has provided instead for a Freshman Court to work with the Traditions Committee in enforcing freshman customs. Which means that freshman rules are under the charge of a definite group, and not any upperclassman (sophomores being traditionally the most ardent) cares to take a hand. Bucknell has gone still farther, and is attacking not only hazing, but the freshman traditions themselves. In a letter to the editor of the Bucknellian of September 18, a freshman declares: "I have not come here to revert to the antics of my pre-school days . . My purpose is and has got to be serious." And this attitude is supported in an editorial in the same issue which denounces the time-honored green caps and compulsory acrobatics as "silly and childish."

But hazing is still far from a lost art. At Park College, "originality and humiliation" are still the purpose of the freshman rules. The Trojan (University of Southern California) describes "some new and particularly effective ways of making the frosh respect their university," ranging from freshman tree-sitting contests to removing painted remarks from the sidewalks with only "bricks and elbow-grease." At Creighton, the freshman wears a green cap with a bright red bill; at the University of Wichita, garters with socks that do not match. The student in Holland who is a candidate for one of the University corps must shave his head and enter his clubroom by the window. The new Corps member, needless to say, is easily recognizable for several months.

An interesting device for helping the bewildered newcomer is the Harvard Crimson's Confidential Guide to Courses, which is a really frank appraisal from the student's viewpoint, of the value and interest of various fields of study. As a Crimson editorial puts it, "The faculty is amply represented in the catalogue and the various conferences with instructors . . . This is a defined undergraduate opinion. It offers a means of ascertaining just how well the various instructors accomplish their aims as teachers." One has a mental picture of the Harvard faculty peering in trepidation at the Crimson's very outspoken comments on certain courses; but in spite of its inevitable shortcomings, the Confidential must certainly be helpful to the harassed freshman facing, as he is so often told, "the whole field of knowledge."

CORONER'S JURY ACQUITS NEGRO

Claude Reaves Is Freed in Accidental Shooting of Fletcher Strowd.

The coroner's jury reached a verdict that Fletcher Strowd young fourteen year old negro who was shot by a pistol in the hands of Claude Reaves, eighteen year old colored boy, met his death accidently, and Reaves was freed following the inquest Friday afternoon.

Strowd was killed Thursday afternoon when the pistol with which the two were playing was discharged and a bullet entered the head of the younger negro. He died later in a Durham hospital where he was rushed following the shooting.

The jury reached its decision after more than three hours of testimony. Officers Hern and Sloan were among the witnesses and testified that when they arrested the negro he told them in an excited manner that he pointed the gun at Strowd and it went off.

Reaves testified that he removed the magaizne from the pistol, which was an automatic, and did not know there was a bullet in the barrel. The pistol, he said, was near his hip when it accidently went off.

Coroner S. N. Nathan was in charge of the hearing and J. A. Giles was attorney for Reaves, while John R. P. Carawan represented the family of the deceased.

SEATS ORDERED FOR MUSIC HALL

Southern Desk Company Gets Contract for 792 Chairs To Be Delivered Soon.

The contract for the installation of the seats in the new music auditorium has just been awarded to the Southern Desk Company, of Hickory, which was the choice of the committee from bids of four other companies. This contract calls for delivery and installation by October 30, which will allow the final voicing of the organ to be begun at once by the factory expert, Jake Schaeffer. The dedication ceremony will take place soon after the voicing, and Professor Harold Dyer, head of the music department expresses the hope that everything will be in readiness for the exercises by the week of November 9.

The seats ordered are to be much more comfortable than the average theatre or auditorium seats and will harmonize with the French style interior of the hall. The panels will be constructed of full Jacquard velour, and the seats themselves of imitation leather set on a spring-structure. The back and side panels will be done in a selected design of contrasting colors, to conform with the rest of the color scheme.

The seat itself is to be 20 inches in width, 3 inches wider than the standard theater seat, and the committee, composed of Mr. Charles T. Wollen, Professor Dyer, and Mr. Weeks, of Atwood and Weeks, feels that it has selected the best seat in regard to comfort as well as beauty. Another added convenience of these seats will be a wire hat-rack set under each one, seated in hard rubber to prevent vibration. The toal capacity of the hall is 792 seats, and shipment of the material is to begin soon.

Senate And Assembly Meet Again Tonight

The Phi Assembly and the Di Senate will meet tonight in their respective meeting halls at 7:15. The program at the Phi will be the initiation of the new men. A report from a special committee on the re-organization and present status of the Di Senate is to be the chief part of the Dialectic society's program.

Persons desiring to join the Phi are requested to be present before 7:15 if possible.

Philological Club Will Hear Adams And Howe

The Philological Club will meet in the lounge of the graduate club on Tuesday evening, October 7, at 7:30 o'clock.

Contributors to the program and their subjects are:

Mr. Raymond Adams, of the English department, "Transcendental Translations."

Mr. George Howe, of the classics department, "The Development of the Character of Aeneas."

HENDERSON WILL ADDRESS CROWD AT CELEBRATION

University Professor Is Well-Versed in History of Battle Of King's Mountain.

Dr. Archibald Henedrson will be a speaker at the sesqui-centennial celebration of the battle of Kings Mountain to be held today on the battlefield in York county, South Carolina. At this meeting, President Herbert Hoover will be the guest of honor and the principle speaker.

For many years the question was brought up as to who fired the first shot in the battle of King's Mountain. In an article to the Charlotte Observer Dr. Henderson gives as a record of the first shot an affidavit by Philip Greever who served in the company of Commander Campbell and who is supposed to have fired the first shot. The gun used was a heavy, long-barrel, smooth bore musket with a short curved stock. It is kept by a decendant living in Chilhowie, Va., and is a highly prized heirloom.

For fifty years the old battleground was silent and the dead slept undisturbed, but today people from all over the world come to visit the famous battleground where the independence of the American people was decided, for many say that without that battle American independence would not have been.

It was on that famous spot that Ferguson was killed and the British were forced to surrender. Ferguson had said when he stationed himself on the hill that the Almighty himself could not dislodge him. He had counted on being surrounded, but he had not taken into account the courage and strength of the mountaineers that faced him. When he found himself defeated he made an effort to break through the lines of Commanders Campbell, Shelby, and Williams, but this effort cost him his death. His second in command was forced to surrender. This checked Cornwallis's advance into North Carolina and determined the outcome of the war.

SETTE COMMENDS U. N. C. FACILITIES

Professor Francis J. Sette, of the department of sanitary engineering at V. P. I. was in Chapel Hill over the week-end and visited the sanitary engineering laboratories of the University. While here Mr. Sette discussed the laboratory facilities and the organization of the sanitary engineering department. He seemed pleased with the equipment and said it was very modern and complete for college instruction.

Mr. Sette, who has been at the University of Porto Rico as head of the civil department, is now working with the Virginia department of health and is acting as head of the sanitary engineering department for V. P. I.

Dyer And Tar Heel Spirit

In the Open Forum columns of this issue the ever alert Dr. Dyer of our music department has thrown a deliberate and well aimed challenge at the student body.

Being connected in a more or less intimate fashion with the fortunes of our Tar Heel for the past three Septembers, it has been our privilege to have sursived annual avalanches of Open Forum letters anent the "cheering situation" and the late lamented Tar Heel spirit. Dyer steps on all the "crepe-hangers" and self-appointed critics by offering to compose a new alma-mater, the only provision being that some student poet-laureate stop imitating mr. e. e. cummings long enough to write verses acceptable enough to pass a committee from the English department on which our Victorian Dr. Booker or our latter-day Dr. Coffman might serve.

Bravo, Dyer! Our high schools, prep schools, and all the best colleges of the second rank have worn the strains of that good old classic—Amici—down to the level of a second class radio imitation of the celebrated tragedians, Amos and Andy. We need a new tune. The words of, "Four score and . . .," and other oft repeated exercises lose all sense of value. We need, therefore new verses.

The matter should not rest there, however, but while the fire of creative genius is aroused, other new tunes should be written and new lyrics composed so that the Greatest University in the South, and the Oldest State University in North America should not rank with the 300 institutions which remain satisfied to sing or make noise for the glory of alma-mater to the strains of Amici.—Jack D.

OPEN FORUM

FRESHMAN CLASS NEEDS ORGANIZATION

Perhaps nowhere is the lack of organization of the freshman class shown so much as in chapel assemblies. Why does each person wait impatiently for the word "excused" and then rush for the exits? Why are they disinterested in chapel? Let a freshman ask, why not.

Why should any group of fellows be interested in something in which they have no part. Moreover they are simply a number of first-year men, not an organized group. Therefore, there is no desire to assemble for any purpose.

An immediate organization of each freshman class should be brought about. Glee clubs, debating societies, and student councils are useful, but the combined importance of these societies is not worth to the University half that of a class with four years of association before it. We suggest the election of a president, a secretary, a treasurer and a council, each councilman being in charge of a definite activity. When advised by any member of the class, he would call and preside over meetings at which committees would be elected to take charge of and "put over" such affairs as they were deemed necessary.

Then the great potential powers of this organization should not be wasted. Some possible activities for the first year could be a freshman football banquet, freshman dance, freshman cheering section, a freshman orchestra, etc. As for the chapel assemblies, their time should be lengthened. A special program should be made and followed out. The class organization would take part in filling a portion of the program. There, also is no place like chapel for learning our Alma Mater, the way it should be sung.

These changes would turn unwieldy lump of ore into a spearhead. All activities would be centered in the class; each class would strive to surpass the previous class. The now scattered talent and ability would be centered in one lifting enterprise. Classes as a whole would turn out to athletic contests, each group trying to develop the best cheering section. All that is needed is the right kind of a start.

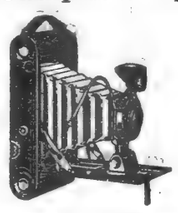
WANTED: A REAL SONG



Much printer's ink is being used in these columns on the subject of school spirit et al. Just how the thing called "spirit" shall henceforth be interpreted in Kenan Stadium appears to be a divided question. The writer rises to a point of inquiry on the subject, long bewailed by many, of the function (if any) of the proverbially sung, "Hark, the Sound" at each game. For a year a search has been carried on among alumni and friends of the University for songs which belong to this campus. One naturally expects an extensive song literature to have been one of the heritages of the worthy past of this institution. It appears the contrary is true. Original songs are exteremly rare and adapted songs difficult to find as well. A letter from one alumnus expresses a sentiment which is unquestionably worthy of thought. He says the song "Hark, the Sound" is unworthy of the use made of it. In support of his claim the following reasons are given: (1) Over 300 schools, large and small use this old tune "Amici" which, naturally destroys its fitness for use in any one school (2) It is sung too often. (He uses a descriptive adjective before "often.") (3) The tune lends itself too readily to hashed-up and jazzed-up arrangements for use any-and-everywhere because it is not properly covered by copyright. Argument (1) is fact. (2) Witness the daily use of "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner" during the war, with the result that the dignity, depth and effectiveness of these songs are even now, years after the war, distinctly missing. (3) On this point the writer begs to inqure if the traditional Tar Heel spirit was properly reflected and upheld, when, at the Wake Forest game, we stood with uncovered heads, while some high-powered jazz band stampeded its way via the loud speaker through a fanatical arrangement of what should be the "Hymn of Praise" of our Alma Mater. If the song means as little as this then (2) is correct and the song has passed its day of usefulness through having been heard too frequently.

If the impression gained by visitors through such a ceremony is to be desired the writer has gained an entirely wrong impression of what Tar Heel spirit is.

Carolina needs a song which will withstand the criticism thrown against old "Amici." It must be original. It must be worthy of being learned as to both words and music. (I did NOT say it should sound doleful nor lack in rhythmic swing.) It must be beautiful thus affording pleasure to both performers and listeners on the occasions when it is correctly used. Four lines of verse are enough for this "toast." The writer will pledge an original musical setting for the lines accepted by a committee from the departmnt of English. Poets awake!

HAROLD S. DYER,
Director of Dept of Music.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

If the vocal energy that has been spent of late in condemning the Carolina cheering section were used in actual cheering, we would all have to wear mufflers on our ears. If the energy that has been spent in writing condemnations of the cheerers were to be transmitted into the veins of the Carolina football team, they'd beat any team in the nation.

We note with shivers the annual advent of cold weather and with juvenile mirth the moth-eaten coats that have been on display on the streets of our staid old village.

"DEBATERS TO TACKLE WOMEN," headline a recent issue of this paper. Now that things have gone this far, we wouldn't be at all surprised to read an article in the Daily dubbing some local debater all-American woman tackle.

Question: What is so rare as a a day in June?

Answer: An honest politican in Chapel Hill.

The Di Senate investigation committee is scheduled to make a report tonight. Members of the committee have interviewed prominent students and faculty members in an effort to ascertain the status of the organization on the campus. As a result of the findings of the committee, a practical program is to be layed out for the year.

As winter approaches, one can readily see that the vogue of the "third eyebrow" is gaining impetus. This is due to two causes: Some students always want their mugs to appear in the Yackety-Yack partially hidden by a moustache; other want their talking apparatus to be warm at all times.

This column does not aspire to be a milepost—it marks no epoch. It is designed to play neither the part of a red flag, nor that of a white one. We invite neither criticism nor contribution.

Speaking of dumbness, we cite the case of the preacher who says that the younger generation is all going to hell, and then remembers that he himself is only thirty.

Beatty Rector, campus lion and senior senator from Buncombe, spoke thusly to the Di Senate the other night as he relinquished the symbol of authority: "Gentlemen: I have done my best to serve this senate—I have even visited the graves of the Senate's dead, as stipulated in the constitution."

'Tis rumored that a movement is under way to make the old war-horse permanent grave custodian. Henceforth, senator, we dub three Charon.

"Editor Sets New Sunday Deadline" stated this paper last Saturday. So far as the matter of time is concerned, we fail to see the difference between an old and a new Sunday deadline.

It's just the old problem of distribution. There's enough idleness for everybody, but the wrong people have it.—Brooklyn Times.

'High School Journal' Begins Its 13th Year

The first issue of "The High School Journal," now in its thirteenth year of publication, has just come from the press, "The Jaurnal" is issued eight times yearly beginning with the October number. It is edited by the school of education and published by the Univesity press. N. W. Walker is editor-in-chief, and I. C. Griffin business manager.

Three articles of especial interest appear in the October issue. They are "Made in Carolina" by Bryan W. Sipe of the state department of conservation, "Supervision of High School Instruction" by J. Henry Highsmith, state supervisor of high schools, and "Consolidation in Administration." The last mentioned is about the much discussed subject: "Consolidating the administrative units of North Carolina's public school system into fewer units, cutting expenses considerably, though without loss of educational effectiveness."

"The Journal" has suscribers in practically every school in North Carolina, in forty-two states, and in eight foreign countries. Seventeen hundred and eighty copies of the first number have already been mailed to suscribers.

Music Teachers To Meet In Greensboro

Greensboro, Oct. 4.—More than 100 supervisors and teachers of music in this state are expected to meet at North Carolina college, state institution for women, in this city October 17 and 18 in the second annual music conference conducted by the institution under the direction of Dr. Wade R. Brown, dean of the school of music.

The musicians will hear two men widely known for their work in the fields of instrumental and vocal music. Dr. Victor L. F. Rebmann, director of music of the Westchester County Recreation commission, New York, will speak during the two-day assembly about orchestral and band music. Bruce A. Carey, director of music in Girard College, Philadelphia, will conduct conferences on vocal music.

Visiting teachers who notify Dr. Brown's office that they will be in Greensboro Thursday, October 16, will be guests of the college and the civic music association at the first concert of the season at Aycock auditorium. The recital, dated Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock, is to be given by Alexander Brailowsky, Russian pianist. Dean Brown is eager to know in advance just how many guests are going to be present for the concert the Thursday evening before the conference.

Last year 106 teachers attended the first conference of the kind, given under the direction of the college.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

Out of the south several years ago went a young chap who traveled under the tag of Jef Dickinson. Bound for nowhere in particular, Jef landed in sunny France and entered the automobile business.

A sportsman at heart, Jef witnessed several French ring fights and, bored with the Gaulic pugilsitic tactics, opened a stable of his own in Paris.

That was nine years ago. Today Jef is known as the "Tex Rickard of Europe" and is probably the best known individual promoter in the ring racket today. The alleged Stribling-Scott fight staged in Wembleyton stadium in London was handled by Dickinson and it is even reported that the affable southerner owns a 25 per cent interest in Primo Carnera. What this department can't figure out is what Mr. Dickinson is doing with his five cents' worth?

Just when we figured that the miniature golf pest had faded into the past, someone passed out free tickets at the Swain hall afternoon meal yesterday. With the current business depression forcing each and every student to regard free tickets, in any form, as manna, the pee wee game has come back in, full blast. Personally, we blame it on the weather for they promised us in July that it would be too cold to play by the first of October.

Our ever observing optics stuck on a story in a state daily sheet this morning stating that George Thompson, Carolina tackle, lost 14 pounds in the Wake Forest game last week.

That's nothing. We lost four pounds, our girl, and a gold watch trying to get through the mob at gate four after the game was over.

We note that the Wolfpack is off to Tampa tonight for the Florida tiff Saturday. Here's luck to our neighbors, but let's hope that they don't come back with the Pittsburg line after the California game—"The weather there is too warm for football."

As we prepare to go to press and the "I" on this typewriter begins to break down, dispatches from Roanoke state that Orville Neale, Gobbler mentor, is preparing himself for Saturday's game with Carolina by studying the mid-summer stock reports.

Aubrey Parsley, auburn-thatched end on the varsity, not only makes high marks in the game of football, but also in the classroom. "Maw" is a Phi Beta Kappa in the school of engineering, which is no mean attainment for any student.

Herb Nelson Lost To Tar Heels For Remainder Of Year

Herb Nelson in all probability will be out of the Tar Heel lineup for the rest of the season, according to an announcement made yesterday by athletic officials. Herb is in Watts hospital with severe stomach trouble, having lost considerable weight during the past week.

The loss of Nelson is the second casualty to the left end position on the football team, Erwin Walker having broken a bone in his wrist a few days ago.

MACKMEN ANNEX FIFTH GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES

Athletics Score Twice in Ninth With Foxx's Homer To Center.

Sportsmans Park, St. Louis, Sept. 6.—A deep clout over the center field stands with one man on the bags dashed the hopes of the St. Louis Cardinals here today as the Athletics captured the fifth game of the series, two to nothing. With Mickey Cochrane on first base, Jimmy Foxx stepped to the platter and sent the horsehide zooming over the stands to climax one of the fastest tilts in World Series history.

With hurlers on both teams pitching air tight ball for eight hectic innings, neither aggregation gained an edge as the contest assumed the aspect of a pitching duel.

With the bags crowded and one down in the first stanza of the eighth, the "A's" made a desperate attempt to shove across the needed bingle, but the peerless twirling of Grimes held the eastern invaders without a score. With a pinch hitter in the ranks for Earnshaw, Grove finished the game, holding the Red Birds effectively in check through the last moments of the final inning.

The scene of the battle will be transferred to Philadelphia Tuesday when the two clubs meet for the last of the contests. Should the A's take Tuesday's encounter, as they are favored to do, the series will come to an end.

Freshman Wrestling

Assistant Coach Abbott yesterday opened the wrestling season for freshmen with a light workout. Several upper classmen were present. Coach Abbott told the new men to drill on one hold at a time. After practicing for a few days on holds the men will be drilled in breaking holds. After a workout on the mat for about an hour Coach Abbott sent the men to Emerson field for a half-mile jug on the track, thus winding up the first days practice.

Ned Lipscomb, giant center, and Ellis Fysal, scrappy guard, are only two pounds apart in weight—but nine inches difference in height. Ned is 6'5" and Fysal is 5'8". We don't see how Lipscomb unbends enough to get his long torso over the ball.

RONALD COLMAN PAID FOR HAVING GOOD TIME

Ronald Colman reverts back to the pleasures of his childhood in "Raffles," his newest talking picture which is to be shown at the Carolina theatre today. As the famous "Amateur Cracksman" in this melodramatic romance which scored sensational runs on the stage here and abroad, Mr. Colman engages in two of his favorite sports. And Producer Samuel Goldwyn has to pay him for it.

Motoring and cricket are the sports concerned. "Raffles" is the first picture to show a big league cricket game in full swing for an extended sequence.

Like the proverbial brook this haraguing against the lack of school spirit in cheering sections goes on forever.

On Sunday evening about six o'clock, a new sport model Ford roadster turned over near the "S" curve bridge about four miles from Chapel Hill on the Durham highway, the occupants, John Nicholson, Spencer Glasscock, two unidentified boys from Durham being thrown out of the car.

Two of the boys received minor injuries. According to their statement, the back wheels of the car skidded on the curve, and as the driver turned the steering wheel the front wheels also skidded, the car turning completely over and righting itself. The wind shield was knocked off and the radiator, fenders, and door were bent.

Football Race Opens Intramural Season

3:30—(1) Sigma Phi Sigma vs. Sigma Zeta; (2) T. E. P. vs. Theta Chi; (3) Zeta Beta Tau vs. Zeta Psi.

4:30—(1) Mangum vs. Manly; (2) New Dorms vs. Everett ("T"); (3) Old West vs. Steele.

Results of yesterday's games follow:

Dekes Shut-Out Kappa Alpha

The intramural series opened yesterday with Delta Kappa Epsilon trouncing Kappa Alpha to the score of 20-0. It was the Dekes' game all the way through. Chatham and Willis, stars for D. K. E., proved too much for the K. A.'s, completing pass after pass for substantial gains, and making ten first downs against Kappa Alpha's three. For K. A. Oliver showed up well, making several nice gains on passes and end runs.

Kappa Sigma Swamps Phi Alpha

Kappa Sigma took its first game of the intramural series in a walk, troucing Phi Alpha 46-7. It was Eagles, star back for the Kappa Sigs, and a strong defense, that spelled defeat for the Phi Alph's. Eagles scored five touchdowns on end runs and completed passes, while the Phi Alpha team was held to a single score by the Kappa Sig defense. Bessen made the single score for Phi Alpha.

Steele Defeats Mangum

In the hardest fought game of the afternoon, Steele managed to slip the ball across Mangum's goal for the only tally in the game. Hogan, of Mangum, took the ball over after completing a pass. The game was marked by strong defensive work on both teams. Innumerable passes, that would have spelled touchdown in big letters if completed, were either knocked down or carried for short gains. Some idea of the defensive work may be had from the fact that Steele gained only four first downs while Mangum made only two.

Phi Sigma Kappa Wins

Phi Kappa Sigma lost a close decision, 7-0, to Phi Sigma Kappa yesterday afternoon at intramural field. The teams were well matched and the game was well played and hard fought. Phi Sigma Kappa had seven first downs to their opponents' four. Thomas and Mitchell starred for the victors.

S. A. E. Wins 12-0

Sigma Alpha Epsilon yesterday trounced Pi Kappa Phi to the tune of 12-0. The game was not as lop-sided as might be gathered from the score. S. A. E. made two first downs to its opponents' one. Both of the touchdowns were made on passes. Gillespie played a fine defensive game for Pi Kappa Phi and Parsley and Goodridge shone for S. A. E.

Old West Forfeits

New Dorms had the easiest time yesterday in winning the first game of the series. They won from Old West by forfeit.

NEW MEMBERS INITIATED BY PHI TUESDAY NIGHT

Assembly Takes In Unusually Large Number At Third Meeting.

Forty-two new members were initiated into the Phi society Tuesday night in one of the most impressive and successful initiations in the history of the assembly.

At the end of the initiation the following resolutions were discussed and in the order named: Resolved, That the present business depression is caused by the President of the United States; Resolved, That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring that freshman be allowed to attend the Grail and other dances given at the University.

The first resolution called forth an interesting discussion, but when the vote was taken the measure was defeated.

The second resolution was finally defeated after a very interesting and enthusiastic discussion at two meetings.

Wilson Recounts Visit To European Libraries

By Mary Buie

Dr. Louis R. Wilson, University Librarian, in an interview on European and American libraries, discussed some notable libraries of Europe, and compared in general those of Europe and America.

Dr. Wilson discussed the Library of the Vatican in view of the interest aroused in the United States by the fact that an American committee of experts has been called on to supervise the revision of the catalogue of the Vatican along the lines of American university libraries. Dr. W. W. Bishop, librarian at the University of Michigan, and Dr. H. C. Hanson of the University of Chicago are doing this work.

"This does not mean," Dr. Wilson explained, "that this committee is supervising the revision of what ordinary visitors see when visiting the exhibits of rare manuscripts and printed books of the Vatican. The library proper is a different sort of thing from the ordinary library. The reading room, catalogue, and stack are spread out in a series of rooms and buildings." He further explained that there are two points in which the library is being worked over. The catalogue is being revised according to American principles, and an American firm, Snead and Co. of Jersey City, is building in one section,an American stack. "This change," Dr. Wilson continued, "is probably being made because the Pope, while a cardinal, was librarian in the Ambrosiana Library of Milan, and he has always been interested in library affairs."

Two other notable Italian libraries visited by Dr. Wilson were the Library of St. Mark in Venice and the Laurenziana or Medici Library in Florence. The first is famed for the beautifully illuminated Grimani breviary, and the Laurenziana for a collection formed by the Medici of 10,000 manuscripts, among which are more than 200 of the writings of Dante.

Dr. Wilson made special reference to the Techinal library of the Deutche Museum in Munich. "It is for the use," he says, " of students and visitors who are associated with the Deutche Museum, which has every sort of instrument or machine which Germany, in her thorough going way, has worked out." The distance covered in traversing the hundreds of rooms in the museum is fifteen miles, the rooms being filled with machines of all kinds which the students study in [illegible] with the literature in the [illegible]rary. This, Dr. Wilson stated, [illegible] of interest to Americans because Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, has indicated that he intends to establish such an institution for Americans in Chicago.

Dr. Wilson spoke also of the difference in the American and European libraries as well as German, French, and English.

American universities catalogue their materials according to one of two general classifications, the Library of Congress, or the Dewey. In Germany the system of classification is greatly modified by each institution

SATURDAY MARKS UNIVERSITY DAY

Founder's Day Falls on Sunday, But Celebration To Take Place Saturday.

Next Saturday, October 11, will be celebrated as University Day, since October 12, aniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the University, falls on Sunday. The exercises will be held in the auditorium of the Methodist church at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. All University classes will be suspended from 11 to 1 o'clock. Because of a lack of sufficient space in the auditorium, the usual academic procession will not take place.

The order of the service will be as follows: music by the University band; invocation by Rev. Eugene Olive; the University hymn; addresses by Hon. R. R. Williams of Asheville and Hon. L. P. McLendon of Durham; roll call of the University dead by Dean A. W. Hobbs; singing of "Intiger Vitae" by the glee club; "Hark the Sound"; and benediction by Rev. Eugene Olive.

Programs are being printed and will be distributed to students. These will contain full works of the University hymn and "Hark the Sound" and an extract from Battle's History of the University of North Carolina" about the laying of the cornerstone of Old East building in 1793, Old East being the first building erected at the University.

The speakers, Messrs. Williams and McLendon, now prominent lawyers, were both debaters of note in the University.

Freshman Meeting

Owing to the fact that Dean Walker was called out of town last week, the informal meeting planned for the freshmen of the school of education for Friday night, October 3, was postponed to tonight. Each member of the freshman class in the school of education is invited to be present at 9 o'clock for an informal meeting in Peabody building.

He stated that the club had been instrumental in improving the living and studying conditions in the dormitories, and had sponsored all worthwhile dormitory projects. He also explained the dormitory council system and said that the student council had delegated the authority to the dormitory council to preserve good order in the dormitory buildings and to expel persistent offenders and disturbers.

A report was made that all of the thirteen dormitories were fully organized. Presidents of the different buildings are: Wallace A. Shelton, New Dorms; B. W. Woodley, Old West; Hal V. CHASE FEATURES ILLINOIS ALUMNI NEWS FOR MONTH

Featuring the October issue of the Illinois Alumni News are two articles on the new president of the University of Illinois and former president of the University of North Carolina, Harry Woodburn Chasé. The first of the two articles, "Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase Takes Up Duties As President," describes the entrance of Dr. Chase and his family into Urbana, the site of the University, saying "Surely few university presidents ever took office under more favorable conditions."

Selections are quoted from speeches made at a dinner given in his honor by Phi Delta Kappa, honorary educational fraternity, and at a Chamber of Commerce banquet, in which he reiterated "some educational convictions from which his general course of procedure may perhaps be charted."

The article is completed with a brief scanning of the careers of Dr. and Mrs. Chase, Elizabeth Chase and Carl Griggs, who was recently adopted by Dr. and Mrs. Chase.

Putting Little Men In Big Positions

Billy Arthur, the smallest man in stature in the University's student body, has been elected to a big position. Monday he defeated several opponents for head cheerleader, receiving more votes than his opponents, combined totals.

His size and the publicity he has received since entering the University last year undoubtedly influenced many to vote for him. There is no doubt but that he was the most popular of the several candidates. Probably, he was also the best qualified. We know little of cheerleading and that is that some boys are able to make students cheer while others only make themselves ridiculous trying to do so.

If the new cheerleader can add more color to the games and get more spontaneous cheering from the student body he will have filled his position well. He might revive the cheerios or even do better by providing a co-ed cheering section with the girls decked out in costumes to catch the eye.

But anyway Billy has a big job on his hands. He has much to accomplish if he is to live up to the records of some of his more notable predecessors. Kay Kyser, (he was Kike before going East,) was the most distinguished of recent year leaders. Kyser possessed qualities which produced results. His cheerios did good work in 1926.

Although rated scholastically as a sophomore, Billy has appeared before the public enough to know how to capture the imagination of the fans. If he cuts the "wise stuff" and puts some hard work into the job he will do well. We congratulate him on his election and wish for him better luck than has attended the efforts of many other equally well-intentioned-leaders.

Peace On Earth

The annual cry for peace that arises with the opening of the college year has once more begun. A practice that is soon to become a tradition, every year new provisions are made to disseminate anti-chauvenistic feelings among university and college students. This year three universities received the Fidac Peace Medal for "distinguished accomplishment in the cause of peace," and at the same time Columbia has announced a new course in "Education and International Problems and Values" to promote an understanding of the methods of obtaining world peace.

On the heels of this comes the announcement that several American diplomats are convinced that another European war is brewing. They attempt to soften these dire prognostications with the pious opinion that the United States will never be drawn into such a conflict excepting to "protect her honor."

The same futility that has attended all academic discussion of war problems will apparently be the fate of the present optimistic gestures. Italy rattles her sword under the nose of France, who retaliates with ostentatious war games on the Italian border. Germany and Russia too indulge in their share of blustering. From all external appearances, Europe will again be shocked with the news that the cannons are again roaring. The aspect is not a cheerful one, yet it seems inevitable in these times when even disarmament conferences almost end in a war.—Harvard Crimson.

OPEN FORUM

TOBACCO, COYOTES AND BARON MUNHAUSER

A simple anecdote for which I owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. George H. McEntire of U Ranch, Sterling City, Texas, a gentleman whose ancestor was one Daniel of Colonial North Carolina. It illustrates admirably and uniquely the rather mixed and intimate relationship of the cultures of North Carolina and Texas.

The cow hands on U Ranch had been pursuing with their usual success an objectionable little critter known in those parts as a coyote. For some reason, or no communicable reason at all, their idea on this occasion was not to shoot the beast, but to lasso him from their horses. Up arroyo, across mesa, over devil's cactus, past mesquite clump, they pursued the varmint until finally he took refuse in an ancient prickly pear clump. The general shape of this aggregation of thorns and barbed misery for man and short-furred creatures, was that of an inverted basket about eight feet in diameter on the inside, and with an inside height to accommodate a little wolf and a man on all fours.

Even a dumb cowboy learns early to respect prickly pear clumps in West Texas and usually to avoid them. And so the local sages, Bill Conger and John Haygood, the respective leaders of schools of thought as widely variant as Humanism and the M. L. A. or Romanticism and Realism, were called into conference

Bill argued that the proper thing to do was to shoot the coyote as had been the custom of the plains since teepees were. "How come he's different?" said Bill plaintive after such fool chasing around. "Ain't we always done it that way? An', besides, we've got to get to those screw worms over in the North Pasture."

"Naw," and John Haygood took a chew from the R. J. Reynolds Company's choicest Spit-Quick-or-Drown contribution to Texas civilization.

"Whatcha goin' tuh do?"

John got the juicy North Carolina weed acclimated in the great southwestern open spaces of his left jaw before he answered. His gang squatted calmly on the tips and heels of their boots and started passing around the L. L. F. wheatstraw and Bull Durham sack.

Only the Congerites were restless and rolled nervous cigarettes that wouldn't stay lit for more than two draws. They had seen John Haygood take chews of North Carolina Spit-Quick Inspirational Culture before, and always, with the inevitability of Cause and Effect, the Congerites had had to endure too many winks and knowing looks to make the bunk house a pleasant loafing place for weeks afterwards.

John peered quickly into the hollow inside the clump and rose to the bowlegged and magnificent height of his gnarled five feet ten.

Five minutes.

There was the sound of padded feet and hands and boots on the hard earth under the prickly pear dome.

John emerged suddenly from one side, dragging a forlorn and exhausted coyote by the scuff of the neck.

"Why, he's cryin'!" exclaimed an S. P C. A.-er of the Congerite faith. "You big brute, what do ya mean, mistreating a little coyote until he cries?"

Bill was swept with admiration. "An' with your bare hands. How'd you do it, John?"

"The only way they is to tame coyotes," said John. "I allus knowed it's word. I just got down on my hands and knees an' follered him around until we got to lookin' each other straight in the eyes."

"Hell, I bet he'd seen plenty cockeyed cowhands before this."

John ignored the personality and only exhibited the discouraged varmint, hanging like a puppy, weeping silently and slobbering on himself as he dangled by the nape of his neck at the end of John's enormous hand.

But Bill was the technician, as usual. "How'd you do it?"

"Easy," said John, as he bit anither comfortable chew of Juicy Plug, picked up the reins, and swung into the saddle, balancing the coyote's limpness between him and the pommel. "You just get him looking straight at you and then you spit in his eyes."

THE LONE STAR RANGER.

SPARE THE ROD

Nowhere else on the entire campus are freshmen subjected to such high-handed and forceful methods as they are in the gymnasium class. The idea of physical exercise is a recognized necessity, but when those who direct the muscle building antics carry it to a point of physical torture, it is time to let up.

In the 5:15 gym class on Monday the director went through one excruciating exercise for so long a time that the poor freshmen were hardly able to move. His sole reason for doing it was because some few had, unintentionally, hit their dumb bells together, causing a slight noise. "If you can't follow, drop out and report to the office." Just because one cannot continue to suffer physical torture is no reason why embarrassment should be inflicted.

Criticism is not directed toward Dr. Lawson, but to his assistants who seem to think that their business is to make freshmen so antagonistic that they will cut gym to their sorrow.

When physical exercise is carried to the extent of causing one to be so tired and sore that he cannot study, it is time to halt. Body culture is secondary to mental culture and as such should be treated.

"EARL LIEDERMAN."

By Moore Bryson

While walking around the campus the other night I heard the following snatches of conversation etc. coming from the various fraternity houses:—

Delta Kappa Epsilon: For generations the Dekes * *

Beta Theta Pi: We all drink from the same canteen * *

Sigma Nu: Charlie Price and Billy Marshall * *

Theta Chi: We fraternities on the court * *

Chi Psi: The insurance company paid so that ought to prove * *

Sigma Chi: And the moonlight beams * *

Pi Kappa Alpha: The reputation is really due to the fact that lots of the boys who come to our annual ball * *

Sigma Alpha Epsilon: The Carolina Inn * *

Pi Kappa Phi and Phi Delta Theta: It may seem a little far out but * *

Phi Gamma Delta: Calvin Coolidge is * *

Kappa Alpha: Bob Lee and Dick Byrd * *

Delta Psi: Ho, hum!

Kappa Sigma: The Kappa Sigs really date back to * *

Zeta Psi: The Wilsons and the Mangums * *

Chi Phi: And when we build * Etc., Etc., Etc.

Ed Curlee suggests the need for a new organization at Carolina. This would be called the "'Shine Club" and the method of initiation would be as follows: when one of the pledges of the Sheiks, Bulls or Thirteen Club started their often heard "Allahs," "Cu-coos," or "One, two threes," the pledge of the new club would stand in front of him and point his finger and holler "SHINE." Such a club might prove more beneficial than some of the similar organizations on the campus.

The other day a girl saw a picture of a negro "Blues" singer on an ad in the University Book Store. She remarked that she wondered if that were a picture of the convict who was singing so much, and then became quite positive that it was when she saw what she called his "Prison number" below the picture. It so happened that the number was that of the phonograph record and not his prison record. And we thought that the heighth of dumbness had been reached when we read the story of the girl and the horse-back ride in the "Yellow Journal."

Proverb from the Chinese: Boys who live in new houses shouldn't cast black-balls.

Went by the Playmaker Theatre Monday night to watch the try-outs for the new bill of plays. There seemed to be some excellent talent among the girls but the boys were not up to standard. One girl was especially promising. I will have to be content with calling her Kay Francis because of the way her hair was cut and because I was unable to learn her name. (But I have hopes.)

It was my good fortune last Saturday to have a seat at the Grid-Graph in front of "Ratty" Ransom. Everyone knows or remembers "Ratty." It was most enlightening to have all the plays explained by such an expert as well as to have the next play called before it took place. What is more, the lack of a cheering section was no longer felt. I, and everyone within a forty foot radius of "Ratty" appreciated this extra service with the Grid-Graph. I moved my seat at the end of the half.

PLAY-LIKERS HOLD FIRST TRYOUTS AT GREENSBORO

Between 50 and 75 girls reported for the Play-liker tryouts held last week at the North Carolina College for Women.

Miss Eloise Banning, president of the dramatic organization, is well pleased with the candidates. She stated that more real talent has shown up that ever before.

According to Miss Banning, the first play will probably be "What Every Woman Knows" and will be presented about the third week in November.

VARSITY-FROSH CROSS-COUNTRY GETTING IN FORM

Tar Heels Well Established in Conference Meets for Past Several Years.

Of the letter-men of last year's cross-country team only one, Captain Cliff Baucom, will be back this year. The others were lost by graduation. Among those who will aid Captain Baucom in retaining Carolina's honors are Cordle, Crane, Farris Garrett, Hawley, Hubbard, Hunter, Jansen, Jones, Lumpkin, Petty, Pratt, Sieder, Thomas, Watkins, and Zelly. These men are consistent in their work, and are rounding into shape in spite of the warm weather which we are having at present. It will be quite a while before one will be able to tell who's who on the squad, though, as it takes time to develpo a cross-country man.

On the 22nd of November the Southern conference cross-country run over a five mile course will be held here at Chapel Hill. In 1926 the meet was held at Athens, Ga., in '27 here at Chapel Hill, in '28 at Atlanta, Ga., and in 1929 again here in Chapel Hill.

The freshman cross-country squad, according to numbers, is very promising, nevertheless, only time will decide whether or not the first-year mean are really of championship calibre. The most consitent members of the frosh squad are Farr, Grover, Meade, McRae, and Prochazka.

There will be a freshman cross country meet here with V. P. I. on the thirty1first of October. Carolina's freshman team lost to V. P. I. last year, and the yearling squad of '34 is out for revenge in a great big way.

As in other sports, Carolina has well established herself in the Southern conference cross-country meets by winning four consecutive southern conference meets. She has also, within a period of a few years defeated ten state opponents, and won four state championships. This is an enviable record. Let's keep it up.

Exchange Tickets

Students may exchange their football coupons for tickets for the student section at the Maryland game on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday afternoons, from 2 to 5, in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A.

Tag Football Notice

Mac Gray, assistant director of intramural athletics, announces that the tag football games scheduled for this afternoon at 3:30 on field No. 3, will not be held on account of baseball practice.

MID-ATLANTIC NET TOURNEY STARTS

No upsets featured the first round of play in the Middle-Atlantic intercollegiate tennis tournament at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia as Hines and Hendlin, Carolina's favored entries, entered the second and third rounds respectively.

Wilmer Hines, who recently captured the national junior crown from a good field, and who is now a sophomore at Carolina, entered the second round by default.

Hendlin, who in May won the North Carolina collegiate singles title, and paired with Phil Liskin, the doubles crown, played two matches to gain the third bracket. His first opponent, Jack Higgins of Green Briar, succumbed to the tune of 6-0, 6-0.

In the second round, Hendlin found himself opposed by a much steadier player, Frank Bready of Washington and Lee, and was forced to 6-4, 64 before taking the match.

Lucas Abels, the other Tar Heel entry, drew a bye to the second round where he met defeat at the hands of James Allen of Davis and Elkins. This turned out to be a thrilling match and Abels finally lost 3-6, 6-0, 7-5 in the only 3 set match of the day.

Intramural Results

Sigma Nu Wins

Sigma Nu defeated Sigma Phi Sigma yesterday afternoon in tag football by nine first downs to two. Neither team was able to score though Sigma Nu threatened several times.

Zeta Beta Tau Loses

Theta Chi won out over the Zeta Beta Tau eleven yesterday afternoon by seven to three in first downs. The game was close and hard fought throughout, as is evidenced by the close score.

Betas Win 6-0

The defending campus champions, Beta Theta Pi, won from Zeta Psi in the tag football race yesterday afternoon by the score of 6-0. Zeta Psi put up a strong defense to the passes of the Betas, but were unable to score.

Phi Gams Lose 13-7

Chi Psi won from the Phi Gams by the score 13-7 yesterday afternoon in the intramural football league. This was the only game of the afternoon in which both teams crosses the goal line. The Chi Psi's presented a very strong passing attack which the Phi Gams were unable to stop.

S. P. E. Wins by Forfeit

The S. P. E. fraternity won from the Chi Phi's yesterday afternoon in the intramural football league by forfelt.

Sigma Zeta Wins

The Sigma Zeta tag football team gave the Tau Epsilon Phi's a rather bad licking yesterday afternoon to the tune of 25-0. Sigma Zeta's passing attack was just a bit puzzling to the enemy.

Tau Epsilon Phi did not threaten until toward the end of the final quarter. Two beautiful passes were completed from their own 30-yard line to the 5-yard line. This threat ended when the final pass was intercepted by Sigma Zeta, which ran the final score to 25-0.

VANDERBILT TO MAKE BID FOR S. I. C. HONORS

Vanderbilt's 37-7 win over Minnesota was the most impressive victory of the day. The Commodores went to the home field of the powerful mid-west eleven, spotted them a seven-point lead, and then gave them a severe licking.

DEPENDABLE GUARDS

McIVER

BLACKWOOD

These two linesmen, although lettermen, are playing their first season as regulars. McIver was Ray Farris' understudy last year and played good ball. Blackwood, ineligible last year, won his monogram as a reserve in 1928.

This year both men are living up to the expectations of Coach Collins, McIver playing a whale of a game at Blacksburg last Saturday, and Blackwood has consistent, although unspectacular, ball. Blackwood is rapidly recovering from a leg injury suffered two weeks ago and should be in tip-top shape for the Maryland battle this Saturday.

Carolina Coaches Send Football Team Through Stiff Defensive Drills

Second Team Scrimmages With Freshmen; Varsity Prepares Defense for Maryland.

Being fairly well satisfied with the showing of the Tar Heels on offense in the V. P. I. game, Coaches Collins, Cerney, Enright and Sapp yesterday afternoon sent the whole football squad through stiff drill and scrimmage on defensive play.

Maryland, Georgia, Tennessee and Georgia Tech all have more powerful offensive teams than the Gobblers, and for this reason strength must be added to the defense of the Tar Heels.

Either the coaches must whip the weak rookie line into shape, or depend upon a wide-open attack to outscore opponents.

The first team spent the whole afternoon in dummy scrimmage on defense for Maryland plays. Backfield as well as line men were cautioned on certain points in the tricky Old Line scoring power. Since pass defense in both the Wake Forest and V. P. I. games has been below par, Coach Cerney is spending a great deal of time on this phase of the game.

The varsity lineup yesterday showed: Larry Johnson and Theron Brown, ends; George Thompson and June Underwood, tackles; "Bud" McIver and Ellis Fysal, guards; Ned Lipscomb, center; Johnnie Branch, quarterback; Jim Magner and Captain Strud Nash, halves; Henry House, fullback.

Coaches Collins and Enright led the second team through a scrimmage session with the freshmen, keeping the varsity on defense most of the time. The varsity eleven was rather spasmodic in its work, tackling hard at times only to miss the frosh ball carriers later. Pass defense was average but there was still room for improvement. The freshmen held the second varsity to only a few short gains, except for a dash of 50 yards by Tom Alexander after receiving a pass.

The lineup of the second team was: Alexander and Nichols, ends; Hodges and Crew, tackles; Dunavant and Froneberger, guards; Gilbreath, center; Wyrick, quarterback; Maus and Erickson, halfbacks; McNeill, fullback.

Because of the fine work of Larry Johnson in the V. P. I. game, Coach Collins has less to worry about the left end position. It was the first time that Johnson has been in the starting lineup, but his work was equal to that of a seasoned veteran. Coach Collins was for a time troubled with the problem of locating a left end when Walker and Nelson were lost to the team by injuries. "Maw" Parsley is expected to be ready for the Old Liners in spite of a slight leg injury.

The center of the line continue to look good with Lipscomb and Gilbreath at center. Fysal and McIver are showing up well too. McIver gave an excellent performance for the Tar Heels at Blacksburg.

Reserve strength at tackle is what worries the Tar Heel mentors now. Thompson and Underwood both have slight injuries to their ankles, and may not be in very good shape Saturday, so reserve tackles are working hard this week.

Freshman Cross Country

There will be a freshman intramural cross country run October 23, starting at Emerson field. All first-year men, whether out for track, cross country or not, are eligible for this event.

This will be an excellent chance for Coach Ranson to find out the freshmen's ability for cross country running.

MARYLAND FRESHMEN TO PLAY TAR BABIES OCT. 18

College Park, Md., Oct. 7.—Under the capable direction of Coach Faber and Al Heagy, well-known end of last year's varsity eleven, the freshman football squad has been working out daily on the lower athletic field. Despite the heat of the last few days the preparations of the yearlings for their opening game with the North Carolina freshmen on October 18, has been going on apace.

(By K. C. Ramsay)

COACH CHUCK COLLINS and his Tar Heels did what no one else has done. The Gobblers have been in their new stadium for four years, and hadn't lost a game at home until our own eleven met them last Saturday. Carolina's offense seems to be just as good as it was last year; Johnnie Branch, Henry House, Jim Magner, in fact, all of them, looked like a million dollars on offense in the Blacksburg game.

Carolina's big worries are coming from the defense. The Gobblers have a great team and probably deserved to score on the Tar Heels, but the Carolina line will have to hold line thrusts better, and the backs will have to improve at covering passes before conference honors are to be brought to Chapel Hill.

EVERY TEAM MUST PAY the price of victory, and Carolina was no exception last Saturday. Captain Strud Nash received a cut below his eye which may keep him out of the next game. George Thompson and June Underwood hurt their knees, and will need some rest. Coach Collins may have to start several reserves against Maryland so that these men can rest for the Georgia game. Maryland won't stand for a reserve lineup being in there either, for Yale had rough sledding with the Old Liners until the last period. Herb Nelson is still very ill at Watts hospital in Durham, and there is very little chance for him to play again this season.

GENE McEVER SCOUTED the Tar Heels at the V. P. I. game, and rode back to Blacksburg on the bus with the team. He said that his leg is much better, and expects to be back in the lineup this Saturday. With the severe losses which Tennessee received in defeating Centre college, Coach Bob Neyland will need McEver and others unless the injured recover rapidly. Fritz Brandt, all-Southern end last year, injured his knee, and may be out for the rest of the season. Others who will be out for a while are Captain Harry Thayer, Paul Hug, Paul Heidrick, and Merton Derryberry. This is another tough break for the Vols, but McEver got back in shape quickly. You can never tell what will happen out there at Knoxville.

WE SAW DUKE BEAT VIRginia Saturday, and we believe that there will be several more victories for Jimmie DeHart's men before the season is over. Passes were not needed to smother Carolina's ancient rival, 32-0; it took those shifty Warner reverses behind a strong line to do it, and it was done with little or no trouble. The Blue Devils are tired of losing games and it looks like they mean business. Davidson, State, Wake Forest, our boys, too, had better watch the next door neighbors.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE teams looked mighty good Saturday, and the ones which Carolina has yet to meet were well up toward the top among the best showings of the day.

Georgia's victory over Mercer indicated that Harry Mehre has a very powerful team. 51-0 is a big score to run up on any team, and Mercer is better than just "any team." Georgia Tech is going to be right there when the final conference standings are published. They beat South Carolina 45-0, South Carolina beat Duke 22-0, Duke beat Virginia 32-0. Figure it out for yourself.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OBSERVED BY TOWNSPEOPLE

Boy Scouts, Schools and Churches Cooperate With Foister in Eradicating Fire Hazards

Fire department chief, John L. Foister states that he and his men are doing everything possible in their power to further this week of fire and its prevention. In the schools, churches, larger homes, public buildings, and places of large gatherings there are inspections to find out whether or not there is any danger of fire. Faulty flues, wooden shingled roofs, garbage cans, floor oils, mops, and all inflammable articles are inspected carefully. Electric switches are torn up, furnaces are inspected. All this is being done to "put across" one of the most important campaigns of the year—that of preventing loss of life, property, and beauty by that inhuman demon FIRE.

Chief Foister has had the local Boy Scout patrol out scouring the town, distributing the fire-prevention material in every home and public place. The churches are co-operating by means of posters and propaganda. The schools of Chapel Hill are having regular fire drills daily, along with studies in fire-prevention. All these things coupled with superb efforts on the part of the fire department are being done for Fire-Prevention Week.

It might be interesting to know that at one minute past eleven o'clock on Thursday of this week EVERY school, graded or high, will move in unison in a fire drill formation. A record will be kept by each school of its time in performing this drill. These records will be turned into the State Fire Department at Raleigh, and published by the state papers.

Coach Ranson Wants New Men For Jumping And Vaulting Events

Coach Dale Ranson has devised a system for the fall track practice whereby the various events will be coached on different days. The high-jump and pole-vault men will be under the direction of Coach Ranson at 4:30 at Emerson field on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Bagby, the only varsity high-jumper remaining from last year's Southern Conference team and Stafford, Hamlet, Newland, and Bennett of the Freshman team are the only ones who have as yet reported for practice in this event. Goodwin, who tied for first in the interscholastic indoor meet, Glenn, and Reid are the only new men who have appeared for workouts. All new men who are interested in either the pole-vault or high-jump should see Coach Ranson. No previous experience is necessary.

Annual Conference Cross Country Run Here November 22

At the annual Southern Conference meeting it was decided to have this year's conference cross country run held at Chapel Hill on November 22. During the four years that Carolina has had a team entered they have annexed the Conference championship each time.

The present edition of the team, though having but one veteran, will contest stubbornly any attempt to wrest the title from them. Captain Baucom, the only veteran, will have able support from Jensen, captain of the freshman team last year; Jones, Cordle, and Watkins, winner of the cake race last fall. Carolina's harriers will get plenty of trouble in the Southern Conference meet.

Couch Finds Genuine Book Shop Sponsors University Press Books

By Virginia A. Douglas

There are very few real book shops in the south. The average bookseller may feel that to make both ends meet he must sell everything from valentines to office furniture. Whatever he may feel and whyever, his books often play second fiddle to his valentines and office furniture.

It must please a publisher very much to find a shop that is a bookshop in the truest sense of the word—one that sells books alone. W. T. Couch, of the University of North Carolina Press, who has just come back to Chapel Hill after a short business trip to Columbia, S. C., says that he spent two mornings with the head of such an establishment. Mr. Couch sold some books—among others, all the copies that remained of one publication by the University Press But he seemed to find the sale only incidental to the conversations with one of the most intelligent men has has ever known, as he describes the head of Gittman's Bookshop. And he describes the bookstore as one of the best, if not the best, in the south. The store sells old books, new books, rare books, reprints, and upon occasion, whole private libraries.

Although he may handle everything, a bookseler will often play favorites, if ever so slightly. It is a human failing, partiality. So, while Gittman's Bookshop is a complete establishment, it is an especially excellent store from which to secure books about the south. Also, it is an especially good market for University Press books. Mr. Couch says that the shop handles copies of just about everything the press publishes.

FOOTBALL FANS WATCH WORK OF NEW COACHES IN COAST CONFERENCE

New York, Sept 7.—Football fans on the Pacific coast are anxiously watching the careers of the two most recent additions to the coaching fraternity in the Coast conference. "Irish Jimmy" Phelan, University of Washington's new head coach, the man who last year led Purdue to the Big Ten championship, is introducing the Notre Dame style of play and seems to be directing his efforts toward a high scoring machine rather than the development of a ball team specializing in goal line stands.

"Doc" Spears, former Minnesota coach, and now at the University of Oregon is sharing the sporting spotlight with Phelan of Washington. Spears is tremendously popular at Oregon and his big Emerald team is giving all indicatioins of becoming the real championship contender before the close of the present season. The success of these two mid-western coaches when pitted against men like Howard Jones of U. S. C., "Pop" Warner of Stanford, "Nibs" Price of California, and "Babe" Hollingberry of Washington State, will furnish material for many interesting discussions on various styles of play for Western sport critics.

Football Pictures To Be Shown Here

One of the features at the Carolina theatre today will be the second of a six part serial of football plays by Knute Rockne, head coach at Notre Dame.

"Chuck" Collins, Tar Heel coach and former player at Notre Dame says the following about the serial:

"The average fan knows almost nothing about football. He follows the ball carrier, but that's all. He doesn't see the line-blocking and the interference that open a path for the backfield man. He misses many big details and all the countless minor details that make up a scientific football attack. Teach him to know the game, to follow it more closely, and he'll enoy rootball 99 percent more. That's why I heartily recommend the Rockne football pictures, because they are a revelation in bringing the scientific principles of football to the masses, as well as to the players.

Chuck Collins.

Noah Goodridge, Tar Heel boxing captain, has lost three bouts in two years of varsity fighting. All three were lost to Phil O'Connell of Florida. Goodridge won a decision over O'Connell here in 1929.

Mrs. Wilbur Daniel Steele, wife of the noted short story writer, is recuperating at her home now from an operation which she underwent several weeks ago in which her tonsils were removed.

FORMER STUDENT LOOKS GOOD ON MICHIGAN TEAM

Fielding "Buck" Yost, Jr., son of the famous mentor and former student at the University of North Carolina, is commented upon favorably by the Michigan Alumnus of the October 4, 1930 issue. He is a junior at the University of Michigan. Following in the footsteps of his famous father, "Buck" is in a fair way to make a name of his own on the grid iron.

The Michigan Alumnus says relatively to the Michigan-Denison football game in which Yost had his first Michigan trial: " 'Buck' Yost was in the fray for a while and it wasn't long before critics were more than willing to admit that he doesn't have to rely on his name to merit attention. He is a 'fighting fool', one of those backs who isn't down until about three or four of the opposition sit rather vehemently on his back."

and there is no uniformity. The catalogues in Germany are in book form rather than cards, the books being about the size of the Oxford English Dictionary. Usually there are several catalogues for books published within given periods. As to the use of the materials in the libraries, there are reading rooms for students and faculty. The stack room is not used for study by graduate students. Then, too, very few libraries permit books to be taken out as they are taken out of the American college libraries, but the Germans are willing to lend rare manuscripts and volumes to other libraries to a greater degree than we are.

"A thing that interested me," Dr. Wilson said, "is the fact that students are required to present identification cards and pictures of themselves when they apply at the loan desk for books.

"In Paris, my study of the libraries was very unsatisfactory. The French have the reputation of making it very hard for one to use the library.

"In England, however, particularly at the British Museum, access is much easier. Cards of admittance may be obtained through the American University Union in London. The catalogue of the British Museum is also in book form. The main library of Oxford University, the Bodleian, lends no books for outside use. At Cambridge, only 30,000 books were issued from the main library for outside use last year, whereas here at the University we loaned about 300,000.

"It is interesting to note," Dr. Wilson continued, "that both of these universities now have library commissions in the United States, visiting American college and university libraries with the idea of reorganizing their own along the lines of American libraries."

"By the way of general comparison," he said, "while these European libraries lack the mechanics of classification, card cataloguing, and convenience of service, they possess very extensive collections of books and journals in every field, and are tremendously rich in priceless early books and manuscripts. These libraries have thousands of incanabula, such as are in our Hanes collection. In the United States we have to content ourselves with reproductions of rare manuscripts, while they have the originals."

Since boxing has been made a major sport its popularity has increased noticeably. Fifty fresh men and forty varsity men are keeping the coaches busy.

FRESHMAN STUDY TRAITS SHOWN IN RESULTS OF TESTS

Scores of Psychology Test Given To Freshmen Returned to Office of Dean.

The scores on the psychology test given to the freshmen at the beginning of the year have been returned from Washington. Freshmen wishing to know their scores may do so by calling at Dean Bradshaw's office on the second floor of South building between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock on any day except Saturday.

The practice of giving psychology tests was started in 1922 and this year's test was the ninth. The first two were of different types, but the last seven have been the same. These tests are not to be considered strictly intelligence tests, but rather tests of college ability or the ability to do college work.

The tests do not always do justice to the students, according to Mr. Bradshaw, for the reason that some students are slow to think. The student who can think rapidly, making good guesses when he is not certain, is usually the student who makes the best grade, while a student who knows just as much, but who thinks more slowly, will not do nearly so well.

Bradshaw has made a comparison of the students whose grades were low with those whose grades were high and the results show that from the tests one can judge whether or not the student will do passing work. The following table shows the scores of 3500 freshmen together with the percentage of failures. The students are divided into ten groups. The highest scorers start at the top and go down to the lowest scorers.

Rank	Percent to Fail
1st 350 students	1.8
2nd 350 students	7.0
3rd 350 students	4.2
4th 350 students	13.3
5th 350 students	14.1
6th 350 students	20.2
7th 350 students	23.8
8th 350 students	28.0

SAVILLE AND RAY ATTEND MEETING

Charles E. Ray, Jr., of the engineering division of the department of conservation and development is in Wilmington attending the meetings of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association this week. Thorndike Saville left yesterday for the meeting, but he will be there only a short while.

At the meeting this year the completion of the waterway from Beaufort to Wilmington is being celebrated. This inland waterway connects Boston and Wilmington, and the nine foot channel will allow ships of average size to make the trip between the two points.

The regular weekly house tea was held at Spencer hall yesterday afternoon from 4:30 to 6. The long living room was attractively lighted by candles and a cheerful log fire. Miss Elizabeth Grant presided at the tea table together with Miss Elise Roberts as joint hostess.

Freshman Deficiencies

All freshmen deficient in entrance requirements in United States history, who are interested in attending a coaching class preparatory to the examination for the removal of entrance conditions, are requested to meet in Saunders 314, Friday afternoon, October 10, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing such a class. D. J. Whitener, formerly teaching fellow in history, will organize and conduct the class if a sufficient enrollment is assured.

HOUSE SPEAKS TO SENIORS AT CLASS SMOKER

Says Spiritual Growth of Individuals Is Standard by Which University Is Judged.

"Graduate not from, but into the idea of a university," said Robert B. House, executive secretary of the University, in an address to the senior class Tuesday evening at an informal smoker held in Swain Hall. "The Class of 1931 has seen a great development in Carolina in the last four years," continued Mr. House, "but it is the spiritual, internal growth of each and every one of you, while in this University, that sets the standard by which this or any educational institution is judged. I would prefer that you look upon the material development as essential and necessary, but only as an integral part of the whole idea of a university; take from Carolina, not customs and habits, but the idea that it inspires—a thirst for knowledge, an incentive for learning, and a desire to know, and to know that you know."

Mr. House is very popular among members of the class and his presence there was considered quite an honor to the body.

The group was entertained by Ty Sawyer and his Carolina Buccaneers while refreshments were being served. Afterwards Pat Patterson, president of the Senior class announced the names of the class executive committee for the year. The following were appointed: K. C. Ramsey, Bob Betts, J. C. Goodwin, Ramson Whittenton, Arthur Sickles, Bill Moore, Howard Whisnant, Harry Shaner, Sam Silverstien, Curtis Blackwood, Ellis Crew, Milton Cohen, J. G. D. R. Hamilton.

Page Will Preside At Luncheon Today

Frank Page, recently chosen chairman of the Southeastern Council, will preside over a luncheon discussion of southern industry and the college graduate here 12:30 p. m., October 31, at the Carolina Inn.

The discussion will be lead by General R. I. Rees of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Mr. Cator Woolford of Atlanta. Woolford will discuss the value to Georgia industries of the Georgia College Placement Bureau which he helped to found. General Rees will summarize briefly the experience of his own and other large corporations in selecting and assimilating college trained workers. There talks will be followed by general discussion.

Accomodations are in charge of R. M. Grumman, University Extension Division, Chapel Hill, N. C.

NOTED LAWYERS TO SPEAK HERE

Group of Prominent Lawyers Will Address Law Association.

Albert Coates, Director of the Law School Association, and James A. Williams, President of the Association, together with A. T. Allen, Jr., R. M. Gray, Martin Kellogg, Jr., James H. Chadbourn, Peyton Abbott, Jr., and Walter Moore Bryson, Association Advisors, announced today the tentative program of lectures that have been arranged by the Association for the year.

A number of lawyers have been invited to speak before the Law School Association in continuation of program initiated in 1923, when the late Chief Justice Clark and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of North Carolina delivered the first series of lectures. The plan of the Association is to have several series of lectures each year, in order to bring the law school students into contact with the leading lawyers actively engaged in the various phases of the practice, and to afford the students opportunities to gain important practical knowledge.

The following men have accepted invitations to speak on current problems of practice:

L. P. McLendon, of the Durham Bar, and C. W. Wharton, of the Greensboro Bar, on the drawing of pleadings and the preparation of cases for trial.

J. C. B. Ehrighaus, of the Elizabeth City Bar, Clifford Frazier, of the Greensboro Bar, and Clyde R. Hoey, of the Shelby Bar, on specific phases of the examination and cross examination of witnesses, and trial of

CASTS SELECTED FOR NEW PLAYS

Tentative Results of Tryouts for Playmaker Productions Announced.

The tentative casts of the first bill of plays for the Carolina Playmakers were announced yesterday morning. The officials of the Playmakers seemed to be pleased with the quality and talent of the number of persons taking part in the try-outs.

The casts selected yesterday morning were results of much consideration by Director Frederic H. Koch and Technical Director Samuel Selden. Due to the amount of talent that turned out for the plays, the Playmakers have decided to produce extra studio plays in order to give acting opportunities to those not selected for parts in the three new plays.

RHODES AWARDS TO BE MADE ON NEW PRINCIPLES

National Committee Changes Rules for Selecting Men and Awarding Scholarships.

Important changes in the awarding of the Rhodes scholarships have been made. Beginning this year, the 48 states will be divided into eight districts of six states each. Each year there will be a contest in each state, and state committees will choose two candidates to appear before the district committee. From the 12 candidates appearing before the district committee 4 will be selected, according to the abilities of the men. Thus a state may receive two scholarships or none, according to its representatives' merits.

Rhodes scholars will be allowed the option of spending their third year at Oxford or any foreign university which may prepare them for their studies. The scholars may take their third year at the close of their first year's work, or after a number of years' work in the United States.

This year state elections will fall on the sixth of December; district committees will meet a week or two later. Applications are due October 18, and colleges and universities should select their candidates before the eleventh of October. A Rhodes Scholar elected in December of this year will enter Oxford in

Council Deals Swift Justice In Two Cases

Investigation Is Accorded First Offenses of Year; Junior and Freshman Are Punished.

In two cases that have come up before the Student Council this year, a junior has been put on strict drinking probation and a freshman has been sentenced to indefinite suspension from the university for stealing and lying.

The first case was disposed of last week when a junior was reported to the council for drinking. He was put on strict drinking probation which means that in case of any violation he will be automatically suspended from the university.

The second case was reported Monday when a student who had been away over the week-end found that a sum of money he had left in his room had been taken. The Council worked two whole days investigating the case and closed it Tuesday night.

From a number of clues followed by the council, enough evidence was found to convict the roommate of the victim of the theft. He was brought before the council and the evidence was presented.

When the suspect testified in his own behalf, it was found conclusively that he was lying, which in itself is punishable by indefinite suspension.

In reporting the case, the council commented that "Mr. X., a freshman, was sentenced to indefinite suspension from the university for conclusive evidence of guilt in stealing from his roommate; and for lying to the council acting in official capacity."

Red Greene, president of the student body, said yesterday that this was the first case of stealing reported this year; and that in such cases the whole council investigates all possible clues. He requests that when any larcenies take place where students are involved, the council be notified immediately.

Greene is in the office of the Student Council at chapel period every morning, and he wishes to be notified of any violations of the rules of the council immediately after such infractions take place.

Freshmen, Notice!

The following deans wish to see the first-year men of their departments this morning at chapel period: Dean Hobbs, Gerrard hall; Dean Carroll, Bingham Hall; Dean Walker, 201 Peabody.

NOTED SPEAKERS TO APPEAR SOON AT GREENSBORO

Dr. Martin To Address North Carolina College Students Tonight.

A group of outstanding lecturers and artists will appear at the North Carolina College for Women this year. Several of the speakers will spend two days on the campus, delivering talks in chapel and to small groups in addition to making formal addresses at night.

Dr. Everett Dean Martin, noted authority on education, sociology, and psychology, will deliver the first of the series of lectures on October 9, speaking on "Our Faith in Progress." Dr. Martin is the editor of several books and was for fifteen years the director of the Cooper Union Forum in New York.

Miss Agnes McPhail, the first woman to represent a district in the Dominion Parliament of Canada, will deliver addresses on October 20 and 21. Miss McPhail is a famous stateswoman and progressive leader, and she is expected to talk on the tariff situation.

The third speaker will be Samuel Gaillard Stoney, noted Southern writer and authority on the dialect and folk lore of the negroes of South Carolina, who will appear on November 7 and 8. Mr. Stoney is co-author, with Gertrude Selby, of "Black Genesis," which portrays the negro's conception of the Bible.

On November 17 and 18 John H. Randall, Jr., Professor of philosophy at Columbia University and an eminent writer and educator, will lecture at the college.

Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, famous artic explorer, will tell of his fourth expedition in the frozen North in an illustrated lecture on the night of December 11. Wilkins is planning a submarine voyage under the ice from Spitzbergen to Alaska, and he is expected to reveal his plans for such a daring adventure.

Debate Council Will Hear Dean J. M. Bell

The regular meeting of the debate squad will be held in Murphey 201 tonight at 7:30. Dr. J. M. Bell, head of the chemistry department, will address the squad on "How The Scientist Searches for Truth." He will show how this method of research may be applied in preparing for debates.

The debate council has completed arrangements for the meet with Cambridge (England) University to be held here on December 15, and is negotiating with the University of Texas, Northwestern University, Boston University and schools closer to Chapel Hill. The council hopes to hold the first debates of the year early next month.

MILITARY TROOP MEETS TONIGHT

The military troop school will meet tonight in the Davie Hall annex at 7:30. The purpose of this school is to study the different kinds of military tactics, and all who attend the meetings regularly will be given credit toward commissions in the officer's reserve.

Captain D. B. Floyd, of Raleigh, will conduct the meeting tonight. All men in the O. R. C., the Enlisted Reserve corps, the National Guard, C. M. T. C., or any others interested in securing a commission will be expected to attend the meeting.

Further information concerning this military course may be gotten from H. R. Totten in his office in Davie Hall.

Faculty Orchestra

The faculty orchestra of the University will meet tonight at eight o'clock inPerson hall. All members of the faculty, especially newcomers, who play any orchestra instruments are urged to attend.

That College Spirit

During the past year we have heard much about the poor condition of the farmer, the slack in all business, world-wide depression. Considering all this it was generally considered that it would mean a decrease in college enrollment the nation over, and while lamentable, it was expected and considered inevitable. Imagine then the surprise of everyone when colleges the whole country over reported large, and often record, enrollments. The University of North Carolina is a typical example, having a record enrollment itself.

This fact goes only to show that we, as a country, are coming more and more to a realization of the advantages of a college education and with this realization comes a stronger determination on the part of boys and girls to get that education at any cost. As attendance increased so did the ratio of those who earn wholly or partly their way through college. We've often been told that a man appreciates more that which he has to work for. The repetition of that axiom makes it no less true nor does it detract in the least from the credit due those who are working their way. Rather it should make us who are in college, working or not, the more determined to merit the place we occupy and which so many others covet.

It's a tribute to the American spirit and the younger generation, this increase in college attendance during "hard times," and we can only hope that the promise will be fulfilled.—D. L. C., Jr.

A Few Words On Writing

In his instructions to us the editor handed out very good advice which may profitably be observed by any student in writing themes or in journalistic work. His words were to this effect: Don't try to write in a flowery style just to show that you know some long, fancy words. Some people may be fooled into thinking that you are a wonderful writer, but the majority of people do not want to search through a mass of high-sounding, strung-out phrases to get the idea you want to put across. Be yourself. If you try to be somebody else, it shows that you think you are not good enough.

The same thing holds true in conversation or in speeches. Once at a banquet a man made a showy speech, interspersing it with many fine gestures. He was followed by another man who gave, in an unassuming manner, a speech which contained no magnificent phrasing or unusual words. After the banquet one of those present remarked to his friend that the first speaker certainly made a fine speech.

"Yes," replied his friend, "but what did you get out of it? Do you remember a thing he said?" After thinking a while the other was forced to confess that he could remember nothing the first speaker had said, but many remarks of the less assuming one had hit the mark.

By all this we certainly do not mean for you to fail to enlarge your vocabulary. The ability to express yourself well is a big asset, both in writing and in speaking. In fact, you should always strive to use the most expressive word or phrase, provided that it seems natural and is not unusual or fancy. Just remember that what you say counts a great deal more than how you say it.—C. A. P.

OPEN FORUM

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

In reply to Mr. Dyer's article in the Open Forum I submit the following:

From age to age we pass thy

COLLEGE GRADS TAKE POST GRAD COURSE IN ROCKERY

"Friends tried and true, true to the pen at Bensonata," sing the leading characters in "Up the River," John Ford's screaming travesty for Fox Movietone which comes to the Carolina theatre today, but while this is the "Alma Mater" of the "convicts," at the highly imaginary film institution, most of the singers can yodel their own college songs.

Spencer Tracy, who hails from Marquette University, and Warren Hymer, a Yale graduate, have the featured comedy leads, and Claire Luce and Humphrey Bogart, playing the romantic parts, are from Columbia and Andover respectively. George MacFarlane graduated fro McGill, "Black" of "Black and Blue," from the University of Arkansas, Dick Keene from La Salle College, Gaylord Pendleton from Columbia and Johnnie Walker from Fordham. Just to make it completely collegiate Director John Ford comes from the University of Maine and the author, Maurine Watkins, from Radcliffe and Yale.

WRITE ANGLES

By Vass Shepherd

Along with the stately oak that graced the lawn of the Carolina Inn until a few days ago, fades into memory one of the most romantic and historic landmarks on the campus. For years this gnarled giant has been the trysting place for scores of students and their fair ladies. Some of the University's most prominent alumni chose this rendezvous to crowd the hopes of their futures into one tender and amorous plea. Now it stands as a wooden monument to the past, stripped of its outspreading limbs, and raising its bars and scarred trunk as a sacrifice to time.

One of the village's older inhabitants, a palsied little old lady, was seen watching the workmen go about their systematic destruction. Unable to keep her feeble eyes from the scene, she would walk a few yards and then turn to gaze upon it again. In the midst of one of these reveries, her attention was distracted by a flashy roadster speeding by with a boy and girl enjoying close proximity in the rumble seat. The old lady followed the car with her eyes as it sped out of sight. Then she cast one last, lingering look upon the stump of the once great oak and, turning, wobbled off unsteadily down the street.

And now, little Agnes, the greatest moral you can learn from this lesson is that times are changing. Sorry.

After listening to the current form of cut-throat rushing among the fraternities, it is a wonder that the average little freshman from out the state doesn't write home to his ma and pa that the University is full of escaped convicts, second-story men, safe crackers, gangsters, dope-fiends, grafters—and liars!

The funniest rumor about now is the one about the little freshman, who when asked by a fraternity man whether he had made any choice, answered, "Yes, but I believe I would like to be rushed a little bit more."

The Duke cops surprised and humiliated a goodly number of football fans last Saturday by pouring out all whiskey evidenced during the intermission between halves. One Carolina student, however, was able to save his spirits by handing over a bottle of ginger-ale instead. Now no drinking equipment is complete without an extra bottle of chaser in case of such an emergency.

Since the first returns from the laundry came in, more and more students have come to envy the gent who sports about the campus in a shirt with a black collar. One could wear such a garment for weeks at a time without detection and thereby save it from the merciless talons of whatever bird or beastie it is that relishes in half-devouring our line, when away at Dean Paulsen's establishment.

The new organ, recently installed in the music building, has a rising and sinking console board; this means that the player can be hoisted up in plain view of all and then lowered out of sight again. The mechanicians had better accelerate this process so that the faulty soloists can be ducked out of the way of flying vegetables and eggs.

On the old-fashioned, narrow highways, just wide enough for two cars to pass, many a time a couple of cars would collide. But now they're building highways much wider, enabling three or four cars to smash at one time.—Judge.

twelve wear the junior. Mr. Andrews, the presiding officer, explained to a reporter that fifty per cent would have been considered a good score. The session closed at 12:15 P. M.

The luncheon at the Carolina Inn began with the singing of "America." Colonel Pratt introduced the Right Reverend Thomas C. Darst of Wilmington, Bishop of the Diocese of Eastern North Carolina. Judge Francis D. Winston, of Bertie county, presiding as toastmaster, read a message from Governor O. Max Gardner to the conference. Frank Porter Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, presented the special guests, among whom were Miss Mabel Boardman, executive secretary of the national Board of Directors, American Red Cross, Washington, D. C. Two school children, Rose Kueffner, of Durham, and Laurence Johnson, of Aberdeen, spoke briefly on "What Junior Red Cross Means to My School" and "What Junior Red Cross Means To Me," respectively.

At Gerrard Hall in the afternoon, Mrs. T. E. Cheek of Durham, chairman of Home Service, presided and introduced Miss Helen Taylor of Oteen, director of Red Cross Service, Oteen Hospital. Miss Taylor spoke of volunteer service to veterans and explained just what that service is. The Red Cross is trying to give the soldiers those comforts the government would like to give but cannot. It was necessary to omit any other speeches and the round table discussion, since there was very little time.

After the afternoon session, pupils of the Chapel Hill school, directed by Miss Minnie Sue Flynn, assisted by Miss Helen Shell, presented a pageant. A page presented Love, Preparedness, Patriotism, Health and Happiness, and Peace to his sovereign. The king was wearing the red cross. By means of games, acrobatics, songs, dances, and exhibitions the children personified the abstract qualities.

The members adjourned to the Playmaker theatre where Professor Frederick Koch outlined the work the Playmakers are doing and introduced Joe Fox, who read his new play chosen for use this fall.

The Junior Red Cross Conference was held at two o'clock in Phillips Hall. After Colonel Pratt had made the introductory remarks, Miss Mary Hyman, school supervisor of Orange County, presided. The children, numbering about one hundred and twenty, elected a temporary chairman and secretary, gave the Junior Red Cross pledge, and made reports. After an address by the national representative, and the showing of exhibits, the children proceeded to Gerrard Hall for the pageant.

RHODES AWARDS TO BE MADE ON NEW PRINCIPLES

The exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead, coupled with an interest in his schoolmates are also qualities which are required. The candidate should also have physical vigor as shown by his interest in outdoor sports and athletics.

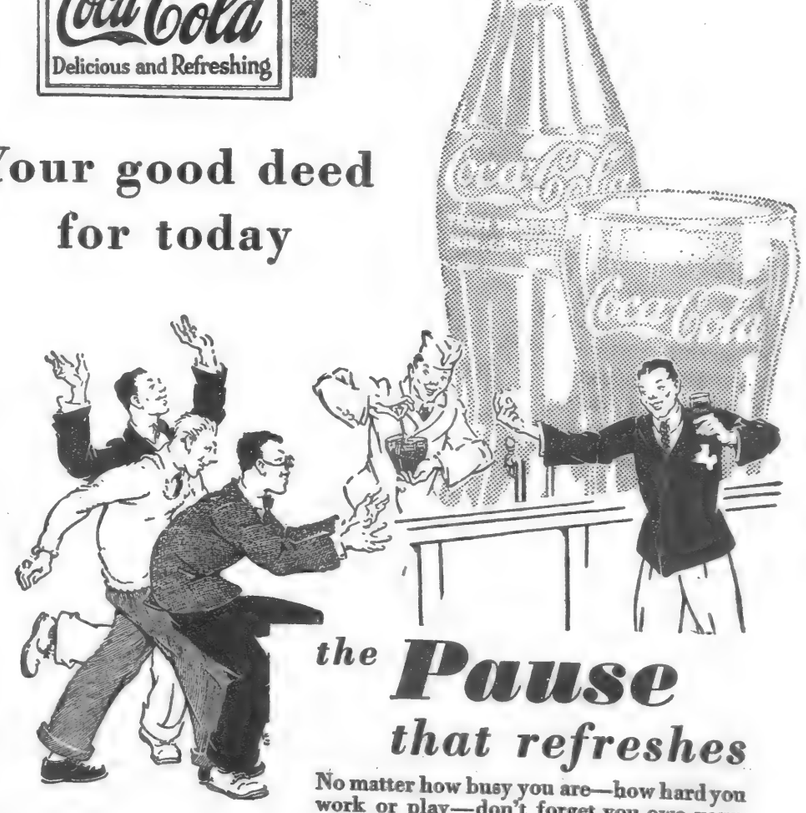
Crisper, tastier Better Bran Flakes

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

A bowl of Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes with milk or cream makes you "sit up and take notice."



They are so much crisper. And what a flavor! It's the famous flavor of PEP. As you eat each spoonful remember that you are getting the nourishment from the wheat. Ask that Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes be served at your fraternity or campus restaurant.

Seventh Annual Cake Race Scheduled For Thursday October 23

Many Valuable Prizes Being Given by Townspeople and Local Merchants.

Letters of invitation to the seventh annual intramural cake race to be held Thursday, Oct. 23, have been sent to all dormitories and fraternities, urging them to enter as many men as possible.

Rules governing the qualification of competitors this year will be slightly more exacting than last year. It is necessary to work out at least seven times under the supervision of the varsity cross-country coach in order to qualify. Groups will leave Emerson Field each afternoon between 3:30 and 5:30 for practice runs. Contestants will report to the manager before running in order to receive official credit for the workout.

Anyone is eligible to compete who has not participated in a varsity or freshman cross-country or track meet. The length of the course will be between two and two and one half miles.

Large cakes will be awarded to the team qualifying the most men, and the team with the lowest team score. Only the first five men on a team to finish will be counted in the scoring; thus, placing men third, tenth, seventeenth, twenty-eighth, and fiftieth gives a team score of 108.

A gold medal will be awarded to the first one to finish. Silver medals will be given to those finishing between first and sixth, and bronze medals will go to those finishing between fifth and eleventh.

Entries may be made either unattached or by teams. Anyone whose fraternity or dormitory does not enter a team may affiliate himself with another team. Intramural credit toward trophies will be given teams and individuals. Prizes, the nature of which will be announced later, will be given to those finishing between tenth and seventy fifth.

The first Cake Race was held in 1923, and was won by Harry Thach. The course was three miles. Old West, finishing 14 men in the first hundred, won the team prize cake presented by the University Laundry Department. One hundred twenty-five participated.

Luther Byrd won the 1924 race and the cake presented by the University Laundry Department. He also won a two weeks vacation from Swain Hall—a prize offered to the winner if he were a member of the force there. The team cake offered by the Chapel Hill Bakery was again won by Old West.

Galen Elliot won the 1925 contest and Old West again won the team prize. Minor Barkley won the 1926 race, setting a new record for the 1.9 mile course. He won the pick of 100 cakes and the loving cup given by the Book Exchange. Old West for the fourth consecutive time won the team prize, a large cake offered by the Smoke Shop. One hundred seventy-nine participated this time.

June Fisher led the 274 entries home in the 1927 event, covering the distance in ten minutes. His "town team" won the big cake offered by the Smoke Shop.

Tom Watkins won last year's race, which was run in a drizzling rain. Joe Pratt was second, and Paul Rhodes third. The Tar Heel Club team composed of Whitely, Hunter, Parlier, Tsumas, Stafford, Boyce, Roberts, Shulenberger, and Harris won the team prize, a cake

SPORTS CHATTER

By Hugh Wilson

True to expectations, the Tar Heel's teamwork improved a lot last Saturday, especially on offense, and Carolina scored as many points—one more, in fact—as they did against the Gobblers last year. However, the Techmen scored one more touchdown against the Tar Heel line than they did in 1929. The glaring weakness again was in the line, although the forwards showed considerable improvement over their performance in in the Wake Forest game. There is still need for improvement, and plenty of it, before the Maryland and Georgia games, and if that need is not filled, that 'Big Blue Line' will look rather ragged.

The lopsided score by which Maryland lost to Yale has eased the fears of many Carolina rooters. However, when one takes into consideration the fact that Maryland held a giant Yale team on even terms except in the second and fourth periods, when the "unstoppable Booth" was inserted into the game with the usual result, Carolina's coming test doesn't seem so easy. Yale has a heavy, fighting line composed mainly of veterans, and still Maryland scored their two touchdowns early in the first half. Too, Maryland, stung by such defeat, will certainly be out with their "fighting clothes" on in an endeavor to redeem their record.

Georgia, the second major obstacle in Carolina's path, continued to show power as they rolled up a 51-0 score on the Mercer Bears. The Bulldogs boast a hard plunging fullback this year, Roberts being the man who is filling Rothstein's old post. Georgia plays Yale next Saturday, it will be interesting to compare their showing in the Bowl with that of Maryland. Our opinion is that Yale better watch out, or Booth and his cohorts will get the wrong end of the stick as they did last year.

The "Ramblin' Wreck" from Atlanta merely rambled over South Carolina, conquerors of Duke, by a score of 45-0, despite the fact that the line functioned so poorly that only a few first downs were rung up by the Georgians. Four of the touchdowns were the result of especially long sprints by Tech's backs. When the Tech line, featured by the work of its great tackles, Spear and Maree, is so poor that its backs can score only 45 points, one wonders what the future holds in store for teams against whom the line will function smoothly.

And speaking of Duke—how those Devils pitchforked Virginia! Virginia started off with a rush, but Duke showed fight and soon began smashing off tackle with numerous Warner reverse plays, altered somewhat to suit DeHart's taste. The Virginia ends and tackles were sucked in and completely baffled by the triple passes and passes which a galaxy of Duke backs executed with great smoothness. Despite the fact that the Durham men seemed to be in poor shape, many of them being hauled down from behind by Thomas, star Virginia halfback, after they had broken into a clear field, they will cause plenty of trouble for any team they meet.

TAR HEEL FOOTBALL COACHES

BOB FETZER CHUCK COLLINS BILL CERNEY

Coaches Bob Fetzer, Chuck Collins and Bill Cerney are leading the 1930 Tar Heel football team through one of the hardest schedules ever attempted by a North Carolina team. Coach Fetzer has been at Carolina for nine years. Head Coach Collins and Coach Cerney are starting their fifth season here.

PERFORMANCE OF VARSITY ELEVEN MUCH IMPROVED

Tackles and Guards Look Better, Allowing Freshmen No Substantial Gains.

The first varsity eleven looked much better yesterday afternoon in scrimmage with the freshmen, the outfit showing quite a bit of improvement. McIver and Fysal broke through on defense and stopped the frosh for losses or no gain time and again. George Thompson and June Underwood were unable to get in the scrimmage because of injuries received in the V. P. I. game, but Roy McDade helped to relieve Coach Collins of some of his worries by playing a nice game at right tackle.

Larry Johnson received two passes from Magner for long gains, and Henry House hit the line for good yardage for the

Athletics Annex World Series For Second Time Defeating Cards 7 To 1

Earnshaw Allows St. Louis Only Five Hits As Teammates Hit Ball Hard.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—For the second time in two years, Philadelphia stands above the rest of the baseball world—and why not? The Athletics, the apple of her eye, repeated last year's World Series triumph here yesterday, defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 7-1. Earnshaw, the A's right-handed ace started his third game and pitched superbly, limiting the Cards to 5 hits. "Wild Bill" Hallahan, who started, lived up to his name, issuing 3 free passes, 2 hits and hitting Bishop in his two inning stay.

The World Champions hopped off to a good start, tallying twice in the first session before the side could be retired. Dykes walked, Cochrane slashed a wicked one down the first base line that went through Watkin's legs scoring Dykes and putting Mickey on third. Simmons walked. Miller hit a double to right and Cochrane scored.

In the third inning, the Athletics bombarded Hallahan's successor, Johnson, fiercely. Simmons greeted Johnson with his second circuit smash of the series, a long line drive to left, but his colleagues' failure to drive in Miller who had doubled, held the score to one run.

The Athletics kept up their bombardment in the fourth scoring two more runs on Bishop's base on balls and Dyke's homer to left.

Smart baseball brought the A's another tally in the fifth. Foxx doubled to right center and sacrifices by Miller and Haas brought in the burly first baseman.

The sixth saw another Athletic cross the plate. Bishop walked. Dykes doubled and Cochrane's sacrifice fly to Douthit scored Bishop.

Lindsey and Bell pitched the

Intramural Results

A Shutout

Ruffin dorm shut out Manly, mounting up a score of 18-0. The score was due to the brilliant passing of George Bathune and the spectacular playing of McBride at the receiving end. McBride played a beautiful game, scoring three touchdowns for Ruffin.

Some Game

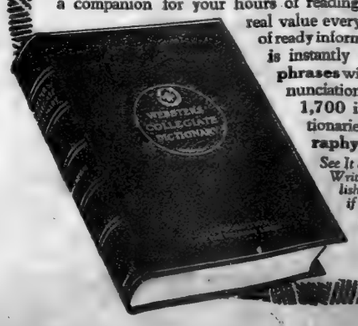
A tight game was played when Grimes took the field against Aycock. The game resulted in the score of 4-2 in first downs, favoring Aycock. Both teams played a close game and were as equally matched as any team on the whole field. It required a lot of steady plugging for Aycock to eke out the 4-2 victory.

Another Shutout

Here is another shutout, and a close one at that. The Question Marks lost to J dormitory by one touchdown. By dint of alternating short passes with end runs the Jays managed to cross the opponents' goal in one of the most interesting games of the day.

This Was Great

The most spectacular game of the whole afternoon resulted in the score of 18-7. Carr won over Law School by a wonderful aerial attack. Stutz's passing to Adams accounted for two touchdowns. The third touchdown for Carr was made by Barhan, who also received a pass from Stutz. Eubanks starred for Law School.



Mighty Close

Lambda Chi Alpha was defeated by Alpha Tau Omega to the tune of one first down to nothing. Although the team of neither frat was able to score a touchdown the game was well played and both teams showed up well.

TENNIS TEAM IS TO LOSE GRANT

Diminutive Star Will Be Out of School Until Spring Due to Physical Breakdown.

The Carolina tennis team suffered a severe loss when word was received here yesterday that Bryant Grant, national clay court champion, will not be in school during the fall quarter. Grant is expected to return in time for the spring competition, however.

Due to his strenuous campaigns of the past summer, when he won the national clay court championship, the diminutive star suffered a physical breakdown which necessitated his confinement in a Durham hospital.

Following two weeks of confinement, Grant will leave for his home in Atlanta sometime this week in order to recuperate. Grant expects to return in the spring and to take part in the hard schedule that has been made for the season.

Grant was runner-up in the fall tournament last year and distinguished himself in a number of national and state tournaments this summer.

SPECIAL CARS TO TRANSPORT FANS TO GEORGIA GAME

Special cars will be run from the leading North Carolina towns to carry the Tar Heel fans to the North Carolina-Georgia game at Athens, Ga., October 18, according to announcement yesterday by Southern Railway officials.

The game, matching two of the strongest teams in the south, will be the first big elimination match in the drive for the southern title, and a record invasion is expected from North Carolina.

Special cars will be made up in Greensboro, Salisbury, Charlotte, Raleigh, Durham and Asheville, and will be united into special "On to Athens" trains at central points.

Round-trip fares, cut to a minimum, make the trip within reach of all, and there are prospects of a record invasion of Carolina students on the train leaving Durham at 7:50 p. m. October 17.

MILLS LECTURES ON AUSTRALIA AT KIWANIS SUPPER

Australia Similar to United States But Unequal in Resources Says Professor.

The Kiwanis Club met in the Hut of the Christian Church on Tuesday evening with R. M. Grumman presiding. The members and visitors had supper together, and afterward held a short business meeting, during which plans for future meetings were discussed briefly.

E. J. Woodhouse introduced Dr. R. C. Mills, Carneigie visiting professor from the University of Sydney, Australia, who talked to the group about Australia, as to its political divisions, temperature, poulation, rainfall, production, government, and political parties.

Dr. Mills presented a map of Australia showing the eight political divisions, West Australia, South Australia, North Australia, Central Australia, Queensland, Tasmania, New South Wales, and Victoria. Australia, he said, is roughly about the size of the United States, but it does not have equal natural resources.

"Some of the land suffers intensely from lack of rainfall. Two areas have such little rainfall and such unreliable rainfall that they are properly called desert. This part amounts to about one third of Australia." In part the rainfall averages six inches, in another part, ten inches. In the area of unreliable rainfall one year the rainfall may be one inch and the next year thirty two inches. "The rainfall is most important," Dr. Mills stated, "for upon it depends our production."

The most important preducts are wool, cattle for meat, wheat. There are 128,000,000 acres of land suitable for wheat production, of which only 20,000,000 are occupied by any crop. There are three belts suitable for cotton, but the obstacle to production is lack of labor.

Dr. Mills showed by charts that the birth rate and death rate are gradually falling. Speaking further of the people, he said, "We live in cities, not in the vast open spaces. Forty-eight per cent of the population live in cities. Sydney, the largest city, has 1,100,000 people."

Continuing, he said, "Visitors are struck with the homogeneity of the people. That is because we are ninety-eight per cent British born."

The government of Australia with its two legislative houses is much like that of the United States, except that they have cabinet government. As in America, the states have the powers the federal government does not have. In some places there is compulsory registration and compulsory voting.

Dr. Mills explained that there are thre political parties. The labor party is in power now. It is very strongly organized, and has extremely strist discipline. The nationalist party comprises the big land owners and manufacturers, and is strictly anti-labor. The country or farmers party is small and is also anti-labor.

Professor Turns to Broadcasting

A series of talks by Stephen P. Duggan on the general topic of "Our Changing World" will be begun this evening over the Columbia Broadcasting System, according to announcement received through the alumni office. Duggan, former college professor, and director of the Institute of International Education since 1919, will make 12 talks in the Series announced, speaking each Thursday at 5 p. m.

Cheerleaders To Meet

Billy Arthur has called a meeting of all cheerleaders for this afternoon in Kenan stadium at 3 o'clock.

EDUCATION SCHOOL ENTERTAINS FROSH

The school of education entertained at a reception last night in Peabody hall at 9:00 o'clock. The meeting was especially for the first year men, and a large crowd was present. Refreshments were served for all attending. The purpose of the gathering was to get the faculty and the students better acquainted.

This is the first time that a reception has been given this year, but plans are being made to have them three or four times during the quarter.

regular increase is broken, but that with these exceptions the percentage of failures increases uniformly with the lowest grades. Dean Bradshaw says that a probable reason for the lowest scorers doing better than the eighth from the top is: The men who made the lowest grades on the examination were men who were slow but who in high school had learned to study hard while, the eighth group was also slow but these men had not formed good habits of study in high school.

In the second group he further reasons that these men are brilliant students — ones who could think rapidly—but that they do not study and since college is much harder than high school, they are not able to pass without studying. This shows that the tests are on the whole a good judge of a man's chances at college. Men falling in the first five groups, says Dean Bradshaw, have a good chance to pass with an average amount of study; and men falling in the last five groups will pass if they form regular habits of study, as proven by group ten.

first eleven's best offensive performances.

Captain Strud Nash did not get into the scrimmage because of the cut under his eye received in the V. P. I. game, but is expected to be ready for Maryland Saturday.

The lineup included: Lipscomb, center; Fysal and McIver, guards; McDade and Hodges, tackles; Johnson and Parsley, ends; Branch, quarter; House, fullback; Slusser and Magner, halfbacks.

Alexander, Chandler, McCaskill, and Moore showed up best for the third team, which was pitted against the frosh after the varsity retired to run signals.

Coach Collins is expecting a great deal of trouble from Maryland, for they have a series of smart plays which are executed by a large and powerful team. Even though Yale beat them 40-10, they scored 14 first downs to Old Eli's 16.

Trainer Quinlan is working hard with the injured on the squad and expects to have them in good shape ere Maryland arrives.

Hoeffer And Bailey To Address Society

The local branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will hold the first meeting of the year to-night in Phillips hall. The speakers for the evening will be Messrs. N. P. Bailey and E. G. Hoeffer of the engineering school.

Mr. Bailey will speak on "The Relationship of Mechanical Engineering to Aeronautics" and Mr. Hoeffer will speak on "The Principles of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers." The meeting has the prospects of being a most interesting one and the attendance of all freshmen in mechanical engineering is especially desired.

Athletics Annex Series By Defeating St. Louis

seventh and eighth innings respectively and held the Athletics safely, silencing the bats that only a few moments before were making plenty of noise.

The Cardinals scored their lone run in the final frame. High singled. Watkins walked. Frisch's line drive was taken by Foxx who doubled off Watkins at first. Hafey doubled to left scoring High.

Briefs

Every World Series must have heroes and goats. Boley, Cochrane, Simmons, and Earnshaw received the plaudits for Philadelphia, while Charley Gelbert played sensational ball for the National League winners. Undoubtedly the most tragic figure on the Cardinal team was "Sunny" Jim Bottomly. It was mainly through Jim's playing throughout the regular season that made the Cards one of the World Series participants; in the classic, Jim fell down miserably, making only one hit in the six games and coming within one of tying George Kelly's mark of ten strikeouts.

In between the seventh inning, the band played "St. Louis Blues" and "Happy Days Are Here Again." It was very appropriate too, the score being 7-0 in favor of the Athletics.

Foxx pulled the fielding gem of the game in the ninth inning. With Watkin's on first, Frisch first base; Foxx made a beautiful catch and doubled Watkins, who was desperately trying to get back to the bag.

George Earnshaw is the new iron man of the World Champions. George pitched the last game in St. Louis Tuesday, hurling eight scoreless innings. Lefty Grove pitched the ninth and received credit for the ninth inning victory. Yesterday George again hurled eight scoreless frames, bringing his total up to twenty-two.

offered, coincidentally, by the Tar Heel Club. One hundred eighty-six entries qualified for this race.

Team prizes will be offered to the first ten team to finish. At least five men on each team must finish in order for that team to score. Following are the scores of teams last year, and order in which they finished:

Tar Heel Club 88; Ruffin 122; New Dorms 155; Phi Sigma Kappa 194; "F" 222; Sigma Nu 224; Chi Psi 242; Carr 266.

Without exception cake race winners have developed into outstanding cross-country and track performers. Thach, the 1923 winner, ran a 4:30 mile as varsity track man.

Elliot, 1925 winner, won the Southern Conference cross-country meet in 1926 and 1927. He won the Southern Conference mile in 1926, setting a new record of 4:21.2, and won again in 1927 and 1928. The 1926 time was the best made by a college runner that year and resulted in his being ranked as All-American miler. He finished second to Ray Conger in a 4:17.8 mile in the National Collegiates in 1927.

Minor Barkley, 1926 winner, will be remembered for his sensational work last year in both cross-country and track. He nosed out Paul Rekers, highly touted Penn State miler in the dual track meet here last spring. In the dual track meet with Princeton, at Princeton last year, he ran a 4:21.4 mile to take second place, and forty minutes later ran a 1:56.5 half which still stands as a University record. As captain of the cross-country team last year he led the team to its fourth consecutive Southern Conference championship.

June Fisher, 1927 winner, finished third in the Southern Conference cross-country meet later in the fall after had had won the cake race. He was a member of the quartet of Fisher, Barkley, Elliot, and Pritchett, which won the national four mile relay championship in 1928.

Tom Watkins, last year's winner, developed into one of the best freshman quarter milers, and appears to be one of the best bets for a winner in cross-country this year.

DEBATING SQUAD HEARS MR. M'KIE

Professor Explains Kinds and Processes of Reasoning at Meeting Last Night

The debate squad in its regular meeting last night heard George McKie who is in charge of public speaking at the University talk on inductive and deductive reasoning as it is applied to debating. Dr. J. M. Bell who was scheduled to address the group was unable to appear due to illness.

Mr. McKie explained what the different kinds of reasoning are and showed how the same mental processes are followed by the child learning not to eat green apples and the scientist classifying a new substance. He admonished the debaters always to rid themselves of their prejudices before preparing for a debate. He said "We must learn to think with our minds instead of our prejudices."

Mr. McKie showed how the great Judge Choate was capable of having the federal inheritance tax declared unconstitutional by the use of a simple syllogism. He closed his address with the advice, "Don't memorize speeches. Learn thoughts and make your audience think them with you as you re-think them."

At a meeting of the debate council last night, correspondence with N. C. State was reviewed. It is probable that

GRAHAM TO TALK AT PEP MEETING

Cheerleader Arthur Urges Student Body To Attend Meeting in Gerrard Hall.

Chief Cheerleader Billy Arthur has called a pep meeting to be held in Gerrard hall tonight at 9 o'clock. President Frank Graham will make a short talk, after which cheers will be practiced. Coach Chuck Collins and the team will probably be present.

In announcing the meeting Billy Arthur said, "We had a dandy meeting of the bunch interested in the Cheerios Thursday night. There were about three hundred out and they almost broke the windows in Old West. Most of that bunch were freshmen but with the wireless advertising they did, the whole student body will probably be out today. They sure better be, 'cause they're expected!"

The cheerleaders especially urge all freshmen to come to the meeting tonight for they will be in a specially reserved section at the game. The leaders plan to drill the men in all the old Carolina cheers and hope that those who have not learned them previously will attend tonight's meeting. Arthur and his assistants have asked for a little cooperation so that such criticism as was heard after the Wake Forest game will not be justified tomorrow.

DR. H. V. WILSON RETURNS FROM STUDY OF SPONGES AT NAPLES

Spent Year Under Auspices of Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in Zoological Station Founded in 1870 by Anten Dohrn, German Naturalist.

By Virginia Douglas

Dr. H. V. Wilson of the University of North Carolina zoology department is just back from a year's stay in Naples, where he worked in the zoological station there. The station is a marine laboratory on a large scale. We wondered if it were a result of the recent revival of Italy, a national institution, nationally supported. But Dr. Wilson explaned that the station had been started in the 1870's by a German naturalist, Anton Dohrn and that much of the support had come from foreign governments and private institutions. It became national only after the war.

Was Mussolini responsible for the change, we wondered. But an effect cannot precede a cause. It was made a national laboratory before the Mussolini regime. Has it suffered in any way by being so taken over by the state? He said it had not, that it was as efficient as ever. A board of trustees and Italian financial support have been added, but it is still, in a sense, of the house of Dohrn, since the founder's son is director.

What is the purpose of the place, we wondered. And this is what he told us. It is a marine laboratory, aquarium, and library with no teaching, no economic side. It is devoted to pure science and research. No classes? No classes.

Well how do they determine who may and who may not work there? Various governments and institutions subscribe for "tables." There are about twenty of these as a rule, sponsored by Germany, Italy, Belgium, etc. Dr. Wilson himself went from the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. He is a member of its electing committee. The United States, formerly supporting four or five tables, has only two now. Why, we asked. Dr. Wilson explained that we had become too interested in ourselves and that we now had stations of our own.

Is there any particular advantage in working in the Bay of Naples? There is a decided advantage—two of them. The fauna is exceedingly varied and the water is clear. But there are not so many of a kind. Too little food. Most of the fauna, (the term fish would exclude jelly fish, star fish, crabs, and the like), are bottom-living in water six, eight, ten, or fifteen fathoms deep. Most of the work is done in fifteen fathoms of water, so a dredge is the plausible answer.

When they dredge for you, are they looking for anything in particular, or simply for whatever may happen to be there? Dr. Wilson explained that there was a particular object, and that when they found it they charted it. Then if there are jelly fish in a particular place today, they will be there tomorrow? We were very conservative in saying tomorrow, for they will probably be there next year, if the colony is not exterminated.

Did you go there to study anything in particular, or just everything? Goodness, he could not study everything. He was investigating the cellular behavior of sponges. Did you find what you wanted to find? Not everything. "A man who doesn't want to find more than he does find isn't much of a man."

HOBBS LECTURES TO LIBERAL ARTS FIRST YEAR MEN

Dean Hobbs Discusses Freshman Faults in Short Talk.

A. W. Hobbs, dean of the school of liberal arts, met the freshmen of this school in Gerrard hall yesterday morning.

Dean Hobbs talked on points which he considered to be helpful to the new men. He began by saying that too many freshmen come to college with the idea of making an impression, usually by showing how disorderly and unconventional they can be. "Toughness is in no way respected; to give the impression of swagger and bravado is a mistake." He requested that all freshmen give the matter thought, choose the right impression, and then make it.

Next he cited that education is not merely attendance of classes but that it amounts to becoming a reader. "To get by with as little work as possible is throwing away one's education," he said. "Don't wait until later life to realize this; find it out right now."

The next consideration was the behavior of the student body at public gatherings. Dean Hobbs asked the support of the freshmen in showing to visitors the utmost courtesy. Last year at various sports meets our students jeered the opposing team when it scored. "This is the height of bad sportsmanship and creates a very bad impression of the University. Let's bring forth an entirely different attitude this year."

"Doing assigned work on time is an important factor towards a happy and prosperous life at the University," Hobbs announced, "and a freshman should apportion his time to accomplish this."

"Form a definite idea of the work you wish to carry out. Come up next with a well formed opinion of your courses, then you will not register in a careless way. Think about your program and direct it accordingly."

"Putting off work is very destructive to a happy college career. Freshmen, before they know it, get into serious trouble because of this very thing. Don't put off your problems but face and figure them out now."

As to the fraternity rushing season and its effect on studies, Dean Hobbs says that fraternities are all right but that a man's work should be placed first in the order of importance. "Everything on the Hill is secondary to study which after all is the object of one's coming to college" was his comment.

FOUNDER'S DAY TO BE OBSERVED BY ALUMNI TODAY

Celebration To Be Observed in State Today and by University Tomorrow.

The University's 137th birthday will be fittingly observed this week-end with alumni meetings in many sections of North Carolina and the faraway alumni groups outside the state.

Today has been designated by Alumni President W. T. Shore as the day for the University alumni clubs to hold their University day meetings, since October 12 this year comes on Sunday. The University Day celebration in Chapel Hill will be held tomorrow morning with the Maryland-Carolina football game in Kenan stadium that afternoon concluding the day's program.

At the Chapel Hill celebration L. P. McLendon of Durham and R. R. Williams of Asheville are to be speakers.

In a letter sent to all the alumni groups in North Carolina, President Shore urges particularly that this year alumni hold University Day meetings. "I want the association to make evident this October 12 the strength in this state of North Carolina alumni," the communication reads. It continues: "The University faces a critical year—one even more critical than the 20 per cent appropriation cut. The University leadership of our fellow alumnus, Frank Graham, gives the Alumni Association a greater opportunity for service than ever before."

Many alumni groups have one of their regular meetings on University Day. Other groups use that time to hold their regular annual meetings. With the unusual effort that is being put forth this year to promote these

GREEN PUBLISHES A NEW HISTORY

History Professor Writes on the Constitutional Development In South Atlantic States.

Dr. Fletcher M. Green, associate professor of history in the University, has just published a book, The Constitutional Developments of the South Atlantic States, for the period of 1776 to 1860. The purpose of this work is to analyze the social, political and economic factors involved in the formation of the original constitutions of the states of Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. Dr. Green traces the development and discovers the influences leading to their amendment and revision. He determines as far as possible which, if either, of the two theories concerning the presence or absence of Democracy in the constitutions is correct.

Green spent two years in research preparation for his book. He found that the two theories, namely: that the government had been run by the aristocratic planters, and that the government was based on representation were neither correct in their entirety, but that both were true in part.

Dr. Green is now preparing a book on the life of General Duff Green, writer, foreign diplomatic agent, and editor of the Washington Telegraph.

On Reckless Driving

We have noticed lately that there are a good many cars in the student body. While a car is a good thing to have handy, it may be used in a dangerous manner. We mean fast and reckless driving. One of the most dangerous driveways is the one running behind South building. People are constantly going in and out of South and changing classes from other buildings. Another bad street for reckless speeding is the street behind Manly and Mangum dormitories. The other night we saw a fellow go speeding down it. Some boys were just crossing the street, but this car did not even slow down or blow. It was making over 50 miles per hour and couldn't have stopped within a hundred feet if it had been necessary. Multiply this situation by about five hundred and you have a slight idea of the situation. There should be some way to curb the killing instincts of some of the local motorists.—F. W. A.

It Seems To Me, Too

Two negroes have been lynched in Georgia during the past week by mobs composed of men with the average mentality of idiots. In each instance the negroes were taken out of the county jail where they were being held for trial and hanged by the infuriated mobs.

A crime has been committed against the State of Georgia. A few dozen men have openly defied and ridiculed the state by murdering these two prisoners. And the state of Georgia humbly bows its back in submission, while two more unpunished lynchings are marked down against it.

Meanwhile a committee of six prominent men of the South has been appointed to investigate the recent lynhcings. After several months the committee will submit a report stating that the killings were outrageous, inhuman, and so on. Southern editors will become indignant and write vitrolic editorials. And then the flame of resentment against the lynchings will flicker and die out, until revived again by another lynching.

Bitter disillusion has suddenly gripped many Northern freshmen this week. The far-famed Sunny South has unexpectedly turned out to be a frigid land swept by frost-tipped winds. The mercury has taken a sudden plunge into the nether region of the barometer and seems perfectly at home there, as it has shown no signs of rising from the depths.

One compensation of this cold spell, however, is that we can now study free from the company of the multi-colored insects that are so prevalent here. The Chapel Hill variety of insect is very unique in one respect. It seems to derive its greatest joy in life from flying into a room where a student is studying, hitting the electric bulb in the desk lamp, and then dropping dead before the student's eyes. In a half hour, the top of his desk looks like a graveyard for insects. And no man can study while surrounded by corpses.

Yesterday morning a friend of mine walked up to me and said:

"Brothers and sisters have I none, but this man's father is my father's son. Who is this man"?

And without another word, he left. During that entire day I wandered about in a state bordering on nervous collapse trying to figure out who "this man" was. In the evening my friend dropped into my room. It was but the work of an instant to throw him to the floor, and sit on his chest.

"Tell me the answer, quick!" I gasped.

Evidently he saw mayhem in my eyes, for he became frightened and said:

"Why, it's easy. 'This man' is my son!"

I am still trying to figure it out.

TAR HEEL COACH BROADCASTS DOPE ON STATE TEAMS

Collins Compares Strength of Big Five Teams Over Station WPTF.

Radio station WPTF, of Raleigh, N. C., has added a new feature to its weekly program. This program, the B C Sportlight, is put on the air each Wednesday evening between seven-thirty and eight o'clock. Chuck Collins, head coach of the University of North Carolina football team, is the chief speaker on this new program. Coach Collins is a graduate of Notre Dame University, where, under the tutelage of the famous Knute Rockne, he played varsity football during the years 1922, '23, '24. He was a left end on the team at Notre Dame during the years that the marvel team of Rockne's threw dread into its opponents. This team boasted of the great backfield known as the Four Horsemen and a strong aggressive forward wall.

In the course of his first talk on sports, which occurred last Wednesday night at WPTF, Coach Collins talked chiefly about football and the prospects of the teams in North Carolina which make up the "Big Five." First, Coach Collins dealt with Wake Forest and its improvement over last year's team. Next, he conversed on State's team under Van Liew. In the opinion of Collins, State has a good team, but will be slow in rounding itself into shape under the new tactics of the new coach at Raleigh. Davidson always has a bunch of fighting football demons on her roster, and will win a larger percentage of her games than any team in the state. She hasn't the stiff opposition that Carolina and Duke have to face, but she has a fighting bunch of football enthusiasts which will inspire doubt in the teams she goes up against this fall. Duke, the real mystery team of North Carolina has a team which has done a Rip Van Winkle stunt for about twenty months, and only waked up in the last week or two to come back strong with some outstanding backs and linemen to whip Virginia by an overwhelming score. Then, hearkening unto the Tar Heels, Coach Collins states that here is one team in the state which is the most overrated of all. He says that Carolina will have to fight hard to conquer her foes in and out of the state, and the forward wall of the team will have to bolster up to come through the schedule unscathed.

The state championship, he contends, will be very close as there are so many teams in the state which have greatly improved squads over last year's teams. Carolina and Davidson will be the two to fight it out for the top of the "Big Five" (says Chuck) with Wake Forest, Duke and State coming along in the order named.

Coach Collins wants everybody to understand that these statements are authentic, but he does not advise anyone to lose any money on his dope on these teams, as the dope is what HE thinks about the football situation in the "Big Five." He, also, says that all dopesters and experts on sports are ninety per cent wrong every time, and one man's opinion in a field of sports, if carefully studied by that man, is safer than taking some experts word on the situation.

Psychologists Eat, Talk, And Initiate

The Alpha Psi Delta psychology fraternity held a banquet in the Forest Hills tea room in Durham on Wednesday evening. New members were initiated into the fraternity.

President H. N. Dewick introduced Dr. L. M. Brooks, toastmaster of the evening. Dr. J. F. Dashiell welcomed the new members in four psychological languages. Mrs. E. R. Mosher, representing the women of the fraternity, made a short talk.

The history and purpose of the organization was outlined by Dr. H. W. Crane. Dr. English Bagby read a paper on "What happens at Synapses?" Dr. A. G. Bayroff's subject was "Reminiscences of a Rodentologist?" Houdini tricks were performed by Dr. G. B. Johnson. The secretary of the fraternity, G. M. Metz, talked on "Choosing a Cigarette from Advertisements." The new initiates also made short talks.

ELEANOR HUNT'S RED HAIR PROVES LUCKY

Maybe because she had red hair, maybe because she was lucky, maybe she was good, Eleanor Hunt, leading lady opposite Eddie Cantor in "Whoopee," the Samuel Goldwyn-Florenz Ziegfeld musical riot which comes to the Carolina theatre today, got clear to the top of the heap in show-business in a short twelve months from the time she first went on the stage.

A little more than a year ago, she was graduating from high school in New York without much idea of where she went from there. A few months ago, she was on her way to Hollywood to take her place at the head of the feminine contingent in "Whoopee," having been picked by Samuel Goldwyn out of the chorus of the stage "Whoopee" as the ideal type of girl for his leading lady.

OLD LINERS OUT TO GET REVENGE FOR 1929 LOSS

Curly Byrd Has Better Balanced Eleven Than Last Year's Grid Team.

By W. H. Hottel, U. of Md.

College Park, Md., Oct. 9.—University of Maryland's football team is coming to Chapel Hill Saturday confident that it will not be beaten by any such score as 43 to 0 by which the powerful Tar Heels won at College Park last October. However, the Old Liners realize the strength of the Carolina team and are not making any idle predictions of walking off with the long end of the score.

Maryland, though, has a team good enough to make the afternoon interesting for the Tar Heel aggregation and is sure to give the fans a few thrills before the battling is over.

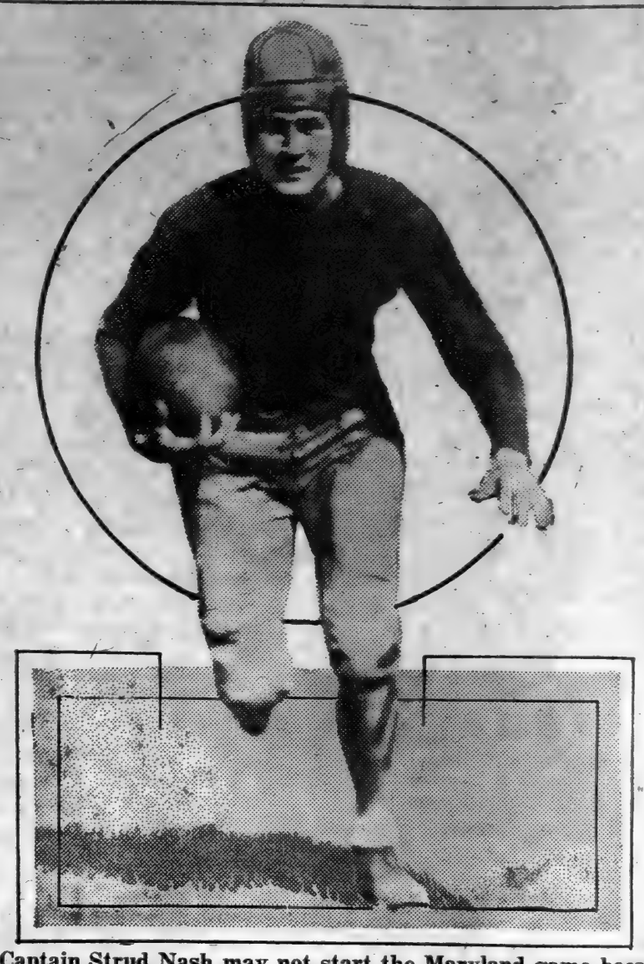
North Carolina was much further advanced when it met Maryland last fall than was the Old Liners who were in the throes of development, but Byrd's charges, after having had their first real spring practice, are much further along than they were at this time a year ago. Facing Yale on October 4 and North Carolina this week and having in mind that walloping the Tar Heels gave them last fall, the Old Liners just had to hustle their development, although the size and calibre of the squad hardly justified it.

Maryland showed a lot of power against Yale and the score does not do the Old Liners justice, for it was only because of their own slips, mostly mechanical, that they did not stay in the running to the finish with a good chance to have won the game.

The Old Liners have a well balanced line that will average a shade better than 180 pounds and a fleet backfield quartet that will hit around 164 at the best and around 160 at the lightest. There is much more speed, too, back of the line than there was last year and this should help greatly in the defense against such speedsters as Branch, Slusser, and Erickson.

Maryland doubtless will start the Carolina game with the same men who began the contest against the Elis at New Haven last Saturday. This was as follows: Pease and Norris, ends; Fisher and Carlis, tackles; Hayden and Kracjcovic, guards; Faber, center; Woods, quarter; Chalmers and Berger, halfbacks; Poppelman, fullback.

Evans, Maryland's heady back also will get into the game early, if he does not start.



Floyd Haywood Is Declared Ineligible

Coach Collins' reserve strength at right tackle was further reduced Wednesday, due to the fact that the Southern Conference rules prohibit a person from participating in athletics for a period of more than five years after the beginning of his college career.

The victim in this case is Floyd Haywood. He attended a junior college for two years and then remained out of school for one year before entering the University here. By the above ruling he has been declared ineligible for football.

Peyton Abbott, assistant wrestling coach, was undefeated in college competition.

CAPTAIN MAY NOT START

Captain Strud Nash may not start the Maryland game because of an injury to his eye received in the V. P. I. game. The wound, however, is healing up nicely, and the Tar Heel Captain probably will see action before the game is over.

HINES IS FINALIST IN NET TOURNEY

Carolina Star Meets Smith in Finals; Hines-Hendlin in Doubles Semi-Finals.

White Sulphur Springs, Va., Oct. 9.—Wilmer Hines, of the University of North Carolina, today won the Middle Atlantic States championship. He defeated Smith of the University of Virginia in four sets. The doubles of the tourney are to be played this afternoon.

Alphonso Smith, University of Virginia, and Wilmer Hines, University of North Carolina, will meet tomorrow in the finals of the middle Atlantic intercollegiate tennis tournament. Smith is the defending champion and Hines is national junior title holder.

Smith won his semi-final match today by defeating H. H. Hendlin, University of North Carolina, in a hard fought four set match, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4. Hines defeated C. F. Talbot, Hampden-Sidney, 0-6, 6-2, 6-2, 11-9, in a match that threatened to be an upset.

In the doubles, Carolina also fared well, advancing to the semi-finals. To do this, Hines and Hendlin, Carolina's team, defeated Hampden-Sydney's team composed of Talbot and Sloan, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5. Hines played erratically and only the scintillating play of Hendlin forced the decision in Carolina's favor.

Virginia's team of Smith and Newell also advanced to the semi-finals, defeating Thomas and Pauxlette, Hampden-Sydney, in a thrilling match, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

Intramural Results

Delta Psi Wins

The Carter and Branch combination proved too much for the Phi Delta Theta team yesterday, the Delta Psi outfit winning by a score of 12 to 0. Carter scored a touchdown early in the first quarter on an end run for the first tally, and his pass to Paxton in the third put the game in the bag. Both teams played a great game with excellent defensive work on either side, but the Delta Psi offense was too strong for the opposition, pushing over six first downs to the Phi Delts' pair.

Phi Alpha Overwhelmed

The Phi Sigma Kappa's knack of nailing long passes for big gains gave them an easy win over Phi Alpha, the score being 28-0. Teachey, star for the Phi Sigs, was on the passing end, and Fitzgerald and Vick were on the receiving end of most of the passes that went for gains. Thomas also starred in several of the plays, and in the first few minutes of play he was responsible for the first touchdown, intercepting one of the Phi Alphs' passes to run 50 yards for the score. His kicking and defensive work were also features of the game.

Pi Kappa Phi Loses Another

The Pi Kappa Phi's were defeated again today to the tune of 13-0, this time losing to the Phi Kappa Sig boys in the roughest game of the afternoon. The Pi Kappa Phi's were anxious to avenge the defeat of several days ago and made the Phi Kappa Sig team fight for every yard.

Manning and Winston were the ground gainers for Phi Kappa Sigma, each making a touchdown and figuring heavily in the drive that netted them four first downs to the Pi Phis' two.

S. A. E. Loses Close Game

In the third quarter of the last and hardest fought battle of the afternoon, Griffith managed to cross S. A. E.'s goal line for the only touchdown of the game, giving Sigma Nu the win by a count of 6-0. The first two quarters went scoreless, strong defense with occasional bad breaks for both teams being the feature. The S. A. E. team never made a first down, while Sigma Nu shoved over six.

Last Saturday's grid results showed many teams on the side of the ledger as a huge crop of goose eggs figured in the results of some of the major southern clashes. Among the aggregations white washed was Sewanee, who fell before the Kentucky Wildcats by a 37 to 0 tally. Although the Blue and White backs ran wild for the greater part of the game, figures showed that Sewanee made more first downs against Kentucky than Tennessee last Thanksgiving when the Vols were held to a 6-6 tie. Time and again the Sewanee boys would capture the pigskin and march off down the field in a series of line smashing plays, but the Big Blue would get a lease on the ball and run it back in long sensational drives. It was disheartening to the Sewanee crowd, but it all goes to show how a couple of fast backs can turn a good football game into a rout.

Though he failed to share scoring honors with his flashier team mates, a lad by the name of Johnson looked mighty good.

Several years ago, five rangy basketeers from Ashland (Ky.) high school came, saw, and conquered similiar teams from all corners of the nation in the national tourney at Chicago. Their captain was Ellis Johnson, who was afterward named as captain of the All-American team picked by sports scribes as representative of the best hardwood talent in the country. The next fall the gridiron blazed with the flying cleats of this same lad as Johnson led his gridiron mates to the alleged national high school football championship.

Last year Johnson entered Kentucky and proceeded to make freshman football history. Near the end of the year when the frosh Blue Devils met the Tennessee yearlings Johnson again led his team through a supreme struggle that ended only when the big back was tackled on the goal line as he was plunging over for a touchdown on a frozen field. When the pile untangled, Johnson was lying motionless. It was at first though that every bone in the doughty back's body was broken, but later he was given a fighting chance for his life. Now he is back in the ranks of the Blue and is one of the most promising soph ball toters in the South. A truly great comeback. We'll hear more from this lad.

World Series sidelights say that when George Ernshaw came out of the dugout to bat in the eighth inning of the last game, the stands rose and gave him an ovation great enough to warm the heart of any ball player. Whereupon, George stepped to the platter, turned, doffed his cap, and biffed a high fly to deep center field. Lucky for the Cards that George didn't bow and fling kisses to the stands or he might have knocked a few boards off the center field fence.

The Baseball Writers Association of America, organization of "big time" sports scribes, have picked Hack Wilson as his league's' most valuable star during the past season. Fans seem little disappointed in the selection of the pudgy outfielder, for Hack has smacked more horsehide this season than any ten jockeys at Saratoga.

Although the revival of pep and organized cheering may be the thing to boost the spirits of Carolina's grid warriors, there are plenty of schools in the immediate vicinity that would show lot more pep if the score board was covered during every game.

FRESHMAN SQUAD IS WORKING HARD

Preparing for Game With First-Year Maryland Team Next Saturday.

The freshman squad in preparing for the game with the Maryland first year men is buckling down to some very hard work. As yet no definite selection for the first eleven has been made, consequently competition is keen. Among those men who are showing up well are: Hackney and Woolen, quarterbacks; Witner, Weisker, and Phipps are other prospective backfield men. In the line, McIver, Mullis, and Barkley are showing up well. The coaches, however, have made no predictions as to the power of the team. The possibilities, nevertheless, are promising.

STIFF WORKOUT FOR TAR HEEL TEAM YESTERDAY

Coaches Send Entire Squad Through Long Drills in Blocking And Tackling.

The Tar Heel team went through one of the stiffest and roughest workouts of the season on Emerson field yesterday afternoon, when Coaches Collins, Cerney, Fetzer and Sapp sent the squad through drills in blocking, tackling, taking out ends, and going down under punts.

In his radio address over WPTF Wednesday night Coach Collins lamented the fact that Carolina is so weak at tackle and end, and judging from the practice session yesterday, he is determined to eradicate this weakness very soon.

Line scrimmage for five lines was in order for the first part of the afternoon with Coaches Collins and Fetzer taking special care to see that every lineman "got his man." The buckboards were also pushed about the field for some time. Coach Cerney had five backfields taking out ends for an hour on both off-tackle and end-run plays.

Later in the afternoon the coaches lined up the tackles four to the row and four rows for stopping freshman backs, who ran down these lines. Ends, backs, guards and centers were sent through similar tackling drills also. Work for the afternoon ended with five teams going down under punts. Branch and Maus did some good kicking while the elevens charged down the field to get the back receiving the punt.

It seems highly improbable that Underwood and Thompson, regular tackles, will be able to start the game tomorrow, since they are both limping considerably from old wounds. In this event McDade will replace Underwood, with Harry Hodges replacing Thompson. McDade showed up well in the V. P. I. game, but Hodges is an untried reserve.

Curly Byrd has announced that he intends to leave Chapel Hill Saturday night with his team having made a far better showing than they did against the Tar Heels last year. The Carolina coaches expect a tough battle from the Old Liners with such star ball carriers as Ber-

MARYLAND COMES HERE PREPARED

Nine Veterans Among Those On "Old Line" First String Team.

Coach "Curley" Byrd is preparing to invade Chapel Hill Saturday with one of the strongest, well balanced teams he has had in recent years at College Park. Maryland has no outstanding players this year like the All-Southern "Snitz" Snyder of a year or two ago, but they have a collection of good football players who have so far shown signs of power.

Byrd is hoping that there will not be rain Saturday, as he is counting heavily on an aerial game. Against Yale last Saturday Maryland completed seven passes out of sixteen attempts for a gain of 130 yards. They scored both of their touchdowns against Old Eli as a result of forward passes. A pass, Chalmers to Berger, netted forty-five yards and a touchdown. Fumbles cost the Old Liners at least one touchdown and maybe more. Jack Berger dropped a pass from Evans on Yale's goal line. Chalmers also fumbled on Yale's eleven yard line. Maryland made fourteen first downs to thirteen for Yale. Albie Booth and Company ran away with the game in the last quarter due to the fact that Maryland had no reserve strength. Only three substitutions were made by Coach Byrd during the whole game.

The last time that Maryland played in Chapel Hill, in 1927, the village had a cloudburst. The Tar Heels proved to be better mud horses than the Old Liners, and eked out a 7-6 victory. Kay Kayser, standing ankle-deep in water, led the cheerios. It looks now as though we might have another flood for the Maryland game tomorrow.

In preparation for the coming game, several plays have been given the men. Time is being spent perfecting them. Each day the squad goes through customary setting-up exercises, then Coaches Farris, Enright, and Sapp work with the linemen, backs, and ends respectively.

Yesterday, the freshmen backs served as tackling dummies for the husky tacklers of the varsity. The purpose of the freshman team is to offer opposition to the "Tar Heels" by running enemy plays against them. Therefore, as so much time is spent scrimmaging the varsity, a smooth running machine will be hard to perfect. These workouts serve as one of the forms of practice for the squad.

The game with Maryland is to be played October 18, and during this coming week every effort will be made to round out as many of the weaknesses as possible in an effort to start a powerful and smooth-running team next Saturday.

Coach Bob Fetzer will speak to the class of '34 in chapel this morning.

MATHEMATICIANS STUDY TRIANGLES

The geometric problem "If the bisectors of the base angles of a triangle are equal, the triangle is isosceles," was again discussed at the regular weekly meeting of the faculty and graduate students in the mathematics seminar room Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The fourth solution of this much discussed problem was presented by Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department after it had been solved by Dr. Lasley, Browne, and himself.

For the fourth time a different method has been used to prove this proposition. The method used Wednesday was generalization, and the results were interesting. Dr. Henderson said that the generalized problem was not capable of solution. The conditions discovered were necessary conditions, he said, but they were not sufficient.

At the meeting other problems arising in the department were discussed together with research work. At these meetings many interesting facts are brought to light, says instructor E. T. Browne. When there are doubtful points under discussion, any member may criticize or offer possible solution. In this way new ideas are formed from the views of the different men of the department and the organization is consequently beneficial to all members.

These meetings are held every Wednesday in the seminar room of Phillip's hall at 3:00 P. M. The seminar is composed of faculty members and graduate students, but undergraduate students may attend if they wish.

BANTAMS ROUND INTO FINE SHAPE

The big squad of freshman boxers is fast rounding into shape after two weeks of steady work which have seen the passing of summer softness. Minor injuries have cropped out in several instances but have done little to discourage the squad which is showing a general enthusiasm and willingness to work. All men are going a few rounds in the ring daily now and the action is lively in every bout.

Thanks to the careful attention and correction of Coaches Rowe and Allen, wild and futile slugging is being supplanted by boxing that has been improving daily. The inexperienced men are developing their footwork and learning to shoot their punches straighter, while those with previous experience are working for smoothness and better technique. The entire squad has shown marked improvement all around during the past week and several candidates are showing signs of real possibilities.

Bantams and lightweights are now holding the center of attention due to the large groups competing in both classes, and the competition between men of very nearly equal ability. As yet there are no heavyweights or lightheavies working out, although some of the likely looking middleweights might move up if suitable candidates fail to report.

Jimmy Maloney of Boston ended Primo Carnera's string of American victims at twenty-two by winning a decisive ten round victory in Boston Tuesday night. Carnera was favored to win easily, but Maloney had little trouble in pounding the big Italian all over the ring.

BROOKS WRITES ON COASTAL ISLANDS

"The New Mobility and The Coastal Island," discussing the conditions of the people on the outlying coastal islands and the influences of the outside forces on these people and their habits of isolation, appears in the October issue of Social Forces. Lee M. Brooks, professor in the University of North Carolina sociology department, is the author of this article.

"That spatial isolation is passing is an oft expressed truism," says Mr. Brooks. "Good roads and the gasoline motor, along with communication by wire and radio, have been fundamental in breaking down isolating barriers and in providing broader social contacts."

Mr. Brooks divides his subject into seven parts; namely, the islands, mobility and health, travel, religion and education, influence of vacationists, bootlegger, politician and feature writer, and conclusion.

Social Forces is published quarterly for the University of North Carolina Press.

EXTENSION HEADS WILL MEET TODAY

The North Carolina Association of college Extension representatives will meet in Durham Friday, October 10, according to R. M. Grumman, temporary chairman.

Three state institutions and three private institutions of higher learing will be represented and plans will be discussed concerning the co-operation of the institutions conducting extension classes. The meeting will be held in the Washington-Duke hotel and will precede the annual meeting of the North Carolina College conference.

For such reasons as these Tar Heel coaches are exerting every effort to have a hard fighting and tough eleven go on the field Saturday. They do not want any more of the "parlor football" which they have accused some of the reserves of playing.

Running on the varsity team yesterday that is most likely to start the Maryland game were Johnson and Parsley, ends; Hodges and McDade, tackles; McIver and Fysal, guards; Lipscombe, center; Branch, quarter; Magner, left half; Captain Nash and Erickson, alternating at right half; and House, fullback.

Outside North Carolina several groups have already indicated that University Day gatherings will be held. From California one alumnus writes that he is arranging for a meeting of Carolina alumni in the vicinity of San Francisco. Chicago alumni have met annually on University Day, last year initiating plans that led to the organization in the Windy City of a North Carolina club. Meetings have been designated also in Jacksonville, Miami and Atlanta. Other out-of-state groups which have been active in recent years incude: New York, Washington, Norfolk, Charleston, S. The student directory, compilation of which has been going on since the beginning of registration, went to the printers Wednesday.

The directory will contain a complete list of students with their local and home addresses, a list of professors and instructors with their home and office addresses and telephone numbers. It will also contain a "directory of Chapel Hill," along with information about the campus and village.

The directory will be distributed to rooming houses, fraternity houses and dormitories as soon as it is receved from the printers.

SCORES METHODS USED TO RECORD TAX INFORMATION

Asheville Lawyer Speaking Before Law Association Says Titles Often Uncertain.

"Betting on horses is an absolute certainty compared to checking titles for taxes in certain counties in this State," according to George H. Wright, of Asheville and one of Western North Carolina's leading title lawyers, who today concluded a series of three practical lectures on title abstracting before University law students.

"If there is anything in this whole State that is in abominable shape," Mr. Wright declared, "it is tax records." The records are poorly kept, and the difficulty, said Mr. Wright, is that a lawyer can't always be certain that property is listed by the immediate owner.

The only way to make certain is to check the assessor's record in the auditor's office against the tax collector's record—a hard job but the only safe way for the lawyer to make sure to tax debts existing against a piece of property.

Mecklenburg county rates with the worst as regarding condition of tax records, Mr. Wright declared, but agitation by the lawyers has brought cooperation and a set of fairly good records in Buncombe county. "I hope some day we're going to have our whole tax system systematized," said Mr. Wright.

Mr. Wright condensed his wide knowledge of an experience in title work into three exceptional lectures, covering the running of the title chain, cross-conveyances, judgments, mechanics' and materialmen's liens, outstanding adverse claims, taxes and assessments. He displayed copies of his inclusive forms and check-sheets, and spoke at length on defects, irregularities and difficulties in checking titles.

Mr. Wright was the third prominent lawyer to discuss title abstracting before Carolina law students in the last two years, the others having been Kemp Battle of Rocky Mount and L. J. Phipps of Durham and Chapel Hill.

These outside addressed by leading state lawyers are arranged by the Law School Association through Director Albert Coates with a view to bringing practice and theory nearer together in legal instruction. Second and third-year students will follow up Mr. Wright's splendid and practical lecture with a trip to Hillsboro to make a detailed examination of the Orange County records.

Morning Matinee

The Carolina Theatre will have a special morning matinee at 10:30 today, showing Eddie Cantor in "Whoopee." "See the game and the show too," says Manager E. C. Smith of the Carolina.

P. U. B. To Meet

There will be a meeting of the Publications Union Board this morning at 9:30 o'clock in room 109 Bingham hall. All members of the board should be present.

K. C. RAMSAY,
President P. U. Board.

KOCH WILL OFFER HAMLET AT FIRST SUNDAY READING

Professor Frederick H. Koch will read Shakespeare's "Hamlet" in the Playmaker theatre Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. This will be the first of the monthly Sunday readings for the year.

Paul Green will read next month his new play, "Treading on the Green Grass." This play will be produced in New York this winter. It is hoped by Prof. Koch that Wilbur Daniel Steele will at some time read his new play, "When Hell Froze," which is now running on Broadway. Later in the season Loretta C. Bailey will read her newest creation, a play concerned with the recent Gastonia mill strikes.

Professor Koch is recognized as a Shakespearean authority. He has taught Shakespeare and acted Shakespeare all his life. Professor Koch read "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Twelfth Night" before enthusiastic audiences last year and has previously read many of the other tragedies and comedies, the pleasing result of which has called for further readings by Professor Koch.

PLAN TO DEFEND LABOR AGITATORS

A letter being widely circulated over the South and the nation at large, announces that an emergency committee for the six Atlanta political prisoners has been organized, including the following persons of intellectual prominence in the nation: Theodore Dreiser, chairman, John Dos Passos, treasurer, Sherwood Anderson, William Rose Benet, Witter Bynner, Malcolm Cowley, Waldo Frank, Josephine Herbst, Shelia Hibben, Alfred Kreymborg, Suzanne LaFollette, Scott Nearing, Albert J. Nock, Burton Rascoe, Lola Ridge, Boardman Robinson, Upton Sinclair, Louis Untermeyer, Carl Van Doren, and Edmund Wilson.

In an effort to secure and organize a rescue fund for the "six workers who face the death penalty for holding protest meetings on employment," in Atlanta, the John Reed Club in cooperation with the International Labor Defense appointed the committee, the letter says.

Class In Accounting Meets First Time

The first meeting of the class in elementary accounting met Tuesday night, October 7, in Bingham Hall and will continue to meet every week for a period of fifteen weeks.

The course is given by the extension division, being open to any one who wishes a general knowledge of accounting. Applications can still be made through R. H. Sherrill of the acounting department or through R. M. Grumman of the extension department.

The course in elementary accounting is to give a general knowledge of the subject.

FETZER IS CHAPEL SPEAKER FRIDAY

Athletic Director Stresses Importance of Physical Side In College Life.

At sophomore chapel, Dean Bradshaw, after announcing that the reading of "Hamlet" would take place Sunday at 8:30 in the Playmaker theatre, introduced Bob Fetzer, head athletic director of the University.

Coach Fetzer began his speech by saying that the sophomore class was a particular unit of the school. "Here at Carolina we have fine traditions and background and there is a great incentive for the second-year men to lead in upholding these ideals and traditions.

"Athletics have a place, a distinct place, in college life as they are a benefit to everyone. The lessons learned on the field are helpful in later life. Here at the University there is an opportunity for everyone to participate in some activity. There are so many different branches of sport that there is a chance for each member of the student body to excel in one of them. If you do not or cannot participate, because of some physical ailment, you can at least contribute your share from the stands. Cheering should make the visiting team feel at home without dampening the spirit and enthusiasm you have for your own team.

GRAHAM SPEAKS AT PEP MEETING

Large and Enthusiastic Gathering Present at Second Meeting of This Year.

Gerrard hall was filled to capacity last night by a large crowd attending the second pep meeting of the year. President Frank P. Graham gave a short talk on school spirit and Billy Arthur, the newly elected chief cheerleader, led the yells.

Mr. Graham gave a short talk in which he carried the students back to the time when, as he said, the joy of a football game was half in the yells. Coach Bob Fetzer, along with other speakers, helped to put pep into the students.

The yells began shortly after the talks. The students seemed to give better cooperation to the cheerleaders than they have this year. In this second meeting of the year they literally raised the roof and made the windows rattle.

In his talk to the sophomores in chapel yesterday, Coach Fetzer said that the pep and victory of the football players depended a great deal upon the enthusiasm of the crowd, and this was the theme of his talk last night.

After the meeting the cheerleaders detained the frosh to teach them some new songs and yells that will be used in the near future. The leaders are trying to do their part in organizing the students, and ask the cooperation of the student body.

UNIVERSITY WILL COMMEMORATE ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDERS' DAY

The First University Chartered in America, It Has Come Forward In Last Years to Occupy a Position in the First Rank of Colleges.

October 12 marks the 137th birthday of the University of North Carolina, in point of operation the oldest state university in America.

In view of the fact that the anniversary is to fall on Sunday this year, most of the alumni celebrations were held yesterday and today.

Provided for in the Constitution of 1776 and chartered in 1789, the University was opened for the matriculation of students January 15, 1795. The cornerstone was laid in 1793.

Beginning with 41 students, the University had by 1859, grown in size and prominence until its student body that year enrolled 456 students, coming from more than half the states and including representatives of more than 30 colleges. When President Buchanan honored the University with his attendance on commencement exercises that year, he was so distinguishing the second largest university on the continent. The senior class graduating that year numbered 125, a figure not reached again until 61 years later, in 1920.

Already in 1861 the student body and the whole institution felt the effects of the war, and by 1862 there were only 63 students wandering lonesomely about the campus, which had been accustomed to the tread of ten times that many. With an endowment of a quarter of a million dollars completely wiped out, with no students, with a faculty near starvation, and with the University board of trustees playing reconstruction politics with the institution, in spite of the labors and agony of those who loved her, the University was forced to close her doors in 1871, to reopen them four years later.

At the term of 1875-76 there were 69 students in attendance, and the laborious work of rebuilding was begun under the loving and skillful leadership of Dr. K. P. Battle. In 1877 the law school was reopened. October 12th was set aside as a permanent holiday, celebrating the founding of the institution, and the first normal school for teachers was held that summer.

In 1881 came the first state appropriation ($5,000), except a small loan afterwards made a gift, in 1791, nearly 90 years before. By 1883 there were 205 students, and the year 1885 saw the state appropriation raised to $18,000, and post-graduate courses established. In 1900, when the first quarter of a

NEGRO IS HELD UNDER BOND FOR MURDER CHARGE

Claude Reaves, local negro youth charged with the murder of Fletcher Strowd, was last night bound over to fifth district superior court, in Hillsboro and December 8 was set as the date of trial.

The boy had previously been tried and acquitted by a coroner's jury but he was ordered held until further investigation could be made by Solicitor William Umstead. Sufficient evidence developed and he was brought before recorder's court again. The legality of the procedure was questioned by defense attorney Carawan but was upheld by the court. The prosecuting attorney is Mr. J. A. Giles.

The youth was unable to post a $500 bond and is being held in jail.

Hoefer And Bailey Address Engineers

Thursday night the members of the student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers met for the first time this year. The purpose of the meeting was primarily to formulate plans for the year and to acquaint new men with the organization.

The speakers at the meeting were two members of the engineering department. Mr. E. G. Hoefer gave a talk on "The Field of Mechanical Engineering and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers." The subject of the development of the mechanical engineering curricula and the relation of the regular mechanical course with that of the course in aeronautical engineering was discussed by Mr. Bailey.

Although this was the first meeting, nevertheless it was very important. The new men were introduced into the society and fully informed of the nature of the organization.

Holland's Magazine Publicizes University

In a current issue of Holland's Magazine tracing the educational growth of the South, there are two pictures of buildings of the University of North Carolina and a brief history of the University, outlining its importance as one of the leaders in the early educational life of the South.

A photograph of Old East building is shown with the explanation that it is the oldest state university building in the country. The University's new $625,000 library and Davie Poplar are also shown.

Arthur Colman, writer of the article, was in Chapel Hill some time ago collecting material for the article. This is the first of a series he is to write about the South.

VIRGINIA COMMISSIONER VISITS HOWARD W. ODUM

Frank Bane, commissioner of public welfare of the state of Virginia, will spend today in Chapel Hill as the guest of Dr. Howard Odum of the University department of sociology.

Notable among the accomplishments of Mr. Bane since his term of service as commissioner are the consolidation of county alms houses into district homes for the aged and the organization of a state traveling mental hygiene clinic.

ADDRESSES MARK FINAL EXERCISES OF CELEBRATION

Meeting in Methodist Church Today to Close University Day Celebration.

Commemorating the one hundred and thirty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the University of North Carolina, exercises which will bring to a close the alumni celebrations throughout the state, held in honor of the University's birthday, will take place in the Methodist church at 11:00 this morning.

The gathering in the Methodist church is the final of a number of similar gatherings throughout this and other states where Founder's Day has been celebrated.

The formal program of exercises is as follows:

1. Music ..... University Band
2. Invocation ..... Rev. Eugene Olive
3. University Hymn .....
4. Addresses ..... R. R. Williams, L. P. McClendon
5. In Memoriam ..... Dean A. W. Hobbs
6. Integer Vitae ..... Glee Club
7. Hark The Sound.
8. Benediction ..... Rev. Eugene Olive

After these exercises, the alumni will attend the Carolina-Maryland football game.

There will be no academic procession, according to the weekly bulletin from the President's office, but all faculty members are requested to attend, in keeping with the traditions of the University.

One of the interesting parts of the first University Day, held October 12, 1793, was the academic procession. Quoting from K. P. Battle's History of the University of North Carolina: "A long procession of people for the first time is marching along the narrow road, afterwards to be widened into a double avenue. Many of them are clad in the striking, typical insignia of the Masonic Fraternity, their Grand Master arrayed in the full decoration of his rank. They march with military tread, because most of them have seen service, many scarred with wounds of horrid war. Their faces are serious, for they feel that they are engaged in a great work."

In this famous procession were men who were then, or later became, great leaders, such as W. R. Davie, so-called "Father of the University," Alfred Moore, whose ability secured for him a position on the bench of the Supreme Court, and many others.

Wise Spending Is The Need

Literally thousands and thousands of people in the United States of America are failing to see the importance of a college education today. On the other hand, there are millions of people who are seeing the value of this thing called an education.

Rockefeller, Ford, Edison, and other self-made men of America explain that although a college education is a great basis for a success in life, it is not absolutely necessary in man's scheme of things. They do not under-rate the modern way of getting an education, but are sadly inappreciative of the usefulness of the education after a man has gone through the American colleges in the manner in which most people do today.

This harum-scarum manner of rushing through college, getting only what is required of one in obtaining a degree, and leaving out a great number of things which would greatly enhance the succes sof the person's education from a scholarly view-point, is detrimental to the whole of America's huge system of living. A person, in this decade, finishes his high-school career around the age of seventeen, hurries off to college the next Fall, crams his mind and personality with a brief four years of studying, and emerges into the collosal business world before he is hardly old enough to vote intelligently.

The ideal education during the Middle Ages was a long drawn out affair. One went through a long period of study and thought, without the disgusting rush of the modern days. A person always had time to think a thing out carefully then, while now the idea is speed and more speed. To get out of college, and make a fortune "right off the bat" is the height of each and almost every individual at the present time. Maybe the financial crises of the country are responsible for part of the haste. Perhaps the overpopulation of our great cities is to blame. What can one do to alter this situation? Have the government send all the foreigners back to their native lands? Issue more money from the treasury at Washington? Readjust the political situation? These are questions over which the most shallow individuals might ponder to their advantage and welfare.

Times are bound to come back with a rush of the good old days when money was plentiful and work to be had only when the people of the United States live within their means, and act according to their incomes. Let the rich man splurge if he cares to. He has the wherewithal and the backing. Do not try to copy a Croesus's manner of living on a two or three hundred dollar-a-month job, as it will only make the economical situation more intricate and harder to endure. Live up to what you are, and on the income you have at your command. Most grapes are sour when they are out of reach of one's finger tips, and after all, millionaires have stomach trouble as much as the humblest ditch-digger, and can't get over it even with the aid of money.

Money is a good thing to have, but a real intelligent, hard-fought for education is much more desirable to the intellectual. —L. L. P.

Mostly About Illusions

Now that the largest freshman class in the history of the University has become somewhat acquainted with campus life, we feel that a few platitudes from the Inner Sanctum might not be unseasonable. Advice to freshmen as such is quite useless; yet there are certain problems along the freshman pathway to which attention may well be called.

No man ever came to college who was not attached to one or more illusions. These misconceptions are lost quickly in some cases and with difficulty in other instances. To first-year men we say, "If you have any illusions—get rid of them." If you have been nourished in earlier days by reports about the so-called dignity of the college man, you are seriously advised to observe the curious antics of your senior friends at the next football game or dance. Of course, if you believe that it is a fitting occupation for a rational human being to slide around in the dust of the campus yelling praises to Allah, then we venture to say that your illusions are safe for eternity. Even a course in Religious Knowledge couldn't shake such a brand of faith.

The span of a few short days now will witness the pledging of a goodly portion of the freshman class. In a few short months these men will bear the brunt of initiation ceremonies, involving many ancient and honorable rites. Out of this mass of pranks the full-fledged fraternity man emerges. Likewise, after association with many conflicting ideas and conceptions, the full-fledged college man takes form. Association with the process involved is certain, however, to destroy illusions which the subject entertained before entering the University.

The freshman who allows the collegiate process to have full sway in destroying his illusions will have an armour which many a scheming politician and business man will find difficult to penetrate.—J. C. W.

The Aye's And No's Of The Campus

By George Wilson

Today marks the second home game of the present football season and the celebration of Founder's Day. Alumni and visitors will pour in from all over the state, and according to the dearest critics, other things in less solid form will pour in also.

Nevertheless, all such things foreign will be welcomed with the greatest gusto, and it will be pleasing to see old and new faces.

"Far From the Madding Crowd" seems a most appropriate title for the latest phase of Bulls, Shieks, and Thirteen Club.

The costume-wearers of those orders are no longer to be seen on the highways, but have been taking to the by-ways. Only a glimpse of them is caught as they dash from behind one building into another.

One sophomore, wearing the glaring insignia, daily slips from Phillips Hall to Murphey over the rough and tortuous route behind the new auditorium.

Another, seeing two more mature Bulls about to snort in front of South Building, dashed for cover with the words, "Two more."

It is about time for some bright young man to come across that favorite phrase of Shakespear (spelling according to G. B. Shaw) and send it to Believe It Or Not: "Football was played in Shakespear's time for there is the line 'He made a good end'."

From reliable inforamtion, we find that Dean Branshaw is extending cordial and pressing invitations to all those who are somewhat bashful about attending chapel.

Following "Those Little White Lies," the rushing season has turned to another popular song, the theme of which is:

(By the freshman) "I'm going your way,"
(By the rusher) "You're going my way,"
(By both) "We're on the highway to Heaven."

A writer handed in a poem to the Magazine which contained the following line:

"As one sits immersed in a pipe."

We are unable to make up our mind whether to comment "Come on in, boys, the smoke's fine," or to sing "Singing in a Pipe Bowl."

A certain young man had waited ten minutes for the waiter in Chapel Hill boarding house. Finally he closed his eyes and clasped his hands in the attitude of prayer. The waiter quietly put the delinquent plate over the young man's head, who, opening his eyes at the same time, uttered: "All good things come from above."

UNIVERSITY WILL COMMEMORATE FOUNDERS' DAY

century since the reopening was celebrated, there were 55 graduates, or nearly half as many as before the war.

A steady raising of the standard of scholarship, distinction in scientific research, gradual growth in the size of the institution planned and the extent of state support continued until with 1913 came the first beginnings of the great expansion period in which we still live and work. "Making the boundaries of the campus coterminous" with those of the state brought an increase in state support, an increase in state confidence, in national reputation, and in the size of the student body.

Again in 1917, as in 1861, the call of war thinned the ranks of the graduate classes, and Dr. Battle must have thought of old sorrows as he heard read from the platform, in Memorial Hall, at commencement of that year, the roll of those who were receiving their diplomas because they were in military camp. In 1919, after the war was over, the University doors were bombarded with the advance guard of an ever increasing army of youth, demanding the opportunity of a college education. And so by 1930 a student body previously counted in the hundreds has mounted to the thousands.

The first state university in America, she has been a pioneer in many things. She built the first astronomical observatory on this continent, conducted the first state geological survey in America, organized the first normal school for teachers connected with any college or university, and was the first state university in the South to offer citizens of its state a statewide extension service.

It was largely through the fine reputation on its graduate school that the University, in 1922, was taken into the exclusive Association of American Universities, a group of 29 universities usually regarded as the foremost in America.

The same sort of testimony is offered in a survey of the humanistic and social sciences recently made by Prof. Frederic A. Ogg for the American Council of Learned Societies. The survey declared that "the leadership of the new research movement in the South is traceable to one institution, and to certain men and women in it; namely, the University of North Carolina."

Among other evidences of leadership may be cited the gifts of the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Foundation for investigation in the social and economic problems, because it seems clear that the University has the men and the spirit to profit by such an opportunity; an editorial statement in the Manufacturer's Record that the University was serving the needs of the people better than any Southern institution it knew; a statement by Dr. Erwin Mims in his book on the "Advancing South" that "all in all, the University of North Carolina has now a larger and better academic faculty and a better graduate school than any other institution in the South."

Today the state's chief institution of higher learning is pushing forward with a zeal and influence that is limited only by the utilization of every resource at its command. There is no end to what it can do, so long as it is provided with the means.

Carolina Tennis Team Wins Championship In White Sulphur Match

Hendlin and Hines Win Doubles; Hines Captures Singles Title Wednesday.

The University of North Carolina won both singles and doubles finals in the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Tennis Championship Thursday, when Wilmer Hines defeated Alphonso Smith of the University of Virginia in the singles match 5-7, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5, and Hendlin and Hines beat Smith and Newell, also of the University of Virginia, for the doubles title 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Hines, national junior singles champion and southern singles champion, added another title to his record when he defeated Smith, the defending champion. The Carolina star played spotted tennis in the first set which he lost by the score of 7-5. He won the next two sets easily, but had difficulty in the fourth set when Smith tied the number of games at 5-5 after being behind 5-2.

Hines' steady back court play and drop shots which left the Virginia player flat-footed on the court were contributing factors in the Carolina star's victory.

H. H. Hendlin and Hines had little difficulty winning the doubles match which gave the University the other Middle Atlantic title. The University of Virginia, represented by Newell and Smith, put up a good fight, but the brilliant play of the Tar Heel doubles team won easily. The score was 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

Friendly Cafeteria Has Plan To Improve Students' Appetites

A huge display and wide variety of food, and knowing you can eat all you want at the same monthly rate—does that increase appetites among a heavy-eating bunch of college boys or doesn't it?

This novel question may be answered soon. Friendly Cafeteria is inaugurating a new boarding plan, giving patrons all they want of anything they want, at a monthly rate, and it may be interesting to watch this hitherto unexpected innovation among Chapel Hill caterers.

Will eyes be bigger than stomachs, when price is no consideration, will the boys be gentlemen still, or will they eat so much the first few days that they'll lose their appetites and eat less than ever?

That is the question to be answered when the Friendly Cafeteria opens its doors Sunday morning and says:

"Come on boys. Choose anything you want, from two soups, six meats, six vegetables, four breads, eight salads, eight desserts, and three drinks, and pay at a monthly rate as if you ate at a boarding house."

TRACK COACHES CALL FOR FIELD EVENT CANDIDATES

For the last half dozen years the track coaches have had very little material in the weight events with which to work. This year the coaches are confronted with probably the worst situation of their experience in that there are only two varsity weight men left. "Sandy" Dameron, discus man, and Theron Brown who was a consistent performer in the discus, shot put, and javelin are the only veterans.

Some of the new men who have reported for practice seem to have possibilities of developing into good performers. Coach Ranson would like to have a greater number of men report at Emerson Field. No previous experience is necessary.

DOPING 'EM OUT

By

BOB BETTS

Picking the winners in today's games in the Southern Conference is a fascinating as well as a risky task, but the very fact that there is an element of chance in it makes football what it is. If there were no upsets on the gridiron, it would not claim the following that it has at the present time.

Beginning right here in Chapel Hill, the Tar Heels should beat Maryland. Both Carolina and Maryland have good offensive teams. The big difference lies in reserve power. The Old Liners are weak in this department, while North Carolina has plenty of reserves. However, Wake Forest, a team which also has little reserve power, gave Carolina a close battle two weeks ago today.

The next most important game, from a Carolina point of view, is the Yale-Georgia tussle at New Haven, Connecticut. Although Georgia, beat Yale by a score of 15-0 last year in Athens, Yale should down Georgia today. The Old Eli eleven has a powerful, charging line as well as a fine offense. The weather was undoubtedly a deciding factor in Yale's defeat last year in Georgia, and Yale will be playing today in a climate several degrees colder than Athens.

Over in Durham they should have the closest scrap in the state today. The Wildcats have a well-balanced team, while the Blue Devils have a heavy scoring machine. Overconfidence and a stout Davidson line will hinder the Dukemen. It will be a Scotch affair with Davidson doped to repeat her victory of last year because they have a smoother, less erratic team than Duke.

In the Queen City, Clemson College has a big edge on N. C. State's gang of wolves. So far the Techmen have failed to get going for some reason or other, while the Tigers have victories over Presbyterian College, Wofford, and Citadel to their credit.

Georgia Tech invades Pittsburgh to tackle Carnegia Tech. Although the Golden Tornado displayed great form in trouncing South Carolina 45-0, the Carnegie boys should win. Carnegie has one of the best teams of recent years, and also has the added advantage of playing at home.

The Vanderbilt-V. P. I. game should be an interesting one. The Commodores flashed great power in defeating Minnesota 33-7. V. P. I. has been drilling on a passing game since her defeat at the hands of Carolina last Saturday, and they may pull an upset today. However, Vandy should win, on paper.

Another game the Carolina fans will be watching is the Tennessee-Mississippi struggle. The Vols failed to overpower Centre College last week as their followers expected them to do. They have been hit with a flock of injuries and are in a bad fix. Nevertheless, the Vols are picked to win, as "Ole Miss" is very weak this season.

Tulane follows the setting sun into Dallas, Texas, for a get-together with Texas A. and M. The Green Wave has a powerful veteran line, and should repeat last year's victory over the Texas Aggies.

Kentucky's Wildcats should have little trouble in taking Maryville into camp. Pennsylvania should steam-roll Virginia's cavaliers. Alabama, barring injuries and upsets, will walk away with Sewanee at Birmingham. Florida should take Auburn in tow easily. L. S. U. and South Carolina should have a tight battle at Columbia, S. C., with the odds favoring Russ Cohen's Louisiana boys to come through on top.

BACKFIELD TRIO SCORING PUNCH FOR TAR HEELS

Carolina's Scoring Attack Centers About Magner, Branch and House

The big siege guns of the North Carolina offensive are booming away, making it seem likely that Santa Claus' All-Southern selections along about Christmas may see the Tar Heels represented.

Jim Magner, the "eight-yard-a-try" halfback of last year; Johnny Branch, the speedy, elusive quarterback; and Henry House, the driving fullback, have dominated the ball-carrying performances so far.

House's 66-yard charge through center at V. P. I. ran his yardage for two opening games up to 134 for 23 tries, an average of 5 3-4 yards a shot. If skeptical fans call a 66-yard plunge a fluke and count that play out, the Tar Heel cannonball still has a 3-yard average—which is par for any fullback.

The driving Magner has gained 90 yards for 18 tries, for a 5-yard average, has thrown passes for 196 yards more, has scored three of eight touchdowns and thrown passes for two more. Quite a record, and all the more when it is considered that Magner is likewise the steadying power on offense and defense.

The elusive Branch hasn't had much chance running from scrimmage, for the quarterback doesn't carry the ball much under the Carolina system, but he has more than done his bit on interference, passes and punt returns.

In the latter capacity, Branch stepped 80-yards for a touchdown through the whole Gobbler team, eluded Wake Forest for 63 yards, and made numerous shorter, brilliant returns. His pass receiving netted Carolina 90 yards against V. P. I., one of his catches gaining 30 yards for a touchdown, and 28 yards against Wake Forest.

Other leading ground gainers for the Tar Heels are Captain Strud Nash, who has made 48 yards for 17 tries; Rip Slusser, who has clicked off 51 for 12; and Stuart Chandler, who has done 22 for 6.

POPE'S GUARDS CAN'T PLAY BALL

Vatican City, Italy, Oct. 10—Plans are being made by the Vatican City to place a football team in the European competition this fall.

Because the rules of the International Football Federation prohibit any state playing non-citizens on its teams, members of the husky Swiss Guard cannot play on the Vatican City team.

The players, therefore, are to be drawn from the fire department, the post office force and the police force.

Tar Heels Ready For Maryland Invasion

Both Teams To Depend Upon Powerful Aerial Attacks In Game Today

Coach Collins Sends Eleven Through Light Workout In Final Practice.

GAME WILL START AT 2:30

Maryland Team Expected to Arrive This Morning on Early Train.

By K. C. Ramsay

The University of North Carolina football team will meet the Old Liners of the University of Maryland in Kenan stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in one of the most important Southern Conference grid contests of the day. It will be the first time that Maryland has met the Tar Heels in Chapel Hill since the 7-6 victory of Coach Collins' eleven in 1927.

Fans who witness the game here this afternoon probably will see one of the most furious passing attacks ever waged in a football game, both teams having showed their ability at gaining through the air. Carolina defeated V. P. I. last Saturday almost wholly from the aerial attack, and Maryland's praiseworthy stand against Yale was marked by many numerous passes.

For Carolina the test will decide whether or not Coach Collins has a team of championship calibre, since the Old Liners are the strongest team on the Tar Heel schedule so far. Should the Tar Heels emerge victorious today without injury, they probably will have a good chance to climb high in the conference standing.

The final workout for the Tar Heels yesterday afternoon was taken up with signal drills, running back kick-offs and going down under punts. Coach Collins had four teams running plays in dummy scrimmage against freshman elevens. The first team included Lipscomb, center; McIver and Fysal, guards; Hodges and McDade, tackles; Johnson and Parsley, ends; Wyrick, quarter; Chandler and Erickson, halves; McNeil, fullback.

On the second team were Gilbreath, center; Dunavant and Philpott, guards; Thompson and Underwood, tackles; Cole and Brown, ends; Branch, quarter; Magner and Nash, halves; McCaskill, fullback.

Maryland Arrives This Morning

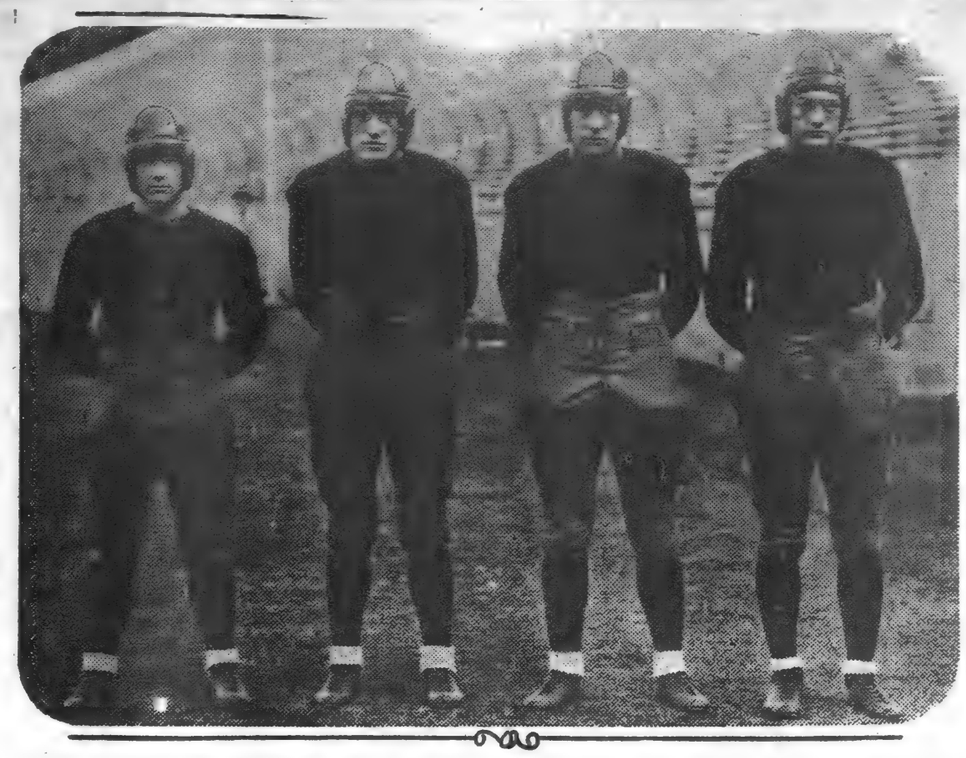
Coach Curly Byrd and the Maryland team are expected to arrive this morning in Durham on an early train and come over to Chapel Hill by bus. They probably will go immediately to the field house at Kenan stadium where they will rest until time for the game.

The probable starting lineup for the today is:

Maryland	Pos.	Carolina
Norris	L. E.	Johnson
Fisher	L. T.	Hodges
Hayden	L. G.	McIver
Faber	C.	Lipscomb
Krajcovic	R. G.	Fysal
Carlis	R. T.	McDade
Pease	R. E.	Parsley
Woods	Q. B.	Branch
Berger	L. H.	Magner
Chalmers	R. H.	Slusser
Poppleman	F. B.	House

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen



With the World Series already won and over, the Hot Stove League is rapidly swinging into action. Already the boys are gathering around the fire and discussing the various trades and prospects for next year.

Although no definite announcement has been made at the present writing, it is a foregone conclusion that Joe McCarthy, late manager of the Chicago Cubs, will be at the helm of the New York Yankees, taking over the reins held by Bob Shawkey. Bob Quinn, owner of the lowly Boston Red Sox, went the limit to get Joe, but evidently McCarthy wants revenge for the raw deal he received in Chicago and he certainly couldn't get it in Boston. When asked about it, Joe replied, "When they break your heart, you want to do something about it." Nor were the Chicago officials able to escape without criticism; this was shown in the late city series between the Cubs and the White Sox. Whenever the members of the Cubs appeared on the field, they were given the ancient and right honorable shower of lemons. For the first time in the last five years, Thugland's sympathies were with the American League club.

Another major shift that will probably take place before many moons will be the St. Louis-Cincinnati deal which will probably involve Jim Bottomly, long an old favorite in St. Louis and Taylor Douthit of the Cards and Ray Lucas, the Red Ace, and "Jersey" Joe Stripp of the Red Legs. The Cards are having one of the finest slugging first basemen that ever donned an International League uniform come up in the person of Bill Collins of Rochester. In addition to being one of the leading fielders of the Class AA circuit, Bill is its finest batsman amassing close to a .400 average. Of course there'll be plenty of St. Louis fans raising plenty of howl over the passing of Bottomly, who has established himself in the hearts of Cardinal fans. "Sunny" Jim has always given all he had to turn the Cardinals into a pennent winner and together with Hornsby was ranked as poison to opposing hurlers. But the fact remains that the Cardinals need new blood, and a man of Collins' calibre couldn't very well be kept "riding the boards."

Brooklyn also has made plans for rebuilding and gaining that extra bit of punch that deprived them of the championship last year. Overtures have been made by the Brooklyn outfit to Mr. Baker, owner of the Phillies, for Lefty O'Doul and Chuck Klein, two of the "sluggingest" gardners of the senior circuit. It is highly improbable that Baker will let both of these youngsters go, but there is a chance for one if enough money and players are offered. Were the Robins to add these two men to their roster, they would have the hardest hitting outfield in history, for the 1930 averages showed these men in third and fourth places. Together with Babe Herman, the Robin home run king, who finished second, the Brooklyn team would have an outfield that hits around .380 and more.

STARTING TAR HEEL BACKS

Johnny Branch, Rip Slusser, Henry House and Jim Magner probably will constitute the starting Tar Heel backfield for today's game. Captain Nash is expected to get into the game, but because of the injury to his eye may not start. This quartet played together for a part of the V. P. I. game, and worked together very well.

Intramural Results

Steele Scores Second Win

Steele took its second game in the intramural series yesterday by defeating Old West 12-0 in the fastest game of the afternoon. Offensive work was strong on both sides but Steele managed to push over four first downs to Old West's two.

Blue, clever backfield man for Steele, was the star, intercepting an Old West pass in the third quarter for the first tally of the game. Late in the final period he made the second touchdown after a 50-yard pass from Hogan.

Zeta Psi Wins

Zeta Psi walked away with the Zeta Beta Taus this afternoon, winning their game 13-0. Snow and Albright were the big guns in the Zeta Psi attack, each slipping over their opponents' goal for a score. Snow made his touchdown on a well-executed end run, while Albright ran the ball over for the second tally on a pass. Barber scored the extra point for Zeta Psi. Weil and Abrams played a nice game for the Zeta Beta Taus but were no match for their opponents' offense.

New Dorms Down Everett

The boys from Everett ("I") proved to be no match for the team New Dorms had on the field today when they lost by a score of 14-0. Bloom played the best game for the Everett aggregation, but he offered little competition to the Umstead Williamson combination of New Dorms. These two men scored the touchdowns for New Dorms, and Higdon of New Dorms scored a touchback against Everett. Hampton, captain of the New Dorms team, also played a nice game.

Theta Chi Wins on Downs

A scoreless tie was the feature of the Theta Chi-Tau Epsilon Phi battle the game going to Theta Chi by a margin of six first downs. They scored eight first downs against the two of Tau Epsilon Phi. Goodwin starred for Theta Chi and Fine for Tau Epsilon Phi.

Two Forfeits

Sigma Zeta forfeited to Sigma Phi Sigma, and Manly forfeited to Mangum.

CROSS COUNTRY DONE AWAY WITH BY NEBRASKA U.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 10.—Cross-country, described by the Nebraska Alumnus as a more or less ancient sport for college athletes, has been removed from the Big Six conference sport calendar this fall in favor of milder, but still highly strenuous, running competitions.

No more will the track-suited athletes labor through mud and cold over hill and dale, only to arrive in the stadium just as the football squad returns between halves and steals all the glory.

Conference coaches have decided in favor of a two-mile race all on the stadium track, instead of the five-mile grind over the surrounding countryside.

Six men will be used, as in the past, with five counting in the totals. Ten points will be given first place, nine for second, and so forth, with the team scoring the greatest number of points winning. In cross-country one point is allowed for first, two for second and so on, with the low score winning.

Races will be run between halves of every conference football game this fall.

that Maryland will be easy to beat because Yale defeated them by an overwhelming score. The score was no indication of Maryland's strength. That Maryland game is going to be tough. The attitude of the student body has more to do with the mental attitude of the team when they go on the field than their own physical ability. The team wants the student body behind it. As students you have the opportunity and obligation not only of helping the spirit of your team but also of conveying the real atmosphere of this institution to the visiting teams."

Coach Fetzer closed by saying that he hoped the sophomore class would put their spirit behind the team. And also that more of them would come out for athletic teams as they would have three playing years before them.

Three American universities —Columbia, California and Chicago—have been honored by the allied armies veterans of the World War for "distinguished accomplishments in the cause of peace."

FRESHMEN TAKE COUNTRY RUN AS PRELUDE TO RACE

Cake Race Preparation Is Given By Coach Ranson to All Frosh Gym Men.

Thursday afternoon Coach Dale Ranson took both of the freshman gym classes out for a short cross-country run. The purpose of this run was to show the freshman what the cake race would be like. The first year men seemed to be favorably impressed with their first tastes of hill and dale work for a large number of them registered at the end of the work-out. The two Friday gym classes were also taken out for a short jog. Already 128 men have entered for participation in the seventh annual cake race.

It is thought that there will be more of these work-outs. The freshmen, it seems, are dissatisfied with their work in the gym and as they enjoyed their cross-country run the physical education department thinks it advisable to have these runs quite frequently.

In the cake race, a gold medal will be awarded to the first man to cross the line, silver medals will be given to the men finishing between second and sixth, and bronze awards will be given to the contestants finishing between seventh and eleventh place. In addition to the above prizes there will be 75 other awards, donated by the merchants of Chapel Hill, which will be given to the men finishing among the first seventy-five.

Anyone is eligible to compete who has not participated in a varsity or freshman track or cross country meet. The length of the course will be between two, and two and one half miles. One must attend six workouts before being permitted to run in the race.

Entries may be made either unattached or by teams. Anyone whose fraternity or dormitory does not enter a team may affiliate himself with another team. Intramural credit toward trophies will be given teams and individuals.

SCHEDULES MADE FOR HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL MEETS

E. R. Rankin of the extension division of the University announces the high school football program for the class A schools. This week there are two teams who will not play. They are Winston-Salem in the western division and Rocky Mount in the eastern division. They will play again next week.

The schedule for the class B schools has not been made yet since they have not sent in their entry blanks. These are expected October 25, and soon afterward they will begin their elimination games.

Class A Schedule

Western class A conference:

Asheville vs High Point at High Point—October 10.

Salisbury vs Gastonia at Gastonia—October 10.

Charlotte vs Greensboro at Greensboro—October 10.

Eastern Class A conference:

Durham vs Goldsboro at Goldsboro—October 10.

Raleigh vs Fayetteville at Raleigh—October 10.

Wilson vs Wilmington at Wilmington—October 11.

The games played off last week were Asheville vs Gastonia at Gastonia in the western, when Asheville won 13-7; and in the eastern conference Rocky Mount vs Durham in favor of Rocky Mount and Durham vs Wilmington which game was a draw.

Alois Lang, Christus of the 1930 Passion Play, received only $955 as his share of the proceeds of the play.

BERLIN PROFESSOR WILL LECTURE ON GERMAN POLITICS

Dr. Bonn, Professor of Economics at Handelschochschule To Speak Thursday.

The state of affairs in German politics today will be discussed in a lecture Thursday at 8 P. M. in Gerrard hall by Dr. M. J. Bonn, professor of economics and director of the Institute of Finance at Handelschochschule in Berlin. Dr. Bonn will use as the title of his lecture "Economics and Politics in Modern Germany."

Dr. Bonn has been lecturing in this country since 1914. He is leader of the Round Table at Williamston Institute of Politics, and recently has lectured at the Universities of Wisconsin, California, Leland Stanford and Cornell.

He served as economic expert at Versailles in 1919, and in the same capacity at Spa, Brussells, and Genoa in 1920-21. He is a member of the International Gold Commission of the League of Nations, and a member of the Advisory board of the Commissions of American Academy of Political and Social Science.

While Dr. Bonn is in Chapel Hill he will be entertained at dinner by Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Zimmerman. The former was a student of Dr. Bonn's at one time. After the lecture Thursday evening the Department of Economics and Commerce will tender a smoker for Dr. Bonn. At this time any members of the faculty who desire to meet him may have the opportunity.

Of interest to political students will be the fact that the date of Dr. Bonn's lecture coincides with that of the meeting of the Reichstag in Germany. The new communist leader, Harry Hitler, will be expected to feature strongly at this time.

WATER SITUATION NOT SO BAD NOW

Consumption Decreases with Cooler Weather; Clouds Cheer J. S. Bennett

The clouds that gathered yesterday gave a sombre aspect to the village, but they cheered J. S. Bennett. For the continued drought had put him in a state of uneasiness about the community's water supply.

When this paper went to press yesterday afternoon the weather outlook was still uncertain, and the forecast for Friday, as published in the newspapers, was "fair and warmer." Still the situation as to water is better than it was a week ago.

"Until we notify them, the people of Chapel Hill may feel free to go ahead with their normal consumption of water," says Mr. Bennett. "The weather turned cooler toward the end of last week, when our supply seemed to be running low, and this decreased the consumption by about 75,000 gallons a day. And then we have built a weir which creates a pond out at the pumping station on Morgan's creek. Here at the intake at the junction of two creeks, Morgan's and Price's, the level has been raised 11 inches, and so we have a reserve of around 600,000 gallons. This gives us a margin of about one day's consumption.

"As long as enough water is coming down the two creeks there is no reason for people not to use it in the customary quantities, since the excess goes to waste anyhow. If we are threatened with a shortage we will have plenty of time to give notice to everybody, and in that case measures of economy can be taken."

Baptist Meeting

The Mount Zion Baptist Association is to meet in the Baptist Church 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. This association meets once a month, and is composed of the Sunday schools of fifty-three surrounding churches.

Dr. Toy Out of Town

Dr. Calvert R. Toy has been on a visit to friends in New Jersey this week. Today and tomorrow he will attend a reunion of medical men in Philadelphia.

Tar Heel Meeting

The managing editor and editor of the Daily Tar Heel will meet the editors of the paper at a 7 o'clock meeting, and the reporters at 7:15 tonight. No one will be excused.

University Press Doubles Output Of Previous Year

By R. W. Madry

The University of North Carolina Press which, at the age of seven, is wide and favorably known at home and abroad, announced today the publication of more than 25 new books to be issued during the fall and winter. This is twice as many as were issued during the corresponding period last year.

When these new volumes have been brought out the total number issued by the Press since its establishment in 1922 will have passed the 100 mark.

The most remarkable thing in connection with the announcement, however, it appears, is that not one cent of the state's money is being spent in putting out these new books. Heretofore, Assistant Director W. T. Couch pointed out, the University has appropriated a substantial sum to help cover the cost of maintaining the Press. But when the state called upon the University last spring to make big slashes in its budget, the Press was one of the many departments that suffered a heavy cut—in fact the support of the Press was dropped entirely except for a sum that was set up to take care of certain University periodicals published under the imprint of the Press. The Press is yet far from being self-supporting, but with the aid of interested foundations and wise business management it is not only getting along but is increasing its production month by month.

Purposes of the Press

The major purpose of the Press is to give the University standing in the field of publishing commensurate with its standing in the fields of teaching, research, and extension. To enter the publishing field here in the South, to develop a great scholarly publishing business similar to the organization built up by Harvard and Yale and Chicago in America, and Cambridge and Oxford in England, can and will bring the Universtiy distinceion of the same high character as that brought it by the development of its various schools, with the additional advantage that its scholarly output can be even more widely disseminated throughout the scholarly world than the graduates of its schools.

Six of the new volumes tie in with the Governor's live-at-home program. These are books about North Carolina, written with the view to acquainting its citizens with the social and economic status of the state.

Makes Study of State

The introductory volume for the study of the state suggested by the Press is North Carolina: Economic and Social, by Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., who as a member of the department of rural social-economics of the University has devoted 15 years of study to the social and economic aspects of the state.

Other volumes in this live-at-home series are listed as Farm Life Abroad, by Dr. E. C. Branson, head of the rural social-economics department, which tells of the things that have made Denmark a country of prosperous, happy farmers; The Country Life of America, edited by Dr. Wilson Gee, director of the institute for research in social science at the University of Virginia, who has brought together in this book the contributions made at the institute of public affairs held at the University of Virginia last summer; Town and Country, by E. E. Miller, late editor of the Southern Agriculturist, who has shown how the town and country cooperate to mutual advantage; Human Factors in Cotton Culture, by Rupert B. Vance, of the University of North Carolina, who has ana-

Carolina Patriarch Of The Drama Will Interpret "Hamlet" Tonight

To-night Professor Frederick H. Koch, who is to The Carolina Playmakers what George Washington is to our Vaterlandt, will read and interpret Mr. Shakespeare's "Hamlet" as becomes a recognized authority on that gentleman playwright who built a world within a book of plays that since has cost a world, a world of praise. You should pardon the influence that the writer has acquired from contacts with Professor Koch and his Shakespeare. But anyway 'Proff' is going to read "Prince of Denmark" at eight and a half bells by The Carolina Playmakers Theatrical alarm clock this evening by way of initiating for the year the monthly Sunday readings. And everyone is invited to hear 'Proff' free of charge. It really should be worth that to even those of our erudite scholars who believe Will Shakespeare was a warrior. For only the other day, Wednesday in fact, this correspondent discovered by perusing through some California journals that our noted Professor got his first suit of clothes from Hamlet. through Hamlet, or by Hamlet—anyway Hamlet gave it to him? Fishy? Not at all. Here's the gist of that part of the life story of Frederick H. Koch, appearing in The Daily Californian, of the University of California, Tuesday, July 31, 1928, which will explain this paradox, and just how it happened that 'Proff' got a suit from Hamlet. Oh, but I told you it was his first suit. Well that's wrong. It was his first dress suit. But then you shouldn't want to know everything at once.

Well, once upon a time the father of our Playmakers was a young fellow who didn't know he had any talent. And this particular morning he woke up to find he also didn't have any money. Now he had been studying "Hamlet" but strangely enough had never seen a play of any sort. Alexander Salvini just happened to be in town (Peoria, Illinois) cast in the role of Hamlet. But being broke, and together with being of conservative Methodist parents who vigorously objected to drama of any form, leaves a fellow in a situation pretty much zero minus. After much coaxing Dad handed him a dollar bill pleading with him not to 'let on to Ma.' That night as he witnessed the show from the balcony that certain feeling o'ertook him. He went home, memorized the play and presented a one-man-show all by his lone-

COMMUNITY CLUB WANTS CLOTHES

The health department of the Community club has left a box in the "Y" lobby for the collection of old clothes. Each year the club collects old clothes and has them laundered and patched. They are then turned over to George Lawrence, superintendent of Public Welfare of Orange County.

Lawrence distributes the clothes among the needy of the county.

Any students having old clothes of any kind are asked to leave them at the "Y" during the week.

FOUNDERS' DAY IS OBSERVED AGAIN

One Hundred Thirty-Seventh Anniversary Is Commemorated Yesterday.

Commemorating the 137th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the first campus building, the University held its memorial exercises under Davie Poplar yesterday. After the program had been opened by the University band, President Frank P. Graham presided, presenting Rev. Eugene Olive of Chapel Hill, who gave the invocation.

The audience sang the University hymn, which was followed by an announcement by Registrar T. J. Wilson, Jr., of the enrollments in the various schools of the University. He announced that there were 224 graduates, 104 law students, 81 medical, 70 pharmacy, 305 engineering, 725 arts, 289 applied sciences, 629 commerce, and 326 education students, making a total of 2753 students enrolled.

Mr. Graham introduced the first speaker, R. R. Williams of Asheville as a member of the "Young Turk Movement," who, when there was inadequate rooming facilities on the campus, toured the state soliciting money for the erection of new dormitories.

Mr. Williams, in his address, gave a history of the University, in which he stressed the fact that more than once the University has had to carry on through depressions.

Mr. Graham then introduced L. P. McLendon of Durham. Mr. McLendon, concentrating on conditions resulting from the World War, stated that the processes of thinking created and cherished during a war last years afterward, and predicted that the college graduates of the state would lead North Carolina out of the present economic depression.

Dean A. W. Hobbs read a list of the University students and alumni who have died since the last Founders' Day. The glee club sang "Integer Vitae," the program ending with the singing by the audience of "Hark the Sound," and the giving of the benediction by Rev. Eugene Olive.

Health Bridge

The health department of the Community Club gave benefit bridge parties on Friday at the home of Mrs. George B. Logan, chairman of the department. One party was given in the afternoon and another at night. The total amount collected for use in the work of the department was $25.50.

The ladies of the health department donated all of the refreshments.

SCIENTIFIC BODY MEETS IN 322ND SESSION TUESDAY

Dr. H. V. Wilson, Zoologist, One Of Principal Speakers on Society's Program.

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society will meet for the 322nd time Tuesday night at 7:30 in Phillips hall. Dr. H. V. Wilson of the zoology department will be one of the chief speakers on the Tuesday night program. The society has been meeting regularly for the past several years purporting the discussion of scientific subjects, and hearing papers read by some of the noted men in scientific work. Several men of national fame have appeared before this society during its existence.

Dr. Wilson, who has been studying in Italy during the past summer in some of the larger laboratories, will talk on the "Larval Metamorphosis in Manoxonid Sponges."

The second speaker on the program will be Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department. Dr. Cobb has made quite a name for himself in the line of geological researches. His talk at the meeting on Tuesday will be on the "Light on the Loess Problem from the Mississippi Valley."

Since this is the first meeting that the society has held this year, the officials ask that all of the members be present so that the organization may get off to a good start this year.

Faculty Committee Guests Of Council

The members of the faculty executive committee were guests of the student council at a dinner in the Carolina Inn on Thursday evening.

During the evening there was an informal discussion of the problems that confront both groups. Chief among those discussed were the handling of cheating cases, and other violations of the honor system. Suggestions were made as to the best means of solving these problems.

The hosts of the evening were: R. C. Greene, chairman of the student council, Mayne Albright, secretary, M. S. Benton, L. G. Barefoot, Harper Barnes, W. E. Uzzell, and J. A. Whitaker.

Dean F. F. Bradshaw and President Frank Graham were guests, along with the faculty executive committee members, G. A. Harrer, M. T. Van Hecke, E. L. Mackie, H. G. Baity, S. E. Leavitt, and J. N. Couch.

AMERICANS SPEND MORE FOR AUTOS THAN EDUCATION

Washington, Oct. 10.—Figures which have been compiled by the research division of the National Education Association indicate that Americans spend more than five times as much for passenger automobiles each year as they do for the education of their children in the public schools.

In 1928 the country spent less than $2,500,000,000 for public education below the college grade, while it spent $12,500,000,000 for motor cars.

The survey further indicated that three times as much as was spent on education was spent on tobacco, candy, soft drinks and amusements of various sorts.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publications Union of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C. Subscription price, $4.00 for the college year.

Racing For Cakes Brings Out Champions

A study of the results of cake races staged in the past by the Intramural department and track coaches shows that several champions have been discovered by this means. In fact the University, long noted for its champions in distance runs, has utilized the cake race as the chief means of discovering track material.

Back when the first cake race was run Harry Thach captured first place. Harry later became one of the best milers here and turned in a 4:30 mile to climax his running. Galen Elliott, Minor Barkley ,and June Fisher, three members of Carolina's four mile relay championship team, all began their careers on the cinders by winning cake races. There are others who finished up near the top who have won honors here.

With disheartening prospects for future cross country and distance runners Coach Ranson will probably eye the cake racers this year closely in an effort to uncover new material. While the winners aren't all going to be world beaters, or even make good trackmen the races this year provide an excellent opportunity for some ambitious runner to catch the eye of the coach and get some valuable personal instruction.

What Grade Education?

In the opinion of the Rev. Dr. Charles L. O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame University, the chief problem confronting existing educational organization in the United States is a correct evaluation of the credit system in academic work.

Regarding the matter, Dr. O'Donnell has made the following remark: "The credit system is an obsesion on the undergraduate mind today. Students are working by the credit clock. I think it is up to the faculty to create an interest in learning for learning's sake; the value of knowledge itself, and some standard on which a degree can be given. It is a machine-like thing, this credit system, but I think a great professor can offset the menace of credits."

Here is another prominent man who has called attention to an evil without giving any workable solution. Dr. O'Donnell merely stated in the interview that abolition of the credit system in universities would be a difficult task. (Far be it from the intention of the writer to criticize Dr. O'Donnell for his failure to offer a solution to the credit system problem! We merely feel that another critic has gone his limit—a limit which many prominent educators have reached, but which none have crossed.)

We believe, as does Dr. O'Donnell, that grades and credits constitute one of the greatest problems of American higher education. Time and again we realize that high grades do not mean success after leaving college. The weakness of the credit system is apparent, yet the solution grows vaguer as we ponder over the situation.

Granting that standards are essential to any organization, Dr. O'Donnell seems to be near the solution to the problem of grades and credits when he says, "The great professor can do most to eradicate the evil of grades by emphasizing learning for learning's sake."—J. C. W.

Aviation School Head Lauds College Training

College education is becoming an increasingly important asset in commercial aviation, and the man who has preceded his aeronautical training with a year or more of college now stands a greater chance of success in the field. This is the belief of T. Lee, manager of the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland, California, one of the nation's largest accredited flying schools.

W. E. Boeing, founder and chairman of the board of the various Boeing aeronautical enterprises, last year offered scholarships with a cash value of $7,100 at the Boeing School of Aeronautics. Scholarships were offered to undergraduates of approved American colleges and universities. Winners of the 1930 scholarships were: Ralph J. Moore, Stanford University; Lloyd H. Speelman, Mount Union College; Charles W. Sharp, University of Nebraska; R. M. Harris, University of Washington.

Of the graduates and students of the master pilot and mechanic courses at the Boeing School of Aeronautics, 70 percent are men with one or more years of college education.

Mr. Lee said that aeronautical training was becoming systematized to a degree comparable with that for engineering, law or other professions. Among the ground school courses offered with the flight training at more progressive schools are airplane fabrication, engines, radio telephony, air law, avigation, meteorology, mathematics, aerodynamics, drafting and design and business methods.

Mills Compares Australian With American Universities

By Mary Buie

"Your university is very different from ours," said Dr. R. C. Mills of the University of Sydney, Australia, when we interviewed him. Dr. Mills is a visiting professor sent to the University by the division of intercourse and education of the Carnegie Foundation of International Peace. This division promotes good will between the universities of different countries by the interchange of professors.

Dr. Mills continued: "The University of Sydney is about the size of the University here; it has 3,000 students. We have more girls than you do, and we don't call them co-eds. That word has no meaning for us. We call them either women students or girls, since 1381 women have been admitted to the University, and thirty percent of our students are women. We do not have 'college boys' either; they are 'undergraduates.'

"Our University is in a city of over 1,000,000 people and most of the students live at home or in city boarding houses. Only about fifteen percent live within the colleges. We do not have dormitories; we have six colleges dotted around the campus much as the dormitories are here. There are two women's colleges, one undenominational and one Catholic. The four men's colleges are Anglican, Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist. Each college is controlled by a warden or master. The colleges have tutors and supplement the teaching of the University.

"Most of the work is in formal lectures. We have no small sections with instructors as you have." Dr. Mills explained that they have ten faculties which correspond to our departments, and all of these grant degrees. They are in order of seniority: arts, law, medicine, science, engineering, dentistry, agricultural science, veterinary science, economics, and architecture. The majority of students are in the first four. In arts and economics there are evening lectures with the lectures of the day repeated. There is an evening students association, and many of them receive degrees.

"We are a state university in a sense and an endowed university. A great part is provided by the state, but we are endowed by private individuals. We are not state controlled. The governing body, which we call the Senate, is in part elected by graduates and there are some representatives in it.

"For the promotion of social life we have a Men's Union which meets in a large building for social purposes. The women have a similar, but separate organization. We have no fraternities, so that rushing is unknown to us. But we do have innumerable societies, covering all sorts of things, literary work, scientific work, sports.

"I notice that you are very much less formal than we are. All of our instructors wear gowns. The students are supposed to wear gowns in the classroom, too, but that rule is not enforced. They do wear gowns on examination. If a man should walk across the main building quadrangle without his coat, he would probably be warned once, and asked to leave the second time.

"We make a ceremony of matriculation. All the freshmen wearing gowns meet in a body, and are addressed by the vice-chancellor. Then each one formally signs the roll of the University, pledging himself to keep the rules of the institution.

The work of the University, Dr. Mills said, begins in the autumn, which is in March, and follows the calendar year to December.

"What kind of commencement do you have?" we asked.

Dr. Mills replied that they call it the "Conferring of Degrees." It is a very formal function which takes place in April, after the academic year has begun. It is held in Great Hall, a large building modeled after Westminister Abbey. There a procession of all the staff in caps, gowns, and hoods, the members marching in ascending order of superiority. Each candidate is presented by the dean of his Faculty to the Chancellor, who is the head of the University. The Chancellor confers the degree with some ceremony.

"What about sport, Dr. Mills?"

"Cricket and football are the popular sports. We play Rugby football instead of American. We are interested in your football but we don't play it. We play with the same type of ball, but most of the things we do would be illegal in your game, and what you do would be illegal in ours. But we would sit up half the night talking about one of your stars. We have nothing like your stadium. We play in what is called an 'oval' The University has three of them.

"We play a great deal of lawn tennis all through the year. There are about twenty-five tennis courts. There is much rowing, also, and rifle shooting. We play quite a bit of baseball, too. Our sports are not organized with paid coaches; what coaching we have is done by past members of the teams. There is still less cheering; that is, organized cheering. We have no band playing, and on the whole we take our plays more quietly."

It Seems To Me, Too

By Phil Liskin

A statue that reveals our ideal of the perfect body of man or woman arouses in me strange surges of emotion. Perhaps it is that finer and nobler quality in each of us which, driven to cover by the coarseness of our daily life, quickly frees itself at the sight of the beautiful.

There are four statues standing in the library corridor that are capable of arousing these emotions in us. They are capable, but unfortunately they do not stir us as they should. Come, and we shall see why.

We enter the library, walk forward several paces, turn to the left, and find ourselves confronted by Minerva, she of the tall headgear. Before we can start to admire her, we are startled to find that she is looking very sickly. In fact, every inch of her is tinted a hideous yellow, which evidently appears to be the outcome of years of neglect. To climax our consternation, we also discover that the last finger on her left hand is mysteriously missing.

Continuing to the left, we come upon Crouching Aphrodite who is shown just emerging from her bath. That is all very well, but we had always thought that a young girl just leaving her bath would at least be clean. Aphrodite, we are sorry to see, is not at all clean. On the contrary, there are dirty spots all over her. We leave her to her bath with the observation that somebody could do Art a great service by helping her out with a brush and a cake of Lifebuoy.

Reversing our steps, we come across Apollo, who is standing in a rather mutilated condition. That is to say, two fingers of his right hand are exceedingly conspicuous by their absence. We are also pained to see that a short iron rod is projecting from each of his shoulders. He is in urgent need of repair is our last thought as we leave him for the Venus de Milo who stands unembarrassed a few paces away.

Venus, we note, is also in a sad condition. There are dozens of indentations all over her body that make us wonder if a piano had ever fallen on her. We are also horrified to see that some perverted person has satisfied his lascivious cravings by mutilation her with a pencil. As we leave Venus there is in each of us the thought that society would be better off if the moron with the pencil could be disposed of by the state as other enemies of society are obliterated.

And so we leave these time-scarred emblems of Art who are willing to continue stirring our finer senses if only they were properly taken care of. For Art's sake, will someone help them?

Speaking of Art, I hear that Ponce City, Oklahoma, has recently erected a statue to a woman bandit, the famous Belle Starr, who specialized in stealing horses and the hearts of men. Perhaps we shall come to the stage where graduating classes will present to Carolina a statue of the year's most beautiful co-ed. The task of selecting this girl should be quite easy.

Carolina Outscores Maryland Team 28-21

Superior Aerial Attack Gives Tar Heels Winning Margin Over Old Liners

Branch Runs 94 Yards for Touchdown After Receiving Punt; Magner and Branch Both Score Twice for Tar Heels; Evans Plays Great Game for Maryland.

By K. C. Ramsay

The University of North Carolina defeated the University of Maryland 28-21 in Kenan stadium before 10,000 fans in one of the most exciting and thrilling games ever played in Chapel Hill. Both teams resorted to the air many times for long gains, the Tar Heels scoring two of their touchdowns on passes. Evans of Maryland starred for the losing team by making gain after gain on fake reverse plays. Johnny Branch was the sensation of the afternoon with his 94-yard dash for a touchdown after receiving the ball on his six-yard line. Branch scored on a 34-yard pass from Magner also.

The playing in the Carolina line of Larry Johnson, Henry McIver, and Ellis Fysal was outstanding. Both Lipscomb and Gilbreath looked good at center. Jim Magner played a whale of a game for Carolina, sharing scoring honors with Johnnie Branch by also making two of the touchdowns. Captain Nash and Rip Slusser played consistently for Carolina.

Captain Chalmers Woods and Berger repeated the good performances which they made against Yale last Saturday. Faber, Krajcovic, and Pease were the stars in the Old Liners forward wall. Woods scored twice, and Poppleman once for Maryland.

Maryland was superior to Carolina in scrimmage plays making 13 first downs to Carolina's eight. Gains from scrimmage were Maryland 190, Carolina 81. Carolina was by far the superior in the air, gaining 149 yards to Maryland's 48. Carolina completed 10 out of 16 passes and Maryland made 5 out of 16 good.

Captain Nash met Captain Chalmers at mid-field and winning the toss-up, and chose to receive at the west goal. Chalmers kicked off to the goal line, Nash receiving and returning to the 10 yard line. Wyrick received a pass from Chandler for first down. House fumbled and Pease recovered for Maryland. Berger got six at end. Poppleman made it a first down. Berger got one yard on a reverse. Poppleman went through the line for 14 yards and a touchdown. Chalmers got the extra point by a placekick. Score: Carolina 0; Md. 7.

House kicked off for Carolina to Woods, who was downed on the 17 yard line. Fysal broke through and nailed Berger for a six yard loss on the second play. Chalmers punted to Wyrick who was downed on the 46 yard line. Nash went around end for 8 yards. Chandler got a first down on the 31 yard line. House got two, and Nash took a pass from Chandler for another first down on 20 yard line. Nash lost two at end, downed by Berger. Chandler fumbled and Norris for Maryland recovered on 27 yard line. Lipscomb recovered Woods fumble on the 48 yard line. Chalmers intercepted Magner's pass, being run out of bounds on the 30 yard line.

Poppleman got five. Berger got a first down around end. Poppleman to Woods was incomplete. House intercepted Chalmers pass and fumbled. Wyrick recovered. Magner lost five on two plays. Berger took Nash's punt on his own 47 yard line, signalling for a fair catch. Time out Carolina.

Woods got four through the line. Woods failed to gain. Wyrick received Woods punt on his 25 yard line and ran through the Maryland team to their 10 yard line. Magner failed to gain on two plays. Nash failed. Magner's pass was intercepted by Faber, who was downed on his 10 yard line.

Poppleman got one yard. Woods punted outside on his 40 yard line. Maryland offside. Branch received Magner"s pass on the 30 yard line and made a touchdown. Branch dropkicked for the extra point. Carolina 7; Maryland 7.

Captain Chalmers kicked off to Captain Nash on the 5 yard line, who returned to the 21 yard mark. The first quarter was over as House got one yard through the line.

Second Quarter

House got four, and Nash punted to Berger who was downed on N. C.'s 41 yard line. Woods slipped off tackle for 41 yards and a touchdown. Not a Carolina man touched him on the run. Chalmers placekicked the point. Carolina 7; Maryland 14.

House kicked off for N. C. to Woods who received it on his 2 yard line. McIver downed him on the 27 yard line. Time out Maryland.

Slusser threw Berger for a three yard loss after Poppleman failed to gain. Chalmers tried at end and got three yards, downed by Johnson. Branch receiving Chalmers punt, was downed on the 49 yard line. Norris of Maryland was hurt on the next play when Magner lost one yard. Slusser took Magner's pass for a first down on Maryland's 41 yard line. Scott replaced Faber at center for Maryland. Magner passed to Johnson who made 8 yards. House got a first down over center.

Slusser got three. House made seven and another first down. Slusser made three. Magner passed to Slusser for the third straight first down. House made two through the line. House got another yard but fumbled. Fysal recovered for N. C. Magner made the necessary yard for the score. Branch dropkicked for the extra point. Score: Caroline 14; Maryland 14.

INTRAMURAL TAG FOOTBALL SEASON WELL UNDERWAY

Sigma Nu and Tau Epsilon Phi Win Two Games Each in First Week's Play.

Tag football is now settling down to a steady pace in the stretch under the supervision of intramural directors Shepard and Gray. Many of the thirty-five outfits engaged in the play have only one game to their credit, making any prediction on the final standing a wild guess. The defenders of the title, the Betas, have shown nothing startling in the 6-0 defeat they handed the Zeta Psi's.

The calibre of the play has been quite low due, in most cases, to the fact that the teams get their first practice in their first intramural game. None of the teams have displayed a decent running attack due to the scarcity of backfield men who can spill an end.

The defense lines usually manage to crawl through to hurry the passers. The defensive backs have on the whole been alert, and plenty of intercepted passes have been put down on the books. Several blocked kicks leading to touchdowns demonstrate that the boys have no need of protective

Annual Cake Race Entrants Must Start Training By Monday

More than 242 entries have been received for the seventh annual cake race to be run Thursday, October 23. The intramural department wishes it understood that the contest is open to upperclassmen as well as freshmen. Candidates for either freshman or varsity cross country teams are eligible unless they have participated in a cross country meet.

It is necessary for entries to take their first practice not later than Monday in order to get in the required six workouts. No credit will be given for a practice run unless the entry reports to the manager before running.

armor to go in and step on the punter.

The T. E. P.'s are one of the two outfits that have two victories to its credit. The first was taken on a margin of downs, and in the other the T. E. P.'s trounced the Sigma Zetas to the tune of 28-0. This, however, is the second time that the Sigma Zeta's have taken it on the chin.

Phi Sigma Kappa, another high powered outfit, walked over the Phi Alpha's 28-0, with Thomas acting the big triple threat man. Teachey to Fitzgerald or Vick, is a passing combination that work with Phi Sigma Kappa club, that bear watching.

Sigma Nu has chalked up two victories and only one touchdown. In the tangle with S. A. E. club, both teams played hard football, and as a result several of the boys of both clubs have been walking about the campus displaying marks of the gory struggle.

Ruffin showed a genuine passing attack. George Bathune was doing the flinging, and McBride was working the business end of the passes. In the Manly game, McBride got loose for three touchdowns.

The varied uniforms, and in many cases the lack of uniforms, have given the game color. Shorts and knickers serve to clothe the lower part of the body, while sweat shirts or nothing at all is worn above the waist. This gives great opportunities to display brawny chests. Nobody as yet has been able to explain the significance of baseball caps in football games.

Spectacular Films Are A Gamble Claims De Mille

"The greatest gamble in the entertainment world is to make either pictures or stage plays containing so-called spectacular scenes."

The speaker was Cecil B. De Mille and the occasion of his remarks, an interview regarding his new production, "Madam Satan," an M-G-M comedy with music which will open Monday at the Carolina Theatre.

De Mille can speak with decided authority on "spectacle" and he has perhaps had more of them than any other director. He follows the opening of the Red Sea in "The Ten Commandments"; the Babylonian scenes of "Male and Female"; and the Sack of Rome in "Manslaughter," with a "Madam Satan" masked ball aboard a Zeppelin, and the mid-air break-up of the giant ship.

"Every time I attempt one of these big effects," stated De Mille, "I realize that I am taking a terrific risk. Trying to put 'spectacle' into plays or photoplays has caused more premature eclipses for directors than any other single element.

GOOD POSITIONS TO BE OFFERED BY COMMISSION

Books on North Carolina

Other books in this North Carolina series which have been published by the Press previously are Some Cotton Mill Workers and Their Villages, by Jennings J. Rhyne; County Government in North Carolina, by Paul W. Wager; Welfare Work in Mill Villages, by Harriet L. Herring; The Democratic Party in Ante-Bellum North Carolina, by Clarence C. Norton; The North Carolina Chain Gang, by Roy M. Brown and Jesse F. Steiner; Public Poor Relief in North Carolina, by Roy M. Brown, and A State Movement in Railroad Development, by Cecil K. Brown.

One of the most interesting and timely of the new volumes deals with the cotton textile industry. The author, Claudius T. Murchison, is head of the research division of the University's school of commerce, and the title of the book is King Cotton Is Sick. Analyzing the cause of the present depression in the textile industry, Professor Murchison asserts that the industry is suffering most from "an exaggerated over-production." It is a book that would seem to appeal both to capitalist and labor providing they are striving to arrive at an intelligent solution of the problems involved.

Management Problems, by G. T. Schwenning, also of the school of commerce, is the title of another book that makes special reference to the textile industry. The book shows how different managers and systems have met their problems.

some. Well, out of it he made enough to pay for the first dress-suit he ever owned. Thanks to Hamlet.

So Professor Koch is on pretty familiar speaking terms with the Prince of Denmark and the recital should prove a most interesting one. In the past he has read "Taming of the Shrew," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Twelfth Night," and other Shakespearean dramas before large and appreciative audiences in the Playmakers Theatre. Besides he has acted various Shakespearean parts for the Playmakers here, including Petruchio in the Forest Theatre production of "The Shrew" in 1923, and the gallant Mercutio in the outdoor production of "Romeo and Juliet" last spring.

Those who have studied Elizabethan drama and Shakespeare under Professor Koch well know his marvelous interpretive ability, and sense immediately the great depth of his familiarity with this phase of his dramatic undertakings here. It all began back in Peoria when Fred Koch was a senior in high school. But after his graduation from Ohio Wesleyan University he took to the road and as an itinerant reciter of Shakespeare and English comedies, he wandered from New York City to Halifax, Novia Scotia with his one-man-show. He met John Craig, actor and owner of the Castle Square Stock Company who offered him a job with his repertory company in Boston. But the stage at that time was too precarious a profession and he decided to enter Harvard for a more intensive study of the drama. Afterwards he went to the University of North Dakota where he founded The Dakota Playmakers (Maxwell Anderson, now famous American playwright, was one of the charter members of this group.) After twelve years of pioneering on the prairies, he accepted a position with us 'folks.' And so he's here and so is Hamlet.—P. H. J.

KOCH INTERPRETS FIRST OF SUNDAY NIGHT READINGS

Thrills Large Audience With Rendition of Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

The first of a series of readings was given in the Playmaker Theatre Sunday night by Professor Koch, whose intepretation of Hamlet thrilled a large audience.

Usually a "reading" suggests an attempt to project the reader's personality. The audience was most delightfully surprised when Professor Koch not only submerged his own personality, but also identified his characterizations in such a way that the audience was never once at a loss to follow the motivation and substance of the tragedy.

This is more than mere "reading"; it is a rare example of histrionic art.

Hamlet, despite its accepted traditions, always has been a bit elusive. Actors have a way of playing around the character rather than through him. Again Professor Koch scored. He succeeded in creating a Hamlet who had all the classical complexities of another age and yet who seemed to be delightfully modern. This blending of intellectual appreciation and human understanding typified Professor Koch's entire reading of the play.

Especially adroit were the transitions from the broad humor of the grave-diggers to the subtle preoccupation of the Dane's mind. This is the sort of thing that Richard Mansfield did so celeverly, in the hey-day of his career.

RICE WILL FILM U. N. C.-TECH TILT

Homecoming Game To Be One of Four Important Contests in Nation To Be Recorded.

When the Carolina alumni file into the stadium for the Georgia Tech-Carolina homecoming game November 1 they will see before them a team that has aroused sufficient national interest to be filmed for one of Grantland Rice's Sportlights, well known movie features that are both sight and sound recordings of notable athletic events.

These two-reel pictures are made each year of the most important games in the country, and are shown in the movie theatres everywhere. This season only four games have been selected as being sufficiently important for Sportlight showings. They are the Army-Illinois, Pennsylvania-Notre Dame, California-Leland Stanford games, and the Georgia Tech-Carolina tilt.

The cameramen and sound engineers will arrive in Chapel Hill October 30 to complete the preparations that are being made for this important recording.

EARTH HAS VERY NARROW ESCAPE

Comet Passes Within Five Million Miles of Planet.

When you miss the fender of your neighbor's car by a few inches you think nothing of it, but when a comet comes within five million miles of the earth—headed straight for us—that's something to talk about.

French astronomers have just revealed how close a call the earth had this summer from being struck amidships by Schwassmann-Wachmann, a rather small but speedy comet which whizzed into our planetary system along last May, and made a bee line for God's favorite star.

The scientists insist that the earth had a narrower escape than the average layman would like to believe. Had the little comet come on at the speed and angle it did when it was discovered by German astronomers last May, it would have put quite a dent in our globe, and might even have knocked us galley west.

Some scientists are arguing over just what would have happened if the visitor had landed here. Some say it would have put a huge dent in us like a derby hat struck by an icy snowball. Others think it might have caused a jar sufficient to break the earth into small pieces, sending Chicago off toward Mars, and New York in the direction of Planet X.

The Frenchmen point out that in the past few centuries only three came nearest, missing the world by only 1,440,000 miles on July 1, 1770, while Pons-Winneckle passed by just 3,480,000 miles on June 27, 1927.

As a matter of fact, the latest comet visitors is no larger than some meteors which have actually landed on this earth. It is but 440 yards in diameter, the large appearance being due to surrounding gases.

The meteors of that size which have struck the earth have done little damage because they arrived at much less speed, and usually landed in desolate spots.

The 1930 visitor was traveling so fast that it could be seen to move with the naked eye.

UNIVERSITY DAY IS OBSERVED BY ALUMNI GROUPS

Rocky Mount, Wayne County, Raleigh, Charlotte, Buncombe Groups Meet Friday

Sunday marked the 137th birthday of the University of North Carolina. Not only was University Day observed by students, but also by 14,000 alumni in many centers of this state and others. Celebrations were held Friday night in cities throughout the state.

Thursday night R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, and J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, spoke at a meeting of Rocky Mount alumni in the Ricks hotel. The Rocky Mount group did honor to one of its number, Captain John H. Thorpe, of the University class of 1860. Captain Thorpe is ninety-three years of age, and shares with Daniel R. Coleman, of Belleville, Ontario, Canada, the honor of being the oldest living graduate of this institution.

The Wayne County alumni met last night in the Woman's Club building in Goldsboro. Dean Dudley D. Carroll, head of the commerce school, and J. Maryon Saunders met with them.

Friday afternoon the Raleigh alumni met at a barbecue at the farm of James H. Pou, Jr., where R. B. House was the speaker from the University. At Greensboro the alumni of that city met at the King Cotton hotel, Friday night and Dr. Collier Cobb was guest speaker.

Dr. L. R. Wilson, University librarian, addressed a meeting of the Charlotte alumni held Friday night in the Manufacturers' Club.

Friday at a luncheon the Buncombe county alumni met in Asheville, with Howard Bement, headmaster of Asheville School, as speaker.

Other groups also held University day celebrations last week-end. Groups in San Francisco, Chicago, Miami, Jacksonville, Atlanta.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK CONCLUDED

Success of Venture Is Indicated By Cooperation of Citizenry.

Yesterday ended Fire Prevention Week which was conducted by the Chapel Hill fire department during this past week for the purpose of decreasing fire hazards in this city.

Previous to the inauguration of Prevention Week a letter was sent to every citizen in the community soliciting co-operation in forwarding the fire prevention program. At the conclusion of the letter a number of requests were made that each citizen do his share in his section of the town toward the success of the project.

From the amount of these letters that were answered and mailed to the local fire chief, J. L. Foister, it is apparent that Prevention Week was a success.

A similar venture has been conducted all over the country during the year, in an attempt to lower the percentage of property destroyed by fire.

DURHAM TO SEE O'NEILL'S DRAMA

Theatre Guild Will Present "Strange Interlude" at Carolina October 24.

Of unique and unusual interest to all lovers of drama and the legitimate stage, is the announcement of the presentation by the Theatre Guild, Inc., of Eugene O'Neill's nine-act drama, "Strange Interlude," at the Carolina Theatre, Durham, Friday, October 24.

Partly because it won the Pulitzer Prize as the best play of the year, and also because it has broken records wherever it has been played, "Strange Interlude" is generally acclaimed as the greatest triumph thus far achieved by America's foremost playwright.

The unusual length of "Strange Interlude," its daring theme, its "asides," its dinner intermission, combined with the fact that each performance begins at 5:30 in the afternoon, augments its attraction to the student and business man alike.

A company of notable players will appear, including Elisabeth Risdon, Leonard Mudie, Blaine Cordner, Richard Barbee, Maud Durand, Maurice McRae, Esthel Westley, John J. Burns, and Jack Grattan.

Open Forum Rule

Henceforth Open Forum letters must be typewritten before they are handed to the editor of the Daily Tar Heel. Letters not typewritten will not be accepted under any circumstances.

RUSHING SEASON ENDS WEDNESDAY

Period of Silence Will Extend From 12 O'clock Tomorrow Night to 6 Friday.

Rushing season, which began on the afternoon of September 26, closes tomorrow night at 12:00 P. M., when the second period of silence will commence. The second silence period will continue until 6:00 p. m. Friday.

During this period no fraternity man will be allowed to speak to any freshman, other than by formal salutation. Both fraternities and men of the class of '34 are asked by the inter-fraternity council to see that this rule is carried out. For violation of this rule, the guilty fraternity will be forced to forfeit the bond put up before the season began.

On Friday afternoon at 2:00 p. m. all freshmen who will have received invitations from Dean Bradshaw will meet in Gerrard hall to secure their bids. Any man who does not receive a letter from the office of Dean Bradshaw, will not be expected to be present.

Each man will signify which three fraternities he likes best, putting the names of his choice in order, first choice, second choice, and so on. These choices will be turned over to a man who will look up in a record the names of the bids that each man has received. If there is a bid for the student from his first choice, he will be given a card telling him to go to that fraternity house. If no bid appears from his first choice, his second choice will be taken, and so on.

The inter-fraternity council wishes to make clear the fact that freshmen will not be allowed to discuss fraternities with anyone other than the members of their choice until 6:00 p. m. Friday afternoon. Discussion with members of their choice must not be done until after the bid of this fraternity has been received from Gerrard hall.

This is only the second year that such a rushing system has been tried, and it depends on the conduct of the fraternities and the pledges this year, as to whether this will be used in the

3. Resolved: That a full time University doctor be employed.

ALUMNI SUPPORT GRAHAM IN DRIVE OF LOYALTY FUND

President Is Firm Against Retrenchment of Educational Budgets.

Alumni of the University are solidly behind President Frank Graham in his stand that hard times should not mean retrenchment in the budgets of educational institutions, if numerous telegrams sent to the president from individual alumni and local alumni clubs on University Day are to be taken as indications.

Alumni clubs all over North Carolina and even outside the state, meeting in celebartion of the 137th University Day, enthusiastically passed resolutions of support to the new president conveying these sentiments in telegrams and messages to Mr. Graham.

Alumni secertary Maryon Saunders said today that more local alumni clubs met this year in observation of University Day than in any of the four years of his service.

One message, typical of those sent by local alumni groups, read: "Our alumni assure the new president of their one hundred percent loyalty in his plea that hard times should not mean retrenchment in the promotion of education in North Carolina."

Meanwhile, Felix A. Grisette, director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund, announces that contributions are continuing to come to the treasurer of the fund. Already more individual subscribers have sent in their contributions than in last year's canvass.

The Debate Squad

Students at this University find themselves surrounded by such a large number of extra-curricular organizations that the task of choosing one or more with which to become affiliated is indeed baffling. The chief fields of extra-curricular activity here are publications and athletics. It is not wise, however, to affiliate with these branches of student enterprise merely because they demand more attention than the others. Students should choose a medium for spending their spare time in lieu of the profession which they intend to pursue after leaving the University.

For those who are to pursue the practice of law or any other profession entailing frequent speeches and public addresses, the debate squad affords excellent training. The sole purpose of the squad is to train in the art of public speaking. Since the number of students who are interested in debating is relatively small (the active membership of the squad being about twenty-five), the debate coach can give each member individual attention.

The present organization of the debate squad is finely developed. Tryouts are held only after the query in question has been discussed by two or more faculty members who are experts in the field of the query. Compulsory attendance for these discussions insures well-informed debaters and keen competition for places on debating teams.

The striking similarity which intercollegiate debating bears to public life makes the debate squad well worth the consideration of activity-pickers.—J.C.W.

OPEN FORUM

A NOCTURNAL VISITOR

Friday night, about midnight, one of the dormitories was visited by an apparition that could be duplicated near the river Styx, and probably nowhere else. This person, his clothes in tatters, with a patch over his eyes, and false, protruding teeth, called at several dormitory rooms. He would call to the occupants of the room in an attempt to get them to come to the doors. A few of them did so, but most of them thought he was drunk or crazy.

Of course, all this was really just a prank to scare the persons in the room, and the whole dormitory was following this person to each room, to laugh after the roomer had come to the door. Naturally, no harm was meant, but harm might have been done unintentionally.

To see such a gruesome sight, leering at you around the door would be, to say the least, startling. To those who can take a joke, it would be just so much fun, but to those who cannot, it might cause hard feelings. Hard feelings are to be avoided, so, if this person was determined to throw a scare into someone, he should not have aroused those who were already asleep.

Perhaps the greatest harm that this might have caused would have been due to the actual fright involved. To those who are naturally of a nervous temperament or to those who have a weak heart, the reaction might have been dangerous, perhaps causing the person to faint. It was a good joke, but such tricks should be reserved for times such as Hallowe'en or April Fools' Day, when everyone would be expecting some sort of trick to be pulled on them. The joke would have been funnier and less dangerous. —W. E. D. Jr.

ARE FRATERNITIES FRATERNAL?

As a freshman, I have been rather disappointed in fraternities. I came up here with the idea that fraternities were brotherly, not only inside their own fraternity but with other fraternities. If I had a brother that said the things about me that fraternities say about each other, I'd shoot him.

If the best thing that a man can do to boost his own fraternity is to knock some other fraternity, his fraternity must be a pretty poor one. It seems that you upperclassmen have forgotten the time when you were freshmen. You appear to believe that cutting the throat of your rival frat is a fine way to aid your own cause. But you can be sure that the right kind of boy will have contempt for the fraternity which uses such methods. A freshman just can't help liking a frat which praises its rivals.

That's the way fraternities should be. And if freshmen will remember how much they dislike any fraternity which practised cut-throating, high-pressure talk, and over-friendliness that seems unnatural, fraternities next year will stop using such un-fraternal methods.

The old Jewish motto, "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," seems to be the motto of practically every frat on the Hill. "I heard that they cut our throats, so we'll just cut theirs."

It's every freshman's duty to keep clear in his memory the things he dislikes about fraternities and to see that his own one does not use such methods next year. In this way fraternities here will some time become real brotherhoods, with each other as well as in their own fraternity. —C.\P.

WAS IT WORTH IT?

Editor of the Daily Tar Heel:

Recent news dispatches from Raleigh tell us of the legal execution of a negro lad of seventeen. The negro was charged with burglary, which is punishable by death in this state. Juries often refuse to convict for this crime for they feel the penalty is too harsh. It way have been that the jury and the court were influenced by two factors: first, that he was a negro; second, that there was an added element in this case of an attempted criminal assault. However, I will not quarrel with that.

Neither will I quarrel with the fact that the court ruled that there was no prejudice in that national guardsmen were stationed around the court house pending the trial. Nor will I quarrel with the court in overruling the contentions of defense counsel that the negro was intoxicated and therefore lacked that 'Intent' which is a necessary element in the crime of burglary. Nor will I disagree with the highest official in the state who ruled that mental incompetency on the part of the negro would not prevent the state from exacting the death penalty.

Mob Justice—in burning a negro at the stake would be universally condemned. But an execution by the state—legal murder so called—that is quite different. The methods may vary but the results are the same. In both cases you have burnt flesh. In the recent execution by the state, charge after charge of electricity was sent through the negro's body which caused one of the official witnesses to exclaim: "Does it take that long?" The official executioner did not turn off the switch until the odor of burning flesh permeated the whole prison. The prison physican then decided that the corpse was well done and brown.

The Peace and Dignity of the glorious state of North Carolina was upheld. The official witnesses returned to their daily tasks. Advocates of Law and Order breathed easier. The official executioner homeward plod his weary way—twenty-five dollars richer for his simple task.

I merely ask the simple question of the people of North Carolina: "Was it worth it?"

JOSEPH E. JAFFEE.

Glider Is Launched By Electric Club

After its first successful flight at Wilkinsburg Airport, the Westinghouse Club glider "Electron," was christened by Thomas Spooner, president of the Westinghouse Club and assistant director of research for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

Miss Ruth Smith, sponsor of the glider, and Captain Donald F. Burr, a former member of the Royal Canadian Flying Corps and coach of the glider club, took part in the ceremonies.

The craft, an all-steel primary type Evans, was received unassembled, and built by members of the club. Instead of the usual "shock-cord" method of launching, the "Electron" was towed by automobile until it had gained sufficient height.

The club has a membership of nearly 100, many of whom are executives of the plant. It is though by the directors to be the largest club of its kind in the United States.

RUSHING SEASON ENDS WEDNESDAY

future, according to the fraternity council.

Last year about 350 bids were accepted, and from the looks of things this year, probably more will be accepted than ever before.

Fraternities as well as freshmen are looking forward the close of the rushing season, not only because of the fact that new men will have been taken into the different social orders, but things will settle down to the "old grind" again.

The term "freshmen" is applied to any man who is being rushed by any of the fraternities on the campus. Many times violation of the rules comes as the result of a misunderstanding of the term "freshmen."

transcended the neurotic, half mad fatalist with whom so many actors have familiarized us. In his place we saw a normal man who was faced with an unusually tragic situation and found himself unable to cope with its emergencies. If madness came, it was the result of Hamlet's attempt to solve his problem, rather than his wish to avoid it. Having built up this personality, Professor Koch succeeded in keeping it alive and vibrant throughout the unfolding of the drama.

When one realizes that this effect was produced without stage settings and the usual theatrical trappings, one is moved to express a sincere admiration for the genius of Professor Koch.

The second reading of the series will be given some time in November. Paul Green will read one of his own plays; probably Tread The Green Grass.

*Why do Most Students buy Sheaffer's?

BALANCE
The only Balance° pen and pencil is Sheaffer's.

It is a fact proven by sales figures that among America's hundred leading colleges, each with 1700 or more students registered, Sheaffer's outsell all others. Is such leadership ever an accident? You know the answer. These sophisticated pen users have found that they like Sheaffer's individualized pen points, that they like the comfortable Balance° designed into Sheaffer's, that they like the streamlined, modern contour of the Balance° pen and pencil, and that Sheaffer's Lifetime° guarantee of satisfactory service means something.

That explains Sheaffer's college sales leadership, and prompts the suggestion that if you'll give Sheaffer's Balance° Lifetime° a class-room test, you'll adopt that pen for your Lifetime°.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

INTRAMURAL TENNIS

Intramural tennis competition was rained out yesterday, as a rather unsteady drizzle kept up throughout the entire day.

INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL

Out of the five scheduled games yesterday afternoon in tag football, two teams made an appearance on the field. Kappa Alpha was awarded a 2-0 forfeit game over the Pi Kappa Alphas. New Dorms made an appearance and their opponents, Manly, did not appear to contest the victory, giving New Dorms the decision by 2-0.

COACHES STRESS DEFENSE TACTICS

Tar Heels Come Through Maryland Game With Only Minor Injuries.

Coaches Collins and Cerney sent the Tar Heel football team through defensive drills to correct the faults brought out in the Maryland game and begin preparation for Saturday's contest with the Georgia Bulldogs.

Six backfields and the ends spent the afternoon in drilling on pass defense. Coach Cerney, not satisfied with the showing of the backs in this department of the game against Maryland, was careful to see that the ball carriers covered their men more closely.

Tackles and guards were busy with continued drills at blocking on offense and breaking up interference on defense. Ends who were not in the pass defense drills worked on the buckboards for a part of the afternoon.

Fewer injuries were received by the team from Maryland than from either V. P. I. or Wake Forest, and the team is in good shape physically except for a few minor injuries to Henry House and Larry Johnson. June Underwood, not getting into the game Saturday, gave his injured knee a chance to heal. George Thompson's bad knee is practically well now.

Herb Nelson, in Watts Hospital at Durham, is greatly improved, but will not be out for several weeks. Irwin Walker is taking light workouts with the team, but will be on the bench for some time longer because of his broken wrist.

Coach Collins intimated yesterday that there would be hard work for the team today and

THE OLD LINERS DO NOT SEEM TO LIKE SMALL QUARTERBACKS, for on two successive Saturdays they lost games because of spectacular runs by Johnny Branch and Albie Booth. Booth carried the ball twelve times against Maryland and gained 114 yards, or nine and one-half yards each try. To match this performance our own Johnny made two runs for touchdowns against the Liners, one for 94 and the other for 36 yards.

It is very early in the season for any one to make predictions about candidates for all-Southern and all-American teams, but with our own 156-pound field general and broken-field star making runs of 65, 84 and 94 yards in the first three games of the season, we do not think it amiss to call attention to such consistent performances. Tar Heel quarterbacks seem to have developed a fancy for turning opponents' punts into spectacular touchdown runs. Pete Wyrick fell only a few yards short of the last stripe in his 74-yard return of Chalmers' punt Saturday.

STIFF OPPOSITION FOR the Tar Heel line is helping them to remove weaknesses and rough spots more rapidly now. We believe that the green forwards will perform like veterans in the coming stiff engagements, if they continue to improve as they have during the past three games. Maryland didn't seem to enjoy hitting the Tar Heel line during the first half of the game; it was only during the second half when Fullback Evans started his fake reverse play that they got going through the "Big Blue" line, and the Tar Heels were on to that before the game ended. If youngsters such as Bud McIver, Harry Hodges, Roy McDade and Larry Johnson continue to improve, it won't be long before Carolina's line will compare favorably with the traditional strong and powerful Tar Heel forward wall.

GEORGIA'S VICTORY OVER Yale makes it look as though the Tar Heels will have awfully rough sledding down at Athens this week-end, but we are planning to go down there to see the Tar Heels upset the Bulldogs' hopes for the conference title. Coach Collins' team is just the one to do this. Remember that Georgia Tech was supposed to beat the Tar Heels down at Atlanta about this time last year?

IT SEEMS NOW THAT TWO big games are scheduled for Kenan stadium for the rest of the year instead of one. The Georgia Tech game is expected to draw the largest crowd of the year, but now that Duke has upset Davidson's hopes for the state title, we believe that the Tar Heels and Blue Devils will have to settle the "Big Five" controversy here December 6. Jimmy DeHart's team has developed considerably this year, and probably will get even stronger with more seasoning.

GEORGIA BATTLE SATURDAY WILL RENEW RIVALRY

Game May Have Important Bearing on Conference Race.

With the Maryland game a matter of history, the University of North Carolina football squad was thinking tonight in terms of the invasion of Georgia next Saturday when the Tar Heels and Bulldogs will lock horns in the 11th chapter of a 35-year-old gridiron rivalry.

Tar Heel supporters, looking at such stars as Captain Nash, Branch, Magner, House, and the rest, claim the strongest backfield in the South for the homestaters. Georgia's veteran eleven is conceded to be one of the strongest Southern machines in all departments.

The clash will be the first elimination affair in the heated Southern Conference race, and this fact, plus the intensity of the ancient rivalry, promises to draw a record crowd. North Carolina will contribute its share, it's certain, for excitement is running high hereabouts, so high that special cars have already been arranged from all the big towns to carry the Tar Heel invaders to Athens.

Tar Heel and Bulldog held their first two gridiron clashes in 1895, with the North Carolinians winning twice, 6-0, and 10-6. Doggie Trenchard of Princeton was coach, and Edwin Clarke Gregory of Salisbury was captain.

Since that opening game, the old rivals have met 10 times at intervals over a 35-year period. The series shows 7 victories for Carolina, 3 for Georgia, with

STATE COLLEGE TO HAVE BOXING TEAM THIS YEAR

Dr. Ray R. Sermon, athletic director at State College, announced Thursday that the Wolfpack would put a boxing team in the field this winter for the first time. The team will be led by Sam Dimeo, middleweight from Philadelphia and coached by Lieutenant Elmes.

Last winter a regimental team from State put on an exhibition bout with the Carolina frosh and drew a good crowd in spite of the novelty of the sport in Raleight. The bout made such a favorable impression on the student body that the authorities decided to make boxing a minor sport.

State is the third North Carolina school to take up boxing, and the fifteenth in the Southern Conference. Virginia was the first to take this step and was followed by Carolina soon after.

Scientific Society Will Meet Tonight

The Elisha Mitchell scientific society will begin its work of the year with its 322 nd meeting tonight at 7:30 in room 206 of Phillips Hall.

Dr. H. V. Wilson of the zoology department, who made laboratory studies in Italy last summer, will talk to the group on the "Larvel Metamorphosis in Manoxonid Sponges."

Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department will be the second speaker. Dr. Cobb, who has done a great deal of research, will talk on the "Light on the Loess Problem from the Mississippi Valley."

The officers of the society ask that all members attend this meeting so that the society may get off to a good start this year.

WISCONSIN SQUAD TO ADOPT WHITE

Madison, Wis.—(IP) — The time-honored cardinal jerseys of the University of Wisconsin football squad have been discarded for the first part of the season this year in favor of pure-white outfits, believed to be cooler to wear during the warm days of the early football season.

VANDERBILT CONTINUES to show up best in the conference with the smashing 40-0 victory over V. P. I. at Nashville. With this win and Minnesota's holding Pop Warner's Stanford eleven to a 0-0 tie out at Minneapolis Saturday, Dan McGuigin caused many conference coaches to watch his team very closely. It will be remembered that Vandy beat Minnesota 37-7 October 4.

Wednesday. The Georgia game will be a game of speed, since both the Bulldogs and the Tar Heels play under the Notre Dame system, and for this reason the Tar Heel coaches intend to give the team stiff drills in preparation for an eleven which is lighter but much faster than either of the past opponents.

FRESHMEN LEARN GEORGIA TACTICS

The freshmen spent the afternoon yesterday learning Georgia plays which they intend to use against the Tar Heels in preparation for the important game with the Bulldogs on Saturday. The freshman squad was divided up into different teams and each team practiced the plays given them by Coaches Enright, Farris and Sapp. The first-year men will probably go down to Kenan stadium today and try to offer the varsity a sample of what is expected in Athens Saturday.

resulted in his being ranked All-American miler. He won the Southern Conference cross-country meet in both 1926 and 1927. The Southern Conference mile was again won by Elliot in 1927 and 1928.

Minor Barkley, 1926 winner was one of the stars of the track and cros-country teams for several years. He was captain of last year's Southern Conference championship cross-country team. In the Penn State track meet held here last year he nosed out Paul Rekers, I. C. A. A. A. champion in the mile. In the dual meet with Princeton last year he ran a 4:21.4 to take second place and a half hour later ran a 1.56.5 half, which is the University record.

June Fisher, who won the race in 1927 was a member of the quartet of Elliot, Barkley, Pritchard, and Fisher which won the National four mile relay championship in 1928. He took third in the Southern Conference cross-country meet in 1927.

There was no Cake Race held in 1928.

Tom Watkins, last year's winner, developed into one of the best freshman quarter milers, and appears to be one of the best prospects for this year's cross-country team.

The entries for the Cake Race close at 4:00 this afternoon. All those interested in competing in this event should see Coach Ranson as soon as possible. Men may report for practice daily at Emerson Field between 3:00 and 5:30 in the afternoon.

Correction

The Tar Heel regrets that through unintentional mistakes Tau Epsilon Phi was credited with two losses in intramural tag football games last week. Tuesday Tau Epsilon Phi defeated Sigma Zeta by the score of 25-0, and Friday Theta Chi bowed to the same outfit by a margin of six first downs.

Old Trees Die

Two Have to Come Down, and One Has It's Limbs Lopped Off

In the last week or so two of Chapel Hill's old trees have had to come down, and a third has had its limbs lopped off and the trunk stands a bleak monument to the ravages of time.

The two trees felled were a white oak in the grove east of the Arboretum and a maple in the front yard of the Roberson place on Columbia street. Joe Cave and other Negroes, commissioned for the job by the University, carried out the death sentence on the oak, while the municipal street force cut down the maple and lopped the limbs from the tree in the yard of the Carolina Inn.

This last was one of four giant oaks that flourished when the Inn property was the Graves place and long before. The other three came down a few years ago, but John Sprunt Hill, owner of the Inn, kept the fourth, the one nearest the campus, as long as he could. At last the time came when the limbs had to be cut away. The trunk, however, is still good for many more years, and Mr. Hill intends to cover it with ivy.

Carolina leading in points by 223 to 74.

Georgia has never beaten Carolina by more than 13 points, this having been in 1923, but the Tar Heels have had several big margins. Captain Frank Rogers' team won by 44-0 in 1898, Captain Francis Osborne's team won 55-0 in 1900, Captain Albert Carr's team won 28-0 in 1901, and in 1914 the Tar Heels' famous 359-point eleven, captained by Dave Tayloe, only Tar Heel to lead two seasons, won 41-6.

The series was revived after a long lapse last year, with the Bulldogs, inspired by a thrilling victory over Yale, evening old scores by eliminating the high-powered Tar Heels from the Southern Conference race, 19-12 in North Carolina's only loss of the year.

Half of you men in college have "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

....says U. S. report

YOU may call it toe itch, golf itch—the "doc" may call it ringworm—millions of people who catch it, call it "Athlete's Foot"—but all of them are the same. A ringworm parasite, tinea trichophyton by name, causes that redness between the toes with i-t-c-h-i-n-g. Tiny blisters or a thick, moist skin condition may be another symptom. Again dryness, with little scales, is a signal.

"At least half of all adults suffer from it at some time," says the U. S. Public Health Service. In universities as far apart as Pennsylvania and California 50% of the men have it. And the co-eds are not immune either.

It lurks in the very places where we all go for cleanliness and health—on the edges of swimming pools and showers—in gymnasiums—on locker- and dressing-room floors. It spite of modern sanitation (you have to boil socks 15 minutes to kill it) this fungus parasite infects and reinfects bare feet almost any time they come in contact with damp floors.

Absorbine Jr. kills the germ of

"ATHLETE'S FOOT"

Tests in a famous New York "lab" have revealed that Absorbine Jr. penetrates flesh-like tissues deeply and that wherever it penetrates, it KILLS the ringworm germ.

It might not be a bad idea to examine your feet tonight. At the first sign of the symptoms mentioned here, douse on Absorbine Jr. And keep a bottle handy in your locker as a preventive. Use it after every exposure of bare feet on damp floors. At all druggists—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Massachusetts.

ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE WOMEN MEETS TUESDAY

Katharine Jocher Makes Report Of Institute Held in Montevallo.

At the first regular meeting of the American Association of University Women Tuesday evening in the Episcopal parish house, Miss Katharine Jocher, president of the organization, gave a report of the Institute on Higher Education of Women held in Montevallo, Alabama, June 19 to 21. Miss Jocher was the representative of the University at this meeting.

Their first Institute on Higher Education of Women was called by President Carmichael of the Woman's State College at Montevallo. The work of the Institute, as Miss Jocher described it, placed emphasis on the newer trends for the education of women, including euthenics as given at Vassar, reading for honors as at Swarthmore, and experiments in coordination of women's interests as tried out at Smith. Dr. Ruth Wheeler, head of the department of euthenics at Vassar, represented that college; Mrs. Ethel Puffer Howes, Smith; Professer R. C. Brooks, Swarthmore. Mrs. Dorothy Thorne Fullerton represented the Institute of Women's Federal Relations at North Carolina College for Women.

After this report by Miss Jocher, Mrs. E. R. Mosher, who is state president of the American Association of University Women, summarized the survey of women's education in the United States.

Freshman Council Hears John Lang

John Lang, president of the North Carolina Student Federation, talked on the principles of studying before the freshman friendship council Monday night. Lang said, "The main thing to remember about studying is that you have to concentrate on one thing at a time." He also told the group to avoid the little things which came to interfere with one while trying to study. After Lang's talk a short discussion was held, in which the members asked him questions concerning their problems in studying.

A short business meeting followed the discussion, and plans were made to have a "speak-greet-week" at the University. A committee was appointed to look after the publicity on this plan.

HENDERSON GETS EINSTEIN PHOTOS

Well Known Physicists Exchange Tokens of Friendship.

Dr. Archibald Henderson has recently received from Dr. Albert Einstein, the great physicist and author of the Theory of Relativity, two interesting photos.

One of the photos was of Professor Einstein's villa, "Caputh," at Potsdam, showing Dr. and Mrs. Einstein on the porch. It bears the inscription: "Freundlichen Gruss-A. Einstein," which is translated, "Friendly Greeting."

The other is a large photographic portrait of Dr. Einstein speaking over the radio into a queer square German "mike." It bears the inscription: "M. Archibald Henderson zum Andenken—Albert Einstein, 1930." The translation is: "A memento for Mr. Archibald Henderson from Albert Einstein, 1930."

In 1925 Dr. Henderson attended lectures conducted by Dr. Einstein at the Physikalischo Instituit of the University of Berlin, and visited Dr. Einstein several times at his home. Dr. Henderson has lectured and written a great deal on the Theory of Relativity, and is now writing a treatise on that subject for D. Appleton and Company of New York.

As a token of appreciation of Dr. Einstein's gift, Dr. Henderson is sending a beautifully bound copy of his latest book, "Contemporary Immortals," published by Appleton. This book is dedicated to Professor Einstein, and the leading chapter is devoted to Einstein and his contribution to science.

MISS STARLING WEDS MR. MADRY

The wedding of Miss Thelma Worth Starling of Chapel Hill to Wilbur Dennis Madry of Burlington was solemnized yesterday at Roseboro, former home of the bride.

Mrs. Madry is the daughter of Mrs. J. M. Starling of Roseboro. For the past several years she has been secretary to Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., Registrar of the University.

Mr. Madry is originally from Scotland Neck and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Madry of that place. He is a graduate of the University.

Dean Carroll will meet the freshmen of the school of commerce in 103 Bingham at chapel period today.

Farrar House Includes a Theatre

Two of the rooms in the P. C. Farrars' new home, out on the hill overlooking the golf course, have been built and lighted so that they can be transformed into a little theatre at a moment's notice.

The Farrars are all interested in dramatics. Mr. Farrar is in charge of play production at the Chapel Hill school: and he is talented as an actor, as the spectators at "Agamemnon" in the Kenan stadium last year well remember. Miss Elizabeth Farrar, like her mother before her, distinguished herself in the dramatic organization at Wellesley College. She took the leading role in "Agamemnon" here, and last winter was with the Fritz Leiber repertoire company. This season she will be one of the Neighborhood Players in New York.

The Farrars' land out near the Country Club slopes steeply, and they accommodated their house to the ground by building it on different levels. Thus the topography was well adapted to the plan for a family theatre. Whether Mr. Farrar picked out sloping ground so that he could have a theatre, or designed the theatre because he had the sloping ground—this I do not know, and it is not important.

The long living room is on one level, and the dining room at the end is about one foot higher. So the living room is the auditorium and the dining room is the stage. The opening between them is like a proscenium arch and has a double curtain. And just above the arch, facing the dining room but invisible from the living room, are a row of lights. These will shine down upon the actors when a performance is on; thus, instead of having footlights—which would interfere with them when they went to and from their meals in the ordinary daily routine—the Farrars have overhead lighting.

There is abundant provision for entrances and exits. Off at one end is a porch; at the back is a terrace; and at the other end is the butler's pantry—all connected with the stage by doors.

During the progress of a meal the lights over the arch are not turned on. But suppose somebody should suddenly switch them on while Mr. Farrar was carving the chicken. Maybe, before he realized it, he would find himself rising from his chair to launch into Hamlet's soliloquy or some other appropriate speech. And if the thing happened when Miss Farrar was at home on a holiday, who knows but that she would desert the tomato salad to deliver a little talk about the quality of mercy or the inconstant moon?

LAW ASSOCIATION SECURES JURISTS FOR ADDRESSES

Follows Policy of Bringing Courtroom and Classroom Into Cooperation.

A distinguished list of lawyers and judges, to address the University law students this year, in furtherance of the law school association's policy of bringing classroom and courtroom nearer together, was announced here yesterday by Professor Albert Coates, director of the law school association.

The list of speakers for the year includes Judge John J. Parker of the United States court of appeals; Charles G. Rose, Fayetteville; C. W. Wharton, Greensboro; L. P. McLendon, Durham; J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Elizabeth City; Clifford Frazier, Greensboro; Clyde R. Hoey, Shelby; Hunt Parker, Henderson; W. T. Joyner, Raleigh; George H. Wright, Asheville; Charles T. These lawyers will speak before the law school association in continuation of a program initiated in 1923, when the late Chief Justice Clark and the associate justices of the supreme court delivered the first series of lectures.

The plan of the association is to have several series of lectures each year, in order to bring the law school students into contact with the leading lawyers actively engaged in the various phases of the practice, and to afford the students opportunities to gain important practical knowledge.

McLendon and Wharton will speak on the crawing of pleadings and preparation of cases for trial. Ehringhaus, Frazier, Hoey and Hunt Parker will lecture on specific phases of the examination and cross examination of witnesses, and the trial of cases in the state and federal

RUSHING SEASON ENDS AT MIDNIGHT

President Ward Warns Against Infraction of Silence Rules.

Today marks the close of another fraternity rushing season at the University. Jack Ward, president of the interfraternity council, stated yesterday that a strict silence period will start tonight at 12 o'clock and continue until 6 o'clock Friday afternoon. Ward stated that any infraction of the silence rules will lead to very drastic measures for both the fraternity and the person with whom the fraternity man is found breaking rules. Freshmen are requested to speak to no fraternity man during this period.

Ward announced that the committee helping him with the bids will be Tom Hunter, John Cooper, Dail Holderness and Will Yarborough of the Pan-Hellenic Council and Robert B. House and J. C. Lyons of the faculty.

It was also announced that very strict silence will be expected from the freshmen when they receive their bids in Gerrard hall Saturday. All men are asked to bring a book or some form of silent entertainment to indulge in while they are waiting their turn to receive bids. All freshmen who have no classes Friday afternoon are requested to be at Gerrard hall at 2 o'clock.

BROWN SETS NEW PHOTO DEADLINE

Travis Brown, business manager of the Yackety Yack, announces that all juniors and seniors must have their pictures taken for the annual by November 10. The appointment booths are open daily, and all those who have not arranged the time for their pictures should do so at once.

It is essential that pictures be made at once in order to get the copy to the engravers on time. There will be a desk open in the lobby of the Y each day at chapel period, while booths at Sutton's and Pritchard-Lloyd will be open from 1 to 2, and 6:30 to 7:30.

Monogram President

Ned Lipscomb was elected president of the Monogram Club for the current year, at a meeting held in Gerrard hall, Friday night. Lipscomb has played regular varsity center on the football team for the past two seasons.

Other officers elected were Henry House, vice president; Pete Wyrick, secretary-treasurer; and Jim Magner, representative to athletic council.

Speaks to Sophomore Y. M. C. A. On Current German Situation

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin of the department of Germanic languages spoke to the sophomore "Y" cabinet at the meeting Monday night on "The Present Politcal and Financial Situation in Germany."

"The surprise shown in America over the result of the recent German election showed," said Dr. Metzenthin, "that Americans do not know the situation over in Germany. There are twenty-five parties of which fifteen amount to something." He stated that the siuation in the Reichstag now is this. The socialists have lost only ten seats. They have a total of 143 seats controlling 8,500,00 votes. The National Socialists, who are the Facists, have 107 seats controlling six and a half million votes, the communists control 4 and a half mllion votes with sixty-eight seats, the centrum, which is really the Catholic party, have 68 seats with four and one-eighth million votes, and the Christian Socialists have sixteen seats with one-sixth of a million votes. Thus there are a total of 576 representatives, 408 of which oppose the present government. The Socialists and the center party are the ones that are now keeping the present administration in power.

"The National Socialist, the facist party, represent," according to Mr. Metzenthin, "the

"Sex may be strong, but conceit is stronger."—Abbe Ernest Dimnet.

Ideas do change. Just a matter of a year or two ago the Indian author and poet, Sir Rabindranath Tagore, turned up his aesthetic nose at the unappreciative and dollar chaser minds of us Americans. He couldn't be persuaded to visit this country at that time. However, aesthetic ideas must have proved poor food, since we find him now sojourning in this land of unaesthetic mentalities who, however don't mind paying for the aesthetic tastes of Indian poets.

No Place For Pessimism

Georgia's victory over Yale coupled with Carolina's one touchdown margin over Maryland seems to have given some of the students here a bad dose of pessimism. They forecast and predict dire results of the Carolina-Georgia game in Athens Saturday.

We fail to see just why they see a Georgia victory. Then too the effect of such pessimism if spread to members of the team will likely have a bad effect. No team is licked until the final whistle blows and often the teams doped to lose hand out terrific lacings to a paper-powerful team. We don't know what Yale has. We don't know what Georgia has. A comparison might be made on paper with the Maryland team as the object. But games aren't won on comparative scores, and they never will be.

Football is like any other game. The team playing the best football during a particular sixty minutes wins and no matter how great the difference between two teams on paper we still prefer to figure results from playing.

There is no cause for undue pessimism nor for being beaten before the game. We can at least show a degree of confidence in the Tar Heels, and know that if the Georgians win Saturday they will know they have licked a real football team. We aren't so sure that Georgia is going to win. And if Carolina wins don't think it an upset, it will be that Carolina played the football it has been threatening all the season.

Women And Tobacco

The many millions of cigarettes smoked by women during the last year seem to indicate that the practice has passed beyond the stage of a temporary fad nd has become an established habit—a habit which cannot be abolished either by the prejudices of older women or the sentiments of men.

So well established is female smoking that many sorority houses have provided special smoking rooms in order to avoid national sorority rules which prohibit smoking in regular rooms. People around here and on other college campuses have become accustomed to coeds smoking.

We are inclined to believe that any effective prohibition of the use of tobacco by women will come from within their own ranks, rather than from without. Men undoubtedly do resent seeing women smoke; their attempts to dissuade them have, however been ineffective because of improper tactics. The nature of woman is such that she must not be told, "You can't do this." Women rose up not many years ago in a rebellion that resulted in woman suffrage simply because men forbade their voting. Likewise, most women that smoke do so because men have demanded that they abstain from the use of tobacco.

There are perhaps many who disagree with the writer on this point and contend that men don't care whether women smoke or not. All things considered, careful analysis of the matter seems to show that men who say to their girl friends, "Have a ciagrette," secretly wish they wouldn't accept. And why, you may well ask? We are inclined to think that the answer is to be found in the very nature of the male creature. Man, in recognition of his own moral corruptness, hopes to see in woman an improvement over himself. Man is by nature a rotter, but he hates to see his own improper practices cropping out in women. Men find it difficult to admire and love something no better than themselves.

The writer's contention that women if left alone will set up their own governing principles of social conduct is borne out by recent action on the part of girls of New York University in petitioning to have smoking abolished on the grounds that it is a nuisance.

Given freedom, the average group of girls will recognize and observe the criteria of proper social conduct, but to attempt to coerce them toward any moral code is to invite temptation.—J. C. W.

By Moore Bryson

The Zeta Beta Taus tell this story. During the first few days of rushing an uninvited boy wandered into their house and immediately made himself at home. After a while, he asked one of the members how much the Z. B. T. initiation fee was. Knowing that it was none of the visitor's business, but, nevertheless, seeking to be polite, the boy told him that it was a hundred and fifty dollars. "If you will make it a hundred and thirty for cash, I'll join," replied the unwelcome guest.

Saturday two visitors to the campus (they must have been visitors for they were slightly under the influence, and of course——) passed the twin brothers who are attending Carolina. "Old boy, I've had too much," said the first visitor, "for I'm seeing double." "Come on, pull yourself together. You know there aren't eight boys there," replied the friend.

The "Open Forum" letter in Tuesday's Tar Heel about a boy going around scaring little freshmen reminds me of a certain "bull" session of some few years ago. A group of us were in a boy's room telling ghost stories. "Red" Wood, now associated with the Carolina Theatre, was among those present. During one of the stories, one of the boys tore some fangs out of paper, pulled his hair down over his face, and turned on "Red." "Red" took one look, screamed, and ran to his room where he stayed locked up the rest of the night.

Paul Story suggests that in consideration of the length of time the Law students must spend at Carolina the co-eds, at least the prettier ones, should be required to walk past the Law building between classes. Incidentally, by general agreement the top five steps of the Law building are being kept spotless in order that the barristers may sit there in complete comfort.

And now, little children, it is time for your bed-time story.

Once upon a time three Graduate students went for a walk in the woods. One of the Graduate students looked up in a big, big tree and saw a beautiful vine.

"Oh," said the first Graduate student.

"Oh, oh," said the second Graduate student.

"Oh, oh, oh," said the third Graduate student. "Let us take the beautiful vine home.

And they did.

Three Graduate students sat around a bottle of Poison Ivy lotion.

"Oh!" said the first Graduate student.

"Oh! Oh!" said the second Graduate student.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" said the third Graduate student.

modern educated young Germany, the future Germany. Ten to twenty years from now they will be the ones in power and on top."

Dr. Metzenthin then pointed out the immense activity of German voting. He made fun of the American boast of democracy when only 30 per cent at the most of our citizens ever voted. "This country where so many are illiterate, and where voting is restricted, is called a democracy. In Germany everyone has the right to vote, and there is little or no illiteracy, and 53 per cent of the people actually do exercise their right of voting."

The demands of the present government were (1) the union of Germany with Austria, and (2) the annulment of all war treaties. Dr. Metzenthin said that he is not in favor of the first demand, but is heartily in favor of the second, with especial reference to the matter of war debts. In his mind, this problem is a very serious one. Over two thousand million marks are to be paid by Germany to the Allies at the end of this year, with the amount rising as the years go by. In 1965 the money Germany is to pay amounts to 2,400,000,000 marks, and in 1988 9,000,000,000 marks. The questions raised by Dr. Metzenthin were, "Do you believe that they will pay? Has any nation ever done it? A crucial period is coming in a short time," he said. The fact that Germany is surrounded by high tariff walls, and that much of her natural resources were taken from her during the war, helped to make it impossible for her to pay so great a debt.

The helplessness forced upon Germany by the war treaties was also stressed by Dr. Metzenthin. Other countries surrounding her are allowed to have war planes, fortresses, large standing armies and submarines, while she is prohibited. A surprising fact in this connection is that the standing armies of the Allies and Germany at present are in excess of the combined armies of the same countries at the time when the war began.

From facts brought forth it seemed that war is not definitely over yet, but instead that countries were only preparing for a worse one. Dr. Metzenthin thought that Mussolini in Italy is right now the hope of smaller countries in Europe. France and England are both treading softly around him. "The League of Nations," the professor said, "is the greatest means of hypocrisy invented."

BONN LECTURES HERE ON FINANCE

Dr. Bonn, eminent lecturer on reparations and modern finance, who is to speak here Thursday night, is characterized by Dr. Zimmerman, a former pupil of Dr. Bonn, as being a very interesting and authoratative speaker on the subject he discusses. Dr. Clarence Heer, of the Institute for Research in Social Science, relates an interesting story of a lecture given at Columbia University by Dr. Bonn during the early days of the Great War. In giving that lecture, Dr. Bonn faced a naturally hostile audience, but through human discussion of his topics, he won the respect and friendliness of his audience before the end of the lecture. According to Dr. Schwenning, who met Dr. Bonn in Berlin in 1924, the famous lecturer has a perfect command of the English language and a breadth of view on international affairs that is astounding.

Dr. Bonn's lecture is coming at a very opportune time, in as much as the German Reichstag will be in session during the period.

The set, one of the numerous authentic "shots" to be on view in the talking picture adaptation of a famous story and play which the Carolina theatre will present today, depicts the interior of the "Northern," notorious saloon and dance hall of Nome, during the gold rush days.

It is one of the largest sets ever devised for an all-talking picture.

Tar Heel Eleven Sent Indoors For Practice By Yesterday's Rains

Whole Squad Spends Afternoon Drilling on Defense for Georgia Plays.

SCRIMMAGE SESSION TODAY

Working Hard To Upset Dope and Keep Record for Season Clean.

A steady downpour of rain throughout the afternoon yesterday kept the Tar Heel football team from getting out of doors for a scrimmage session planned by the coaches, but it did not halt them in further carrying out the stiff and thorough preparations now underway for the Georgia game at Athens Saturday.

The Tin Can was the scene of long and thorough drills in defensive tactics for Georgia plays, with three varsity and three freshman outfits running signals. Frosh elevens walked through Georgia formations while Coaches Collins and Fetzer showed to the varsity the style of defense for them to use Saturday.

Hard work and scrimmage planned for yesterday probably will be in order this afternoon, weather permitting, since the Tar Heels leave Thursday night for Athens and have not had a scrimmage session this week. Should the coaches not be satisfied with the showing of the team this afternoon, it is highly probable that another stiff workout will be held Thursday, thereby leaving Friday for final polishing up of the defense and drilling signals down in the Georgia city.

The whole Tar Heel squad is going about its work for the game with a spirit of giving the dope bucket a big upset. They admit that they will be up against a team which has made a splendid showing so far this year, and that they will have to play much better football than they have played so far this year, but judging from the way that they are going about their workouts daily they should present a much smoother and better coordinated attack this Saturday.

In the dummy scrimmage on defense for Georgia plays yesterday afternoon the first team showed Lipscomb, center; Fysal and McIver, guards; Thompson and McDade, tackles; Johnson and Brown, ends. The second line included Gilbreath, center; Blackwood and Dunavant, guards; Underwood and Hodges, tackles; Parsley and Cole, ends.

* * * *

By Hugh Wilson

Some of last week-end's football results in other sections of the country should make Carolina and Duke feel anything but happy over future games this season. Up at New Haven, the Georgia Bulldogs got a last-minute grip on Eli Yale which brought them home victors. It is true that Yale outrushed Georgia considerably, ringing up 15 first downs to Georgia's 9, and luck played no small part in the final decision. However, Yale is supposed to have one of the best lines in the country, and Georgia's fight was enough to hold off the Blue onrush when the northerners were in scoring distance. The most dangerously significant part about the game is that Georgia's long drive for the winning touchdown was made almost entirely on fake reverse half spins, such as those with which Evans and Popplеman of Maryland almost drove Carolina crazy last Saturday. Carolina can and will beat Georgia if the team "gets hot" and gets those ends out there on offense, and if the line will keep its eyes open on that spin play. No doubt Coach Collins will have that drilled into his men's heads before they leave for Athens!

Duke is not very pleased over this coming Saturday's prospects either, we hear. Navy was beaten to the tune of 26-2 by Notre Dame, but Rockne's great aggregation will whip far better teams than Duke by greater margins than they did Navy. The boys from Annapolis showed powerful line play and a driving backfield throughout, but were unable to cope with the brilliant work of Savoldi and Brill, Notre Dame's star backs. Reports from Duke have it that DeHart has Brewer and Murray practicing hard on a passing attack with which the Devils will attempt to counteract the Navy's drive.

And speaking of star performances, Pease and Norris, husky Maryland ends, certainly put up a pretty exhibition of wing play in the game here Saturday. They played around in Carolina's backfield so much of the time that one began to wonder if they hadn't become mixed as to which side of the line they belonged on.

News from Tennessee has it that the trainers are making a last desperate effort to get Gene McEver, star back, and Hug and Brandt, veteran ends, into shape for Saturday's game with Alabama. It is thought that McEver and Hug may play in case of necessity, but Brandt has responded less quickly to treatment.

Tickets For Game

It was learned yesterday that through the courtesy of the University of Georgia Athletic Association, which expects to welcome a large host of Tar Heel followers Saturday, Carolina students may purchase tickets for the Carolina-Georgia game at 50 cents each. Each student will be required to bring his athletic pass book with him for identification at the game.

Six Of Most Celebrated College Football Coaches Will Forecast Games In Bond Street Friday Series

Yost, Stagg, Horween, Stevens, Roper Already Selected To Broadcast Through WLW, WMAQ, WOR Beginning October 17th

Famous coaches who will broadcast Bond Street Football Forecasts every Friday at 6:30 P. M. through WLW, WMAQ, and WOR include Bill Roper, Yale (top center); Arnold Horween, Harvard (left); Alonzo Stagg, University of Chicago (right); Fielding Yost, Michigan (lower center). Mal Stevens, Yale, and an unannounced coach will complete the series of six broadcasts that begin October 17.

Cincinnati, O.—Six of the biggest coaches in collegiate sports will give the radio audience their own ideas of the major football games from October 18 to November 22 in a series of Football Forecasts the Bond Street Spat company will sponsor through stations WLW, WOR, and WMAQ beginning on Friday, October 17, at 6:30 P. M. (E. S. T.) and continuing every Friday at that time for the next six weeks.

Coach Fielding H. Yost, University of Michigan; Dr. Marvin H. (Mal) Stevens, Yale; Bill Roper (Princeton); Bob Zuppke (University of Illinois); Alonzo Stagg (University of Chicago); Arnold Horween (Harvard); and a coach whose name will be announced later will appear in the order mentioned. Each one will discuss his own team and its prospects for the game next day. Each one also will give a general view of the college football scene, doping out games in all sections of the country. A part of the half hour Football Forecasts will be devoted to a brief interview with the coaches who later will speak independently for eight or ten minutes.

On each broadcast, music of the university whose coach is speaking will be played or sung by musical organizations from the colleges. Princeton's famous Triangle Club is expected to present some of its dramatic talent, Ohio's Scarlet Mask Club will produce some of its best musical comedy stars on the eve of the Ohio-Michigan game, and the University of Chicago glee club will sing later in the series.

Fielding Yost of Michigan will start the series off on Friday, October 17, on the eve of the Ohio-Michigan game at Columbus, Ohio, from which the broadcast will be picked up. The Scarlet Mask club of Ohio will furnish the entertainment that will complete the half hour.

Mal Stevens, Yale football coach, will talk from New Haven October 24, the eve of his team's tussle with the Army.

Bill Roper of Princeton will speak from Chicago on November 31. The next day in the University of Chicago stadium, his eleven will play Alonzo Stagg's men.

Coach Bob Zuppke, astute leader of the fighting Illini, will broadcast from New York on November 7 as his team is waiting to meet the Army at the Yankee stadium the next afternoon.

Alonzo Stagg, revered coach of the University of Chicago, will step before the microphone on November 14, the evening before his game with Zuppke's Illinois team at Chicago.

The final forecast for the season will be on November 21. Arrangements will be completed later for this broadcast after the football season is under way and a championship team may have shown its form in several games.

Cake Contestants Must Have Proper Training For Race

Due to the loss of practice yesterday because of the rain it will be necessary for all contestants in the cake race to report for work-outs every day for the remainder of the week.

Through arrangements with Dr. Lawson all gym classes are being given short cross-country runs as a part of the required physical education. Each run taken with gym classes is counted as one of the six work-outs necessary before one is permitted to compete in the cake race.

Letters have been sent out to the women of Chapel Hill asking for donation of cakes to be offered as prizes to be given to the first seventy-five men qualifying in the race.

Ed Butler coached the Tar Heel boxers to the Southern Conference championship in 1929, his first year out of school.

MANY SURPRISES MARK GAMES OF LAST SATURDAY

Upsets of Yale by Georgia and Purdue by Michigan Head Long List.

The setback handed Yale by Georgia's stalwarts, the unmerciful beating meted out to Georgia Tech by the Tartans of Carnegie Tech, New York University's triumph over Villanova, Navy's defeat by Notre Dame and the pricking of the Princeton bubble of hope by Brown were the most interesting developments, as far as the East was concerned, of football's third Saturday.

With the big elevens pushing on into the troublesome part of their schedules, meeting worthy opponents instead of teams far below them in man-power, much sanguinary battling was expected Saturday, with some surprising results. To say that the expectations were realized is putting it mildly.

The event that caused the most palpatations of the pulse for the sports fans of the genius football occurred on the cleat-worn turf of Yale's immense Bowl. Here was a game of games, one that had everything to keep the spectators a-yowling.

Georgia won, 18 to 14, but only on a touchdown scored in the last three minutes. Yale lost, but only after a most courageous display on the part of Albie Booth and his mates.

The game was packed with action, from whistle to whistle. On the opening kick-off to Georgia, Austin Downs, quarterback, took the pigskin on his own 20-yard stripe and tore back with it behind sterling interference to tally. The Bulldogs of New Haven hit back with two touchdowns to make it 14-6. Followed a score on a pass to "Catfish" Smith, Georgia end, and then the Southerners got the winning one, after a series of disheartening setbacks, with

GEORGIA FAVORED TO CONQUER TAR HEELS SATURDAY

Bulldogs Upset Dope to Beat Tar Heels Last Year But Carolina Hopes To Win This.

Going to Athens Saturday to meet the mighty Georgia Bulldogs, conquerors of Yale in Eli's own stadium, North Carolina will present one of the greatest backfields in the South, but, because of her unproven rookie line, will be rated as the underdog.

That raises an interesting question. Last year's Carolina-Georgia game showed the Tar Heels big favorites. Georgia had beaten Yale 15-0 the weekend before, but Carolina's dethroning of Georgia Tech, national champs of the year before, by 18-7, had been even more impressive. The underdogs from Georgia fought an inspired game and won 19-12.

The situation is just the reverse this year. Georgia opened with large margins over Oglethorpe and Mercer, then beat Yale, one of the East's strongest teams, in its own stadium. North Carolina has shown old offensive power in beating V. P. I. and Maryland, but both teams scored three times, and Carolina's line weakness makes the Bulldogs big favorites. Can the underdogs come out on top again?

Chuck Collins and his coaching partners have only four practice days in which to whip the Carolina team into shape to meet perhaps the strongest team in the South. Thompson and Underwood, regular tackles, are back in shape, and the men are in fine condition and spirit. Inexperience is the big handicap, but the Tar Heels will drive like Trojans with full strength.

There is little question but that Carolina can show Georgia one of the strongest backfields in the south. Quarterback Branch is more sensational than ever, and has bagged punt returns of 65 yards and up every game. House is the same bullet-like driver at fullback, Captain Nash and Magner are clever halfbacks, and there is ample reserve strength. North Carolina will use every trick in the Tar Heel bag, and if the Carolina line plays inspired ball, the underdogs may raise a hot time in Georgia.

Cross Country Team Meets V. P. I. Oct. 31

On either Friday or Saturday the time trials for the varsity cross country team will be run off. The most promising men on the squad are: Captain Cliff Baucom; Clarence Jensen, captain of the freshman cross country team last year; Mark Jones, Tom Watkins, winner of last year's cake race; Joe Pratt, who took second in last year's cake race; T. L. Cordle, Bob Hubbard, Jack Farris, Nat Lumpkin, Ernest Hunter and Frank Crane.

The first meet of the season will be held here on October 31 with V. P. I. The freshmen will run against the V. P. I. frosh. The most promising candidates for the freshman cross country team are: J. B. Farr, W. R. Grover, O. S. Kinnerly, H. G. Meade, E. E. McRae, O. W. Prochazka, H. E. Vitz, J. Wolf and A. Gabriel.

ONE YALE SCORE VIOLATED RULES

Eli's Scored Final Touchdown Against Georgia on Recovered Fumble.

Not that it makes any difference now, but in the cold gray dawn of the morning after it has been discovered that one of Yale's touchdowns against Georgia Saturday was not in accord with the football statutes, made and provided in such cases.

The miscarriage of justice came at the beginning of the second half when Yale was leading Georga by a score of 7 to 6 and then increased the count to 14 to 6.

Yale kicked off. The ball struck in the arms of Kelly, Georgia back, who ran a few steps to his own 20-yard line where he was hit hard by Captain Vincent of Yale. With the impact of the Yale tackle's body the ball bounded from the arms of Kelly straight into the hands of Barres, Yale end.

Barres caught the ball in his stride and dashed straight ahead over the goal line.

The officials evidently overlooked Rule 6, governing the kick off, for without a question the touchdown was allowed and the ball placed in position for the try for extra point. which was quickly added by Sullivan's toe.

Rule 6 says: "If the ball is recovered by a player of the receiving team before it is declared dead, he may run with it, pass it backward or kick it; if the ball is recovered by a player of the kicking team the ball is dead at the point of recovery."

Captain Maffet, of Georgia, made no protest to Referee W. T. Halloran, so far as could be observed from the stands, so perhaps he, too, had forgotten the rule against running with a fumbled ball. Or he might have been more confident than his team's supporters that the Georgians would score two touchdowns later in the afternoon, the last and deciding one in the last two minutes of play.

HUNDRED INJURED AS STAND FALLS

Columbus, O.—(IP) — More than a hundred person were injured here when a grandstand at a high school football game collapsed under the weight of 2,500 spectators. Sixty of the victims had to be taken to a hospital, and 50 others were attended by physicians at the scene.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

The intramural games scheduled for yesterday were postponed due to rain. They will be played at the first opportunity.

FRESHMEN WILL PLAY MARYLAND

Will Battle Old Line Frosh Saturday Afternoon at 1:30 In Kenan Stadium.

The football game scheduled for Saturday between the Maryland freshmen and the Carolina Tar Babies will be held at 1:30 on that day instead of 2:30 as scheduled, in order to allow the Old Line frosh time to play the game and catch an early train home.

The Tar Baby team goes into the contest under severe handicaps, but nevertheless Coach Enright was not inclined to be unduly pessimistic. Weisker, speed king halfback who won the 100-yard dash in the southern prep school championship meet last spring, will be out of the lineup, as will Anacauskas, an experienced fullback. Too, the team has had very little time to practice its own plays during the past few weeks, due to the fact that its time has been taken up with learning V. P. I., Maryland, and Georgia plays and practicing them against the varsity. The main point stressed in freshman football at North Carolina is the learning of the fundamentals of football and the use of the freshman squad for practice purposes by the varsity. The success of the team in games with other first-year teams, while desirable, is not considered paramount by the coaching staff.

just a bit more than two minutes to go.

Even the genius of Booth couldn't pull this game out for the home team and so last year's defeat was repeated.

Princeton, of the Old Big Three, also took a licking. Jack James, star in the opener with Amherst the previous week, was held completely in check, and the Bruins, ringing up 15 first downs to 4 by the so-called Tigers, won by a bigger margin than the 7-0 score indicates.

Carnegie Tech demonstrated conclusively that it is one of the outstanding teams in the East by the way in which it disposed of the Tech outfit from Georgia, 31-0. The team from the Southland never had a chance, with Dutch Eyth, halfback, running wild again to score two more touchdowns and bring his total for the campaign to 48 points.

N. Y. U. followers looked at this and the Georgia score askance and with some foreboding, for the Violets have to meet both Carnegie and the conquerors of Yale in a few weeks.

But N. Y. U. will be easy picking for no team, it showed Saturday, in whipping Villanova 20 to 6. Chick Meehan held his sophomore ace, Jim Tanguay, on the bench, but two other second-year men, Joe La Mark and Bob McNamara carried on most effectively in his stead. McNamara's spot-kicking to the Villanova corners was a feature of the clash.

Navy found Notre Dame's attack too much for it to cope with, and went down, 26-2. Rockne's players were dedicating their new stadium, and didn't let the fabled ill-fortune that is supposed to go hand in hand with such an event bother them. Jumping Joe Savoldi carried over for three touchdowns, and the rest of the backs and linemen did their part.

Other outstanding Eastern teams won, most of them with ease, as they continued the warming up process. Columbia smothered Wesleyan, 48-0; Penn rolled over Virginia, 40-6; Harvard got the better of Springfield, 27-0; Penn State massacred Marshall, 65-0; Dartmouth smothered Boston U., 74-0; and Army, Syracuse, Cornell, Colgate, West Virginia and Holy Cross all were successful.

There were plenty of surprises in the Midwest. The greatest occurred at Minneapolis, where the Minnesota Gophers, walloped the previous Saturday by Vanderbilt, fought mighty Stanford to a scoreless tie. Six times Pop Warner's huskies threatened, but each time they were thrown back.

In Conference games, Purdue, champions in 1929, were thrown back by Michigan, 14-13, and Ohio State was conquered by Northwestern, 19-2. Iowa was topped in an intersectional tiff by Centenary, 19-12.

In the Big Six, Nebraska and Missouri both bowed to supposedly weaker teams. The Cornhuskers were trounced by Oklahoma, 20 to 7, and Missouri was blanked by St. Louis, 10-0.

Out on the Pacific Coast, Washington State went marching on to score a one-point victory over Southern California, the score being 7-6. The Cougars on the previous Saturday had won from California.

GERMAN POLITICS TO BE DISCUSSED BY BONN TONIGHT

Well Known Economist To Speak In Gerrard Hall at 8 O'clock.

Dr. M. J. Bonn, professor of economics and director of the Institute of Finance at Handelschochschule in Berlin, will lecture at 8 o'clock tonight in Gerrard Hall on the present state of affairs in German politics. The subject of the address will be "Economics and Politics in Modern Germany."

Since 1914, Dr. Bonn has been in the United States, lecturing at many of the larger universities and cities of this country. Recently he lectured in the Universities of Wisconsin, Leland Stanford, Cornell and California. At present he is the leader of the Round Table at Williamston Institute of Politics.

In 1919 he served as economic expert at Versailles, and in 1920-21 he was in Genoa and Brussells in the same capacity. A member of the International Gold Commission of the League of Nations, he is also a member of the advisory board of the Commissions of American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Dr. E. W. Zimmerman, who is a former pupil of Dr. Bonn, charcterized him as being "a very interesting and authoritative speaker on any subject he discusses." A story is told of Dr. Bonn that in the early days of the late war, he was addressing a naturally hostile audience, but through human discussion of his topics, the speaker won the respect and friendliness of his audience before his speech was completed.

Dr. Bonn is also said to have a perfect command of the English language and a broad view

PHI BETA KAPPA WON BY ELEVEN MORE STUDENTS

Additions Made to Carolina Chapter Since Last Year.

Each year in the middle of the spring quarter those members of the then present junior class who have Phi Beta Kappa grades are pledged to that organization. An average, on twenty-four courses, of ninety-two and a half points or above constitutes Phi Beta Kappa standing. If, at any time after the spring quarter of the junior year, a student's grades are raised to an average of ninety-two and a half, he is immediately pledged. As coeds are at the university for two years only, they are obliged to average a higher grade.

A list of those students making Phi Beta Kappa last April was published at that time, so the list that follows contains the names only of those students pledged since the middle of last spring quarter:

MILLS DISCUSSES HISTORY STUDIES

Dr. Mills, visiting Carnegie Foundation professor from Sidney, Australia, addressed the faculty of the University history department Tuesday night at 313 Saunders. His subject was "The Research in History and Government in the Australian Universities."

Dr. Mills divided the historical writings of Australia into three periods. The first period was called Impirisist. In this class came the writers who tried to influence the minds of the people. These writers were mainly journalists and politicians.

The second period of writings dealt chiefly with the specialization of certain phases of Australian history. Dr. Mills is considered one of the leaders of this period.

The third period is just beginning. It deals with the analytical theories of the political government of Australia. This class of writers are also trying to generalize the present history of Australia.

HAMILTON GOES TO N. Y. MEETING

History Professor Will Also Attend Anniversary at Columbia University.

Dr. J. G. de Roulhac Hamilton, of the department of history and government, has gone to New York where he will address the Southern Society in New York City Thursday evening. Dr. Hamilton has been asked to discuss his plans and work for the Southern Collection, which is growing rapidly.

During the past two years more than half a million pieces of manuscript have been added to the collection, which has already become the most valuable accumulation of material on southern history in existence. The most recent accession is the Hubard Papers, acquired by the University at the sale of the Saratoga plantation in Buckingham county, Virginia. This collection contains a large number of plantation records of the Hubard and Wilcox families, who were long prominent in the political, agricultural, and social life of Virginia. The Hubards are descendants of Thomas Jefferson and Willie Jones.

While in New York Dr. Hamilton will attend a celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the establishment of the faculty of Political Science at Columbia University.

PIERSON CHOSEN TO READ PAPER AT CONVENTION

Dr. W. W. Pierson, of the department of history and government, and dean of the Graduate School, will leave this week to attend the annual meeting of the Association of American Universities. The Association of American Universities. The Association meets this year at Palo Alto and Berkeley, California, as the guest of Stanford University and the University of California. Pierson will read a paper entitled "Graduate Work and the Summer Session."

While at the meeting he will represent the University of North Carolina at the inauguration of President-elect Sproul of the University of California.

Professor Worked in Factory All Summer; Will Launch New Course

G. T. Schwenning of the University's school of commerce faculty spent his summer in a way unusual for a professor. He worked in the factory of the Western Electric Company at Kearny, N. J., the largest production unit of the Bell telephone system.

Out of the information he obtained he has assembled the material for a course, called Time and Motion Study, which will be on the commerce schedule in the winter quarter. This will be something quite new in the way of instruction for college students.

The vice-president of the Western Electric who is in command at Kearny was here at Chapel Hill a year or so ago as a guest of the school of commerce, and one day he said to Mr. Schwenning:

"We talk about management problems, and I do the best I can to tell you about them, but what you really ought to do is to come up to our plant and see the actual work."

The professor took him up on the proposal. Correspondence ensued after the visitor went back to New Jersey, and a definite appointment was made. And so, when examinations were over in June, Mr. Schwenning set out for Kearny.

"I knew it was a big plant," he says, "but I was hardly prepared for the vastness of it. There are about 30,000 employees altogether. Here are manufactured switchboards, receiving and transmitting instruments, and all other sorts of telephone equipment.

"My work was to observe and study the various manufacturing processes. I was given the freedom of the plant, and I became acquainted not only with superintendents and foremen but with a great many of the men who operated the machinery. For example, I spent several days with a man known as a driller. We talked about his work while he was doing it, and we would time his motions with a stop watch.

"The purpose back of all this is to find out the simplest and best way to get a job done, and to adjust compensation to performance as fairly as possible. We try to work out standard processes, in the several manufacturing departments, that will prevent waste in effort and time."

First Mr. Schwenning went through the Kearny plant in a general survey, and then he went through the departments one by one for deliberate study. He turned up for duty early in the morning, when the army of workers came trooping in from their homes, and stayed through until the regular closing hour in the late afternoon.

ASSEMBLY BOOKS LIVE BILLS FOR NEXT DISCUSSION

Passes Motion to Cooperate With Di in Sponsoring Dr. Murrow's Address.

The regular meeting of the Phi Assembly was held Tuesday night at the assembly hall in New East. The meeting was called to order by speaker Mayne Albright. After the roll call by representative McDuffie, Speaker Albright read from the Constitution articles dealing with rules of procedure in the assembly. Treasurer James gave a report of the treasury.

John Lang spoke to the assembly for a few minutes about Dr. Murrow, well known educator who is to speak to the student body next Tuesday night in Gerrard Hall. At the conclusion of Lang's talk the motion was made and passed that the Phi Assembly co-operate with the Di Senate in sponsoring Dr. Murrow's address.

The resolutions adopted were as follows:

Resolve: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the resolution that only athletes be allowed to have self help jobs at athletic contests. The first speaker for the affirmative was representative Grier and he, together with representative Uzzell, upheld the measure against representatives Baldin and Campen. When the vote was taken the resolution was defeated.

Resolved: That the Honor System in North Carolina colleges is not functioning successfully. Representative James, Baldwin, and McDuffie upheld the measure against representatives Speight, Uzzell, and Campen . Because of the length of time used in the discussion of the bill the motion was passed

NYE TO RECEIVE WRITTEN REPROOF FROM DI SENATE

Resolution Calls for Sending of Letter Condemning Senate Investigating Committee.

The principle action taken by the Dialectic Senate at the last meeting was the sending of a "tactful" letter to Senator Nye, of Nebraska, chairman of the senatorial committee engaged at present in investigating expenditures of the recent North Carolina primary election. The contents of the letter informed Senator Nye and his committee of a decision of the local Senate to the effect that his invasion of North Carolina was, in its opinion, actuated by purely political motives. Discussion was heated prior to the passage of the bill, and the final vote disclosed a fairly even division of opinion.

Before the opening of discussion of the main bill, a resolution calling for the reading of the complete constitution was made and acted upon. Provision was made for prompt printing of the constitution under the supervision of the treasurer.

Announcement was made that a mass meeting of students to hear the president of the American Federation of Youth will replace the regular meeting next Tuesday night. A committee composed of Senators McB. Fleming-Jones, S. Whitaker, and Beatty Rector was appointed to make arrangements for the occasion.

A resolution was proposed by Senator Dungan calling for a report by the president on the condition of the society's graves. An amendment was proposed to the constitution providing for appeal of the article requiring a periodic visit by the president to the graves.

BURDEN BEARERS ELECT OFFICERS

At the meeting of the Burden Bearer's circle of the United Daughters of the Confederacy Tuesday afternoon in the Methodist Church, officers for the year were elected. Mrs. J. E. Lear was chosen president; Mrs. J. A. Page, vice-president; Mrs. Henry Whitfield, secretary and Mrs. Dewitt Herndon, treasurer.

The group discussed the state convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy which is to be held at Rockingham this month and to which the circle plans to send a delegation.

Further plans were made for the campaign which they intend to launch this week. A house to house canvass will be made to collect funds to help the needy people of the community.

The next meeting of the circle will be on the second Tuesday in November at the home of Mrs. Shelton Henninger.

PAGE WILL HEAD INDUSTRY MEET

To Preside at Departmental Discussion of Southern Conference on Education.

Frank Page, who was recently chosen chairman of the Southeastern Council, an organization formed to promote the economic advancement of the southeastern states, will preside over a discussion of "Southern Industry and the College Graduate" at a luncheon meeting of the Southern Conference on Education to meet here at the Carolina Inn at 12:30 o'clock Friday, October 31.

The discussion will be led by General R. I. Rees of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Cator Woolford of Atlanta. Mr. Woolford will discuss the value to Georgia industries of the Georgia College Placement Bureau which he helped to found. General Rees will summarize briefly the experience of his own and other large corporations in selecting and assimilating college trained workers. These talks will be followed by general discussion.

Colleges and industries of the south have been slow to fall in line with the progress which is being made by other sections of the country in this general field. It is hoped that this meeting will give impetus to the formation of some permanent organization composed of those in this region most interested in the college man and in training him for effective work in business and industry.

Due to the fact that a large number is expected to attend this meeting, those desiring accommodations are requested to communicate with R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division.

Co-eds Entertain At Tea Yesterday

Yesterday afternoon from four to six o'clock Victoria Geiger and Alice Freeman Jones were hostesses at the Spencer hall house tea whch is given once a week. The tea table and the living room were lighted by soft lights and candles. A delightful program came in over the radio during the afternoon to heighten the enjoyment of the tea. Quite a few girls came in to rest and enjoy the tea and music.

DEDICATION NOT AROUSING VERY MUCH INTEREST

Dyer Urges That Students Desiring to Attend Organ Program File Applications.

Professor H. S. Dyer, head of the music department, wishes to urge all students interested in attending the dedication exercises of the new organ to file applications at once, before the end of the present week. It is absolutely necessary to file applications in advance, as all seats will be reserved each night, and no tickets will be obtainable at the door. These blanks for application may be found at the Book Exchange, the Students' Supply Store, the Music building and other places down town and on the campus. All that is necessary is the filling out of a blank for each ticket desired, for the purpose of classification only.

Professor Dyer reports that so far there have been very few requests for tickets for students, most of the blanks coming from faculty members and citizens of Chapel Hill, with quite a number of out-of-town applications, representing over thirty cities throughout North Carolina and Virginia. As the the exercises are being held primarily for students, the music department hopes that there will be more interest shown in obtaining tickets than there has been heretofore. The hall will be filled at every performance, and there will be no extra seats at any one ceremony. It is for the purpose of determining the precise number of the audience at each program that these blanks must be turned in this week, and also to avoid too large a crowd at any one performance.

LOCAL DEBATERS NOW PREPARING FOR CAMBRIDGE

British Students Will Divide Interests on Subject of Women in the Home.

Actual preparation for a debate with Cambridge University will be commenced tonight when the debate squad hears L. M. Brooks, assistant professor of sociology, discuss the emergence of woman from the home. The squad will meet in 201 Murphey at 7:30.

In the debate with the British students each side of the question—Resolved, That the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life—will be upheld by one debater from each school. In his talk tonight, Brooks will bring out the advantages and disadvantages to both women and the home which are the result of woman's advance into the business world. He will trace the movement for the emancipation of women and discuss the attendant changes, such as woman suffrage, that have accompanied woman's emergence.

The debating council has called attention to the fact that women, as well as men, will be eligible to try out for this debate, provided only that they attend the lectures on the subject.

There will be a meeting of the woman's athletic association today, Thursday, October 16, in Spencer hall at 5:00 o'clock.

PARAGRAPHICS

Rusticity has its charms; however, the removal of the superfluous stones around Alumni building and on the driveway from the street to the building would be a great help to the thin-soled ones.

The press of today may cause a flurry or a hurricane, both of which last a few days, a few months. The pre-historic scrivener picked his pencil from the earth and carved his thoughts upon stones. With due apologies to the proper source the idea is: Fear not the times. Fear the eternities.

Benches in the center of the campus prove comfortable and convenient for summer school dates, but something might be taken in consideration for the bare spots that will be left in the center of a naturally beautiful green sward when the benches are removed.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

The Truth Will Out

Such was the opinion of the many freshmen who flunked their first quizzes. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" is a law that knows no exceptions.

Learning vs. Sleep

We understand that a professor at the University of Michigan recently made experiments with a view to determining whether learning can be acquired in sleep. His apparati consisted of a telephone, an electrically-run phonograph, and a set of head phones. My word! —here's one thing in which the Mid-West is a bit behind the times. Carolina professors have been making such experiments for half a century, and they don't use much equipment either. They conduct their experiments on eight-thirty classes, using no apparatus save a notebook and a pencil. Results of such experiments show marked similarity.

What Is a College Anyhow?

A sister college paper adds two definitions to the collegiate dictionary: "College—a group of buildings behind a stadium." "College president—one that is paid with the funds that are left over after the coaches have received their checks."

Speaking of Heavy Teams

Relatively speaking, there are few heavy football teams in the South. The University of Kansas team which started against Haskell Indian Institute averaged 195 pounds in the line and 188 pounds in the backfield. The coach calls this his light combination. The team which is scheduled to meet the Scandinavian outfit from the University of Nebraska will show a line averaging 200 pounds and a backfield of 190 pounds average. (This information is taken from the University Daily Kansan.)

We lift the following from another and more fertile brain:

"Here lie the remains of Percival Sapp,
He drove a car with a girl in his lap."

Billy Arthur and Cheering

Billy Arthur may be the smallest man in school, but he is not lacking in enthusiasm. Carolina has a cheerleader that is really interested in his position.

Freshmen, according to Billy, are doing their part, but upperclassmen seem to feel that they did enough yelling when they were freshmen. The truth of the matter is that upperclassmen ought to lead the freshmen in cheering as well as in other phases of college activity.

"Run Get a Cake, Boys"

Dale Ranson's posters advertising the annual cake race remind us of the days when our maternal parents beckoned us from the woodpile to eat a hot cake, or so. The poster goes on to say that each contestant must train for a few days before participating. We haven't seen any of the cakes, but they must be pretty bad to necessitate a ten-day training grind before one can eat them.

Moods

The strings of the human heart are curiously strung. Tight and loose they are; sometimes crosswise and out of tune. But occasionally they are strung straight and true, there being no discord when they are struck. Our lives become strangely translated into materialism all around us. There are days (as when we flunk a quiz) when the heartstrings struck by the hand of time give off discordant notes. Yet on other days (as when we pass a quiz or get a package) we sing a song of good cheer. The merriment of the song varies as tyrant moods hold the governing whip over our inner natures. There comes a time when all will admit that humans are essentially alike. The strings of the human heart are strangely strung, indeed.

Debaters Getting Things "Lined Up"

Things are getting under way at the weekly meetings of the debate squad. The local "wordboxes" are studying the question of the emergence of woman from the home. The boys have even outlined the circumlocutory side of the question, it is thought.

An interesting article of the equipment of the debate squad is a phonograph and a number of records of great speeches, from the playing of which the debate candidates can learn the fine points of oratory. We would suggest that the next equipment purchased be a recording device. This would enable a debater to make his speech into a record which could be played at the try-out—the debater himself being away on sudden week-end duties.

WRITE ANGLES

By Vass Shepherd

Freshmen, up to now the nucleus of campus activity, will sink into ignominy. Fraternities, now tearing at each other's throat, will once more become reconciled, the members of one mixing easily with members of another. All calumnious lies and unfounded prejudices will be at an end. In fact, the campus will sink into a blessed peace —at least until politics set in.

Can one imagine a more pitiful subject than that of two crooks waiting up to rob a fraternity house?

A Wake county farmer of some sixty odd years or more is credited with being the father of twenty-one children. For such an old fossil he certainly is heir-minded.

Last year Grantland Rice accorded the University the rather dubious distinction of having the drunkest representatives of the season at the Carolina-Georgia Tech game. Southern hospitality, though, could not permit such possibilities for insulting visitors to exist. That is why night football has been invented. From current talk, one can judge that it will be to somebody's advantage if either next Saturday's game is played at night or Grantland Rice is not present at the contest.

Theme song of a shirt to a pair of flannel undies at the laundry: "I've been blue, turning gray over you."

People talk about business being bad and a man not being able to earn a decent living; lawyers are broke; bankers are bankrupt; and doctors are taking their own medicine. But they are all rich compared to the world's most needy case: the loyal alumnus of three prep-schools and two colleges.

Old maids, in taking proper precautions when an escaped convict was reported to be in the neighborhood, always used to look under their beds before retiring. Since Otto Wood has been enjoying the unbarred ozone, though, they now look under the covers.

Things missed most on the campus this year: the yo-yo and the horde of canines that would sniff around your goose-grease shoes all the way from Old South building to the library.

Simile: as slow as a woman going through the Carolina Inn Cafeteria.

The varsity tennis tournament was begun with 23 men out.

Carolina sent Wake Forest home defeated by the score of 35-0.

The campus and students joined in celebrating the 122nd anniversary of the founding of the University. Dr. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, made an address on "Patriotism."

Ten Years Ago

A portrait of General William Richardson Davie, founder of the University, was presented to the school by John Alwyn Ball of Charleston, S. C. The portrait was done at Paris by Chretien in 1800 and had been handed down in the Davie family to the wife of Ball. During the Civil War it was buried on the banks of the Catawba river.

The pagent, "Raleigh, the Shepherd of the Ocean," by Dr. Frederick Koch, was presented in Raleigh for three consecutive nights. The cast numbered 500 persons.

Five Years Ago

The question arose of using the Yale system of separate dormitories for the freshmen, but it was voted down.

The celebration of Carolina's 50th year since its reopening after the Civil War was one of the greatest events in the history of the University. The speakers were Edgar F. Smith, of the University of Pennsylvania; C. H. Herty, president of the Association of Chemical Manufacturers; and Bertram B. Battwood, of Yale University.

The University eleven conquered the Wolfpack 7-0. In this game Carolina gained 190 yards through the line and State gained only two yards through our line.

The Tar Heel frosh beat Maryland frosh 21-0.

T. J. Wilson, Jr., On Vacation

Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., registrar of the University has gone to Wilmington, N. C., for a short rest.

The need for a rest was occasioned by the work Dr. Wilson had to do because of the heavy registration. He will return to Chapel Hill about October 24.

ERNEST TORRENCE OFFERS SURPRISE IN NEW MOVIE

For the first time in the history of the talking screen, a concert pianist displays his art on the silver sheet. The pianist, in this instance, has other attributes better know to screen fans for he is Ernest Torrence.

Torrence plays the piano in "Call of the Flesh," Ramon Novarro's new musical film which will open today at the Carolina Theatre. It will be the first time his admirers have heard him at the piano, although in Hollywood his musical evenings are well known to members of the screen colony.

Pep Rally Set for Tonight as Team Leaves

Tar Heels In Best Of Spirits As Moment Of Departure Draws Near

PEP MEETING IN SWAIN HALL 6:30

Team Looks Much Better in Long Scrimmage Session Yesterday.

The Tar Heel football squad will leave tonight from Swain hall at 6:15 for Athens, Georgia, for Saturday's important conference game with the Bulldogs of the University of Georgia with some thirty-six members of the squad, managers and coaches in the party.

Chief cheerleader Billy Arthur has called a mass meeting of the student body in front of Swain hall for 6:30 to give the team a big send off for the game. The rally will last only about twenty minutes. Billy urges that everybody eat supper a few minutes early tonight so that they will be on time for the big rally. The cheer-leaders have been working hard on some new yells and have rehearsed in leading the old ones.

Team in Best of Spirits

With only one more workout at home before the Georgia game the Tar Heels went through a rather stiff workout yesterday afternoon in the best of spirits.

The whole squad has been utilizing every possible moment to get into the best of shape for the most important and hardest test on the schedule so far. They have been spending the chapel hour every morning from 10:30 until 11:00 in Murphey hall in blackboard practice, and have been getting out on the field long before the starting hour of practice, so as to be in the pink of condition Saturday.

Trainer Chuck Quinlan has the whole squad in excellent condition for the game, since there were only a few bruises received by the team against Maryland, and the old injuries have about healed up. George Thompson's knee is well again and his mate at the other tackle, June Underwood, is in shape also. Henry House, who pulled a muscle in the Maryland game, has responded to treatment readily.

The Tar Heels showed more pep and fight in the scrimmage yesterday afternoon than they have all year. Gain after gain and touchdown after touchdown was registered against a stubbornly fighting freshman line. The pass plays seemed to click, and in all there was a general impression of greater smoothness, despite the frequency of fumbles. In the scrimmage which was devoted entirely to offensive work, Chuck Erickson, Johnny Branch, Rip Slusser and Stuart Chandler showed up best in the varsity backfield. Branch and Slusser both broke away for 80 yard runs for touchdowns, while George Houston, reserve fullback, made a pretty 60-yard run for a score.

The starting backfield had Branch at quarterback, Slusser and Magner at halves, and Thompson, a converted halfback, at fullback. The line was made up of Brown and Johnson, ends; McDade and Thompson, tackles; Fysal and McIver, guards; and Lipscomb, center.

Captain Strud Nash and Henry House, regular halfback and fullback respectively, did not take part in the scrimmage, but merely followed the varsity as it ran off its plays. They are both expected to be sufficiently recovered from their injuries to be back in the game with Georgia Saturday.

Cheerleader Meeting

Billy Arthur has called a meeting of cheerleaders for this afternoon in Kenan stadium at 3:30.

FRESHMEN SHOW DEFENSIVE FORM

Stand Off Varsity Attack Creditably During Hard Two Hour Scrimmage.

The freshman and the varsity football squads had it out in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon for about two hours. The "Tar Heels" were on the offensive all the afternoon while the first year men did their best to offer a stubborn defense, and in this respect they were fairly successful. The two teams played until the shadows of a threatening storm drove them in. Three whole teams represented the freshmen while Coach Collins ran his first two teams. There were no injuries to speak of, although a few freshmen received a shaking-up.

The game with the Maryland first year men promises to be an exciting affair. The Tar Babies showed a great deal of power this afternoon although they have not had much chance to display their offensive ability; if this power is present Saturday, it is highly probable that they will make a good showing.

Of the squad, the team that first did battle with the varsity included: Harrington and Brandt, ends; Mulligan and Mullis, tackles; McIver and Barkley, guards; Parker, center. The backfield with this line was made up of: Woollen, quarterback; Hackney and Phipps, halfbacks; and Guffery, fullback. There were two other teams that saw action. Harrington at end, and Mullis at tackle, showed up well during the scrimmage. Taking it all in all, the freshman team has great possibilities.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

It seems that quite a squabble has grown out of the Yale-Georgia game last Saturday in which King Football decreed that the Sons of Eli should get the short end of an 18-14 score.

Yale kicked off to the Southerners and as a Georgia man caught the ball, a Yale tackle hit him amidships. So far, so good. However, the pigskin took a turn or two and bounced out of the ball carrier's arms into the hands of a Yale end who raced across Georgia's goal for a touchdown. Said touchdown was granted and everything was rosy after the game until the New Haven Downtown Coaches association discovered that the play was faulty. The matter became more tangled when several newspaper men began an investigation (newspapermen always spoil a good football game). Our views are absolutely confirmed on the subject since we have received a special despatch from the Tar Heel under cover operative number six who investigated the case thoroughly.

Walter R. Okeson, commissioner of the Eastern Section for the Selection of the Football Officials said, when asked for his opinion of the play, "Rule 6 says 'If the ball is recovered by the player of the receiving team before it is declared dead, he may run with it, pass it backwards or kick it; if the ball is recovered by a player of the kicking team the ball is dead at the point of recovery'." This cleared matters up a great deal, but our private Hawkshaw was still on the case.

Fuller Ginn, president of the New Haven Downtown Coaches association was questioned on the case and won a point for the affirmative by his brilliant testimony, "Rule 6 says that the ball is recovered by the player of the receiving team before it is declared dead, he may run with it, pass it backward, or kick it; if the ball is recovered by a player of the kicking team the ball is dead at the point of recovery." This nearly clinched the case, but an excellent argument advanced by Izzy A. Fumbler, the Yale captain, again threw us in a quandary. He stated, "Rule 6 says that if the ball is recovered by a player of the receiving team before it is declared dead, he may run with it, pass it backward or kick it; if the ball is recovered by a player of the kicking team the ball is dead at the point of recovery." It is small wonder that we were baffled, for such startling evidence established a strong point for the negative without the slightest doubt.

In a quandary over all these startling testimonies, we interviewed the field judge, I. C. De Ball who said, "Rule 6 says that if the ball is recovered by the player of the receiving team before it is declared dead, he may run with it, pass it backward or kick it; if the ball is recovered by a player of the kicking team the ball is dead at the point of recovery." The reader (if there are any left by this time) may easily see that this brilliant judgment automatically awarded the much-discussed touchdown to N. C. State, who (Lord knows) needs one more than either Georgia or Yale.

Varsity Basketball

All candidates interested in varsity basketball are asked to be at a meeting in Kenan stadium this afternoon at 3:30, states Coach Jim Ashmore.

BROCK RECEIVES INJURY TO NOSE

Will Probably Start the Game Against Citadel Saturday Despite Handicap.

Thad Brock, Davidson captain, suffered either a broken nose or a badly injured one when Charlie Parker, his running-mate at the guard position, missed a signal in practice Tuesday. Parker, interpreting the signal incorrectly, pulled over in the wrong direction, crashing into Brock.

No report from any physician attending Brock has been obtained yet, but from an examination made by the coaches it could not be determined whether his nose was broken, or if the cartilege was pulled loose.

This second injury to the Wildcat captain seems to be carrying out the feared jinx as he suffered a nasty cut over his eye during the game against State in Greensboro the 27th of September.

The plucky Brock has not failed to start a game for Davidson since he came to the varsity as a sophomore, and it is thought in football circles that he will start the game against the Citadel this coming week-end with the aid of a new improved nose guard.

When teams win games 51-0 and their coaches admit power but say the attack was "ragged and inconsistent," then it's time for opponents of this team to look out. That's what North Carolina coaches and players are doing this week, as they drill for the Georgia game at Athens Saturday, for Coach Harry Mehre said exactly that after Georgia had beaten Mercer 51-0.

Local Fighter Wins

Big Sid Terris, 200-pound heavyweight boxing act from Chapel Hill, won an easy 10-round decision from Jack Middleton, 198-pound ring veteran of Jacksonville, Fla., in that city Tuesday night.

ADD WARREN TO BATTLE CARROLL

Former Tar Heel Star Fights Old Jinx in Charlotte Night Of October 27.

Another installment of the Add Warren-Jeff Carroll grudge feud will take place in Charlotte, October 27, when these two heavyweights meet for the third time in an effort to settle a dispute that has been going on for some time. Promoters at Charlotte are making preparations to handle a large crowd due to the popularity of both men in the South.

Warren has been keeping himself in condition lately with light work, but intends to do more intensive work in Chapel Hill next week. Add's workouts here, which are open to the public, always draw an interested group of spectators.

Carroll's three round knock-out over Sid Terris in Charlotte last week has caused an added interest to the coming scrap. In his last fight with Terris, Warren fought a ten round draw, but has since earned a draw with Carroll. In their first fight, Carroll won a technical knock-out over Warren when the latter broke his arm after leading the fight most of the way.

Carroll is big, tough, and carries a wallop in either hand, while Warren's knock-out ability is recognized.

WOLFPACK HEADS WILL PROSPECT FOR NEW COACH

Southern Conference Rule Bars Gibby Welch From Position.

Raleigh, Oct. 14.—N. C. State college will add a new backfield coach to its staff as soon as terms can be closed with one of several men under consideration, Dr. R. R. Sermon, athletic director, said this afternoon.

The Athletic board of state college had closed a deal with Gibby Welch, former All-American at Pittsburgh university, but a Southern conference rule which prohibits any man performing on a professional team from being a coach of a conference eleven made him ineligible.

Dr. Sermon said he was not ready to announce the names of the men under consideration for the job but it was understood that two of them have been head coaches at North Carolina schools.

The man secured will report this week if possible, Dr. Sermon added.

Prepare to Avoid Early Scoring

In North Carolina's two Southern Conference games this season, the opposing team scored the first touchdowns in a very few minutes after the game started. Carolina won both games, the other team's touchdown serving to settle the Tar Heels down to a steadier defense. A touchdown handicap to Georgia, however, would be more serious, and the Carolina coaches will try to prepare to avoid such a happening when the Bulldogs are met at Athens Saturday.

DR. METZENTHIN STUDIES ANCIENT GERMAN WORKS

University Professor Spends Summer in Libraries and Schools of Germany.

In the interest of the Smith fund, Dr. E. C. Metzenthin, of the language department of the University, spent several months in various libraries of Germany last summer, including libraries at Munich, Bonn, Wolfenbuettel and Prague, studying manuscripts written in old German and Anglo-Saxon, in order to determine the author, place and time of writing. He also made reproductions of these ancient writings so that they could be compared with the excellent manuscripts of the Heliand.

Great scholars have been studying these manuscripts for more than a century. In many places Dr. Metzenthin bought books and photostats to be added to the collection of manscripts and incunabula in our own library.

Dr. Metzenthin spent part of his time studying present political situations in Germany. He attended election meetings for the Reichstag, of which his uncle was once a member, addressing meetings and celebrations of the freeing of German lines, and was invited to a grand banquet and reception tended the American Steuben Society by the city of Munich.

In many schools he made talks on the United States, depicting the slower, or faster, recuperation in America from the propaganda and hysteria of the war. He stressed the importance and beneficial influences of the Y. M. C. A. and the various student organizations, notable at this University, for their work of fostering among students a livelier interest in and deeper insight into internatioal questions, higher conceptions in regard to international intercourse, and stressing human duties more than national rights.

In many places he expressed the hope for lasting peace and friendship with the French people, based on a revision of the Versailles treaty in accordance with the great Wilsonian principles, particularly: first, protection of minorities in small countries; second, popular control in all transferred countries under neutral control of the question of independence or union with a country of their own choice.

Special Train to Athens

North Carolina fans plan a real invasion of Georgia on the event of Saturday's important Southern Conference battle at Athens between Georgia and North Carolina state universities. Railroads are cutting round trip fares to a minimum; special cars will be made up in Greensboro, Salisbury, Charlotte, Raleigh, Durham and Asheville; and these will be united into special "On to Athens" trains at central points. The train from Durham is expected to carry a record crowd of student supporters when it leaves at 7:50 p. m., October 17.

REAVIS AWAITING TRIAL FOR KILLING FLETCHER STROWD

Claude Reavis, colored, of Chapel Hill, is being held in the Hillsboro jail awaiting trial in Superior Court for the slaying of Fletcher Strowd, also colored. The charge will probably be manslaughter because of lack of evidence.

Reavis was cleared of any blame concerning the killing and was released by the Corner's jury summoned in Chapel Hill soon after the murder. Following his release by the coroner's jury the Recorder's court of Chapel Hill upon hearing the facts in the case bound Reavis over for trial at Hillsboro at the next term of criminal court.

HARD LUCK STILL PURSUES BRUDER

Hank Bruder, Northwestern captain, is hunting for something more potent than number 13 as a jinx chaser.

Bruder, whose latest piece of hard luck is a mild case of smallpox, wore a number 13 on his jersey in the Tulane game a week ago, as a gesture of defiance to the jinx which has kept him off the gridiron during most of the 1928 and 1929 seasons. Number 13 worked against the Southerners, but lost its potency Friday when Bruder was found to have smallpox.

The Wildcat halfback played in three games in 1928 before a muscle injury sent him to the sidelines. Last fall he started brilliantly leading his team to a 7-0 victory over Wisconsin, only to suffer a broken leg near the end of the game.

Bruder's case was described as mild, and it is expected that he will be in a uniform in time to play against Minnesota November 1, leaving the Wildcats to do without him against Illinois Saturday and against Centre the following week.

The Northwestern officials are taking no chances of an epidemic breaking out in the Evanston school, vaccinating his team-mates, fraternity brothers and classmates. They are also communicating with Tulane, who played Northwestern last week, but there is hardly any danger of any cases arising; the Green Wave didn't get near enough to Bruder to catch anything but the breeze.

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 15.—Since 1926, when he took over the coaching of the squad, University of California football elevens under the guidance of D. M. (Nibs) Price, have won 23 games, lost 12 and tied three. Six of the defeats were in Price's first year at the university.

PEYTON ABBOTT ENFORCES RIGID TRAINING RULES

Will Stress Fundamentals and Conditioning Until Thanksgiving.

All men interested in wrestling are requested to report to Coach Peyton Abbott at the Tin-Can this afternoon at four o'clock.

On checking over the present Freshmen wrestling squad, Coach Abbot said that there are twenty-five men present. Among these there are several in certain classes, while there are very few, or none, in other classes.

The men have been drilled only in the fundamentals of wrestling during the past two weeks.

The ground-work of wrestling will occupy the time of the men until Thanksgiving. After that time the training will become more rigorous, strict attention being paid to training rules.

There will be no regular lineup this year, because tryouts will be held before each match. Coach Abbott predicts that this system will cause each man to put forth his best efforts in order that he may retain his place. He also says that this method will keep the men in the excellent condition due to strict adherence to training rules.

Former Carolinian Speaks To New York Kiwanians

New York, Oct. 15.—New York Kiwanians considered last Wednesday "North Carolina Day" because J. Paul Leonard, a native Carolinian, was the speaker at the weekly luncheon held at the Hotel McAlpin, and a song written by a young Carolina composer — Miss Evelyn Morris of Winston-Salem—was featured during the meeting. Mr. Leonard, who is now a member of the Wall street bank stock firm of Ralph B. Leonard and company, has been active in the New York Kiwanis club since coming here two years ago.

Miss Morris' song—"Broken Dreams of Yesterday," which was published more than a year ago by a New York music publisher, was sung at today's luncheon by Hollis Davenny, noted actor and singer, who starred as Schubert in the famous musical comedy "Blossom Time."

Touchdowns Count More

Converting first downs into greatest number of touchdowns seems to be a special talent with both North Carolina and Georgia, who clash in the first big Southern Conference elimination at Athens Saturday. Last Saturday Maryland had 13 first downs to Carolina's 8, but Carolina won 28-21. Yale had an equal margin over Georgia, but Georgia won 18-14. First downs are good things to make, but after all it's crossing the last white stripe that wins games.

FETZER ADDRESSES FRESHMAN CHAPEL

Coach Bob Fetzer addressed the freshmen in chapel yesterday. He began his talk by saying, "In entering the University of North Carolina we all have something definite in mind. Some say to get an education, others to fit themselves for life, and still others announce that their purpose in coming here is to prepare themselves to make money in the business world.

"What is the object of a college education? In a general sense, the object of education is to fit one's self for life, to learn to enjoy and get the greatest benefits from living."

Coach Fetzer stated that athletics certainly have a great value in education, but that academic work should be placed before all. "Let every man in the University first excel in his scholastic work, then choose and participate in some branch of athletics in which he is qualified," he said.

"Any boy in the University, with the proper persistence, can make a varsity athletic team. Sports give a boy a chance to see his fellow man as he really is, to find what he himself is made of. Athletics teach loyalty, and develop a mighty spirit of carrying on. Life is hard, and many obstacles confront one, but the spirit developed in sports will bring one through its severest trials."

Mr. Fetzer declared that sportsmanship is the finest quality derived from athletics and that sports inbed deeply in a man's mind the spirit of "shooting square."

In conclusion, Coach Bob asked all freshmen to weld themselves into the student body of the University, and if they couldn't participate in athletics to throw their influence into bettering the school's spirit.

Community Group Hears Scandinavian Music

The music department of the Community Club met for the first time this year yesterday afternoon in room 3 of the new music building. Mrs. F. N. Edmister, chairman of the department, had placed Mrs. A. H. Harrer in charge of the meeting.

A program of Scandinavian music, including selections from Greig, was presented.

Seventeen Eastern colleges took part last spring in a poetry reading contest, the latest of intercollegiate "sports."

ENGINEERS MEET LAST THURSDAY

Mr. Lear and Mr. Jacocks Address Student Branch of A. I. E. E.

The student branch of the American Institution of Electrical Engineers met at seven o'clock Thursday night for the second meeting of the year. A large crowd attended the meeting.

The new men were greeted by George Thompson, president, by a short welcoming speech. He briefly outlined the plans for the meetings of the coming year and told the new men of the nature of the society.

Mr. John E. Lear traced the development of the society from its very beginning to the present. He pointed out the advantages of belonging to the organization.

In his talk titled, "The Young Engineer," Mr. F. A. Jacocks, who has been co-operating with the General Electrical company for the past year, and has returned to the University in order to finish his senior year, gave a very interesting talk on his work at Schenectady. He classified the work undertaken by the General Electric Company. He also noted the efforts of the company to provide social activities for its employees. These recreative attractions, he stated, are for the purpose of keeping the young engineer from getting lonesome and homesick until he becomes acclimated to his work and his surroundings. The company spends over $10,000 for this purpose every year.

Parker Discusses Cononical Problems

At the meeting in the seminar room yesterday afternoon W. V. Parker, assistant professor in the mathematics department, presented for discussion his solution of special economical form of Kummer's quartic surface. Kummer's quartic surface, according to Mr. Parker, is the quartic surface which has sixteen isolated singular points.

Mr. Parker considered the surface as associated with a curve of the Y-2=F(X) where F(X) is a polynomial of the fifth degree.

Mr. Parker discussed the general surface and at the next meeting he will take a special case of the problem.

Mr. Parker has been studying at Brown University and is working here for his doctor's degree.

GERMAN POLITICS TO BE DISCUSSED BY BONN TONIGHT

on international affairs that is astounding.

During his stay in Chapel Hill, the lecturer will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Zimmerman. Immediately following his lecture tonight the department of economics and commerce will give a smoker for Dr. Bonn, at which time all desiring to meet him will be given the opportunity.

A coincidence, which will probably be of interest to the political students on the campus, is the fact that while Dr. Bonn will be lecturing, the Reichstag, the German Assembly, will be meeting in Germany.

"Grid-Scholars" to Meet

McCarthy Crenshaw, Georgia's brilliant sophomore end, led the class in scholarship last year, but Georgia needn't think it can beat North Carolina's gridders in scholarship. Aubrey Parsley and George Thompson, starting end and tackle; Red Gilbreath, outstanding reserve center; Archie Davis, reserve end, and several other of the Tar Heels have scholastic averages of 95 for their whole career at Carolina. The hard-hitting scholars try their abilities on the football field at Athens Saturday.

Dr. Jean Betzner of Teachers College, Columbia University, believes the present methods of teaching English composition to children in primary grades tends to hinder rather than to develop their creative literary talents.

ENTIRE STUDENT BODY INVITED TO TENNESSEE GAME

Good Will Evident in Reciprocity Of Southern Conference and State Schools.

A telegram was received yesterday by the editor of the Daily Tar Heel from the president of the student body of the University of Tennessee inviting the students of this university to be guests of the Tennessee institution while in Knoxville for the Carolina-Tennessee game on October 25.

This general feeling of friendliness among the schools in the southern conference has been steadily increasing in the past few years. The system of reciprocity, admitting students of visiting universities and colleges to all athletic contests for only a small fee, or no fee at all, is one of the steps which has resulted from this good feeling among the Southern Conference members.

For the purpose of continuing this good will among the schools in the state as well as in the Southern Conference, the North Carolina State Student Federation, of which John Lang is the president, was organized last year. Judging from the general feeling of good will in evidence this year between the University student body and the representatives of visiting colleges, this organization is fulfilling its aim.

The telegram which was received from Tennessee reads, "The student body of the University of Tennessee extends a cordial invitation to the student body of the University of North Carolina to be their guests while in Knoxville for the Carolina-Tennessee game on October 25. Down-town headquarters will be at the Farragut Hotel." Buddy Hackman, one of the "Touchdown Twins," sent this good will letter as president of the University of Tennessee student body. Buddy will probably hold one of the positions in the Vols backfield when they meet the Tar Heels.

This game between the University of Tennessee and the University of North Carolina will be the ninth football contest to be played between the two institutions since 1893. For the first five times that the two teams met, the North Carolina eleven came out victorious. In 1919-20, however, the Tar Heels did not find the Vols so easy to beat. This year the fight ended in a 0-0 tie. Since that time the Tennessee team has won consistently from the Tar Heel eleven.

Th scores for the contests played are: 1893-94, U. N. C. 60, Tennessee, 0; 1897-98, U. N. C. 16, Tennessee 0; 1900-01, U. N. C. 23, Tennessee, 5; 1908-09, U. N. C., 12, Tennessee, 0; 1909-10, U. N. C., 3, Tennessee, 0; 1919-20, U. N. C., 0, Tennessee, 0; 1927-28, U. N. C., 0, Tennessee, 33; and 1930-31, U. N. C, ?, Tennessee, ?

Plans are being made for a large crowd to attend the game, and a special train will probably be dispatched to Knoxville.

SERVICE GROUPS PLAN TO STUDY FARM PROBLEMS

N. C. Club and Social Service Conference Join in Work and Arrange Joint Programs.

The joint program committee of the North Carolina Club, at the University, and the North Carolina Conference for Social Service met in Raleigh in the Hotel Sir Walter on October 15, and worked out a tentative program for the year's work. The Club and the Social Service Conference have both adopted the study of agricultural conditions in North Carolina for the year's program and have joined forces. They are asking State College, The Farmers Federation at Asheville, the various farmers mutual exchanges, and other interested groups to join with them in the work.

As the program is planned now, the speakers will first appear before the North Carolina Club at the University at its regular meetings held every two weeks. The papers may be revised according to suggestions made at these meetings, and will be presented again at the annual Social Serivce Conference to be held in eastern North Carolina next spring. These papers will be published in a volume, which will be the joint product of all the state agencies interested in the improvement of agricultural conditions.

The following is the tentative program as submitted by Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr., who is in charge of aranging it: Land Resources of North Carolina, Colonel J. W. Harrelson, Raleigh; An Analysis of North Carolina as an Agricultural State, Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr., Chapel Hill; Shifting Agriculture in North Carolina, Hugh MacRae, Wilmington; A Safely Balanced Agriculture: Retention of Farm Wealth, S. O. Schaub, State College; Farm Tenancy in North Carolina, Dr. E. C. Branson, Chapel Hill; Standards of Living of North Carolina Farmers, Dr. C. C. Taylor, State College; Imperative Need of Agricultural Industries in North Carolina, A. J. Maxwell, Raleigh; Marketing Farm Products, George R. Ross, Raleigh; Taxation and Agriculture, Dr. G. W. Forster, State College; The Relation of Farming to Our Economic System, President F. P. Graham, Chapel Hill; The Necessity for Scientific Farming, D. R. Coker, Hartsville, South Carolina; An Agricultural Program for North Carolina, Governor O. Max

Meeting of Western Class A Group Called to Consider 1931 Plans.

E. R. Rankin, of the University extension division, has returned from Salisbury where he presided over a meeting of the Class A western high school conference, which convened in that city last Monday night.

The purpose of the meeting was to arrange the basket ball contest schedule of this conference for 1931. The games will be played during the months of January and February, and the final game for the state title of the Class A conference will be played in Chapel Hill early in March.

The names of the high schools which will participate in the western conference are: Asheville, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, High Point, Salisbury, and Gastonia. The members of the eastern class A conference are: Wilmington, Goldsboro, Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Durham, Fayetteville and Wilson.

In the west, each school will play each other twice, while those in the east will play only once.

PRATT DONATES THREE BOOKS TO MUSIC LIBRARY

The music department was recently the recipient of a gift of three volumes of Famous Composers, donated by Col. Joseph Hyde Pratt of Chapel Hill. The volumes are highly valued by the department both from a standpoint of literary excellence and completeness of detail. They were published at Boston in 1891 by the J. B. Millet Company, after much research in the museums, libraries, and conservatories in England and on the continent. Men like Arthur Foote and John Fiske engaged themselves in the compilation, and an exhaustive search was made of many private libraries and collections to find the plates and material for the very complete set of illustrations and biographies.

Colonel Pratt obtained these volumes in 1896, yhile he was teaching at the New Haven Scientific School. Since then he has been engaged in many civic activities in the state and was at one time a state geologist. At present he is the active head of the Red Cross, and takes part in many other organizations of civic interest, as well as the welfare of the University.

BRADSHAW GOES TO Y. M. C. A. MEETING

Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, will leave this morning for Chicago to attend the annual meeting of the National Council of Young Men's Christian Association. Dean Bradshaw has been a member of the person nel division of the council for three years. The meeting will be held through October 23.

The personnel division "seeks to bring to bear upon the means used for selecting, training, placing, and transferring of secretaries the best that modern personnel science and educational theory offer. It conducts independent studies and experimentation, and maintains a coordination and clear and sincere relationship to all personnel research in progress throughout the association."

WOMEN ATHLETES REQUEST FUNDS

Petition President-Elect Graham For Active Support of Enlarged Program.

The Women's Athletic Association met Thursday, October the sixteenth, at five o'clock in Spencer hall. The meeting was called for the hearing of a petition originating with Mrs. Marvin H. Stacy, which requested of President-elect Frank Graham support for athletics engaged in by co-eds.

Mrs. Stacy reported that Graham would have funds provided for volley-ball, basketball, and archery. She said that Ida Currie, president of the athletic association, would be responsible for the details.

Miss Gladys Angel, of the extension division of the University, has offered her directorial services each Friday. She spoke of the devotion to athletics of the girls in the northern universities, and urged the girls of this University to demand more facilities.

Ida Currie reported that Coach J. F. Kenfield would set aside tennis courts seven and eight for coed use, and that Dr. R. B. Lawson would coach girls' basketball two nights each week.

MORE DOPE FOR SOUTHERN FOES BY SPORTLIGHT

Collins To Be Prominent Speaker At Coaches' Meeting in New York.

Coach Chuck Collins broadcasted more dope on southern grid teams last Wednesday night over the B. C. Sports-light program from station WPTF in Raleigh.

According to Collins, Georgia, Vandy, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Alabama have about the best aggregation of football players ever seen below the Mason-Dixon line, and that these teams will place high in the Southern Conference. Kentucky, Alabama, and Tennessee have very stiff schedules, and will be lucky if they emerge from their struggles this season undefeated.

Tulane has an easy course this year and should go a long way toward retaining the championship that school won last year. Although Tulane lost to a northern rival, that game has no standing on their conference status, and they will be pointing for the comparatively easy remaining games with all force they can muster. Speaking of the Carolina team, Chuck admits that the Tar Heels have a schedule which is anything but easy. Carolina has already met V. P. I. and Maryland, defeating both, and ahead of the Blue and White aggregation are three of the most dangerous teams in the country—Georgia, Tennessee, and Georgia Tech. These games come on successive Saturdays, and if Carolina comes through a winner in all three games they will have to play "heads-up" ball, and perfect their defense to a higher point of perfection.

Coach Collins had his assistant, Rex Enright, scouting the Yale-Georgia game last Saturday while Bill Cerney, backfield coach, was covering the Tennessee-Mississippi game. Enright says that Georgia looked mighty good, and pulled a "spinner"

EPISCOPAL TEA SUNDAY

An informal tea will be given by the Episcopal church in the parish house on Sunday afternoon at 4:30. This plan of weekly teas was used all last year, and the same idea will be carried out this year. These weekly socials afford an opportunity for the students attending to form new acquaintances, and plans are being made for a large gathering at the Sunday afternoon entertainment.

SIGMA XI MEETS FOR FIRST TIME TUESDAY EVENING

Members This Scientific Society Are Invited To Attend Meeting.

The Sigma Xi scientific society will meet for its first meeting of the month next Tuesday night at 6:30 o'clock in the assembly room of the Baptist church. The business program will be preceded by a supper for the members.

The program will be an informal discussion of chemical research in physical, analytic, and inorganic chemistry. These will be expounded by Dr. Frank K. Cameron, Dr. Floyd H. Edmister and Dr. Horace Crockford, members of the chemistry faculty.

Researches to be discussed at the coming meetings of the year are being made by the three divisions: physical chemistry, analytic chemistry, and inorganic chemistry.

The officers in charge for the year are: Dr. Otto Stuhlman, Jr., president; Dr. John N. Couch, vice-president; and Dr. E. T. Brown, secretary-treasurer.

All members of the society are urged to attend this meeting along with members transferred from other institutions, and who are now living in Chapel Hill. Those persons desiring to attend should notify Dr. Horace Crockford of the chemistry department.

STATE MUSICIANS WILL MEET TODAY

Greensboro Oct. 15. — The complete program for the second annual conference of music teachers and supervisors, that is to be held at North Carolina College Friday and Saturday, has just been issued at the office of Dr. Wade R. Brown, dean of the school of music at the state institution for women.

The North Carolina musicians, more than 100 of them, will register at the music building Friday morning at 9 o'clock, and at 9:15 o'clock will hear Dr. Victor L. F. Rebmann, of New York, speak on the subject "Musings, in Retrospect and in Prospect, on the North Carolina State Contest—Instrumental Music and Music Education in General."

Bruce A. Carey, of Philadelphia, is to talk to the assembly at 10:45 o'clock on vocal music. Both men will conduct clinics during the afternoon Friday, Dr. Rebmann at 2 o'clock, Professor Carey at 3:30 o'clock.

A dinner in the Florentine room of the King Cotton hotel at 7:30 o'clock in the evening will close the conference sessions Friday. L. L. Stookey, of High Point, will preside at the meeting, and the two visiting speakers and others will make short talks.

The conference will be continued Saturday morning at 9

THIS AFTERNOON MARKS CLOSE OF RUSHING SEASON

Bids To Be Distributed in Gerrard Hall at 2 O'clock, Concluding Rushing Period.

The curtain will be lowered on the last act of the rushing season of 1930 this afternoon when several hundred new men gather in Gerrard hall at two o'clock to designate their choice of fraternities. Executive Secretary R. B. House and Dr. J. C. Lyons will be assisted by the executive committee of the Interfraternity Council in handling the new men. Jack Ward, Will Yarborough, Tom Hunter, John Cooper and M. D. Holderness compose this committee.

According to Ward, who is president of the council, the new men will meet in Gerrard hall at two o'clock this afternoon. There they will be divided into groups and seated alphabetically. No talking will be allowed among the men after they enter Gerrard hall. Further instructions will be given after the men meet.

Beginning with the opening of the University the acts have changed often. The first one was silent. Freshmen were here; fraternity men were here. But neither could make any move indicative of rushing.

Friday, September 26, brought the second act when the new men visited the various houses by invitation. Two days of this and the real rushing began. For two weeks rushing has been going at full steam.

But it was not until last week that the process known as "high pressure" began. By that time the fraternities knew whom they were going to bid and the new men had some hazy ideas about fraternities. But when "high pressure" week got underway rushers and rushees alike began to show the wear and tear.

Rushing ended midnight, Wednesday. The last night, despite an abundance of rain and mud, showed those new men who had not made up their minds wandering from house to house. The others, those who made their decisions and showed no indication of changing, seemed happy. They went to picture shows, listened to radios and smiled when there were conferences between rusher and rushee.

The season was quiet. One would hardly have known that rushing season was in progress except for the crowd around Pritchard-Lloyd Drug Co. Rumors of violations of rules floated about, but investigation by the committee of the Interfraternity Council disclosed nothing. Either the boys who knew refused to tell or they were just talking.

"Cut-throat" rushing was rumored, but the accused fraternities always made vehement denials. Admissions of such would have been fatal.

"All in all the rushing season worked well," Jack Ward, president of the Council, said. "Of course there were violations, but we couldn't get any reports, and we aren't detectives."

Pledge Day Brings Relief

The pledging of several hundred freshmen by fraternities this afternoon will create widely different emotions in the two principals—the rushers and the rushees. Relief will be expressed by the rushers; regret by the rushees.

Rushing here tends to create illusions in the minds of first year men. Finding themselves the object of simultaneous interest among several fraternities causes freshmen to over-estimate their importance. When they discover that fraternity men are concerned over their choice of fraternities, the freshmen feel that their decisions are worth a great deal more than they really are.

These ideas are dispelled shortly after pledge day. Popularity doesn't help the new men to pass examinations, and certain pledge buttons mean less than nothing to professors. They discover that although they were of importance to the fraternities they meant nothing to the life of the campus. Their decisions did not alter the trend of events here.

But to the fraternity men pledge day brings relief. During the two weeks they have neglected their work, and refused their responsibility. Mid-terms approach and their time may be devoted to more profitable pursuits than rushing freshmen.

The freshmen will do well to remember much they learned during freshman week, and forget all they've heard during rushing season. The fraternity men settle to the routine of college life without advice.

Purging The Dialectic Senate

The present membership of the Dialectic Senate is to be congratulated upon its recent decision to drop the roll members who fail to attend a reasonable number of meetings. Another wise ruling regards the matter of Yackety Yack statistics. Officials of the senate are to place in the hands of the Yackety Yack editor a list of men whose activities in the society have been sufficiently potent to make them eligible to list under their picture the words "Dialectic Senate."

The above ruling is designed to eradicate a grievance of long standing; namely, the appearance in the Yackety Yack of some three hundred claims of membership in the senate, when the active membership seldom exceeds thirty-five. The carefully edited list which the year book editor will be given will exclude men who have attended one meeting in three years, for example. Such persons will have to go out for football or boxing for a day or so in order to swell their statistics by such imposing (and falsely pretentious) terms as "varsity football," or "varsity boxing."

Along with the influx of an unusually large number of new members, has come a determination to make membership in the senate something to be sought after, rather than a medium through which fraternities can add to the activities of their freshmen.

Such rejuvenating policies as those already referred to indicate that the Dialectic Senate is hitting a new stride.—J. C. W.

Co-Edna Comments

By Edna Morisette

Now that rushing is over, the active members of the two sororities can live a life of comparative ease. It has suddenly been discovered that pledges have the very nicest kind of voices over a telephone and it's so convenient not to stop all conversation when the phone rings because you know some sweet little pledge will come and knock quietly on the door and tell you that someone wishes to speak with you. It's so much more lady-like than yelling at the top of one's lungs.

One member of this column's admiring public has asked for something original. Since someone has said that nothing is original we hope that last week's column satisfied that request.

At last the common hue and cry that is raised at the co-ed shack about dinner time of, "Honest I'd love to but I've got so much to do, I'd better to to the library"—or, "I'm going to be awfully busy, I have 500 pages to read at the library tonight," has been varied. One blue-eyed darling made the remark last night over her dessert that "If I didn't have so much work to do I'd go to the library." Well, you know the one about the honest confession.

On the recommendation of "Chips Off the Old Block," two of the fair element tried the Waffle Shop's famous coffee at chapel period yesterday morning. They not only agree that the coffee is excellent, but that one need not fear that he will be kept awake by its effects on the two classes following 10:30.

And now, just before we have the final hymn, may we say that there are a large number of students (and co-eds) who are not going to the Georgia game.

It Seems To Me, Too

By Phil Liskin

I saw a tiny black and white kitten sitting forlornly on a porch the other day, and I suddenly realized that up to then I had seen no cats in Chapel Hill. Dogs there are in plenty: dogs that walk about the campus with nonchalance and I've-seen-it-allness of seniors. They have a possessive air about them, as though the campus inherently belongs to them alone. So they have banded together and driven the felines to other fields.

I am sorry that this has happened. I like cats. They are noble animals. You never see a cat fawning at your feet, wagging its tail, and begging to be petted. It is you who must make the first advances to a cat. If she likes you, she will let you have the satisfaction of stroking her back, all the while maintaining her dignity with a lofty reserve. And if she isn't pleased with you, she will walk quietly away, and not growl peevishly like a dog.

The dog can never hope to attain the dignity and poise of the cat, and I suppose this is the reason for his eternal hostility towards her. The cat can point proudly to her ancestors, the tiger, leopard, and the lion—lord of the jungle. But the dog—? Well, he would rather not have it mentioned that his forefathers were the wolf, the jackal—the petty thieves of the animal kingdom.

Construction is already under way on a huge dirigible, the Akron, to be delivered to the U. S. government by May, 1931. This will be faster than all previous airships; will carry five airplanes in a hanger built within the hull; and will have mounted at strategic points sixteen rapid-fire, high pressure guns. It will be inflated with helium, the non-inflamable gas, and experts predict that it will be almost invulnerable to gun fire. In other words, it will be the most powerful and most deadly fighter that ever cruised the skies. It will also be the most expensive.

This extravagant expenditure of money on war machines will lead to one result. England will become incensed at her loss of supremacy in the air, and will build an even larger, faster, and more deadly airship than the Akron. France, Russia, and Japan will accept the challenge and enter the race for the domination of the air. Millions of dollars and much valuable labor will be wasted in the construction of these air machines whose sole functions are to destroy.

There can be only one outcome to this mad race for supremacy in armaments—war. It will come and when it does, the civilian population who stood aside meekly while the military brains of their governments feverishly carried through their programs, will bear the brunt of the war's punishment. When the people of the world stop supporting all military preparations, then only will war become a myth of the past. But so long as they continue to maintain their present indifferent attitude, just so long will war continue to be inevitable.

play against Yale similiar to the one Maryland used against Carolina with such good results last Saturday. Cerney reported that from the beginning of the game, which Tennessee won from Mississippi, there was no doubt as to the outcome. Tennessee led through the whole game, completely crushing Mississippi with Tennessee's two star ends and one flashy backfield ace out of the fray. Cerney rates the Vols as in a class by themselves, and picks them to be near the top when the curtain rings down the football season.

Each year at some principal city of the United States, there is a meeting of the prominent football coaches of the country. This year the meeting is to be held in New York City, December 29. At each meeting several coaches are selected to deliver talks on different aspects of football. The coaches who have this honor bestowed upon them have to merit this honor by coaching some team up to a point of distinction in the previous football season. Collins has done exactly that, having introduced the Notre Dame system at Chapel Hill, and has put the Carolina team among the best in the country. No doubt, Collins was selected because of the fine work he has done at Carolina, and as a result of Carolina's victory last year over the "Golden Tornado," 1928 National champions.

After answering many and varied questions sent in by enthusiasts, Collins finally wound up his radio talk by giving the impression that Carolina would use every trick known to them in order to whip the University of Georgia at Athens tomorrow.

Tar Heel-Bulldog Game Most Important Contest At Home For Georgians

Advance Sales Indicate That Thousands Will See Game In Sanford Stadium.

GEORGIA IN GOOD SHAPE

Prepare for Tar Heels With Such Men as Chandler, Waugh, Downes and Smith.

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Athens, Ga., October 16—The University of Georgia Bulldogs and the University of North Carolina Tar Heels will meet in Sanford Stadium in Athens Saturday afternoon in the annual renewal of their feud of years standing.

Besides being the last and most important football game to be staged in Georgia's new stadium this year, the North Carolina game will be Homecoming Day for the University of Georgia, and thousands of alumni are expected to gather from all sections of the country for the annual day of homecoming to the scenes of their college days.

Advance ticket sales indicate that thousands will jam into the stadium to see the Bulldogs and the Tar Heels renew their annual struggle for supremacy on the gridiron. Besides the thousands of Bulldog supporters who are expected for the game, North Carolina is expected to bring a train load of students and Alumni down to Athens with them. The game is expected to draw as many as the battle with Georgia Tech last December, which had a crowd of twenty thousand.

Georgia last year defeated North Carolina at Chapel Hill, after the Tar Heels had sprung a surprise and a new football star on the South in defeating Tech the week before while Georgia was astonishing the nation with a 15-0 defeat of the Yale Bulldogs on the occasion of the first Yale trip South, to dedicate Sanford stadium. The Tar Heels were beaten 19-12, after the Bulldogs had rallied in the last half of the Chapel Hill game to score two touchdowns and their second victory in two weeks over two strong football teams.

Georgia's defeat of North Carolina was the only conference loss the Tar Heels suffered last year, and the Bulldog victors kept the North Carolina university from taking its place as the conference football champion, a place that it would have rightfully deserved if they had won from Georgia. Georgia stood lower in the conference standing last year with two conference defeats on the losing side of the ledger, but had almost as successful a season as the Tar Heels, winning six games while losing four during the season, the wins including victories over Yale, Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Alabama.

While the Bulldogs are endeavoring to make it two in a row over the Tar Heels and to pave the way for a successful year in the conference, the Tar Heels will be striving for revenge for the defeat last year and will also be trying to keep their record clear so far as conference teams go, for the North Carolinians believe they have their greatest chance in years to head the Southern conference in wins.

Georgia boasts a backfield exactly the same as the one that beat North Carolina last year, with the exception of Bennie Rothstein, now assistant Georgia coach. Jack "The Ripper" Roberts, who ripped his way into the eyes of the conference football followers by his rough handling of the Tar Heel line; Spurgeon Chandler, the passing

Your "Uncle Robbie" is living up to his reputation as the David Harum of baseball. Tuesday, he again pulled one of his "wonder trades," this time pulling the wool over the eyes of William Baker, president of the lowly Phils. All that the Brooklyn boss did was to send Pitchers Elliott and Dudley, Outfieler Lee ,and a "cash consideration" in return for Lefty O'Doul and "Fresco" Thompson. As soon as the trade was officially announced by Frank B. York, president of the Brooklyn Robbins, the Dodger fans started claiming the 1931 flag. And why not? Hasn't Robbie plugged up his weak spot with one of the leading second basemen in the National League and hasn't he given his team the extra bit of punch that kept Brooklyn from being one of the World Series' participants last year.

Together with the news of the Brooklyn-Philadelphia trade, comes the official announcement that Joe McCarthy, former leader of the Chicago Cubs, has signed a two year contract to manage the New York Yankees. This news, however, did not come as any surprise, because the news of McCarthy's resignation as manager of the Cubs had no sooner been announced than his name was linked as the successor of Bob Shawkey, who was finishing his one year contract at the reins of the "Rupert Rifles." Another familiar man mentioned as Shawkey's successor was Babe Ruth, who until last year was the home run king of the majors. The "Bambino" still has a few years left as an active player, and the worries of a manager's job would help shorten his career. So that let the Babe out.

Yesterday seemed to be a banner day for baseball, for the Southern Association has also made an important change in its lineup for next season. Knoxville, Tenn., will take the place of Mobile; this was decided by a vote of the league directors, who convened at Memphis for their annual meeting.

President Hamilton's troubles with the Mobile fans, the dropping of attendance at Mobile Park, began when he started selling players to meet expenses, and his offer to sell his franchise to Knoxville early in the season led to dissension which culminated in the change. Under the new arrangement cities in the league are: Memphis, Knoxville, Nashville, Chattanooga, Birmingham, New Orleans, and Little Rock.

Northwestern University's football team, already weakened by the illness of Hank Bruder, got another setback when Harry Kent, star tackle, was ruled ineligible under the three year rule. Kent, one of the stalwarts of Coach Hanley's forward wall, played one season at the Central Teacher's College in Oklahoma, and under the Big Ten's three year rule, no student is allowed to play more than three years.

The North Carolina coaches and players read where Georgia completed but one and tried but four passes in their 51-0 win over Mercer, but that doesn't mean anything except that the Bulldogs were "holding out," and Carolina plans to have its aerial defense polished to the utmost before the Carolina-Georgia game at Athens Saturday.

GEORGIA'S STAR ENDS

SMITH KELLY

"Catfish" Smith and Kelly are two of the reasons why it will be hard for the Tar Heels to gain around end in the Carolina Georgia game tomorrow afternoon at Athens. Smith is a regular left end, while Kelly is a substitute for Captain Herb Maffett.

Carolina Team Leaves For Homecoming Game With Georgia Bulldogs

TO DRILL IN ATHENS

Squad to Take Final Light Workout and Signal Drill in Georgia City Today.

THIRTY-THREE MAKE TRIP

A large crowd was on hand last night in front of Swain hall at 7 o'clock to give the Tar Heel football team a big send off as it started on its trip to Athens, Georgia, for the annual game with the University of Georgia. Coach Collins and a squad of thirty-three men will arrive in Athens this morning and go through a light workout and signal drill this afternoon.

Those making the trip are: Johnson, Nichols, Cole and Tabb, left ends; Thompson, Hodges and Cowper, left tackles; McIver, Dunavant and Blackwood, left guards; Lipscomb and Gilbreath, centers; Fysal, Newcombe and Philpott, right guards; McDade, Underwood and Crew, right tackles; Parsley, Brown and Bridgers, right ends; Branch, Wyrick and Moore, quarterbacks; Nash, Slusser and Erickson, right halfbacks; Magner, Maus and Chandler, left halfbacks; House, McNeill and Houston, fullbacks.

The squad as a whole is in good shape for the game, but several of the old injuries are still keeping the Tar Heels from being in the best of condition. Henry House and June Underwood are still troubled with leg injuries,

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Everett Loses Second Game

Everett dormitory lost its second game in the intramural series yesterday afternoon when it was defeated by Aycock 6-0. Although passing was a bit ragged for both teams, several nice gains were made on both sides. Longest and Potter starred for the Aycock outfit while Bloom played a good game for Everett. The Everett defense proved strong, holding Aycock to three first downs, but their offensive lacked the push needed to score.

Zeta Psi Wins on Downs

Zeta Psi scored a win over Theta Chi yesterday on first downs, managing to shove over five first downs to the Theta's four in the closest game of the day. Strong defensive work for both teams kept the ball shifting up and down the field for the entire four periods, never to cross either goal for a score. A five minute extra period was played to break the tie in downs at the end of the regular game limit, and Zeta Psi was able then to gain the first down that won the game for them.

MARYLAND FROSH TO BRING STRONG ELEVEN FOR GAME

Want to Avenge Defeat Which Varsity Handed Old Liners Last Saturday.

Again the freshmen and the Tar Heels scrimmaged on the slippery turf of Kenan stadium. This time the freshmen took the offense in the form of Georgia plays while the varsity played on the defense. Although the scrimmage today was not as long as the one held yesterday, it was much more spirited. The Tar Heels were raring to go, and the freshmen were just as eager. They were pointing for the coming tussle with the Maryland first year men Saturday and the whole squad was trying to make the best showing possible to improve their chances of playing in the game.

As far as can be learned the Maryland yearlings will present a powerful eleven. They will be smarting under the 28-21 defeat handed their varsity last Saturday by our own Tar Heels, and will come down here determined to even the score. The game has all indications of being worthwhile seeing.

This afternoon the yearlings put on a satisfactory exhibition of what can be expected of them in the way of an offense. Although they were running hostile plays, Hackney, Phipps, Guffrey, and Woolen, in the backfield showed power. Phipps, especially, starred through his passing ability. Many times he ran back and shot arrow-like passes to Woolen for gains. In the line Barkley and Mullis showed power. Brandt, an end, was injured and it is uncertain whether he will be able to play Saturday.

Coach Enright has given the freshmen a number of plays and they have been perfecting these between scrimmages with the

PUGILISTS EXPECT TO HAVE STRONG TEAM THIS YEAR

Coach Crayton Rowe Has Five Lettermen Around Which To Build Outfit.

By Phillip Alston

Led by Captain Noah Goodridge, the Carolina boxers will present one of the most dangerous teams in the South this winter. Coach Rowe has five lettermen, seniors who have fought together for three years, to use as the basis of his team and expects them to have their biggest season this winter. In addition to the letter-men, Coach Rowe has a host of last year's reserves and freshmen who are capable of doing good work when called upon.

Evan Vaughan will be back in the bantamweight this year, and hopes to regain his 1929 form, which saw him ranked as one of the South's best scrappers. Last winter Vaughan was sick a great deal of the time, and never had an opportunity to get into real fighting shape. "Speedy" Boring winner of the intramural tournament last spring, will also be in the bantamweight and has real possibilities. He lacks Vaughan's experience, but is learning fast and will be dangerous.

Harry Sheffield, veteran, is due to be back in the featherweight class this year. He will meet heavy competition in Clark, one of last year's varsity men and Marty Levinson, up from the freshmen. All three are good men, with plenty of experience.

Captain Goodridge has little competition among the lightweights. He is one of the smartest boxers in the South and has been defeated only three times during his career. He was the only Carolina boxer to score a win in the Penn State meet last winter and went to the finals in the conference tournament in

A Gas Station Contest

Prizes Offered for the Greatest Improvement in Appearance

The citizenship committee of the Community Club, of which Mrs. J. M. Valentine is chairman, has inaugurated a beautification contest among the filling stations in Chapel Hill township. For the greatest improvement in the next year there will be a first prize amounting to $10 donated by Colonel and Mrs. Pratt and six evergreen shrubs donated by W. C. Coker. For the the second prize Mr. Coker has given six shrubs.

Members of the committee are visiting filling stations on all the roads leading out of the village and are enlisting the interest of the owners.

Upon application to Mr. Coker every station owner in the township who enters this contest may have at once, without cost, ten sweet-breath-of-spring shrubs to plant about his station. Also, the botanist will give him information about planting and cultivating them.

The citizenship committee's main work this next year will be to promote the beautification of highways. It will try to enlist the co-operation of business men in ridding the highways of advertising signs.

PUGLISTS EXPECT TO HAVE STRONG TEAM THIS YEAR

Charlottesville, Virginia. Although not a heavy hitter, Goodridge has a weaving style and enough speed to make him one of the toughest men in the South.

With six men in the running, the welterweight class is the most uncertain division at present. Jimmy Gatlin and Jack Farris, from the 1930 varsity; Billy Stallings, Cecil Jackson and Nat Lumpkin, up from the freshmen; and Holderness, winner of the intramural tournament, are working in this weight. All have a good chance to win. These men are already hard at work, and Coach Rowe is giving them special attention in the hope of finding a suitable successor to Archie Allen.

Among the middleweights, the veteran, Obie Davis, will find stiff opposition in Tom Parsons and Bill Miller. Last winter Davis was bothered by colds a great part of the time and was under weight. Parsons, star of the 1929 freshman team, was idle on account of a football injury. Both expect to be in good shape this season, making this one of the strongest weights.

John Warren will probably move up to the heavyweight division, leaving the lightheavy berth open to Platt Landis, another sophomore knock-out specialist. Landis is now out for football. Hugh Wilson, another sophomore, will also fight as a heavyweight. He scored two knock-outs last year, and is looking much better this season.

With such material as this, Coach Rowe hopes to add another championship to his string, and put Carolina back on top of the Southern boxing heap. Several of the men are already working out while the rest will be called on to report within a few weeks.

Three heavyweight pugilists, according to a sports writer, have salted away more than a million dollars each. Barnum was right.—Dayton Journal.

Wake Forest 7; State 0

Quillan's line plunge from the four-yard line for a touchdown in the second quarter gave the Wake Forest Deacons its margin of victory over N. C. State's Wolfpack yesterday, 7-0, in their annual "Fair Classic" at Riddick Field, Raleigh.

In addition to scoring the lone touchdown, Quillan played a stellar game offensively and defensively.

TEACHER ENTERS POLITICAL ARENA

New York, Oct. 15.—Professor Robert P. Carroll, of Syracuse University, has been selected by the newly formed "Law Preservation Party," of New York state as its gubernatorial candidate to oppose Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democrat, and Charles H. Tuttle, Republican nominee.

The wet party was formed after the Republican State Convention went "wet" and nominated one of the outstanding modificationists in the country for its candidate. The new party is made up for the most part of dry Republicans.

"GOOD NEWS" IS TALKIE VERSION OF STAGE HIT

"Good News," which will open today at the Carolina theatre, was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under direction of Edgar MacGregor and Nick Grinde, with Bessie Love in the featured role.

This is a production of unusual interest, because it brings to the screen the famous Broadway success by Lawrence Schwab and B. G. DeSylva intact with many of the original cast appearing in supporting roles.

Edgar MacGregor, who co-directed, produced the original stage presentation, as well as many other New York hits, including the recent "Desert Song," "New Moon" and "Follow Thru."

THREE KICKOFFS BECOME SCORES

In three Eastern football games Saturday, opening kickoffs were run back for touchdowns by speedy backfield men. In the Yale bowl, Austin Downes of Georgia took the ball on his own twenty yard line and traveled the rest of the field without being stopped. At Baker field, New York, Ralph Hewitt of Columbia received the kick-off ten yards out from the Lion's goal line and sped the remaining ninety yards for the score. And at State College, Pennsylvania, Penn State's right halfback, Evans, did the same thing, covering ninety-eight yards.

and punting halfback who was another of the crosses the Tar Heels had to bear in that game, Marian Dickens, Armin Waugh, Johnny Davidson, other halfbacks, and Austin Downes, Georgia's cool-headed quarterback, are all back this year. And in addition to all this the Bulldogs have a line that was one of the strongest in the conference last year, including among its numbers the famed red-heads, Leathers and Maddox, guards; Bobby Rose and Earl Lynn, tackles; Captain Herb Maffett and Catfish Smith, All-American ends; and Spero Tassapoulas, pudgy little regular center.

Add to all that a combination of sophomore linemen who have shown themselves the equals of the veterans, two sophomore full backs who are expected to furnish thrills in every game they appear, and you have a strong Bulldog team that will be hard to beat any day in the week. Buster Mott and Homer Keys, diminutive and youthful sophomores, also rated as two of the outstanding halfback prospects in the South are expected to see service in the Tar Heel game.

While Georgia has what experts say is probably their greatest team in recent years, the Tar Heels are being rated now as one of the few teams that stand a chance to win the Southern conference championship this year. With Johnny Branch, the great Carolina back who scintillated across the conference horizon last fall, the Tar Heels have a scoring there that would be a thorn in the side of any team with even mediocre players to aid him. And with Johnny Branch in the backfield along with Nash and Magner, two other veteran stars, and probably the greatest line North Carolina has ever had, football fans who journey to Athens next Saturday may be treated to the greatest thrill of the year.

varsity. They will open up with all they have Saturday and, with any kind of cooperation, they should score some points.

Although no definite selection has been made as to the starting line-up, it is probable that these men will be included: Harrington and Brandt, ends; Mulligan and Mullis, tackles; Barkley and McIver, guards; Parker, center. The backfield with these will include Woolen, quarterback, and Hackney, Guffrey, and Phipps. These men may start but the coaches plan to use as many men as possible in an effort to uncover any possibilities for coming varsity service.

Carolina Team Leaves For Homecoming Tilt With Georgia Bulldogs

and Bud McIver's shoulder has been giving him some trouble, but these men are expected to see a great deal of action before the game is over Saturday afternoon.

In the final workout before leaving for Georgia, the Tar Heels spent the afternoon drilling on defense for Coach Harry Mehre's plays. The freshmen, running Georgia plays, succeeded in getting through the varsity for several substantial gains, and the backs were off in covering passes, but the line from tackle to tackle showed up better than it has in recent scrimmages. An end play after a delayed pass from behind the line gave the Tar Heel ends some trouble for a while.

At the close of practice Coach Collins told the squad that one slip because of doing something wrong or of not doing it right would prove disastrous, and that spotting the Bulldogs a touchdown as they did Maryland and V. P. I. would mean sure defeat.

He seemed to be pleased that the Atlanta papers have not been praising the Tar Heels since Georgia so badly beat Yale, for he likes to have his team go into the game with the attitude that they are up against an eleven which will require every bit of power that they can exert.

"If you go into that game with the listless attitude which you have shown in some recent practices," said Coach Collins, "you are going to get a bad licking. But if you get in there and fight like you are capable of fighting, you will win the game."

Sigma Phi Sigma Wins

The Sigma Phi Sigma team outplayed the Chi Psis to win by the wide margin of 19 to 0. It was the Sigma Phi Sig's game the whole way through. Their passwork kept the ball in the Chi Psi's area most of the time, and their defense managed to hold the Chi Psi advance in safe territory when that team had the ball.

Phi Gams Swamp Sigma Zeta

The Phi Gam-Sigma Zeta game was turned into a track meet yesterday afternoon with the Phi Gams doing most of the running, and scoring 32 points against a blank for the Sigma Zetas. Marsey and Bryant were star dash men for Phi Gamma Delta, both getting off to runs of 40 and 60 yards that were too much for the Sigma Zeta boys. Bryant, of Sigma Zeta, played a nice game for his team, netting them two first downs.

Lambda Chi Alpha won by forfeit when the Pi Kappa Phi's failed to appear.

Ruffin Wins 20-0

Lewis was unable to stop the strong passing attack of Ruffin tag football team and Ruffin won 20-0. Riggs, MacBride, Royster and Bethune starred for Ruffin. MacBride's 30-yard run, "A La Johnny Branch," was the prettiest play of the game.

Graham Wins From Grimes

Graham defeated Grimes 12-0 in a game which was much closer than the score indicates. It looked like a tie until Jacobs blocked one of Grimes' punts and Cohen fell on it for Graham's first score. Legore scored the other touchdown on a line play.

FEDERATION HAS STUDENT LEADER HERE FOR TALKS

E. R. Murrow, of National Federation of Students, to Speak Before Y, Di and Phi.

E. R. Murrow, president of the National Federation of Students, will speak tomorrow night at a joint meeting of the three Y cabinets at the time of their regular weekly meetings in the Y. M. C. A. lobby at 7:15.

Mr. Murrow, who is being brought here by the North Carolina Student Federation, will also make an address to the combined membership of the Di and Phi literary societies on Tuesday night in Gerrard hall at 7:30.

At the joint meeting of the three Y cabinets tomorrow night, the national president will discuss some subject pertaining to the "Moral Responsibility of Student Government." President Murrow is said to be well informed on the subject of student government, and his address should be of interest to the entire student body.

Following his talk the speaker will conduct an open forum on the different phases of student government. All persons interested in hearing Mr. Murrow's talk will be expected to be present. The presidents of the three Y cabinets especially urge that the members of the cabinets attend the meeting.

NIGHT BLOOMING PLANT ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION

The Night Blooming Cactus plant exhibited in front of Davie hall is attracting quite a bit of interest among students of biology. The plant is commonly called Night Blooming Cereus, but this is not its correct name, according to Mr. Totten, of the department of botany. The correct name is Night Blooming Cactus. This plant blooms at night only. It bloomed on Thursday night between the hours of 9:00 and 12:00. Mr. Totten was there showing how the plant had to be pollinated. He explained that the plant was a native of Mexico and that there the pollination process was carried on by a certain insect or moth which is not to be found in North America; therefore artificial pollination is necessary.

The plant is usually propagated by cutting branches and rooting them in damp sand.

This plant cannot stand the winter weather, and it soon will be removed to a place of protection. The plant blooms three or four times during the summer and early fall. It has had as many as seventy blossoms during the summer, which have a very pleasant odor. After the plant blooms, it closes up and does not bloom again until more buds form.

Mrs. B. B. Lloyd presented the plant to the botany department three years ago. Since that time it has been kept for observation there.

INTERNATIONALLY NOTED ORGANIST CHOSEN FOR DEDICATION CONCERTS

Edward Eigenschenk Has Been Recipient of Much Praise for Ability as Soloist While Yet Comparatively Young; Studied in Paris.

Dr. H. S. Dyer, of the music department, announces that the dedication ceremony for the new organ will take place Friday and Saturday, November 14 and 15, at the music auditorium, in the form of two concerts. Tickets are available upon application at the Book Exchange, the Students' Supply Store, and at the music building.

After the consideration of approximately ten of America's leading organ masters, Edward Eigenschenk, soloist with Chicago Symphony Orchestra, has been chosen to render the dedication concerts, and has already accepted the invitation. He states that he is greatly pleased at being able to dedicate the organ, and also at being able to witness another step in the encouragement of interest in organ music to university students.

Mr. Eigenschenk was selected from the many other organists chiefly because of his wonderful ability and attainments as a soloist, and his extreme youth, being only 22 years of age. He has been outstanding for a number of years as a student, and there was no surprise on the part of his former teachers when his rapid rise to prominence became a certainty. His first organ studies were begun under Frank Van Dusen at the American Conservatory of Music, during which time he made a very enviable record, being awarded first prize in three organ contests in three consecutive years, winning the cash prize in the contest sponsored by the Illinois chapter of the American Federation of Music Clubs, and first place in an organ contest sponsored by the Society of American Musicians, which carries with it as a prize an appearance as soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Frederick Stock.

After leaving the Conservatory, Mr. Eigenschenk went abroad for study with Joseph Bonnet in Paris, and while there studied under Dupre, where, during his last year, he distinguished himself by being declared the most outstanding musician of American birth ever to have studied there. His signal honor while abroad, however, was being chosen from a class of fifty to render the major concert, which honor was all the more noteworthy considering his extereme youthfulness. He was by far the youngest student in the class.

One of the most outstanding appeals of this artist as a soloist is derived from his ability to render the selections from Bach with an attractiveness which delights even the most unappreciative of audiences, according to the foremost Chicago critics, and his unusually large repertoire of more than 2000 numbers includes all the major works of this famous composer. His program at the dedication concert, Mr. Eigenschenk declares, will be selected particularly for students, and judging from the write-ups in Chicago papers, he is wonderfully adept at choosing programs which may be appreciated even by persons not intimately acquainted with this type of music. Edward Moore, critic, writes in the Chicago Tribune, "Edward Eigenschenk displayed great technical facility, a fine understanding of the art of registration, and rarest of talents among organists, a vital and accurate

BONN DISCUSSES GERMAN POLITICS

German Economist Addresses Large Group in Gerrard Thursday Evening.

Dr. M. J. Bonn, professor of economics and director of the Institute of Finance at Handelschochachule, in Berlin, spoke to a large audience Thursday evening in Gerrard hall on the general subject of "Economics and Politics in Modern Germany." The speaker was introduced by a former pupil of his, Dr. E. W. Zimmerman.

In tracing the connection between economics and politics in Germany, Dr. Bonn went back to the days before the war, and said that right now Germany is in an experimental state and offers a valuable laboratory for economic students. "There are two great series of questions that divide people," according to Dr. Bonn. "One is religious, which is now practically an argumentive question of the past, and the other is that of government and politics. The form of government does not always satisfy people. There is, for instance, the question of taxation, an economic one as far as it goes. What should be the rate of taxation? Who should pay taxes? These are the type of questions which arouse people. Germany following the war was

BROOKS SPEAKS AT DEBATE MEET

Discusses Subject of Debate With Cambridge University This Year.

Following the usual preparation practice the debate squad Thursday night heard L. M. Brooks, assistant professor of sociology, give an outline of the history of woman's emergence from the home, and discuss the advantages and disadvantages of this emergence. Dr. Brooks' lecture was the first of a series on the question of the advantages of woman's new status in the world, which will be the subject of the debate with Cambridge university.

In his talk, which was heard by twenty members of the squad, Brooks pointed out that woman's emergence really began when she went out of the cave to plant beans just in case the "old man" failed to knock down the bacon with his knotted club. He showed the character of her submergence in the Hebrew, Greek, Roman and recent civilizations, and concluded by showing the results of invention on women, and the results of her emergence on the home and children.

Mr. George McKie announced that the subject for the State College dual debate on November 20 and December 9th, will be on the question of free trade.

COMMITTEE NOW PLANNING YEAR'S ENTERTAINMENTS

Tickets for Student Series Will Be Issued in Two Groups.

Tickets for the student entertainment series will be ready for sale as soon as the program committee formulates the year's program, stated the chairman of the committee yesterday. A committee meeting is to be held sometime in the near future for the purpose of finally deciding upon the year's program.

Dr. H. S. Dyer, chairman of the Student Entertainment Committee, has been corresponding with the managers of the prospective production companies for the past few months. Dr. Dyer is of the opinion that, because of the present economic conditions, the committee will be able to get some of the best talent in the country for very reasonable prices.

Because of a cut in the budget of the University, this entertainment committee will not receive any funds from the state as has been the custom in the past years. For this reason the committee will be faced with the problem of either cutting down in the character of the performances or raising the price of the season tickets. This question is to be decided upon at the next meeting.

When the student coupon books come out this year, they will be published in two series, A and B. Since there are approximately 1500 coupon holders this year, it will be necessary to divide this number in two sections so that room will be available in the auditorium. The auditorium itself will probably seat this number, but it will not be able to seat this number together with the local attendance, which is usually comparatively large.

Each performance that is to be produced here will run for two consecutive nights. One night will be for the series A tickets and the second night for the section B tickets. In this way the auditorium will be able to accomodate the large crowd of ticket holders.

WILLIAMS SPEAKS TO SOPHOMORES ON LAW ASSOCIATION

Sophomore chapel, Friday, was devoted to the filling out of vocational cards. The vocation which a student had decided upon, or which he preferred, was indicated. The pre-law men were asked to remain a while after the others had left.

Through J. A. Williams, its president, the pre-law sophomores learned of the law association which was formed last year, and is to be continued this year. The organization meets once a month and a short program is given. The purpose of the association is to create a bond between the pre-law students and the law men themselves. Then too, the undergraduates can learn through the law association, what to expect when they enter the law school.

Questions were asked and answered; and a show of hands seemed to indicate that the second year men were behind the movement.

Father John Manly says Mass will be held every Sunday in Gerrard Hall at 8:30.

TO MAKE PLANS NEXT WEEK FOR MUSIC PROGRAMS

Several Attractions Under Consideration for Program in Music Auditorium.

No formal action has yet been taken in regard to the opening of the new music auditorium, stated Dr. H. S. Dyer, chairman of the committee in charge of providing a program, in an interview yesterday.

The committee will meet sometime during the coming week, and will definitely decide on a program. The opening of the auditorium is to take place November 14 and 15.

Although the committee has not yet decided on the attraction to be presented at the time of the formal opening, several entertainments are being discussed.

The Pavley-Oukrainsky Ballet is one of the companies which is being considered by the committee. This company, according to Dr. Dyer, presents a most unusual invention, which has not been used in previous years. The plan of this company is to present a stage set as a forest. In the center of the stage will be a large screen on which will be shown characters who will take part in the performance as though they were really present in person on the stage. By an optical illusion the characters which are shown on the screen will appear to be actually on the stage in flesh and blood.

Some of the other attractions which are being considered by the committee are Paderewski, Kreisler, Richard Crooks, and the Belgian Opera. Many requests have also been made for the return of the Russian Symphony Choir, which appeared on the campus last year under the auspices of the entertainment committee.

Heretofore no plans have been made for the year's program of entertainments to be produced in the new music auditorium. Now that the date of its opening has finally been set, the year's program will soon be made out. The fact that the date of opening has not been set hindered the program committee in making any definite agreements with any of the productions.

Bell Is Absent

Dr. Bell, of the chemistry department has been absent from his classes for some little time. He is ill with a sickness known as the "shingles." It is expected that he will be back in his classrooms within a week.

PARAGRAPHICS

"No one knows how far I have gone."—Albert Einstein. Furthermore, no one is going to try to find out.

This life might be exactly what we want, but one could consider before doing away with this one that we don't know anything about the next one.

Graduate students wouldn't find it difficult to have one idea of their own a day, if in their role of undergraduate they had tried cultivating an idea once a week.

Buddy Hackman Scores Again.

Buddy Hackman, better known as a football player than as President of the University of Tennessee student body, certainly scored for Tennessee in his telegram to the Editor of the Daily Tar Heel inviting our student body to be the guests of Tennessee for the game next Saturday.

The Tennessee halfback is undoubtedly one of the best backs in the South and we are inclined to think him one of the best student body presidents in this part of the country. He has impressed us as much by his telegram as he would by scoring many touchdwns against the Tar Heel team.

Such expressions from rival institutions do more to improve relations than any number of federations or love feasts.

Carolina, doubtlessly, would welcome Tennessee here for the game and the athletic authorities have in the past admitted students of other institutions to Carolina games at a nominal charge.

The attendance of Tar Heels will be determined largely by the outcome of the Georgia game this afternoon. But we would like to see a good delegation from here out there next Saturday, and if we could extend the same invitation to Tennessee for next year's contest it would make the rivalry between the two teams keener but on a higher level than many rivalries.

The Aye's And No's Of The Campus

By George Wilson

A very cordial invitation from the president of the student body of the University of Tennessee has been received asking that Carolina students attending the game between the two institutions be the guests of Tennessee while in Knoxville. From all indications, Tennessee will be host on a large scale next Saturday.

The greater part of pledging is about over and freshmen are beginning to be put in their place with a bang, with a lots of bangs.

Remarked one sophomore, "We have tolerated a freshman's smoking bad cigars for over three weeks now, but we'll get to the bottom of the matter right away."

The show "Whoopee" was being discussed and the story about the mother skunk who said "Let us pray" was retold. A freshman disagreed with the interpretation and said: "Weren't they porcupines?"

We turn to sweet and tender poetry, borrowing heavily upon a modern poet:

Hush, little freshman, don't you cry,
You'll be a frat man by and by,
When the paddles begin to sweep,
You'll have reason then to weep.

The Peter Steele Arsenal

By Louis Graves

Wilbur Daniel Steele, the celebrated short story writer, came home from the North Monday; and if by chance the Chapel Hill police paid a visit to his attic floor they would probably make a report justifying the headline, "Notorious Gangster Here from New York."

For here, where Edwin Greenlaw used to engage in the peaceful work of a scholar, is an array of the most murderous-looking weapons ever seen in the village—pistols and rifles and bolo knives and cutlasses and daggers. But they are not meant for slaughter, although they were used lustily for that purpose in times past.

The master of the house has nothing to do with these weapons. They are the property of his 12-year-old son, Peter Steele. The boy has been collecting them for three years, and now has 64 pieces. One of them, a sword, dates back to the reign of Louis XIV and, indeed, is said to have been used on a boar hunt by the Grand Monarch himself. King Louis would go out with his company of noblemen and lesser lights; these hangers-on would do the preliminary irksome job of rounding up the boar and wounding it to the point of death, and then the king would saunter upon the scene and despatch the beast with a thrust of the sword.

If Peter wanted to, he could get a good deal of money for his collection; but like all true collectors he spurns the idea of gold. All he is interested in is adding to his arsenal. He uses all his available pocket money for that purpose and frequently, when his own resources are low, makes a raid upon the parental purse.

The first thing he showed me, when we mounted to the attic Monday evening, was a tiny object which he described as a messenger pistol of 1820. It had a secret trigger, and in the butt was a compartment to hold the message from the prime minister or the ambassador or the general-in-chief.

Then there was a French flintlock pistol of 1760; and a Moorish pistol with an elaborately carved butt; and two East Indian daggers; and a Turkish blunderbuss pistol of 1790; and the pistol of a captured Cuban brigand; and a bolo knife from the Philippines, which was used for chopping wood as well as heads and necks; and a Siamese bandit's sword in a wooden scabbard bounded about with cord. And there were rifles—a Mauser, an Enfield, an Albini-Tersen from Belgium—and old muskets of the days when the load of powder and shot was pushed in from the muzzle. And many other pieces, the nature of which I can't remember.

Peter knows the story of each one. The thought occurred to me, as he reeled off all the data, that he had probably learned more history from these arms than he would learn at school in several years. His zeal in collecting them has guided his fancy back through the centuries and through the far-off lands of the world. It must make history vivid to have a dagger with which one of the wives of Suleiman stole along a palace corridor to make way with a too comely rival, or a cutlass used by a buccaneer on the Spanish Main.

"When did you start this collecting, and why?" I asked Peter. And I learned that his hobby used to be collecting stamps. But by the time he had reached the age of nine that was too tame. On Nantucket Island in the summer of 1927 he got a job as assistant in a curio shop, and this was when he made his farewell to stamps and took to arms. His grandmother started him off on his collection by buying an old pistol for him. Since then he has received gifts from his parents' friends coming back from their travels and from stage people who had to have ancient weapons for use in historical plays, and he has made some lucky finds in junk shops.

His eyes glitter when he displays his guns and pistols and swords, and as he waves them this way and that he gives you the impression that he might like to make a few experiments in mayhem right on the spot. You begin to grow alarmed and presently suggest that perhaps it is time to go downstairs where the rest of the folks are discussing art and literature in the living room. But Peter is not, after all, so very fierce. He lapses easily into civilized occupations. After we descend from the attic I am informed that this young warrior is taking piano lessons from Mrs. Fred McCall.

sense of rhythm." Eugene Stimson, in the Chicago Daily Journal, declares: "A clear and careful ear, excellent technical co-ordination and a tasteful choice of registration as the instrument in Orchestra Hall seems to permit, gave Mr. Eigenschenk's performance unusually impressive character and distinction."

Several criticisms as favorable as the ones in the leading Chicago papers appeared immediately after Mr. Eigenschenk appeared as organist with the Chicago Solo Orchestra at the premier performance of "Weaver of Tales," written by the conductor, Eric Delamarter. This same rendition was given at Wanamaker's in Philadelphia at the invitation of the National Association of Organists Convention of 1926, and elicited favorable criticisms by the foremost judges of organ performance.

At present, the artist is in the midst of an extensive tour of the South, and plans to be in this section some time before the concerts in Chapel Hill. While here he will be entertained by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the University faculty, who is a very close friend of Mr. Eigenschenk's.

in the midst of a great world crisis. The peace of Versailles brought about a great change in German politics. It saddled the country with a great indemnity, growing numbers of unemployed, and opened it to foreign influence. (On paper it seemed that Germay had full sovereignity, but in practice it was dictated to by foreign powers.) Besides this foreign soldiers were still in German territory, in fact it was not until four months ago that the last foreign soldier left Germany. Meanwhile Germany had to make good the havoc of war. A period of dreadful inflation came on, wrecking the fortunes of many, and putting the financial burden on the people. To help stabalize the economic order it was suggested that industries be brought under the government control, but according to the Versailles treaty any government property is liable for reparation. Then began the struggle to get a franchise, which both the economic and political orders would agree upon."

Contrasting Germany with other European countries Dr. Bonn said that the English love liberty, the French equality, but that the Germans have a stronger passion, that of loving order.

Following the lecture there were several questions asked by members of the audience. One of these was on the possibility of the return of the Kaiser. Dr. Bonn said that Wilhelm II was not foolish, and that he wouldn't dare to try it unless there was a rising in state of German affairs.

AN EXTRA SLICE AT A MEAL

At the new low bread prices we can eat up the wheat . . .

When the price of wheat fell so far that everyone saw a new level had been established, A&P cut the price of its pullman wrapped loaf. It's the policy of A&P to give its customers the savings on raw material.

There is another good reason for this reduction. American farmers are suffering from a glut of wheat. There's more than enough to go 'round—a bushel apiece for everyone in this country over last year's supply.

Congress has tried to help. President Hoover put the Farm Board to work. But the farmers are still overloaded with wheat. An extra slice a meal for each of us would do the trick—and at A&P prices it wouldn't cost much.

The best way to get rid of our surplus stock is to encourage the people to eat it up.

Georgia Prepared For Coming Of Tar Heels

Game To Be Reported On Gridgraph At Tin Can Starting At 3:00

TEAM WORKS AT GAINESVILLE ON WAY TO ATHENS

Coach Collins and Tar Heels Will Motor to Athens This Morning.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED

The gridgraph report of the North Carolina-Georgia game will be shown in the Tin Can this afternoon starting at 3:00. The game between the Carolina and Maryland freshmen is being played at 1:30 so that fans will be able to see both the game and the gridgraph report.

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

Athens, Georgia, Oct. 17.—The Georgia-North Carolina game, scheduled for tomorrow afternoon here in Sanford stadium, promises to be one of the most interesting games on the 1930 schedule for either team. Both teams present perfect records so far on their schedules, but the Bulldogs have made a more impressive showing in their victories.

Georgia won from Oglethorpe 31-6 and from Mercer 51-0. The Bulldog victory from Yale by an 18-14 score is the most definite indicator that Coach Harry Mehre's team is very strong this year.

The Tar Heels have defeated Wake Forest by 13-7, V. P. I. by 39-21, and Maryland by 28-21. Carolina has a powerful scoring team but seems unable to hold the opponents when they get the ball.

Both teams are in excellent shape for the game tomorrow, having gone through their last week games by receiving only a few bruised muscles.

Coach Collins and a squad of thirty-three men are spending tonight at Riverside Military Academy, Gainesville, after having taken a light workout there this afternoon. They will come to Athens tomorrow morning by bus, and will retire to the gymnasium here to rest until time for the game.

Newspaper writers in this section predict that Georgia will beat the Tar Heels by two touchdowns, but Coach Collins has a great eleven which is hard to beat. North Carolina has not hit its stride in the three games played so far, and for this reason has won by very close margins, but they seemed primed for the game with the Bulldogs tomorrow. A battle royal is expected, since both teams have perfect records in the conference race and are striving hard for leadership among the Southern colleges.

Oberlin College, after much deliberation over the expenditure of a recent $700,000 gift, has decided to build two dormitories, one of them for the single students of the institution, and another for the married men of the college. Kitchenette suits and all modern conveniences for married life will be found in the latter dormitory.

Probable Lineups:

Georgia	Pos.	Carolina
Smith	L. E.	Johnson
Rose	L. T.	Thompson
Leathers	L. G.	McIver
Tassapoulas	C.	Lipscomb
Maddox	R. G.	Fysal

DOPING 'EM OUT
By BOB BETTS

Storm warnings have been sent out to all forecasters this week by the schedule makers. Last week we missed our predictions on the Yale-Georgia, South Carolina-L. S. U., and Duke-Davidson games; ten of our choices came through for us. Today, however, there are some exteremely hard nuts to crack.

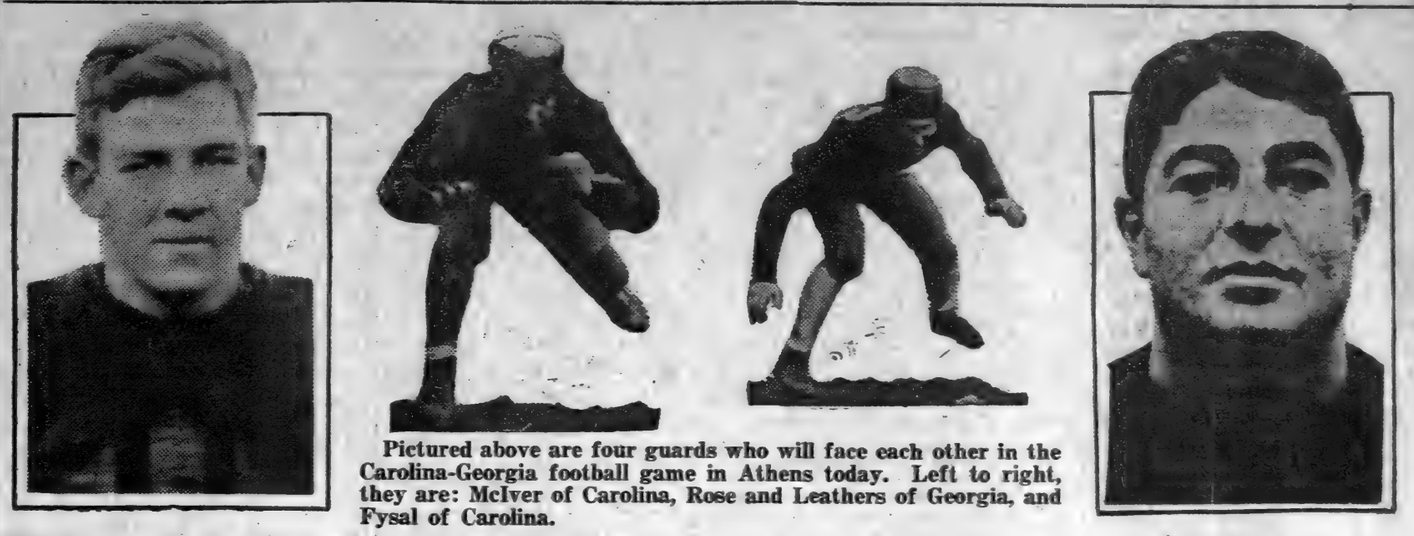
Jumping down to Athens, Georgia, we find the majority of dopesters picking Georgia to give North Carolina a second thrashing. The reason is that Georgia beat Yale. What does that prove about the Georgia-North Carolina game? Absolutely nothing. Georgia may win today, but "we are from Missouri" for the following reasons: first, Georgia pointed for her game with Old Eli; secondly, the Tar Heels have used only straight football so far and will dump out a bag full of tricks down in Athens this afternoon; thirdly, Carolina has not forgotten last year's humiliating defeat and will leave no stone unturned in order to bring about a victory. Chuck Collins' men may make the worst march through Georgia since Sherman plundered it. They hold a silght advantage over Georgia in the center of the line, while the Bulldogs have the edge on the flanks. Undoubtedly, the Tar Heels have the better backfield.

Away over in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, Coach Bob Neyland's charges will be trying to defend their record of not having lost a game in three years. Wallace Wade, singing his "swan song" at 'Bama, will give the Vols a warm reception. The Crimson Tide has i line averaging close to 200 pounds per man. Behind this line is Tommy Campbell, one of the flashiest backs in the South. Alabama, however, will miss the All-American fullback, Tony Holm, and Billy Hicks, quarter and captain on last year's team. The Vols, despite newspaper reports, will throw full strength on the field today with the exception of an end, Brandt. They have a powerful line and one of the best backfields in the country. The Vols should win, although don't be surprised at an upset.

Up at Annapolis, Jimmie DeHart's lads will be trying to sink the Navy. Duke has a strong team, but the Navy gang is a hard bunch to sink on sea or gridiron. If Duke's line holds up, they have an even chance at victory. Nevertheless, we do not expect the Blue Devils' line to hold up, and therefore predict a win for Bill Ingram's Middies.

Georgia Tech should have a win over Auburn in Atlanta this afternoon. The Plainsmen held Florida to the amazingly low score of 12-0 last week. In spite of the mauling Tech took at the hands of Carnegie's Skibos a week ago, the Golden Tornado should be blowing full speed ahead once more. Tech has one of the best lines in the South this year, and in Spear and Maree the Yellow Jackets have a pair of all Southern tackle candidates.

Virginia will be trying desperately to get back in the win column at the expense of V. M. I. at Lexington, Virginia. The Cadets, however, have a strong line and one great fullback, Bill Dunn. Because of the Cavaliers' weak line, we pick V. M. I. to come through.



Washington and Lee's Generals bravely invade the den of the Kentucky Wildcats today. It is a hard task that the plucky Generals are confronted with in Lexington. W. and L. has a weak team this year, while their opponents have one of the best teams in the Conference. Led by the big Wildcat, "Shipwreck" Kelly, Kentucky should experience little trouble in chalking up a voctory over the Generals.

Florida tackles Stagg's University of Chicago eleven in Chicago. Both teams have had their ups and downs this season, and it should be a close affair, with Stagg's squad scheduled to come through, since they do not have to make a long and tiresome trip as does Florida.

Vanderbilt will have little trouble in beating Spring Hill at Nashville. Clemson should lick Newberry with ease for their fifth straight victory. V. P. I.'s Gobblers will have a real scrap on their hands with William and Mary's Indians at Richmond, but the Gobblers should win. Maryland has a weak foe this week in St. John's College at College Park, Maryland, and should triumph easily.

Tom Parsons, star of the 1929 freshman boxing team, has recovered from his knee injury of last year and will be in action again this winter.

LIST OF ENTRIES FOR CAKE RACE MOUNTS RAPIDLY

Lewis Dormitory Has Seventeen Entered, Followed Closely By Ruffin and Manly.

Coach Dale Ranson has decided that the freshman cross-country runners are eligible to compete in the seventh annual Cake Race to be held next Thursday afternoon. The freshman runners who are eligible are: J. M. Tobin, M. J. Brown, J. P. Butler, P. H. Daggett, J. H. Doran, G. E. Dobesh, J. B. Farr, J. Goddwitz, W. R. Grover, C. F. Rartman, F. D. Higby, T. R. Kennedy, D. S. Kinnerly, H. G. Mead, G. H. Malone, E. E. McRae, T. G. Nisbet, F. W. Parker, C. W. Prochazka, I. M. Shevick, J. O. Zimmerman, H. E. Vitz, R. H. Waldo, J. Wolf, C. A. Wright, E. Wishnefsky, J. L. Deans, McMillan, S. Franklin, W. R. Wood, A. P. Carey, and T. A. Henson.

Those men who have completed their required six work-outs are: D. P. Beam, G. D. Caraway, J. C. Robins.

The men who have gotten off five of the six work-outs are: S. Brownstein, J. F. Cook, M. H. Dunn, J. S. Dendy, E. W. Ewbank, J. Freedland, E. A. Gaskill, J. M. Goodson, H. A. Leary, C. Matthewson, J. W. Vann, T. H. Whitley, B. L. Williams and J. C. Whitley.

The men who have completed but four of their practices are: W. A. Allsbrook, J. M. Acee, C. W. Aman, W. Bynum, R. E. Baldwin, H. E. Beam, F. W. Blythe, C. E. Cahoun, R. Cohen, C. Dietz, R. L. Elkins, C. H. Elkins, T. H. Farmer, D. B. Fox, M. S. Griffiin, F. Ginsberg, J. Griffiin, P. L. Holt, C. L. Johnston, R. D. Kennedy, C. B. Kestler, T. H. Lingerfeldt, A. J. O'Bryan, M. E. Page, P. H. Proctor, F. B. Parker, S. Rosenblum, A. Rostan, O. S. Steinreich, R. H. Smith, B. E. Smith, H. Siegle, C. Spencer, C. K. Stuart, T. K. Sutton, W. N. Tracterton, H. S. Thompson, M. E. Taylor, S. L. Turner, N. Wheeler, J. E. Wadsworth.

Lewis, with seventeen men, has the greatest number of men who have qualified to enter the Race. Ruffin and Manly, each with sixteen, are second; New Dorms is third with fifteen; Everett ranks fourth with fourteen, Mangum fifth with thirteen, Question Marks sixth with twelve, Aycock seventh with eleven, Carr eighth with ten; Steele and Grimes are ninth with nine men each; Tar Heel Club and Old East rate tenth with eight men each; Old West eleventh with seven men, and Graham twelfth with three men.

Any freshmen who have been pledged to a fraternity may change from a dormitory to a fraternity team.

The outstanding entries in the Cake Race are S. Askenas, W. R. Grover, H. G. Meade, E. E. McRae, O. W. Prochazka, H. E. Vitz, A. Gabriel, E. J. Hunter, A. B. Petty, B. A. Sieder, J. B. Farr, and G. F. Doran. It is quite hard to predict the winner of such an event as the Cake Race where practically all the men are "dark horses" and so it should not be such a great upset if somebody other than the above mentioned men should happen to take first honors.

Practice will be held Saturday morning between 10:30 and 12:30 and between 5:00 and 6:00 in the afternoon.

Collins And Mehre Partners At 'Nooga

North Carolina and Georgia should know one another's "stuff" well when the leading Conference contenders clash at Athens Saturday in the big Conference tilt of the early season. Harry Mehre, head coach at Georgia, and Chuck Collins, chief of North Carolina grid destinies, used to be coaching partners at Chattanooga when that team rode the crest of the S. I. A. A. competition. Both men use the driving Notre Dame system of their old mentor, Knute Rockne.

CRENSHAW OUSTS SMITH AT GEORGIA'S END POST

Since the sophomore Crenshaw has ousted "Catfish" Smith from his post at Georgia, North Carolina, priming for its battle with the Bulldogs in Athens Saturday, is expecting a pair of ends who rate with the best. Smith, who beat Yale single-handed last year, rated with the South's best, and if Crenshaw is good enough to displace Smith, then Georgia must have end strength.

Wyrick Shows New Talents

Pete Wyrick's 75-yard punt return against Maryland last Saturday was the first performance of that kind the heady senior quarterback has turned in for the Tar Heels. If Wyrick is to join the elusive Branch in giving Carolina two quarterbacks who can do that kind of broken field running, the Tar Heels will threaten constantly on punt returns in the Georgia game at Athens Saturday.

MAGNER WILL TRY FOR OLD AVERAGE

Jim Magner, North Carolina's versatile back, who is usually on the hurling end of the Tar Heels' most effective passes and on the stopping end of the Tar Heels' secondary defenses, will be trying to hit top stride as a ball carrier against Georgia at Athens, today. Magner has figured in eight of 12 touchdowns, but he hasn't averaged but four yards a try with the ball, when he averaged twice as much last year. The rookie Blue and White line is expected to show improvement at opening holes, and if it does, Magner may be expected to roam far and wide once more.

BACKS STRONG BUT TAR HEEL LINE IN DOUBTFUL

North Carolina is believed by many authorities to have the strongest array of ball-carriers in the South, but Head Coach Chuck Collins is skeptical about the way his line will come through against Georgia at Athens Saturday. In the absence of a hard-charging line, as shown to date, Carolina's shifty, clever backs will probably take to the air time and again to make a beautiful air battle. The Tar Heels have at least three outstanding passers in Magner, Maus, and Chandler, with such shifty receivers as Captain Nash, Branch, Slusser, and Erickson, to say nothing of the Carolina ends.

NOTRE DAME SYSTEMS TO CLASH IN TODAY'S GAME

Two wide-open Notre Dame offenses, with a pack of star backs on each side, will clash when Georgia and North Carolina renew their grid argument at Athens Saturday, and the result should be a spectacle. The names Branch, Magner, Captain Nash, House, Slusser, Maus, and so on, speak of backfield power exceptional in Tar Heelia. Dickens, Downes, Roberts, Chandler, Waugh, and the other Bulldog carriers are too well known to need commendation.

Wet statistics indicate that New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, etc., are hic towns.—Arkansas Gazette.

New York is feeling pretty skeptical about the value of goodwill cement bonds. We roar welcome and tear paper for the brave flyers, and where does it get us? France cold-shoulders our Mr. Hearst, and Germany pastes a rejection slip on our Mr. Legs Diamond.—The New Yorker.

Bull's Head Books

Dr. Odum Is Author of New Volume On South.

The Bull's Head Shop has just received An American Epoch: Southern Portraiture in the National Picture by Howard W. Odum, director of the school of public welfare here. In his book, Dr. Odum gives the story of four generations of southerners and their various cultures which provided so many dramatic episodes in American history. He tells not only of the "glory that was the south," but also of the "grandeur that was not the south." There is a consideration of the economic phases of the history of the south with special emphasis on the problems incident to the rapid industrialization of the present era. Dr. Odum forecasts a part in history for the south even more important than that which she has already played, as a result of her release "from undue inhibitory forces, the development of her vast resources, and the elimination of her excessive social waste."

The shop now has two more books of the Modern Reader's Series. The first is Aristotle's Poetics combined with Longinus' On The Sublime in one volume. The second is Bayard Taylor's translation of Goethe's Faust.

Ronald Knox, a Catholic priest and a keen and subtle satirist, makes some rapier-like thrusts at current upholders of unbelief in his Caliban in Grub Street, which is obtainable at the Bull's Head.

AGORA SECOND EDITION TO BE SOLD THIS WEEK

The second edition of the Agora has been received and will go on sale sometime during the coming week. A decorative cover has been published on the magazine for this time instead of the plain cover which was used before.

Some of the professional writers of the South are contributors to this publication, together with a few student writers here on the campus.

The main story of this second edition was written by Judge Robert Winston.

In New York the word "magistrate" is not pronounced with the accent on the "strate."—Judge.

UNIVERSITY MEN TO ATTEND GAME LAW CONFERENCE

Branson and Hobbs to Confer on Establishment of State Hunting Preserves.

Dr. E. C. Branson and Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the University, are among those asked to attend a conference on Knotts Island, November 8, at the home of Joseph P. Knapp, of the recently formed Knapp Game Foundation.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss a movement proposing to institute in North Carolina a study of game bird preservation, and to consider a model state game law. This conference is being called by Governor O. Max Gardner at the request of Mr. Knapp. In his letter to Governor Gardner, Mr. Knapp stated that he wished North Carolina to become the greatest game bird state.

Mr. Knapp's plan for North Carolina, provides first for this conference to consider a model state game law, which if formulated, will be proposed in the next General Assembly. He suggests that the law will provide for a strictly non-partisan game bird division of the department of conservation and development, which will work for "more game birds in North Carolina."

It will also provide for a course at State Colege for the study of game birds, and for a game bird farm for the use of the students in raising game birds, to be supported by the sale of birds and by state appropriations.

If this is done, the foundation will make other demonstrations in North Carolina. It will make provision for sending a field representative into a quail region to interest the farmers in forming a shooting preserve club to collectively own and care for a game preserve. The foundation will loan to this club funds to build a hatchery for the purpose of starting a community club game farm, which would distribute game birds on the preserve and sell others. A graduate of the Game Preservation Institute will be sent by the foundation as manager. The foundation will provide for the sale of shooting privileges to the farmers' profit

Others who are to attend this conference are: Honorable E. R. Johnson, Warsaw; Jefferson Penn, Reidsville; James G. Hanes, Winston-Salem; Honorable Frank Page, Raleigh; former Governor Cameron Morrison, Charlotte; Dr. E. C. Brooks, Raleigh; Honorable Fred I. Sutton, Kinston; Honorable Dennis G. Brummitt, Raleigh; Robert Lassiter, Charlotte; Colonel J. W. Harrelson, Raleigh; Governor O. Max Gardner, Raleigh.

German Students Are Taught To Teach Themselves Says Dr. Bonn

Dr. M. J. Bonn, in his lecture Thursday evening, explained something of national politics in Germany. And then we of a University wondered what he of a university could tell us of campus politics in Germany. Dr. Bonn's answer was concise. "We have no campus." Then students live out about town? Yes. Is it a sort of congregation, where one stays, several stay? Sometimes, but they don't like that. A German likes best to have one room in a house. There he has breakfast. The universities have a very cheap sort of cafeteria for the midday meal. There are associations, too, so that sometimes students live in what you would consider fraternity houses.

Have the students any part in governing themselves? None at all. Neither has anybody else any part in governing them. You see the German universities have neither freshmen nor sophomores. They are in high school. When students come to the European universities they are grown. When they come they are eighteen, nineteen. Then there are no fourteen-year-olds? Oh now and then by some good luck, or bad, boys will come to the universities at seventeen. But they are grown. Older than American boys of seventeen and eighteen? Far older. In England, not so old. But in Germany, France, the south, Italy, they are men able to look after themselves. Nobody bothers about their private lives. They are men.

At the universities, when something displeases them? If they don't like a class, they shuffle with their feet. And then of course there is voluntary attendance. You see, you instruct students; we teach them to teach themselves.

AMERICAN EPOCH IS LEARNED BOOK

Northern Critics Say That Dr. Odum Wrote Treatise for Select Public

"For a great many years there has gone out from Chapel Hill, the seat of the University of North Carolina, a vibrant wave of light and healing fully comparable to that which shone in another day from the library windows of Monticello. No resident of this Athenian settlement has done more credit to its enlightening mission than Mr. Odum," says the New York Times in reviewing Dr. H. W. Odum's latest book, An Aemrican Epoch.

This book is the result of ten years of preparation on the part of the author, and is, according to the critics, a veritable compendium of information on the south, and its history from 1850 to the present day. It has received wide and very favorable from the northern critics, as well as attracting much attention in the southern states.

The book is written in the duo-biographical style. The chief characters are "Uncle John" and "The Old Major." Through these two lay characters Odum has viewed the south, and predicts its immediate future. He thinks that within the next few years the south will have placed itself on a parity with the north, economically, politically, and scholastically.

This is not a book that is easy to read according to reviewers. Into its three hundred and seventy-nine pages Dr. Odum has packed a reproduction of four generations, that is remarkably thorough, and which the New York Evening Post refers to as being likely to endure as a model of accuracy, eloquence, and strictly modern understanding. Dr. Odum was not writing for the populus, the New York Times says in substance, but rather for a select

All fraternities who have pledges whose names failed to appear in the list published yesterday, are asked to turn in these names Monday afternoon at the Tar Heel office before 3:30 P. M. A supplemented list will be published in Tuesday's edition.

PHI ZETA NU TO SELECT MEMBERS

Honorary Electrical Engineering Group at Work Compiling Scholastic Merits of New Candidates.

Phi Zeta Nu, honorary electrical engineering society, which requires for membership an average of ninety or better, is at present working on the grades of the electrical engineering students to determine those who are eligible for membership. It is thought that this information will be obtainable within the next three weeks when the society will begin the year's program.

The highest distinction that can come to a student in the electrical engineering school is to be chosen for membership in Phi Zeta Nu during his sophomore year. Only one sophomore is taken in each year, the basis of selection being character, ability, and scholastic standing. The student must above a Phi Beta Kappa average. Juniors and seniors who average C are eligible for membership, also.

Members of the society in school this year are: George D. Thompson, president; R. E. Hubbard, secretary and treasurer; C. M. Lear, G. F. Horney, P. G. Johnson, and D. J. Thurston. Professor J. E. Lear is a faculty member.

Red Cross To Seek Help Of Kiwanians

At the meeting of the Kiwanis Club in the hut of the Christian church on Tuesday evening, Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, president of the Red Cross, talked to the members of the club on the work of the Red Cross and asked the cooperation of the Kiwanians again this year in the roll call. The club agreed to make the roll call on Franklin street, from the post office west.

Colonel Pratt announced that the Red Cross board has agreed to cooperate with the Kiwanis Club in sponsoring a dental clinic for Carrboro school similar to the one sponsored for the Chapel Hill school year before last. A committee reported that George Lawrence, superintendent of public welfare, would welcome the cooperation of the club in the distribution of Christmas baskets to families in the county.

DAILY STAFF TO UNDERGO REVISION

Oscar Coffin Will Speak at 7:15 In 104 Alumni to Members Now Listed.

Mr. Oscar Coffin will speak before the members of the Tar Heel staff at its regular meeting in Room 104 Alumni at 7:15 Sunday evening. The editorial staff will meet at 7:00 in the Tar Heel office. Now that fraternity rushing is over, the managing editor intends that staff rules of attendance and contribution be strictly enforced.

1. Two consecutive unexcused absences from Sunday meetings will automatically drop a reporter from the staff.

2. Any reporter having no news story accepted in a period of two weeks is automatically dropped from the staff.

3. Feature stories and editorials are not to be counted news stories.

Although there is room for only approximately thirty reporters, forty-seven names are listed on the reportorial staff. Competition is expected to develop among those persons for the thirty places. The campus and community have been divided into what are called "reportorial beats." It is the intention of the manager of the staff to see that every item of personal and community interest be included in the columns of the paper. Reporters failing to secure all the news on their beats are to be dropped immediately, according to the new policy.

The Daily Tar Heel is a laboratory for students interested in journalism. The staff does not intend, according to the managing editor, to present a paper to the campus which can be compared or classed with the metropolitan dailies that stand as examples of journalism. On the other hand, a sincere effort is being made to report accurately, to edit carefully, and to verify all information included in the columns of the paper. For this purpose, a staff of ten men is at work each afternoon reading and rewriting all contributions to be published.

With the idea in view of covering the campus more carefully, an assignment editor has been appointed by the managing editor to aid the reporters in more fully covering their beats.

In the department of sports, three men have full charge of seeing that athletic activities are given proper recognition.

To aid the reporters in their work, a "newspaper morgue" is being accumulated under the direction of the staff librarian.

Although the reportorial staff is overcrowded, the policy of the managing board will be to employ any students who present themselves as candidates for positions, and to permit them to compete with those persons already listed for the thirty places. The forty-seven men now listed will be given one week in which to retain their positions or they will make way for more interested reporters.

Mid-Term Grades

Notice has been issued from the registrar's office that mid-term reports wil be due from instructors Thursday, October 30, at 5 o'clock. This means that students will be notified of their standings as soon after they can be tabulated and published by the registrar.

STUDENT FEDERATION TO SURVEY HONOR SYSTEM

Supported by the administration and the student government the National Student Federation of America committee at the University of California at Los Angeles has begun a survey of the honor system. At the fifth annual congress of the organization, Robert Keith, president of the associated students at U. C. L. A. stated that the honor system was a complete failure at his university. The purpose of the survey is to discover from the students to what extent it is a failure, and why. The information gained will be compiled for the use of the local student administration, and will be made available to all interested institutions through the N. S. F. A. "The honor system questionnaire will illustrate the N. S. F. A. policy of stimulating student opinion on questions of interest to student governments," said Earl Swingle, student president, in a recent interview.

The Theta Chi fraternity announces the pledging of Alexander Weisker of Bridgeport Conn,. and Irving Craig of Florence, South Carolina.

ALDERMEN ADOPT PLAN TO REDUCE STREET DANGERS

Stop Signs to Be Erected at Corners to Halt Cars Entering Franklin St.

The plan decided upon by the aldermen to reduce the danger from automobiles on the main street of Chapel Hill (Franklin street) is in brief as follows:

To designate this thoroughfare as a "through street;" to put up Stop signs so that cars coming along cross streets will halt before turning into Franklin; and to decree a 20-mile speed limit in the business section and a 30-mile limit on the other blocks of Franklin street.

This plan is the one adopted by the city of Greensboro, to apply to certain of its most crowded arteries of traffic, and is said to have worked well. Of course, like all plans for the regulation of traffic, it depends for success upon the activity of the police in enforcing the rules.

Under the state law the speed limit is 20 miles an hour where state highways pass through towns; but the law contains a provision permitting a town to create a "through street," erect Stop signs at cross streets, and fix its own municipal speed limit up to 30 miles an hour.

The Aldermen appointed G. M. Braune and P. L. Burch a committee to study the traffic problem in Chapel Hill and make suggestions for its solution. These two men considered various suggestions. One was the setting up of automatic stop-and-go signals at important corners; another was to install flashing beacons, such as the one that now operates at Franklin and Columbia streets after 9 o'clock at night; and the third was the "through street" scheme. After hearing the report of the committee on Wednesday evening of last week, the aldermen decided that the third would be most satisfactory under the conditions existing here.

The Stop sign at a corner will have the letters in the word Stop outlined in reflector buttons that will shine brightly when a car approaches at night.

It is not yet determined where the 20-mile limit will be in force. Certainly on the main business block between the post-office and Columbia street. Perhaps on Columbia street from the railway trestle near the Carolina Inn to the fire engine house; and perhaps also on Franklin street on the block where the school is, between Columbia and Church streets.

Some citizens have suggested that there should be an additional caution sign at the crest of the hill in front of the MacNider and the Saville homes. Many accidents have occurred here. Drivers coming up the slope from each direction are prone to gather speed, and many a one is none too careful in observing the rule about not passing the car ahead when nearing the crest of a hill that obscures cars coming in the opposite direction.

Warning to Ride Bummers

Mayor Council wants the students to take notice that the municipal authorities are going to enforce the ordinance which prohibits persons soliciting automobile rides from standing out in the roadway. "There are many new students who are not familiar with the measure," said the mayor yesterday. "We do not want to have to make any arrests and therefore we are trying to give ample warning so that the students will stay back on the curb when they are soliciting rides."

Reflections about the South

By Phillips Russell

Recently a Northern friend brought me south from New York in his car, it being our third similar trip. Each time I had felt, on crossing the bridge from Washington into the sweet country below the Mason and Dixon line, the rise in spirits which that country alone can give to the man who was born in it.

But it was noticeable that my companion did not share in my sensations. At length he confessed that although the sense of space and suavity pleased him, he had each time, on entering the South, experienced a slight sense of depression. That was startling and I questioned him on the point, with that feeling of uneasiness with which all Southerners rush to the defense of their trampled land.

He proceeded to mention those objects which so frequently scar the Southern landscape: the unpainted and broken-toothed houses of the countryside; the careening outbuildings which sometimes lurch so drunkenly across the horizon that it would seem to be the part of mercy to push them over and let them lie at rest; the weedsy front yards and fence corners; the busted fence and the unhinged gate; the gulleyed hillsides; the farm machinery left lazily out in the weather; the dingy outskirts of small towns, with their auto boneyards and piles of refuse. And the weeds, weeds, weeds.

He took these things to be evidence of a decay which was overtaking the South. Decay, indeed. I tried to explain to him that the fewness of such signs, as compared with the visible state of things a decade or so ago, was, on the contrary, a tonic sight.

Anyhow, I said, you cannot expect a Southerner to be as careful and neat as a Northerner.

Why not? he asked. His surprise at such a statement was patent.

There he had me. I tried to bridge the pause by bringing forward the old, old excuses: the ruin of the Civil War, the hopelessness of the reconstruction period, and, above all, the poverty of an agricultural country harnessed to a cash-crop system which, only too often, produces neither cash nor crops.

But all the time my thoughts went back to a scene graphically described by Mrs. Cornelia Phillips Spencer in a letter quoted in Mrs. Chamberlain's book, "Old Days in Chapel Hill." It relates to a dinner given in an Alabama home where there was solid silver, cut-glass, and expensive china on the table, while all the time the "chinking" was falling out of the log walls, the floor was bare of carpet, and a December wind, which froze the marrow of the young bride seated there, was blowing in through the holes in the windows.

There is something incurably Southern about that scene. There was never anything like it, except in some of Turgeniev's novels of feudal life on the plantations of Old Russia. And except perhaps in present-day southern Mexico, where often the setting is perfectly familiar: immense tracts of land, no money, and a peonage or tenancy system all around.

In Yucatan and Chiapas I have dined at a hacienda, corresponding to our southern "Big House," where the dishes overflowed, the hospitality was unbounded, where the table furnishings were of the utmost elegance, and yet where there were holes in the walls and roofs, and dark-faced servants, waving leafy branches, vainly fought off legions of flies.

From the first I was perfectly at home in Mexico, for I was brought up among pistol-toting Romantics and am aware of their incapacity for seeing or attending to details.

Our chief weakness as Southerners is the same that characterizes Mexicans and Russians: a tendancy to "make it do." In other words, to be satisfied for the moment if a thing "will do," to have the intention of improving it later, and then to forget all about it.

Here in North Carolina the achievements of the last thirty years have been astonishing; when one considers the handicaps overcome, they appear miraculous.

And yet there are gaps to be filled in. In some areas the situation is woeful. Last winter there was distress in the counties of the Coastal Plain where tobacco is king, and this winter there will be distress among cotton counties. In parts of my own county of Richmond there have been conditions approaching starvation, and the wolf has growled at the door right here in Orange.

Has our cash-crop system finally run out to the thin edge? Have we come to the absolute end of a string? Has the lack of balance in our crops, our methods, our civilization, our life, at last borne its due fruit?

Shall we once more have to summon our strength and pull ourselves out of a hole by our bootstraps? On all sides one hears the saying: "the remedy is hard work." We disagree. We have always had hard work in North Carolina; the very heavens know that toil and sacrifice are the familiarest things there are in this old state. The saying of the day requires an amendment; what we need in North Carolina is hard work more intelligently directed.

Under such a condition one doubts if the old picturesque policy of "making things do" will suffice. If we are to hold our gains, it appears that we shall have to overhaul things from the foundation and learn to do them in a way that so far has been opposed to our nature and hostile to our temperament: viz., thoroughly.

A Ballad Program

Folk Lore Experts to Address Association of University Women

The Chapel Hill branch of the American Association of University Women is planning to have students of folk lore address them, during the coming year, on the subject of ballads. Their regular meeting day is the second Tuesday of every month.

A. P. Hudson, who came from Mississippi to join the faculty here, will be the guest of honor at the November gathering and will talk about the ballads of Mississippi. Howard W. Odum, when he appears in January, will read from his newest book (which is not yet out), Cold Blue Moon. This is the third book of the series in which the other two were Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder and Wings on My Feet. Some time after Christmas Mrs. Paul Green will read a paper on folk superstitions in North Carolina.

It may be that J. Frank Dobie of the University of Texas, who was here with Mrs. Dobie last summer, will speak at one meeting. The members of the association have heard that Mr. Dobie is coming to North Carolina in December, and they hope he may be able to address them then.

Dr. Toy May Move

Physician Contemplates Changing His Home to New Jersey

It may be that Dr. Calvert R. Toy will move away from Chapel Hill and settle in the North.

Dr. Toy has been visiting in New Jersey for the last two weeks. Before he left here reports were current that he would soon be changing his home, and these reports have now received a measure of confirmation.

"It is true that Dr. Toy is considering moving to New Jersey," said his wife yesterday, "and if he decides to do so he will probably stay there, without returning home, and we will join him a little later."

A daughter, Elizabeth Bingham, was born to Dr. and Mrs. Toy a few weeks ago.

Dr. Toy is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania medical school and he came here after serving as a physician in Philadelphia hospitals. He established himself in the confidence of the Chapel Hill community and had soon built up a good practice. But better opportunities have opened up to him in the North.

The Red Cross Roll Call

The Red Cross Roll call for 1930 will begin in Chapel Hill today and will continue through next week. Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the board here, and Mrs. Otto Stuhlman established a headquarters in the M. store this week and have been giving information about the Red Cross to the people who pass in and out.

Volunteer workers will make a house-to-house canvass in Chapel Hill, Carrboro, and the rest of the township. The objective is to put at least 750 names on the roll—and as many more as possible.

The regular membership fee is $1, and there are other classes of membership for which the fees range from $5 to $25. Out of every fee, no matter how much it is, 50 cents goes to the national organization and the remainder is used for local relief. For example, if a citizen takes a $25 membership, $24.50 will be spent here in the township.

The officers of the local board are Colonel Pratt, chairman; Mrs. W. M. Dey, vice-chairman; Mrs. Otto Stuhlman, secretary; Maurice Hill, treasurer. With them on the board are Mrs. F. P. Brooks, Dr. William de B. MacNider, H. D. Meyer, Mrs. Julia Graves, H. F. Comer, Marvin Utley, Mrs. W. E. Thompson, Mrs. W. I. Mann, Dr. B. B. Lloyd, Frank Graham, George Howe, Mrs. A. M. Jordan, and George H. Lawrence.

A map issued from the national headquarters in Washington shows how the communities of North Carolina rank in respect to the proportion of the population enrolled in the Red Cross. Chapel Hill is near the top of the list, and the local board is eager to keep it there. To that end, all citizens are urged to become members.

One of the important services of every Red Cross chapter is to give relief in cases of emergency. When there is a cyclone, for instance, or a disastrous fire, or an accident of such proportions that the victims cannot be cared for through individual effort, the Red Cross goes to the scene at once with physicians, with food and clothing, with bandages and medicines and other necessary supplies. But the organization's activities are not limited to emergencies. It is constantly engaged in promoting community health, in aiding poor people who become ill or suffer injuries, in relieving distress of every kind. Its funds are used for the benefit of those who are in the greatest need.

The Democratic party ought to have observers in Argentine to find out how it's done.

Tar Heels Overwhelmed By Georgia 26 to 0

Georgians Rip Carolinians' Forward Wall To Shreads As Stellar Backs Run Wild

Invaders Are Forced on Defensive Throughout Contest.

ROBERTS STARS IN VICTORY

Defeat Dashes Carolina Hopes For Southern Conference Championship.

By Don Shoemaker

Sanford Stadium, Athens, Ga., Oct. 18.—Twenty-five thousand enthusiastic home coming fans saw the mighty University of Georgia Bull Dog sink his fangs into the University of North Carolina Tar Heels here today and trot into his kennel with a 26 to 0 victory. Elusive off-tackle plays and tricky reverses kept the Blue and White in a flurry from the outset of the contest, as Georgia backs crashed through the withering Carolina forward wall for repeated gains.

Battling through the opening minutes of the initial quarter on an even basis, the Collins charges displayed a peerless brand of defensive ball, after Roberts had knifed through the line for the first score, and continued to repulse the Georgian advances in the second quarter.

After a hectic third quarter which found the ball in the shadow of the Carolina goal posts time and again, the mighty offensive guns of the Georgia hosts cut lose in the final period. Roberts and his running mate, Dickens, carried the pigskin across the Carolinians' goal for three scores, scattering the rapidly tiring line in the dust.

Bearing the brunt of the Georgia attack, Dickens and Roberts forced the ball to the Carolina one yard marker at the outset of the final period where Roberts plunged across. Smith kicked the goal.

Via two long passes from Branch to Maus for 27 yards and from Maus to Branch for 13 yards, Carolina carried the oval past the Georgia forty-yard line. Marching for what appeared to be a certain score, Dickens dashed the Tar Heel hopes by plucking a pass out of the air and carrying it to his own forty yard line. On a tricky spinner play, Dickens pierced the line for forty yards, sinking the ball deep into the defenders terriotry. After failing at the line twice, Roberts hurtled over the center for the touchdown. Roberts added the goal.

After an exchange of punts near the center of the field, Dickens and Downes carried the attack to the Carolina ten yard line where Dickens swept the ends and scored. Smith's kick was blocked.

Carolina resorted to the aerial attack successfully on four occasions, twice in the fourth quarter. The ultimate victors chose to keep the ball on the ground during the greater part of the contest, attempting only three passes, one of which was successful for a short gain.

Only one spectacular punt was recorded during the fray, when Chandler returned Branch's kick from his own 40 yard line in a sensational 65 yard boot over the goal line.

Carolina was forced to assume the defensive for the greater part of the struggle as the Georgia line demonstrated its marked superiority over the weak Blue and White frontier. Branch was given little opportunity to advance the oval in one of his usual sensational runs, as Smith and Maffet stopped the deadly quarter-back in his tracks under high punts.

On four occasions the ball was worked into the danger zone, but the Tar Heel line stiffened and held the Georgia lads for downs.

McDade and Gilbreath were among the stars on the Carolina line, the latter intercepting a pass from Dickens on his thirty yard marker.

SONS OF FORMER STARS PROSPECTS FOR CHICAGO

Chicago—(IP)—Two names famous in University of Chicago athletic history, Stagg and Page, probably will be seen in the lineups of the Maroon football squad this season.

Paul Stagg, son of the veteran A. A. Stagg, coach of Chicago elevens for 38 years, appeared in several varsity games last year and may win a regular berth this season.

But Harlan Orville Page, Jr., son of Pat Page, former Maroon star and now football coach at the University of Indiana, is only a freshman.

Young Page is a quarter, as is Paul Stagg, and next year may see them fighting for the same post. Bert Cassels, son of an end on the 1899 champion Chicago aggregation, is another Maroon prospect this year.

Tar Heels to Turn Out For Big Tennessee Game

Special trains and pullman cars to be operated from all parts of North Carolina at round trip rates, are expected to increase the North Carolina delegation to the Carolina-Tennessee game to a maximum. The old grid rivals clash in Knoxville Saturday in what is billed as one of the biggest battles of the Dixie season.

TAR BABIES FALL BEFORE MARYLAND ATTACK

WRESTLING SQUAD LOOKS FORWARD TO GOOD SEASON

Eight Monogram Men and Several Likely-Looking Rookies Report for Practice.

With only three letter men missing from the flock, the state championship Tar Heel wrestlers are planning their most successful season in recent years. Peyton Abbott, assistant coach, who was undefeated during his college career, is hard at work getting the men into shape and has a squad of forty going through its paces daily in preparation for the winter schedule.

The eight monogram wearers who are eligible for another year of competition will be bolstered by a promising group of reserves and freshmen from last season who will be ready to step into varsity berths at the first opportunity. Besides these experienced campaigners several men who are making their first attempt at the game have possibilities and may develop into varsity material before the season is over.

Captain Fred Stallings will be in the 125-pound class again this year and will provide the Tar Heels with a brilliant and capable leader. Last year Stallings was undefeated in all his regular matches and won by falls against both Princeton and Navy.

Pete Usher, a letter man, will be back in the 115-pound class with Clay Bell of last year's varsity squad and Clyde Deitz, a sophomore. Marion Cowper, a dependable veteran now out for football, and Bradley of last year's freshman team will be in the 165-pound division, while Wayne Woodard, former captain, and Mayne Albright are the veterans in the 135 class, making this weight one of the strongest.

The 155-pound class, left open when Dick Moore completed his third year of competition, is the only position without a letter man, but Greer, John Stallings, and Parks are the best prospects so far and should make dependable men. There is a possibility that Harry Tsumas, who worked in the 145 last year, may move up a weight this season, leaving Whitener and Don Conklin, a brilliant sophomore, to fight it out for his old position. Tsumas is not on the campus this quarter, but will return in the winter and will be eligible as he is now doing cooperative work in engineering.

The 175-pound class with Fred Ferguson, Houghton, and Percy Idol should be another strong weight. Houghton is a veteran and Ferguson was a consistent star all last year while Idol, as captain of the 1930 frosh, turned in an exceptionally good record.

George Thompson, big Tar Heel tackle, who expects to return to the mat after a one-year lay-off, will add another veteran performer to the list. Thompson was a star during his sophomore year, but was out of school most of last winter and did not make his letter. He will find competition in Auman, Liberstein, and Harrell, all of whom are big men but without previous varsity experience.

Peyton Abbott will continue to handle the squad until the conclusion of the football season when Coach Chuck Quinlan will be able to take charge of activities.

Wrestler's Notice

All men interested in wrestling are asked to report to Coach Abbott in the Tin Can Monday at four o'clock. Fundamentals have featured the training up to the present time. The rest of the squad is not so far advanced that any new men can not catch up. Experience doesn't count—all that is necessary is the desire to learn to wrestle. Coach Abbott urges anyone interested to come out and try.

DRIBBLERS START PRACTICE MONDAY

Many Basketball Candidates Slated to Report for Initial Workout Tomorrow.

Coach Ashmore has announced that varsity basketball will swing into action tomorrow evening. This announcement was made at the meeting for basketball candidates held at Kenan stadium Thursday afternoon for the benefit of those interested in making the squad. Twenty-five men turned out for this meeting. Among them were hard-boiled veterans, ambitious sophomores such as Hines, Markham, and Lineberger, and also several new faces. Smith who made his last appearance in college basketball in '26 was among those present.

This unusually early call for candidates is due to the fact that Coach Ashmore is in dire need of forwards. Captain Marpet, who was high scorer for the Tar Heel outfit last season, will be kept at a guard position again this year not only because of his ability as a guard but because Coach Ashmore believes Marpet can drop more shots from this position than he could playing a forward position. The practices will be held every Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evening in the Tin Can. The workouts for some time will consist of hard drill in the fundamentals, development of technique, and the initiation of the sophomore candidates into the mysteries and ways of varsity basketball.

Coach Ashmore before going into intensive practice will probably take time out for a few days to prevent his proteges from going stale in the long grind that will last from early December to the middle of March.

The end of the football season will bring out more material in the persons of Alexander, Allen, Henry, and Chandler.

Coach Ashmore requires that anyobdy interested in making the squad this year, unless he is engaged in some other varsity sport, be on hand for the first work out on Monday evening.

Since shortly after the opening of school, Captain Marpet and several other veterans have been taking unofficial workouts in the Tin Can in order to sharpen the eye and regain the master touch that was acquired last season.

Tar Heels Have Fine Pass Offense for Vols

The much-praised offense Magner to Branch passing combination that has been so valuable to the Tar Heels this season should be a big threat against Tennessee at Knoxville Saturday. These boys have one of the strongest passing duets in the South.

OLD LINE FROSH TAKE CLOSE GAME BY SCORE OF 13-12

Maryland Uses Eleven Men, of Whom Knott, Sothoron and Brenner Are Stars.

TEAMS CLOSELY MATCHED

Woolen, Phipps and Harrington Are Responsible for Two Carolina Scores.

Coach Faber of Maryland used only eleven of his freshman football squad to defeat the Carolina Tar Babies by a one-point margin, 13-12, in Kenan Stadium yesterday afternoon. Knott, quarterback, Sothoron, fullback, and Brenner, end, were the principal ball carriers for the victors. Among the 28 men which Coach Farris sent into the affray for Carolina, Woolen, quarterback, Phipps, at half, and Harrington, at end, showed up best.

In the first half, the teams appeared about evenly matched. During the first quarter neither team made any considerable effort to score. A series of punt exchanges left the ball in Carolina's hands on their own 40-yard line at the end of the period.

In the first minute or so of the second quarter, Phipps broke loose and, after a speedy run across field, was finally halted on the Maryland 10-yard line by Sothoron. Maryland then took the ball on downs on their own 15-yard line. Knott, for Maryland, kicked out to midfield, and from that point, in the next series of downs, a pass from Phipps to Harrington brought a touchdown for the Tar Babies. The kick for goal was high and wide. Score, 6-0, Carolina.

Carolina kicked to Maryland and the ball was brought back to the visitors' 38-yard marker. Then, a Maryland punt, a Carolina first down, offset by a penalty on Carolina for moving the ball, and a short kick by Woolen, Tar Baby quarter, gave Maryland the pigskin on the 50-yard mark. First Sothoron advanced the ball on an end run to Carolina's 34, and again to their 25. A pass from Sothoron to Wright, Maryland left end, who scooped the ball up from below his knees, accounted for the visiting team's first score. Brenner kicked the extra point. Score, 7-6, Maryland.

Maryland kicking off, the ball rolled over the Tar Baby goal line, and the half ended with the ball in Carolina's possession on their own 20-yard line.

In the third quarter, a Carolina rally appeared imminent, the Tar Babies running over three first downs with passes, end runs and fake bucks, and the close of the quarter found Carolina with the ball on the 18-yard line, where it was carried by Woolen on the receiving end of a pass.

The danger of the Tar Baby threat passed, however, when Maryland took the ball on downs at the beginning of the last quarter. A Maryland punt was returned to the 50-yard line by Carolina. Two first downs placed the oval on Maryland's 34; a run by McGill, of Carolina, was stopped just within the limit of the final marker by Knott, of Maryland; but an extended jaunt around right end that sent Phipps from one side of the field to the other also carried the pigskin over the goal. The ball hit the goal post on the try for point. Score, 12-7, Carolina.

Shortly after the Tar Babies' final score, the Old Line freshmen took the ball on downs on their own 30-yard stripe. Then a high pass, good for 40 yards, soared from Sothoron to Brenner, who carried it over for the winning touchdown. The kick failed. Score, 13-12, Maryland.

There followed a hectic two-and-a-half minutes in which Clabaugh and Sothoron both intercepted Carolina passes and carried the ball to the 8-yard line. It was the Tar Babies' ball, 94 yards from Maryland's goal, at the end of the game.

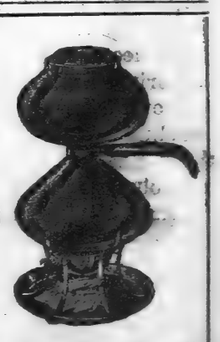
The following men were substituted for Carolina: Kaahn, Horney, Shore, Wilson, Strickland, Crane, Rankin, Eames, Finkle, Snead, Jones, Mathison, Priest, Tatum, Guthrie, McGill.

McGill replaced Hackney, who was injured in the third quarter.

The officials were Sermon, of State College, referee; Perry, umpire; Young, head linesman.



Tar Heels Have Edge On Tennessee Series

Carolina and Tennessee, who will revive a grid rivaly in Knoxville Saturday dating back to 1893, have clashed on the gridiron eight times, with Carolina winning four, losing three, and tieing one. The Vols, however, have won the last two games, in 1926 and 1927 by big margins, and the Tar Heels will be fighting for any revenge they can get on such a formidable team.

Tar Heel Band Likely To Play at Tennessee

The North Carolina band, classed as the "snappiest" college band in the country last year by a New York Herald-Tribune reporter, will probably lead the Tar Heel invasion to the Tennesse game Saturday at Knoxville.

UNIVERSITY MEN ATTEND MEETING

The tenth annual convention of the North Carolina section of the American Water-works Association was held in Hendersonville, October 13, 14, and 15. Meeting jointly with this association was the North Carolina Sewerage Works Association, which was assembled in its eighth annual convention.

The convention was attended by 235 delegates from all parts of North Carolina, together with representatives from sixteen other states, and two foreign countries.

Those going from the University were, H. G. Baity, secretary of both of the assembled associations; J. S. Bennet, of the University Consolidated Service Plants; Charles E. Ray, of the department of conservation and development, and H. E. Thompson, superintendent of water purification here at the University.

The next meeting of the associations will be held in Greensboro in November 1931.

MUSICIANS MEET IN GREENSBORO

Greensboro, Oct. 18.—More than 100 supervisors and teachers of music in the state assembled at North Carolina college Friday and Saturday in the second annual music conference directed by the state college for women. Features of the sessions were addresses by Dr. Victor L. F. Rebmann, director of music of the West Chester County commission, New York, and Bruce Carey, director of vocal music at Girard college, Philadelphia.

Both men conducted clinics in which practical demonstrations of instrumental and vocal music were made, and led discussions of instrumental and choral music with emphasis on the work in high school.

A dinner at the King Cotton hotel at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening and a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock Saturday were among the events of the conference. Meetings of the musicians were held throughout Friday and until noon Saturday at the music building and at Aycock auditorium.

A number of those who were in Greensboro Thursday evening heard, as guests of the Greensboro Civic Music association, the recital given by Alexander Brailowsky, Russian pianist, at Aycock auditorium.

S. G. Stoney Will Come to N. C. C. W.

Greensboro, October 18—With readings from Black Genesis, a volume which offers the negro's conception of the Bible, Samuel Gaillard Stoney, southern writer and speaker, will entertain audiences at North Carolina College Thursday and Friday, November 7 and 8. Mr. Stoney's engagements at the college are under the direction of the lecture course of the state institution for women.

The lecturer is said to be an authority on the dialect and folk lore of the negroes of South Carolina. With Gertrude Mathews Shelby he is co-author of the volume Black Genesis.

COLLIER COBB IN HIS OFFICE

The picture above shows Dr. Collier Cobb, of the geology department, in his office. During his years of service to the University he has come to be affectionately regarded by his students and by the people of Chapel Hill and the state. On the campus he is known, for his geniality and wit, as one of the most popular instructors in the University. "Have you ever taken a course under Collier Cobb?" the graduates and upperclassmen ask of the younger men. And in case of a negative reply, they always say, "Well, you must get at least one before you leave Chapel Hill." Dr. Cobb is, of course, a person of much consequence in his chosen field, but his personality is far more interesting than his accomplishments.

Adding to the versatile list of Dr. Cobb's activities, the Chapel Hill Weekly carried in its last issue a story saying that Dr. Cobb is one of the state's oldest journalists, as well as being the dean of its geologists: he once published in Shelby, a hand-lettered newspaper, of which he was editor and salesman as well — when he was ten years old!

Lubitsch Harmonizes Narration and Action In 'Monte Carlo' Plot

There is one man in Hollywood today who, more than anyone else, seems to understand the true medium of audible pictures. He has appreciated the fact that the screen should offer more than a mere transcription of a stage play or novel. And so, with the true expression of a master, he has utilized sound to work co-operatively with narrative and action.

The man in question is Ernst Lubitsch. His genius was responsible for the silent masterpiece, "The Patriot." More recently he directed Maurice Chevalier in "The Love Parade." Equally at home with high comedy or drama, Lubitsch has brought more innovations and novel touches to the screen than any other man engaged in the making of screen plays.

His latest effort is considered by many to be his finest. It is a Paramount comedy with music, featuring Jack Buchanan, the noted English stage star who several years ago with Beatrice Lille and Gertrude Laurence scored a sensational hit in "Charlot's Revue" on the London and New York stages, Last year Buchanan was starred in the New York production of "Wake Up And Dream." Playing opposite Buchanan is Jeanette MacDonald, Chevalier's leading lady in "The Love Parade."

But to return to Lubitsch. In his new picture, titled "Monte Carlo," he has taken a very, very modern story of the Monsieur Beaucaire theme and, imbuing it with scintillating dialogue, clever situations and innumerable deft touches to tickle all those who delight in high comedy, he has made a picture of which even he may be proud.

There is one thing Lubitsch has one in "Monte Carlo" that deserves special mention. He introduces his songs as part and parcel of the plot, of the story's development. For example there is that perfect sequence which shows Jeanette MacDonald riding in a train. The camera is then focused on the engine. The rhythmic roar of the engine is caught up by the microphone and is gradually woven into the pattern of a song. The chorus is also picked up by men and women working in the fields, a sequence of much beauty in melodic and dramatic content. At a special $5.50 performance at the Rivoli Theatre in New York, these scenes inspired long and sincere applause. However, in all truthfulness, this train scene is merely one of many extraordinary and novel treatments with which Lubitsch endows every moment of this delightful and effervescent musical comedy romance.

CROWD OF 2,600 HEARS BRAILOWSKY'S RECITAL

Greensboro, Oct. 18.—Approximately 2,600 people heard Alexander Brailowsky, Russian pianist, in a recital given Thursday evening at Aycock auditorium, North Carolina College, under the direction of the Greensboro Civic Music association.

The pianist's program was a pleasing combination of numbers from Scarlati, Beethoven, Bach-Busoni, Chopin, de Fella, Debaussy and Liszt.

Rival Systems To Clash In Vol-Carolina Battle

The relative merits of the Notre Dame and Army football systems will be tried justly when Tennessee's Army-coached Vols engage North Carolina's Notre Dame-tutored Tar Heels at Knoxville Saturday, in what should be one of the feature clashes of the Southern Conference race. The two teams tried the same cause in 1927 but the Vols had such a big edge on material, and the Notre Dame system was so new at Carolina, that the test was anything but fair.

Strange Interlude Booked for Durham

After all there is something new under the sun, despite the age-old belief to the contrary. And this something new will soon be on view in Durham. It is the nine-act drama "Strange Interlude" that won for Eugene O'Neill, the author, the coveted Pulitzer Prize for the third time in his brilliant career as a playwright. It carried off the laurels as the "best play of the year" in 1928. In 1920 this same playwright ran away from all his competitors with his "Beyond the Horizon" and he did the same thing in 1923 with "Anna Christie."

The Theatre Guild, Inc., will introduce this widely publicized play to the play-goers of Durham Friday, October 24 at the Carolina Theatre.

The first claim that "Strange Interlude" can make for being something new under the sun lies in the fact that it is composed of nine acts, which take from 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 o'clock at night to run their course. An intermission for dinner between the fifth and sixth acts of one hour and twenty minutes is declared at 7:40, so that at 9 P. M. the audience is back in its seats again.

The second claim for being something different will be found in the manner "Strange Interlude" is played. Each character speaks the regular lines of his part and then, as if his very mind were exposed to the view of the audience, he goes on and says what he is thinking. This method of delivery is called "asides". They were in use on the stage many years ago, but not quite as O'Neill employs them. Under his skilled manipulation, they become not "asides" but a tangible, oftimes all-important part of the story which is being told.

In thorough keeping with the daring that O'Neill has displayed in many of his earlier plays, such as "Anna Christie," "The Hairy Ape," "Desire Under the Elms" and "All God's Chilluns Got Wings," in "Strange Interlude" he may be said to have gone them all even one better.

This book is a part in a continued program of research in the south which Odum has been carrying on, and is probably the weightiest of the books that he has published. The critics seem to conclude that it may not be very popular, but that it will be one of the few books of lasting interest and value which have been published in the last year.

COLLEGE POETRY SUBJECT OF TWO NEW ANTHOLOGIES

Carolina Magazine Asked to Sponsor Contests in Conjunction with English Department.

May 1931 will see the publication of a new anthology of American college verse by Harper and Brothers. The plan of the editor of the anthology, Miss Jessie C. Rehder of Columbia University, is to include two poems from each of one hundred major colleges and universities in the United States. The book will consist solely of poetry written by students attending college during the 1930-31 term. Poems submitted must not be longer than thirty lines.

Miss Rehder was in Chapel Hill Friday morning to make arrangements for securing contributions in collaboration with the Carolina Magazine. A committee, consisting of Professors George McKie and George Coffman of the English department, has been appointed to assist the editor of the magazine. The committee will appoint readers to select poetry, they will in turn send the selected contributions to the editor of the anthology. Any student in the University is eligible to submit poetry either through the medium of the Carolina Magazine or directly to Professor George McKie, 210 Murphey hall, or to box 823. All contributions should be in his hands not later than March 15.

A second book of college verse is being undertaken by persons located at Washington and Lee University. All contributions for this anthology must be submitted to Professor McKie not later than November 1, the publisher's deadline being November 15. The plan is to select the desired four poems from the Carolina Magazine of last year and contributions submitted by November 1, 1930.

Miss Rehder, working for Harper and Brothers, plans to be in Chapel Hill again within the next ten days to confer with the committee. Further information concerning the matter can be secured from Professor McKie at 210 Murphey hall.

AVERAGE STUDENT PAYS ONLY SMALL PART OF TUITION

Figures recently compiled by the treasurer of the University of South Carolina show that the two state schools having the largest enrollment, the University and Winthrop, received the lowest amounts per capita from the South Carolina legislature for their education budget this year. There are five colleges in South Carolina supported by state appropriations.

Clemson College received the largest amount per student, an allowance of $324. Citadel was next with $302 per student. The University students received $256 and those at Winthrop only $244.

Additional figures by the treasurer showed that each student pays an average of $56 for registration fees, as against $244 paid for each one by the state, showing that each student pays less than one-fourth of the actual cost of his education.

At the last session of the South Carolina legislature, when the education budget was considered, it caused considerable controversy.

SELF-INFLICTED WOUNDS RESULT IN BELL'S DEATH

Durham, Oct. 20.—L. J. Bell, German instructor at the University of North Carolina died here at 2:12 o'clock this morning from the results of self-inflicted bullet wounds and poisoning. Bell was discovered in his room at a downtown hotel here Tuesday night, suffering from severe scalp wounds from the effects of bullets from a revolver found in his possession. It was later discovered upon his removal to the Watts hospital that the man had taken bichloride of mercury. Hospital attachees stated that complications resulting from the poisoning brought about his death.

Although it was understood that Bell had been in a state of despondency prior to the accident, members of his family could give no reason why the man should have taken poison.

Bell was a prominent young member of the University having taught for two years following his graduation. During his scholastic career he was considered an exteremely intelligent student and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

LATIN-AMERICAN STUDENTS FORM SPANISH CIRCLE

Initial Meeting Friday Night to Organize Club and Elect Officers.

"The Circulo Hispano" organization holds its initial meeting of the year Friday night at 8 o'clock, October 24, at the Episcopal Parrish house.

This year shows a record number of Latin-American students enrolled at the University, and a keener interest in spoken Spanish is manifest. The general scope of the organization is to afford an opportunity for advanced American students to become better acquainte d with, and to practice, spoken Spanish, and to allow Latin-American students to form a closer social relationship.

Among the Latin-American students active in the forming of the club are Umberto Umana, of Costa Rica; Mr. Joramillo, of Ecuador; Mendez Perrez, of La Coruna, Spain; the three Kjellesvig brothers, of Havana, Cuba; and Nazarena, of the Philippines.

The purpose of the first meeting is to elect officers for the ensuing year, and to form a general outline for the year's work.

At various times there will be lectures by students and instructors of sundry departments on subjects allied to, and in accord with, the plans of the club.

All students interested in the study of the Spanish language are cordially invited to attend the meeting next Friday night.

A. K. Shields, of the Spanish department, who was last year's president, will officiate at this meeting, and Umberto Umana will offer selections on the guitar. Umana is an artist in this respect, and has broadcast from WBT, Charlotte.

The Literature Department of the Community Club will meet Tuesday night at eight o'clock at the Methodist Parish House.

The feature of the program will be a talk by Mrs. M. L. Skaggs on the "Magazine Facilities of the Library."

All Men Know Ye By These Presence

As President of the student body of the University of North Carolina, I do hereby call the students of this University together in a mass meeting Tuesday night, October 21, in Gerrard Hall at 7:30 o'clock. This meeting will be addressed by President E. R. Murrow of the National Student Federation and President John Lang of the North Carolina Student Federation and Executive Secretary R. B. House of the University. The student body is hereby requested to turn out en masse for this meeting.

Gimghoul Totem Makes A Public Appearance At University Well

The students of the University were surprised yesterday by the presence of a new visitor. This visitor was found at the University well. No one knows his intentions for coming to the University unless it was to gain publicity. The visitor was a hideous wooden figure with great wooden wings and one red eye. His appearance here is marked by complete mystery, as he has been in the past securely housed in the impregnable castle of the Gimghouls.

On the statue was found a note giving some information as to the statue's identity. The note labeled him "Sir Rex Lucifer, sacred to the Order of Gimghouls." The note was signed by Monsieur X.

Evidently, Monsieur X held a kindly feeling towards Lucifer, for he added by way of parenthesis, "Long may his wooden majesty live!

Just how the statue was moved is still a mystery, for Gimghoul Castle is securely locked, every door being barred and bolted from the inside, and even the windows being locked.

After finding Lucifer, several students reported going to Gimghoul and finding every door locked and barred. Although means of Lucifer's removal from the Castle are still a mystery, it was discovered early yesterday that the statue was transported part of the distance by a baby carriage. The statue was evidently too big a baby as the carriage crushed under Lucifer and was abandoned near the Chapel Hill cemetery.

The transfer must have been carried out single-handed as part of the statue was left near the Castle. The Gimghouls were quick to note his presence on the campus and did not let him stay long. They removed him, back to the stone castle, while his sudden change of residence still remains a mystery.

THREE STUDENTS INJURED DURING TRIP TO GEORGIA

Three University students narrowly escaped serious injury when an automobile in which they were riding left the road and crashed into the supports of a railroad underpass five miles north of Southern Pines Friday night. The students were enroute to Athens, Ga., where they were to attend the football classic Saturday. The occupants of the car were James Nowell, Cornelius Bretsch, and Allen Caldwell of the University, and Bon Nowell of Raleigh. Allen Bailey of Hugh Morson high was also a member of the party. Bob Nowell was painfully injured, receiving a bad cut on his right arm, and other lacerations and bruises. It is said that he might have bled to death but for the presence of mind of his brother in keeping the wound closed with his fingers. The University students were uninjured.

State Universities Will Send Delegates To Convention Here

The University will be host to the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied Institutions on the occasion of their annual meeting in Chapel Hill, November 13-15, 1930.

Representatives of several state universities will be present, among which will be: Michigan, Montana, Wisconsin, South Carolina, Colarada, Missouri, Wyoming, Maine, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Ohio State College, and Purdue.

SCENERY BEING MADE FOR NEXT PLAYMAKER BILL

The work of the Carolina Playmakers is going forward this year with new mates helping Captain Koch guide it through the rocks of financial difficulties. Ralph Westerman, the new business manager, comes to the Playmakers with four years work in the professional theatre to his credit. He is taking the job made vacant by Mr. Heffner. Besides managing the business affairs of the Playmakers, he instructs in English, and supervises and directs student productions. At present he is directing "Samuel Hinkle, Fireman," one of the plays to be presented here next month. Professor Koch is directing "Git up and Bar the Door," and Mr. Selden is directing "Cloey."

These plays will be given November 6, 7, and 8. Mr. Selden assisted by a small staff, is working on the scenery. The scenery department has taken up headquarters in the Playmaker's Scene Shop in Person's Hall, in order to have more room for its work. The construction of the scenery is practically finished. Mr. Selden said that he expected to go to work painting it today. It will be ready to set up in about a week. It is constructed on a standard size basis of not over five and one-half feet. This standard is set for stage scenery, he said, in order to make it possible to get through a freight car door. The Playmaker scenery will probably never be shipped on a freight car but this size proves to be

FOUR DELEGATES FROM UNIVERSITY ATTEND RETREAT

Four delegates from the University attended the Student Volunteer Retreat at Winston-Salem, October 17-19, which had for its purpose the discussion of problems of religion, education, and welfare work in other countries as they relate to student life in North Carolina. The meetings were held in the West End Methodist church, and the delegates were entertained in homes in Winston-Salem.

The threefold purpose of the student volunteer movement is to distribute information and enliven interest among students in life service work in foreign countries, to assist these students in securing proper training and preparation for foreign service, and to relate student volunteers to the foreign board of the church or organization in which they are most interested in going out for.

Discussion of the meetings centered about this three-fold purpose of the volunteer movement. Other things discussed were the perfecting of student volunteer groups in each college of the state, the strengthening of

MAJOR M'LENDON NEXT TO SPEAK TO LAW SCHOOL

Will Explain the Preparation of Cases for Actual Trials.

Following the tradition that has been set since 1925 by such prominent attorneys as James H. Pou, Kenneth Royal, J. C. B. Ehringhaus, and Major McLendon himself, the Law School Association wil hear the last named tonight at 7:30, on "The Preparation of Cases for Trial in the Superior Courts."

This topic, because of its importance to young attorneys, is discussed each year by one of the leading practicing lawyers of the state. To make matters more interesting, Major McLendon will center his discussion around three or four actual trials in which he has participated. It is said that he will state the facts as they appeared to the lawyers for plaintiff and defendant, the complaint and the answer, and the merits and defects of the pleadings as they appeared on the trial of the cases. Major McLendon's experience in the court room, and his recognized ability in the legal field, should dramatize this phase of the practice.

The law school, in its attempt to acquaint the school with the state, theory with the practice, has been exceedingly fortunate in being able to secure the outstanding lawyers of the state for these lectures.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL MAKES PLANS FOR CONFERENCE MEET

A committee has been appointed by the Athletic Council of the University to make preparations for the annual meeting of Southern Conference officials December the twelfth and thirteenth in Chapel Hill. The conference is held each year at some college or university in the conference. It was held last year at the University of Louisianna in Baton Rouge. This is the first time the conference has ever assembled at the University of North Carolina.

Y CABINETS HEAR MURROW DISCUSS STUDENT REIGN

National Student Government Man Speaks on Implications Of Student Government.

"The marked difference in the student governments found in the South from other organizations of the like throughout this country is that the students administer the punishment for breaches of self government rules, rather than passing this part of the work to the Administrative Board of the school," President E. R. Murrow, of the National Federation of Student Governments, stated last night in his address before the Y. M. C. A. Cabinet.

President Murrow pointed out that this phase in student government was an advance and higher phase of progress which should be retained and which other colleges and universities would do well to adopt.

In addressing the body on the topic of "The Moral Implication of the Student Government," he also spoke of the moral implication of being a student, not only locally but nationally and internationally. President Murrow stated that there are possibilities of bringing about world peace through this organization.

"The fundamental purpose," he said, "of the organization is to bring about good citizenship, in which responsibility and adminstrative abilities are cultivated in the student before he leaves the college or university.

The speaker emphasizes the fact that the purpose of the Federation was not sponsoring radical forms of student government, those which are at variance with the faculty. The further cooperation of the student bodies and faculties is advocated.

President Murrow discussed the European Federation of Students, which is the counterpart of the American National Federation of students. The European Student Association, he pointed out, has more influence in the affairs of the respective governments than the American Federation may ever hope to have. This is due to the variance in ages of the students there and in the traditions ly-

COFFIN TALKS TO TAR HEEL STAFF

Professor Oscar J. Coffin made an informal talk to the staff of the Daily Tar Heel in its regular meeting Sunday night.

Mr. Coffin explained the course credits that are given for work on the Tar Heel and then went over some of the recent papers and criticized them.

His remarks were prefaced by a short talk from the managing editor, Jack Dungan who said, among other things, that the competition for positions on the editorial board would begin today, and would last till Friday.

It has since been announced that anyone interested in writing editorials, columns, or feature stories should turn in copy to Beverly Moore, the chairman of the editorial board, who will be in the office of the Daily Tar Heel from 1:45 to 2:15 every afternoon. The membership of the board will be made up of upperclassmen only, and except in unusual cases, there will not be any sophomores.

Federation Tackles Problem of Own Size

John Lang's North Carolina Student Federation becomes of practical value to collegians when it discards theories and digs into a study of student government. This week has been decreed Student Government Week by officials of the Federation. An attempt will be made to familiarize students with the functions of and to increase interest in student government.

The wisdom of organizing the North Carolina students into a federation was doubted both here and at other institutions last spring. There seemed to be too much theory and oratory about the proposition to indicate any practical value to students.

Evidently study and investigation have revealed to officials of the Federation that if their organization was to be of value to students more attention would have to be devoted to problems with which the officials were familiar.

This week's program of speeches should not tax the abilities of the leaders to any great extent nor should it overburden the students with theory. Improvement can be made in North Carolina collegiate self government and the officials may well devote their efforts to improving these and let the oratory come later.

The most unnecessary thing we've heard of in some time was a Chicago man and wife going clear to China to be shot by bandits.—Dayton Daily News.

Lang and Murrow To the Rescue

E. R. Murrow, president of the National Federation of Students, comes to the rescue of student government in North Carolina colleges. Duke University, a member of the state federation, has given up the self-rule idea, replacing it with a form of proctorship; other schools, also members of the federation, admitted in an organization meeting here last spring that student government was unsuccessful with them. Still others said that they had no student government, while here at the University, where the plan is supposedly more effective than at any other place in the state, discipline has become a matter of individual honor.

Mr. Murrow's appearance in North Carolina is, therefore, in a degree necessary to the revival and continued life of student government. We commend John A Lang, state president, who is responsible for the crusade, for his foresight in attempting to prevent the imminent demise of this foster-child of his. With him we join in urging you to hear Mr. Murrow, to be informed of the problems of student affairs and intercollegiate relationships.

A member of the University student council has said that it is in a lack of interest in student government and the honor system, due principally to agnosticism and malinformation, that the diseased conditions of these two institutions have originated. In reply, we reiterate an idea voiced in these columns last spring: that you can't teach a man in a day to do something that would require, ordinarily, his entire scholastic life to learn and to practice. That is, if student governments to be successful, its ideals and principals must be thoroughly taught, over a period of years, to pre-college students. The single lecture and the reading of a single booklet during Freshman Week will not turn the trick. We conclude, then, that the efforts of Lang and Murrow, however noble and conscientious they may be, can have nothing more than a temporary influence on student life and thought—their talks, no doubt, will be remembered by the heedful few, forgotten by many more, and almost, if not completely, lost in the passing of another student generation.—E. C. D. Jr.

Inferiority?

It is very difficult and, if you like, presumptious to say why people do or do not do things. But sometimes there is a limited number of possible explanations. There are four reasons why there should be only three co-eds in the Phi Assembly and no co-eds at all on the debate squad. No, there are only three reasons, for lack of time is neither more nor less than a poor excuse—no reason at all. Perhaps the girls are lazy, perhaps uninterested, perhaps suffering from a perverted sense of inferiority. If they are lazy or uninterested, then they are simply lazy or uninterested, and there is no particular point in attacking windmills that neither fight back nor fall down. But if the co-eds have inferiority complexes—that is an abused pair of words—then we have only one thing to say to them: "The world takes you at your own valuation."

The Phi Assembly was in no way obliged, in its 136th year of existence as a forensic body for men, to admit women. The fact that it defied its own custom is proof of the fact that the representatives of the organization considered the women on the campus capable of speaking from its floor. The fact that the debate squad invited women to its meetings implies, we feel safe in inferring, that it considered them capable of debating. But if an inferiority complex keeps co-eds away from the Phi Assembly and away from the debate squad, then the members of the two bodies will regret their invitations. "The world takes you at your own valuation.—V. D.

the state volunteer union for North Carolina, and the national volunteer movement as these state and local groups are related to it.

A series of four addresses and forums relating to these things was led by Dr. Elbert Russell of Duke University.

W. C. Huckabee, one of the national secretaries of the student volunteer movement, led the discussion of the technical points of organization and program.

The entire program was intended to clarify the minds of the students as to the aims of the volunteer movement, and to stimulate their thought as to work on the campus.

Delegates from the University were: Sam Gorham, vice-president of the Y. M. C. A.; Douglas Kincaid, member of the Y. M. C. A. boy's work committee, and leader of the local High Y club; Al Nazareno, a junior at the University from the Philippine Islands; and H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y.

The colleges represented were: N. C. C. W., Duke, Wake Forest, E. C. T. C., Shaw, Salem, Davidson, Greensboro College, State, Mars Hill, and Carolina.

best for packing on top of the Playmaker bus.

When the Tar Heel reporter called on Mr. Selden he quite literally had his cleeves rolled and was rushing the work of construction on the scenery for the new plays in order to get started on the painting by today. He said that he could use some more students if any cared to do this kind of work.

Mr. Westerman said that the Playmakers were suffering just now from an insufficient number of good plays, and that one of his biggest jobs will be to encourage the writing of new plays in order that he may have a greater variety to select from when the plays to be taken on tour are chosen.

Dodd Will Address Education Conference

Professor William E. Dodd, head of the Department of History at the University of Chicago, is the most recent addition to the list of speakers to address the third annual Southern Conference on Education which will take place at Chapel Hill, October 30, 31, November 1, 2. Professor Dodd is a native North Carolinain. The subject of his address will be: "The University and the Changing Order in the United States."

As an author and historian, Professor Dodd numbers among his works Life of Jefferson Davis and Woodrow Wilson and His Work. He is editor and joint-author of The Riverside History of the United States, joint editor with Ray Stannard Baker of The Public Papers of Woodrow Wilson. Professor Dodd belongs to the Quadrangle, Chicago Literary, and Cosmos clubs and is a member of the American History Association and American Social Science Research Council.

Business Students

John G. Pollard, Jr., who is a representative of the graduate school of business administration of Harvard University, will be in Chapel Hill today to interview juniors and seniors who contemplate attending the Harvard business school. Students who are interested should come to room 306 Bingham hall at 10:30 this morning. Those who are unable to come at that time can arrange an appointment with Mr. Pollard through Professor M. D. Taylor in the same room. Mr. Pollard is the son of Governor Pollard of Virginia.

"Y" Mails Out Membership Cards

President Ed Hamer and his committee at the "Y" have just finished mailing out the annual Y. M. C. A. membership cards to all students who pledged two dollars or more at registration. In compliance with the National Council ruling the local "Y" can not issue a membership card for less than a two dollar annual payment.

There were 650 cards mailed out last Saturday, and others are still making pledges at the "Y" office and being given the membership card immediately.

The following letter of thanks and information, was mailed with each of the 650 membership cards last week:

"In consideration of your pledge to the University "Y" made at registration, we are pleased to hand you herewith a membership card good for one year beginning September 20th, 1930.

"We call your attention to the four statements on the back of the card which indicates its function and usefulnes. There is a Y. M. C. A. in practically every city of twenty-five thousand or more population in the United States, and in the pricipal cities of the leading 44 countries of the world (a total of 10,400 "Y's" with 1,589,000 members.) Wherever you visit one of these cities the Card will entitle you to the courtesies of a visiting member on trips. Therefore, you should have it in your pocket.

"May we take this opportunity also to thank you for the help you have given in "Y" work at Carolina this year, and at the same time invite you to call on us for special service at any time, and to say that we will be glad to have you join us on any committee work that may appeal to you?

Cordially yours,
Signed: Ed. Hamer, President."

Life Of Communists Related By Farson

Negley Farson, who has been for some years representative of the Chicago Daily News in various quarters of Europe—chiefly Russia—reappears on the publishers' book lists this week with "Black Bread and Red Coffins" (Century.) It is a book about Russia, but the publishers emphasize the fact that it stresses concrete Russian men and women rather than Russia in the abstract.

Farson has lived in Russia long enought to realize the impossibility of writing a book which will give an accurate picture of the whole country at once, so he describes instead, that part of Russia which he knows—namely, the thousand and one human beings whom he met, talked with and lived with in nearly every section of the country.

The illustrations are all in full color, and are reproductions of many of the Soviet posters which are to be seen in all parts of Russia. Instead of the usual illustrations which show Russia as it appears to outsiders, these illutrations have the virtue of showing how the outside world appears to the Communist mind.

U. D. C. Scholarship

The main topic discussed at the meeting of the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, at Mrs. Bernard's Tuesday, was the scholarship to be awarded to a University student in the fall of next year. Raising funds for this is to be one of the important activities of the chapter in the next few months.

The recipient of the scholarship will be chosen on some sort of competitive basis.

E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre, has offered to aid the project by giving a benefit performance Sunday, November 2.

On the cleanest locker-room floor you'll catch the germ of "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

YOU don't have to make any one of the teams to have "Athlete's Foot." The glee club probably has some victims. The man who gets all his exercise out of differential calculus, not to mention the "crammer" and the "plugger," may be wondering about that redness between the toes, with i-t-c-h-i-n-g. Or it may show up with a thick, moist skin condition. Or again, with tiny blisters on toes, or a dryness with scales.

The fact is, all these symptoms point straight at the ringworm germ known to the boys in Science Hall as tinea trichophyton. This tiny parasite of the vegetable kingdom has infected about half the men in college, according to many authorities. The U. S. Health Service reports that "at least half of all adults suffer from it at some time." Universities as far apart as California and Pennsylvania have found 50% of the men infected. And the co-eds get it too. Little tinea trichophyton has made itself a campus pest.

It lurks in the very places where we all go for cleanliness and health—on the edges of swimming pools and showers—in gymnasiums—on locker- and dressing room floors. In spite of modern sanitation (you have to boil socks 15 minutes to kill it) this fungus parasite infects and re-infects bare feet almost any time they come in contact with damp floors.

Absorbine Jr. kills the germ of "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

Tests in a famous New York "lab" have revealed that Absorbine Jr. penetrates flesh-like tissues deeply and that wherever it penetrates, it KILLS the ringworm germ.

It might not be a bad idea to examine your feet tonight. At the first sign of the symptoms mentioned, douse on Absorbine Jr. And keep a bottle handy in your locker as a preventive. Use it after every exposure of bare feet on damp floors. At all druggists—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Mass.

Coach Collins Starts Preparation For Next Game With Hard Work

Drills at Blocking and Charging In Order for Whole Squad In Practice Yesterday

Coach Chuck Collins started off the work for yesterday afternoon at Kenan stadium by demonstrating to the team the several defects in the Tar Heel attack against Georgia, pointing out that there was a lack of drive in the team throughout most of the game.

After these faults were pointed out, the squad settled down to stiff drills at blocking and charging and went about its work with much improvement in its drive and fight. If a man failed to execute the block or the charge properly he would repeat it until he had it right. There was an air about the Tar Heel camp of "let's get ready for the Vols, so that the old weaknesses won't come up again."

Practice closed as the sun was setting behind the west end of the stadium with a snappy signal drill in which three elevens participated. The first team lineup showed Johnson and Parsley, ends; McDade and Thompson, tackles; McIver and Fysal, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch quarter; Nash and Maus, halves; House, fullback. Walker and Brown, ends; Underwood and Hodges, tackles; Newcombe and Blackwood, guards; Gilbreath, center; Wyrick, quarter; Chandler and Slusser, halves; and McNeill, fullback were in the second team lineup.

Trainer Chuck Quillan reports that the squad came through the game with only a few bruises, and that barring injuries during the practices of this week the team will be in good shape for the second of the "three-in-a-row" hard conference tests.

Irwin Walker, promising left end, who broke his wrist before the opening game with Wake Forest, was in heavy equipment yesterday afternoon for the first time, taking an active part in the stiff drills of the afternoon on blocking, charging and taking out ends. Walker's wrist has been healing up nicely and doctors pronounced it sufficiently strong for him to be back in practice.

Freshmen Preparing For Princeton Game

The Freshmen were back at it again yesterday after their debut last Saturday. Even though they were beaten by the Maryland team, 13-12, this team showed promise of developing into a real winner before the season is over. The squad took advantage of the fact that the Tar Heels were not going to scrimmage with them and practiced a few new plays the Coaches gave them. Later in the week they will again serve as resistance to the varsity.

The team went through the game with only a few injuries. Hackney received a severe shaking-up but was in uniform again yesterday and back out. Mullis, a star linesman from Charlotte, was in street clothes and watched the practice from the side lines. He received a blow on his knee Saturday and is retired for the present.

The team was weak on its pass defense in the Maryland game and consequently Coach Enright intends to spend some time polishing up that department. The next game the yearlings have is with the Princeton Freshmen which is to be played next Saturday at Princeton.

Roy McDade played well against Georgia Saturday, stopping the powerful Bulldog backs time and again when they tried the right side of the Tar Heel line.

TENNESSEE AND CAROLINA RENEW ANCIENT RIVALRY

Tar Heels Have Won Four Games, Lost Three, and Tied One Since First Meeting.

With question marks hanging over the outcome, North Carolina and Tennessee are slated to do some heavy drilling this week in prepartion for the renewal of their ancient rivalry at Knoxville on Saturday. The Conference race is so muddled this year, and there are so many outstanding teams which are potential winners that this game is likely to have a big bearing on the outcome of the race.

Tennessee is still reporting a large injured list, and Carolina coaches are still lamenting their rookie line, but supporters of the teams are skeptical of the wiles of such coaches as Neyland and Collins, and expect a great battle.

The Vols and Tar Heels have clashed eight times since 1893, but have not met on the gridiron since 1927, and this renewal of rivalry is expected to draw one of Dixie's biggest crowds of the year. The Vols will be celebrating Homecoming Day, with all the old grads expected back, and this, coupled with the announcement of special trains and low rates presages a record invasion of Tar Heel supporters.

Bill Cerney, backfield coach, scouted the Vols against both Ole Miss and Alabama, and he thinks it will be difficult to overestimate Tennessee's power. The Tar Heels, with star backs and a line that is improving every game, will be drilled to the utmost, and will be trying to play their best game of the season.

Carolina won the first game played against Tennessee, in 1893, 66 to 0. The Tar Heels won again by good margins in 1897 and 1900, lost a close game in 1908, and won in 1909. In 1926 and 1927 Tennesse crushed Carolina 34-0 and 26-0. The total series history shows that Carolina has won four, lost three, and tied one.

Princeton, N. J.—(IP)—By special arrangements made between the Princeton Athletic Association and the Princeton Boys' Council, all Princeton town boys are to be permitted to attend three football, eight basketball, eleven hockey and twelve baseball game without charge this year.

A $1 fee is to be charged to cover the cost of printing special tickets for the series.

ALABAMA LEADING CONFERENCE WITH THREE VICTORIES

Wallace Wade's Bohemians On Power Plays to Break Tennessee's Record.

Alabama, with a massive, fast charging line clearing the way for its speedy backs, ranks as the real giant killer of the south, after handing Tennessee its first gridiron defeat since 1926 in a thrill-packed game Saturday.

Wallace Wade's Bohemoths depended entirely on power plays in crushing a courageous Volunteer eleven. The score was 18 to 6.

Bobby Dodd, Tennessee's all-southern quarterback, crossed the Tide with brilliant selection of strategic plays, but on all but one occasion the Volunteer drives fell far short.

In the final period Dodd passed to Hackman following an 80-yard advance for Tennessee's score. In the second quarter Hackman tossed over the goal line to Dodd, but Dodd missed.

Freddie Sington, giant tackle, stood out in the 'Bama line. Gene McEver, hero of many Tennessee victories and Brandt, a great end, sat on the sidelines, injured, as the Vols' three-year record fell.

The standing of the southern conference football teams, including games of Saturday, October 18, follow:

CAKE RACE WILL BE RUN THURSDAY

Those Not Having Had Six Practice Runs Will Not Be Allowed to Compete.

The seventh annual Cake Race will be run off at 4:20 P. M., Thursday, October 23. All contestants are asked to come in at the main gate of Emerson Field where they will be given numbers. Anyone reporting later than 4:15 will not be allowed to run regardless of the fact that he has completed his required number of work-outs.

Anyone not having had his six practices will absolutely not be permitted to run. Those men who have four or more work-outs to their credit will be able to fulfill the requirements, but any one having less than four practices will be unable to come up to the requirements and will not be permitted to run.

Coach Ranson has received word from quite a few of the women of Chapel Hill that they would be glad to donate cakes to be awarded as prizes in the Cake Race.

FOOTBALL

By K. C. RAMSAY

THE TAR HEELS SETTLED DOWN TO WORK YESTERDAY for the coming game with Tennessee, with only memories of the the defeat handed them by Coach Harry Mehre's Bulldogs. This loss does not by any means indicate that the Tar Heels are not a good football team. They are strong and powerful, but Georgia has what we believe to be the greatest team on the Southern gridiron. It was a case of two sets of powerful offensive backs, one with a veteran line and the other with a young one. When you have "Jack the Ripper", and Roberts, assisted by Chandler and Downes, at fullback with a line adept at opening holes, you have something that is almost unstoppable. Even with all this potential scoring power, the Georgians found it difficult to gain when they got in Carolina territory.

Ten first downs to three and 213 yards to 30 was the way that the two teams stacked up at the end of the half, but the score was only 6-0. We would call that "holding them in the pinches." They just couldn't keep this up any longer, and when the final period arrived "Jack the Ripper" and Co., finished up the one sided game.

It was the first time that the Tar Heels have been held scoreless since Harvard downed them 20-0 in 1928, and the worst defeat that they have taken since Tennessee conquered them in 1927 by the same 26-0 score.

WE MUST NOT TURN FROM the Georgia game without mentioning Roy McDade and June Underwood. Roy played a nice game at right tackle, stopping the great thrusts of the Georgians time and again. It was the first time that June Underwood has ever played at left tackle, but Coach Collins knew that he could depend on him to cover this position. Limping about on his injured ankle, heavily strapped with adhesive tape, June held up the left side of the line very well.

BEATING TENNESSEE IS the principal thing now on the minds of the Tar Heel team. They have forgotten what is behind, for there are six more games, games to be won, and they are going about the task of getting ready for these six tests with lots of vim and vigor. Knoxville, this Saturday, will see a Tar Heel team out to "get a pound of flesh" for defeats handed them by the Vols in '26 and '27.

JIMMY DEHART IS DETERmined to make his departure from Duke with a closing year of victory. Three wins in a row. That is the best showing which a Duke team has made in several years, and they are going to add to that list from Saturday to Saturday, too. December 6 is becoming a more important square on our calendar each day. Tar Heels vs. Duke for the state title of North Carolina unless some big upsets intervene.

JOE McCALL CONTINUES TO be the big flash on Monk Younger's Wildcats. Maybe the Davidson officials will put him back on the first team this week after that run which beat the Citadel Saturday.

* * *

CONFERENCE HONORS seem to be almost as undecided as ever. Carolina and Tennessee were eliminated this week, but Vanderbilt, Georgia, Tulane, Florida, Alabama, and Kentucky are still in the running. At the present time Vandy and the Bull Dogs are the best bets.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Sigma Nu Runs Wild

In the only game played yesterday afternoon the powerful Sigma Nu outfit ran wild against the Chi Phis. Griffith, who did the passing for the Sigma Nus, was shooting them from all angles.

Pi Kappa Phi was awarded a 2-0 forfeit over A. T. O. S. A. E. and Lambda Chi Alpha were accredited with a loss each when they failed to make appearance for their scheduled contest. Grimes forfeited to New Dorms and Old East to Steele.

In the first quarter of the Sigma Nu-Chi Phi contest, a series of short passes brought the ball down to the 20-yard line. Griffin got one off to Bennett, who scored. The extra point was scored. In the second quarter Dameron, Sigma Nu, pulled in a short one to make the score 14-0 when the half ended.

Chi Phi threatened only once in the third quarter when Collett tossed a long one to Evans for 35 yards. Evans went up high for the pass, spun around, and landed hard, but kept the ball. Lynch took a pass for the third Sigma Nu touchdown. Griffin tossed a pretty running pass to MacNair to make the score 28-0. Just before the final whistle, Dameron snared another one to make the final score 34-0.

Blacksburg, Va.—(IP)—William Grinus, Jr., the second freshman ever to win class numerals in four sports at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, stands at the head of a class of 500 in academic work. Grinus, of Orient, Ill., has met requirements for athletic awards in football, boxing, baseball, and track.

WEATHER HINDERS INTRAMURAL BALL

McBride of Ruffin Appears to Be Outstanding Intramural Star This Season.

The rain during the early part of last week washed away the spirits and the ambition of the dormitory and fraternity athletes. It was necessary to chalk up many forfeits and postponements. A wet turf slowed down the scoring to a great extent.

The Tar Heel wishes to correct at this time an erroneous report of the Chi Psi-Sigma Phi Sigma fracas. The correct result of this game should have been Chi Psi 19, Sigma Phi Sigma 0.

Due to various reasons only one game of the set scheduled

RACQUETEERS TO PARTICIPATE IN PINEHURST MEET

Tennis Tourney Beginning Monday Will Be Second For Tar Heel Netmen.

The Tar Heel racquet wielders will engage in their second fall tourney Monday, October 27, when they will journey to Pinehurst for an invitation intercollegiate tournament. Together with the collegian matches, which will run through Thursday, there will be the Pinehurst Fall open tournaney in which the Tar Heels will also play.

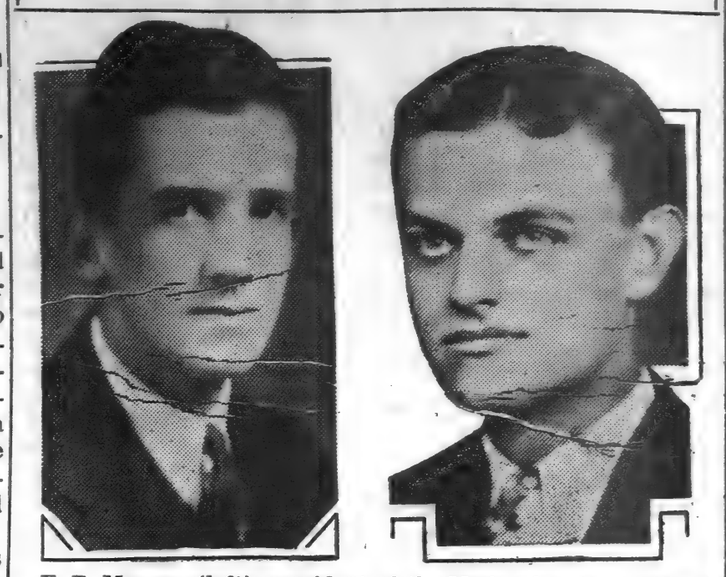
In the intercollegiate matches there will be two singles matches and one doubles. If the same men who play the singles are allowed to take part in the doubles matches, it is probable that the Tar Heel lineup will consist of Wilmer Hines and "Hinkey" Hendlin; otherwise these two men will devote their efforts to the singles, and Liskin and Wright will probably be Carolina's nomination for the doubles play.

The open will consist of one singles and one doubles match, and there is a strong possibility that Carolina will have entries in that play.

Nor will the freshmen be forgotten. If they do not accompany the varsity to Pinehurst, they will engage the Raleigh Country Club here next week in a team match. Little is known about the Tar Babies, but of those practicing, Morgan, Shuford, and Dillard seem to have an edge over the other candidates.

This year more time will be devoted to doubles than at any other time, for with the extensive northern trip that is being scheduled, the Tar Heels are taking no chances of losing close matches because of a weak double combination.

So far five matches with northern squads have been scheduled and two more are listed as tentative. These are: Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Columbia, and New York University. There are possibilities that there will be matches with Army and Navy. Besides these matches, Carolina is slated to meet Duke, Davidson, State, Wake Forest, take part in the State Intercollegiate tourney, and face the class of the South in Alabama, Tulane, and Virginia.



The climax of this heavy schedule will be the Southern Conference tournament to be held late next spring. For the past three years these matches have been held in New Orleans, and this year the University athletic officials are attempting to have Chapel Hill act as host to the southern teams.

Tests made at the New Jersey College for Women indicated that sophomores are less liable to believe untruths than juniors are.

Managers Report

All sophomores who are candidates for manager of varsity basketball report to Manager Chauncey Royster at Emerson Stadium at 3:30 today.

They will also speak this week to the student bodies of a number of colleges throughout the state in observance of Student Government Week.

Acts Identical Role

Barbara Leonard, who plays a featured role as a French nurse in the Fox Movietone drama, "Scotland Yard," coming today to the Carolina theatre, is known in Hollywood as the only woman ever to enact the feminine lead in a picture produced in four different languages, opposite four different leading men.

The picture was called "Monsieur La Fox," and Miss Leonard's linguistic abilty and acting talent assures her success as long as Hollywood continues to make pictures for German, French, Italian, and Spanish consumption.

Born in San Francisco, January 9, 1908, her family moved to England. Later she lived in Switzerland, the meeting point of every langauge spoken in Europe and there Barbara absorbed languages with an amazing promptness. Her higher education came in Paris, after which she studied painting in Milan and Florence.

Eight Play Games In Class "A" Race

Eight high schools in the class A football conference met again on the gridiron Friday.

Rocky Mount played Goldsboro at Rocky Mount, neither team scoring. Five thousand fans witnessed the game, a large number to see a high school contest.

At Durham the same day the Wilson and Durham contest resulted in a 0-0 score. Greensboro played Salisbury at Salisbury with the score a tie 6 to 6. Charlotte met Gastonia at Charlotte.

Vachel Lindsay, well-known poet, wrote and recited a poem especially for the occasion of the installation of Dr. Kenneth Irving Brown, 34, as president of Hiram College. Dr. Brown is next to the youngest college president in the world.

CROSS COUNTRY TRIALS ARE HELD

Captain Baucom Shows Heels To Field by Time of 30:45.

Time trials for the varsity cross-country team were made Friday afternoon. Several of the men did not run in this trial because of sore muscles. This run was not held to decide which men were to run in the meets but merely to see how much progress the team had made in the short time that they have been practicing.

Captain Cliff Baucom who was closely followed by T. L. Cordle came in in 30:45. Bob Hubbard, Joe Pratt, Mark Jones, came in soon after the leaders. The time registered was fair considering that the men have not been practicing very long. The course record, set in 1927 at the Southern Conference Meet by Galen Elliott, winner of the Cake Race in 1925, is 26:30.

Coach Ranson believes that by October 31, when the first meet will be run off against V. P. I. the team will have sufficiently rounded into form to warrant a prophesy as to its chances of winning Carolina's fifth consecutive Southern Conference cross-country championship.

Dr. William F. Peirce, president of Kenyon College, has entered a sanitarium at Washington, Pa., to recuperate from an appendix operation undergone in August. He plans to take a month's vacation at Hot Springs, Va., before resuming his duties at Kenyon in December.

Golf Notice

Freshmen and upperclassmen who are interested in golf will report at Emerson field Wednesday morning during chapel period.

CHEMICAL ENGINEERS TO DISCUSS SULPHURIC ACID

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers will hold its second meeting tonight in 206 Venable hall at 7:15 for the purpose of discussing sulphuric acid. Three talks will be made by members of the organization, after which the business of the association will be taken up.

Those who are to make the talks are: Adam Fisher, G. H. McCormick, and Howard Crisco. These students will discuss the production and the use of sulphuric acid.

This organization is especially for the chemical engineers, and is very similar to the clubs which have been formed for the electrical and mechanical engineers.

The officers of the A. I. C. E. are R. J. Buble, president; Frank Thomas, vice-president; T. R. Taylor, secretary; and Adam Fisher, treasurer.

for Friday was played. The Kappa Sigma-Sigma Chi and the Phi Alpha-Pi Kappa contests were postponed. The Phi Delts forfeited to the Phi Sigma Kappas. Phi Kappa Sigma dealt a lusty beating to the Delta Phis, 32-7. Working a long pass attack in big time fashion Ike Manning, Phi Sigma Kappa ends, ran wild scoring three touchdowns for his house. Markham tore through a broken field for forty yards to add another one. Carter, of the Delta Psis, bore the Delta Psi burden in commendable fashion.

McBride, who leads the Ruffin outfit, is still going strong. The latest conquest of this dormitory is at the expense of Lewis. At the final whistle it was 20-0. Lewis completed many passes but was unable to bring the leather across the last marker. McBride deserves watching for consideration in all-campus honors.

The hardest fought game of the week was won by the Zeta Psis from the Theta Chis. Both teams battled away for the full time without scoring. Zeta Psi got the decision by five first downs to four. The Sigma Zetas have taken another one on the button. The Phi Gamma Deltas ran the score up to 32-0 before the final whistle ended the uneven match. Marsey and Bryant acted as sprint men for the Phi Gamms.

The passing attack of the various teams has steadied down a bit and the passes are no longer being thrown with just a prayer. The blocking brings to light several courageous lads who are doing their stuff without any padding outside of a pair of shorts. Some of the broken field running would be worthy of varsity mention. No serious injuries have been reported up to the present date. The various outfits will continue to do battle next week on the soft turf. The results of these kind of games are considered significant.

CO-EDS TO DANCE FOR FIRST TIME OF YEAR FRIDAY

Bids Are on Sale in Room 301 Spencer Hall Beginning Today.

The co-ed dance for the fall quarter will take place in Spencer hall Friday of this week between the hours of nine and one. The Woman's Association, under the auspices of the German Club, gives a dance each quarter of the school year. The executive committee of the German Club serves as floor committee at the dances. The chaperones for the dance Friday night are: Mrs. M. H. Stacy, advisor to women, Mrs. Irene F. Lee, social director of woman's building, Mrs. Harding, house mother for Beta Theta Pi fraternity, Mrs. Rose, house mother for Pi Beta Phi sorority, Mrs. Josephine Jones, hostess at the Graduate Club, and Miss Kate Graham.

Reeme Moore, president of the Woman's Association, has announced that bids for the dance are to be placed on sale today in Room 301, Spencer hall. She asks that all girls, who expect to attend the dance Friday night, see her and arrange for the purchase of their bids today, so that the association will be able to complete its plans immediately. Two bids are to be allotted to each girl. Since the girls and men have looked forward to the dance for some time, according to Miss Moore, it is probable that the dance will be well attended.

The music for the evening will be provided by the Carolina Buccaneers, under the direction of Ty Sawyer.

Community Chorus Has Reorganization

The Community Chorus, organized last year, held its first meeting of the present year Monday evening at 7:30 in the new music building. There were sixty-five people present, many of them members of last year's organization. But since George H. Lawrence, president, and H. S. Dyer, director, wish a chorus of 150 voices, there is room for new singers. No particular ability is necessary.

The group is, as formerly, made up of town people, faculty members, and students. The chorus will again sing Handel's "Messiah" a week or two before Christmas. Mr. Lawrence's office announces that there will probably be some spring performance in addition. Rehearsals will be held each Monday evening at 7:30.

CHAPEL HILL CENSUS SHOWS BIG INCREASE

The population of Chapel Hill, according to the 1930 census, shows quite an increase over the census taken ten years ago.

The present figures are 2,697, exclusive of the student body, almost double the population of 1920. The assessed value of property is $3,760,000 compared to $1,100,000 assessed value of 1920.

The town is now using a mechanical sweeper which is quite an improvement. The law prohibiting automobiles to be parked on the street overnight will be enforced. Cars left will be towed off and the owner compelled to pay. Four cars were tagged yesterday morning for violating this law.

Magazine Features Playmaker Article

The Carolina Playmakers, the best known organization on the campus, is continually getting its name in the papers, especially in the drama and theatre magazines of the country. In the September number of the American Magazine of Arts Edith J. R. Isaacs, editor of the Theatre Arts Monthly, has a long, well illustrated article on the Playmakers and their work in developing the folk drama in America. She heads the article with a picture of the Playmaker bus on a tour of western North Carolina over the title, "The Carolina Playmakers, Their Contribution to American Art." She has a picture of the Playmaker theatre and one of the Forest Theatre. The other illustrations are pictures of scenes from plays by Gertrude Wilson Coffin, Edith Daseking, Joseph Fox, Paul Green, Maragret Bland, and Loretta Carroll Bailey.

Leaders of Electrical Engineering Profession Address State Section of Association.

Most of the senior class of electrical engineers of the University attended the fall meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers yesterday afternoon and night at the Washington Duke hotel in Durham.

The meeting began at two o'clock in the afternoon with a short business session of members for the election of officers and consideration of amendments to section by-laws.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Mr. O. K. Marti, chief engineer of the American Brown Boveri Company, Camden, N. J. He chose as a topic for discussion "Mercury Arc Rectifiers." Following this talk, C. L. Knotts, general engineer for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in Charlotte, spoke on "Equipment for Changing Taps Under Load" and illustrated his subject by slides. The address by J. G. Gidley, of General Electric Company in Schnectady, N. Y., on "The Design of Large Steam Turbines," was also illustrated by slides.

After an informal dinner at seven o'clock, S. A. Fleminster, engineer for the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company in Atlanta, Ga., presented a sound picture on "The Research Behind Sound Pictures."

Circle's Bridge Tournament

The Louise Manning Circle of the Episcopal church will hold a benefit bridge tournament at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and again at 8 o'clock that evening, at the home of Mrs. G. M. Braune. The entrance fee is 50 cents. Reservations may be made with Mrs. George Bason.

Sigma Zeta Pledges

Sigma Zeta fraternity announces the pledging of: Charles C. Keener of Kingsport, Tenn., R. Graham Tart of Dunn, N. C., and Thomas H. Broughton of Dunn, N. C.

Pi Kappa Phi announces the pledging of Hale Yokley of Mount Airy, and James Felts, of Charlotte.

ELECTRIC INDUSTRY NEEDS MEN UNDERSTANDING HUMAN AFFAIRS

Westinghouse President Tells of Need of Training Beyond That Learned in Technical Schools.

[Editor's Note—Last spring the Daily Tar Heel published a series of articles on scientific subjects. Considerable interest in these was shown by members of the engineering school. With memory of this in view the Daily Tar Heel is pleased to present an article on the requirements exacted of college graduates by electrical engineering concerns when such graduates apply for positions. The article is an abbreviated address by President F. A. Merrick of the Westinghouse company.]

F. A. Merrick, president of the Westinghouse Electrical and Manufacturing Company spoke last Thursday at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, the seat of Lehigh University, on the occasion of the dedication of the James Ward laboratory of electrical and mechanical engineering on the subject of "What the electrical manufacturing industries expect of the technical schools." Excerpts of his address follow:

"The electrical industry in these modern days is an essential servant of every walk of life. Looking back over merely something less than a century one can note the electrical manifestations, having long remained in the class of interesting phenomena, were first reduced to the general service in transmission of signals, soon developed as a system of telegraphy. Thereafter, electricity appeared as a producer of light, mainly for publis places and streets soon refined to enter offices and homes in supplanting the prevailing kerosene and gas illuminants. Next came the idea of the electric motor, its early forms introduced hesitatingly under the limitations of the systems of distribution at that time available, but with improvement in the systems, and particularly with advent of the alternating current system, gradually but surely arriving at the present status in which the electric motor runs everything from exact time-keeping clocks for our mantel shelves to locomotives, warships, and steel mills—in other words, fitting all needs from a flea power to thousands of horsepower in an individual application. In the meantime exploration into the convertibility between electricity or electro magnetism and sound waves brought into being the telephone and the development of that vast industry. Also the adaptability of electricity in producing heat in any desired location and in any desired amount, large or small, mild or intense, opened up innumerable uses ranging from the breakfast table to the metal melting furnaces, while as an aid to chemical reactions it brought into being the electro plating industry, the stealing of fertilizers from the air, and no end of electro chemical processes. Later, the investigations with the more obscure phenomena of electro magnetic waves brought us the wonders of the X-ray, and most recently the whole art of radio transmission, with its bewildering present accomplishments and its still more bewildering indications for future development.

"These you will, of course, recognize as only the high spots of electrical development and uses, but they serve to bring to us a realization that today we must have electrical devices for the home in endless variety—electrical devices for our factories—electrical devices for our communications—electrical devices for our transportation—electrical devices for our farms, for our mines, for our oil fields—electrical devices for our entertainment—electrical devices for our doctor, for our dentist, for our beauty parlor, for our automobile, for our motor boat, for our airplane, and for what not.

"And beyond all these devices, there are required all the range of devices for producing, for distributing, and for regulating and controlling the supply of electricity itself, which renders all the other manifold devices useful—generators, motors, transformers, switches, trans-

Bell Funeral

The funeral of J. L. Bell, Jr., German instructor at the University, was conducted at his home in Rockingham, North Carolina, Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock.

The remains were carried to his home town Monday afternoon, and the funeral was held from the residence, conducted by his pastor, Rev. H. L. Hendricks of the Methodist Church. Interment followed in East Side Cemetery of that city. As a mark of respect, the schools of the town closed for the entire day Tuesday.

Professor Bell was twenty-two. He graduated from Rockingham High School in 1924, winning honors. In 1927 he was graduated from this University, where in just three years he made the high scholarship of Phi Beta Kappa. He later secured his master's degree, and for three years has been instructor of German at the University. He spoke fluently three foreign languages. This past summer he went abroad, and studied the Hungarian language.

Surviving are his parents, three brothers, and one sister.

Co-eds On Increase

There are 188 women students now registered—an increase of 19 over last year's number and about 7 per cent of the total enrollment of 2748. Of these only 120 are undergraduates—making 68 graduate students. The college of liberal arts claims 67 of the 120, with the School of Education next, having 31. The rest are distributed rather evenly, the schools of applied Science, commerce, medicine, pharmacy, and law having 9, 4, 3, 2, and 1 respectively. There are 3 special students.

Co-eds were first admitted to the Graduate School by the Trustees in 1897. Almost immediately they were admitted to the two upper classes. A few who are not of Junior rank are let in the school of public welfare and for special work in playwriting and play production. There must be clear reasons in each individual case, however, for letting in special students.

Infirmary List

The infirmary list follows: W. G. Sutton, Louis Anthony, W. W. Bacot, James Deverent, R. E. Hughes, P. H. Rhodes.

FRESHMEN HEAR MURROW SPEAK

In an address given in freshman chapel yesterday morning, E. R. Murrow, president of the National Federation of Students, compared student government in the South with that in other sections of the country.

The speaker was introduced by Red Green, president of the student body of the University, as a native North Carolinian who had won his position as president of the federation through hard work and ability.

President Murrow stated that student government in the South was different from, and superior to, that of the rest of the country. In last year's conference, the representatives from the West were surprised at the form of student government in the South, as explained to them by Ray Farris, the representative of this university, and other representatives from the South.

MURROW SPEAKS OF ORGANIZATION AIMS AND PLANS

President of Student Federation Speaks to Student Body In Gerrard Hall.

President E. R. Murrow, of the National Student Federation of America, talked before a mass meeting of the student body last night in Gerrard hall, explaining something of the purpose and work of the national organization.

Mr. Murrow, in the beginning of his talk, expressed his appreciation of the hospitality of the people here at the University, and for the agreement of the meetings. He commended the democratic atmosphere and the spirit of good fellowship on the campus.

He explained that the field of endeavor of the national organization is the assistance of local governments in the meeting of student problems, promotion of cooperation between the students and faculty, and the stimulation of knowledge of, and interest in the affairs of the nation.

Mr. Murrow told something of the origin and growth of the National Federation. In December of 1925, at an assembly of students from 245 colleges and universities at Princeton University to discuss the question of the entrance of the United States into the World Court, the students realized the need for an organization to intelligent student opinion. The National Federation of America was founded with the support of over 250 colleges. In 1927 the Federation became a member of the International Confederation of Students.

Mr. Murrow mentioned the sixth annual Congress which is to be held at Georgia Tech, De-

Tribute to Major Cain

Eminent Engineer Praises Him for Dam-Construction Formulas

In the September issue of the Journal of the Concrete Institute the leading paper, by the distinguished engineer, Lars Jorgensen, contains a description, with elaborate drawings, of six arched dams, 100 to 373 feet high, built in California, in which Major Cain's formulas are used in computing stresses. In fact, as Mr. Jorgensen notes, "they are now used in design work done by the Constant Angle Arch Dam Company, San Francisco, with which the writer is connected."

In a recent letter to Major Cain Mr. Jorgensen says: "You are the father of rational dam construction, and I have used your formulas ever since they came out and I have always appreciated them." He concludes by thanking Major Cain for all of his contributions on the theory of dams in the past from which, he says, "I have benefitted very much."

Di Versus Nye

Now that the Dialectic Senate has received a letter from the secretary of Senator Gerald P. Nye acknowledging receipt of the locally well-known resolution appertaining to the actions of the campaign funds investigation committee of the United States Senate, we are wondering what is going to be the ultimate outcome of the Di's hand in the game. In consequence of so serious a situation we are sure that Senator Nye already must be considering the possibility of his own resignation from the Senate. To say the least, we are expecting daily a public apology from the Nye committee to the state of North Carolina.

The Dialectic Senate really should be congratulated. Any group of people interested in the welfare of the nation and state has a right to express its opinion, in either verbal or written form. And the Di has been courageous and open about the whole thing. The local senators did not stop after discussing the affair, nor even after declaring a resolution; they consummated the action by forwarding the resolution to the man at whom it was directed. You can not stop the Di Senators, for when the oratorical fireworks flare up on meeting night, you can bet your boots that the Di will take a stand.

Now, such tommy-rot as all this we would condemn unreservedly under ordinary circumstances. Such action as taken by the Di would tend to destroy the dignity of any other organization; it indeed would make any other group look ridiculously absurd. But it may be that the Di does not care much nowadays for dignity, and so the resolution would not in such case destroy its dignity. But after all, the resolution was the work of a group of cultured and intellectual young men, we presume, and we suppose that we will have to leave it at that.—B. M.

The Quality of College Loyalty

There can be no doubt that loyal students, faculty members, and alumni are a telling asset to any college or university. Indeed, no educational institution could exist for long without loyal supporters both within and without. Of the many types of loyalty that can be manifested toward one's alma mater the writer feels that the rah, rah variety, which is habitually demonstrated at football games and other contests which play on the emotions, is accorded the most extravagant potence. People are prone to think that the students and alumni who yell the loudest and jump the highest at football games are the most loyal supporters of the University. Without attempting to minimize the significance of the loud, emotional vintage of loyalty demonstrations this editorial seeks to bring into the limelight another type of college loyalty. Although smothered beneath an avalanche of yelling and waving of hands, it is a greater asset to the University of North Carolina or any other similar institution.

Scattered throughout North Carolina, the South, the nation, and the world are alumni of this institution which are saliently interested in its tasks and accomplishments, its uprisings and downsittings. The major portion of these seldom, if ever, get an opportunity to witness any athletic game in which Carolina's colors are flown. Yet these persons turn to the sport pages of their morning papers to ascertain the outcome of such encounters with as much interest and genuine loyalty as any person who yells himself hoarse in Kenan stadium. To these silent alumni the pangs of defeat and the glories of victory are just as real as to any alumnus residing in Chapel Hill.

Although the people of the state are continually complaining that taxes are extravagantly high, officials of the University find all too often that state appropriations are insufficient. The first resort is to alumni donations. Some respond readily; others ignore the call as though uninterested. In this latter category are many sons of Old Carolina who attend every football game in which Carolina is represented and who yell after the fashion of an unbridled ass. On the other hand, the aforesaid silent alumni respond with fat checks. The actual facts in the case are that alumni who live in distant parts and who have not seen Chapel Hill for a long number of years give more than alumni of the immediate vicinity. Which, we ask you, is the more valuable type of loyalty? We dare not say that the barking dog never bites. There is no risk, however, in saying that the barking dog seldom bites.

Although we have no desire to condemn any type of college loyalty in an attempt to give prominence to another type of the same thing, we do feel that the loud, emotional variety of loyalty demonstrations has been emphasized all out of proportion to actual value. —J. C. W.

Membership Cards

The annual membership cards of the University Y. M. C. A. have been mailed to each of the 650 students pledging two dollars or more to the organization. With the total registration in the University numbering around 2700, the number of students making pledges is small. The average student, especially if he is not dependent upon the Y. M. C. A. for any of the services which it renders, is prone to regard it as something pertaining to that part of college life with which he is not associated. Many students in former years have made pledges at the time of registration and after that ignored them.

In addition to the self-help and other agencies provided for those in need of them, the Y. M. C. A. is an adjunct to the social and religious life of the students. Reading and social rooms are provided, and various forms of entertainment are placed at the disposal of the students. The three cabinets hold regular weekly meetings, where discussions are held on subjects pertaining to student life, and frequently speakers are procured for addresses. Authorities often hold conferences with the students concerning their personal life and habits. The cabinets provide for regular vesper services as a means for promoting the religious habits of the students. Besides the activities on the campus, the organization sends deputation teams to schools throughout the state.

The membership cards given upon the payment of pledges are valuable in themselves. They entitle the bearer to courtesies in all local branches in the world. Members may rest and exercise in any city of medium size, and is often able to secure sleeping quarters for a small fee. The cards are invaluable in strange cities where help and advice is needed. They are means of introduction and identification almost everywhere.—E. F. Y.

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

Good Morning! It is with some little misgiving that we again contemplate disturbing the peaceful scene with our usual and weakly load of tripe. Scientists and bar room attaches are our authority for the statement that "those who can laugh at themselves are the wisest fools, after all." Better a half-wit than no wit at all, so saith the scriptures.

The Daily Tar Heel, startling news dispenser, has exhibited to the campus one of those strange metamorphises known only to college newspapers, and that excellent criterion of style The Durham Herald. In the early part of the week the sheet announced that a Dr. Murrow would address the student body on some phase of student government. Within twenty-four hours the said Dr. Murrow was advertised in the paper as Mr. Murrow, of the college class of 1930 and president of the National Federation of Students. On Sunday in adjoining columns it was announced that he would speak to the Y Sunday and Monday nights, he being scheduled to make but one address to that organization, an example of consistency, at least.

Oh well, the Tar Heel is taking the place of the Carolina Buccaneer in providing humor for the campus, the last which seems to have died "a borning" this month, the printers having been at work on the remains for some three weeks and there still being no Buccaneer. Saturday morning one of the young geniuses attached to the editor's desk permitted the following to be handed down to posterity, "He explained that the plant was a native of Mexico and that the pollination was carried on by a moth which is not to be found in North America." All of this supposedly emanating from Dr. Totten. Either the worthy doctor needs to supplement his education by a course in geography, or the news man and city editor are wrong, which hardly seems possible.

Three hundred and one freshmen have invested their fathers' money for the glory of Beta Beta Beta. Three hundred and one disillusioned young men will this week undergo a period of deflation known as "pledge-duty." To the tune of one half-inch pine and oak paddles, some of them beautifully engraved with the initials of former initiates, these much sought after young men are being taught that on the fraternity road there are many "ups and downs."

Some of us from among the unwashed mob have organized a non-fraternity fraternity, the prime requisite being that all applicants for membership be broke, and unable to pay dues. John Idol is president, McBride Fleming-Jones, vice-president, and the writer, treasurer. Our meetings are to be held in Gerrard hall during the inter-collegiate debates in order to secure privacy.

Macon Cheek, who knows his Latin and poetry, has elected to perform the scholastic gymnastics indicated in the title—"The Religious Imagery in Vergil's Aeneid"—in order to secure his doctor's degree. Such useful and scientific labors must surely benefit generations to come. However, the graduate school and Cheek are not alone in this intellectual horseplay. A Guggenheim fellowship was once given to a very learned professor for research work on the subject—"A Comparison between Old Welsh and Gaelic Legal Terminology."

Dr. Dyer complained through these columns of the small number of applications for organ IN TE WAKE OF NEWS—2 dedicatory assignments of seats. And, ladies and gentlemen, that one little insertion in the Daily Tar Heel, which covers the Hill like the dew or a wet blanket, brought forth three hundred requests by the next noon. Advertising may be secured from the business manager between the hours of two and three afternoons for the small sum of fifty cents an inch.

* * *

An energetic religious enthusiast, who evidently believes in advertising, has a poster on the bulletin board of the Y which blares forth with the question—"WHERE IS HAPPYNESS." Certainly not in the dictionary, son.

Another who advertises his wares claims to do expert typing of "dissitations."

After all, we sometimes come to the purely sophomoric conclusion that most of us would be quite much better off without educations, and the decision that a University education is undemocratic. The longer we stay here the worse we spell, and the less fundamental education we possess. Oh, there is no denying that nine-tenths of every college graduating class can dance, eat, and drink in the most elegant and polished fashions, but some of us come originally for that eidolon-something which for want of more accurate description is misnamed culture. Were we without educational institutions we wouldn't all have to go to college to secure an equal chance, and an opportunity to be self-made men at the expense of our fathers' purses. We therefore go on record as being in favor of the immediate abolition of universities and colleges to provide an equal chance for all, which inanity we pass on the Philanthropic assembly for their most serious consideration.

Carolina Eleven Gets More Hard Work With Reserves Scrimmaging

Whole Squad Busy Working on Defensive Tactics for Tennessee Plays.

Another day of hard work was spent by the Tar Heel varsity yesterday afternoon when the first team spent over an hour in dummy scrimmage with an eleven of reserves, and the second outfit battled with another reserve eleven in a fast regular scrimmage. Practice for the afternoon was speeded up by the chilly autumn breeze which was blowing through the stadium.

In the scrmmage session with the second varsity the reserves ran Tennessee plays to help prepare the regulars for the offensive thrusts of the Vols. Defensive play was rather ragged and Coach Collins seemed to think that the team needs more work this week before they will be ready for Tennessee. However, at least a part of the raggedness may be attributed to the fact that it was the first time that the varsity has scrimmaged against Tennessee's "old army game" plays.

On offense the outfit showed considerable drive, scoring several touchdowns in short order, with Erickson and Chandler doing the most of the ball carrying. This eleven showed Brown and Nichols, ends; Crew and Hodges, tackles, Blackwood and Newcombe, guards; Gilbreath, center; Wyrick, quarter; Chandler and Erickson, halves; and McNeill, fullback. Alexander was substituted at end during the session.

The first varsity in dummy scrimmage with a reserve eleven drilled on covering Tennessee plays and seemed to get on to them fairly well.

Coach Collins probably will send the first eleven through a long and hard scrimmage today to test both its strength at halting Tennessee's plays and executing the offense more smoothly. Snappy signal drills have been held by this team every day this week, and for this reason it is believed that it will show a reverse of the listless manner in which it executed the offense against Georgia.

Jim Magner and Al Cole, who were disciplined by Coach Collins for a minor infraction of the training rules, were on the freshman field yesterday afternoon working out with the yearlings. Magner and Cole will report back to the varsity next Monday, having been suspended for one week.

Warren Works Out

Add Warren began heavy boxing work at the Tin Can Monday in preparation for his coming battle with Big Jeff Carroll in Charlotte October 27. A small but interested group of spectators looked on as the big fellow went through his workout in impressive style.

Warren opened up with a one round session against Obie Davis, varsity middleweight, and followed this with another round with his younger brother, John, who is a heavyweight. Add's third opponent was Hugh Wilson, sophomore heavy. In this round Warren opened up a little and used a left hook to the body to good advantage. Aside from the fact that this was Add's first heavy workout in some time, the fact that none of his sparring mates were in very good condition resulted in three rather slow rounds. This situation will not last long, however, as Warren must develop his punching power for the coming scrap.

* * * *

By Hugh Wilson

Now that last Saturday's grief is somewhat lessened on the campus, and it is being recognized that losing a football game does not bring utter oblivion, it is time to take stock of what really has happened—and may happen on Saturdays to come.

The mere fact that the Tar Heels lost by a large margin to Georgia indicates nothing except that they went up against one of the best "power" teams seen in this country in recent years. The Georgia Bulldogs may not have the finesse, speed and deception possessed by this year's teams at Notre Dame, Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh or Stanford, but it is a sure thing that they have every bit as much power—and more. They proved that against Yale when they showed that one of the best—if not the best—defensive lines in the country was unable to stop their drive when points were needed. This kind of attack was just what was needed to pierce the light and inexperienced Carolina line, and it was extremely fortunate that the majority of the breaks were with the Tar Heels, or the score would have been even larger against them.

However, those who at once set up a wail of pessimism in regard to the game with Tennessee this Saturday are going a little too far. It is true that Carolina enters the fray with the odds against her, but they are not nearly so great as those against her on the eve of the Georgia game. Last Saturday's contest has had its effect on the team, and it will go into the Tennessee struggle more experienced and more determined. Tennessee's vaunted attack is hardly as powerful as Georgia's, and, in the absence of McEver, Hug and Brandt, is not likely to be as skilled or as deceptive. Carolina may well be the team to humble the Vols for the second time in three years.

The Duke Devils certainly had that old Durham pitchfork working overtime against Navy. So furiously, in fact, that the Middies' ship developed serious leaks, made mainly by Bill Murray, main prong in the Devils' fork. One can entertain nothing but admiration for the spirit of a team which can pull itself together from the mire of last year's athletic demoralization at Duke and turn in successive victories over Virginia, Davidson and Annapolis.

SPRING TENNIS IS TO BE DIFFICULT

Heavy Schedule Includes Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Columbia and N. Y. U.

Despite the cold and chilly weather of recent days, which is unfavorable for tennis, Coach Kenfield's racquet proteges continue to bat the balls every afternoon to get into form for the annual intercollegiate tourney at Pinehurst which starts Monday. As only four men at the most will be entered in the coming tournament, rivalry is especially keen, and thrilling matches can be seen on the varsity courts every day.

Last spring, the Carolina netmen went through the entire season without a single defeat to win the state and mythical Southern championship. This spring, however, the team will have a much harder field of opponents to overcome. Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Columbia and New York University are already booked, and matches with Army and Navy will also probably be obtained.

As all of these matches will be played on succeeding days, Coach Kenfield is taking no chances on the team's not being in proper shape for the long grind of seven consecutive matches. For the first time, the varsity racquet swingers will practice throughout the entire winter on the five courts especially constructed last year for that purpose. And with six months of practice ahead of them before the Northern trip, the team will have a good chance of repeating their superlative record of last spring.

VIRGINIA STADIUM NOT READY FOR DEDICATION GAME

Thanksgiving Day Game With Carolina To Be Played on Lambeth Field.

The annual Carolina-Virginia Thanksgiving day football game will not dedicate Virginia's new stadium as has hitherto been planned. The reason is that the stadium can not be completed in time. The game will be played on Lambeth Field.

In spite of the fact that shifts of men have been working day and night in an effort to complete the playing field and stands by Thanksgiving, it has been discovered that the kind of stadium desired can not be finished in such a rush. The necessity of blasting great ledges of rock has slowed down the workers considerably. Some of the outcroppings are yet to be removed form the future playing field.

The new stadium will constitute one of the most beautiful football arenas in the world. It lies in a little valley at the foot of Mount Jefferson. More than ten thousand seats have been completed and more are forthcoming each day. It is planned to complete the concrete work before cold weather, wait until spring to put on the brick facing and to build the arcade and colonnade around the top.

The donor of the $500,000, which has made the new field possible, is Frederic W. Scott, of Richmond, Va., rector of the University. Mr. Scott has also given much time and attention to personally supervising details of construction in an attempt to have the stadium ready for the Carolina game.

Next fall will see all the grading of approaches completed, the new roadway linking two state highways opened, and the stadium a finished object of beauty between two mountains.

THREE BIG FIVE TEAMS TO PLAY AFIELD SATURDAY

Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest Travel To Foreign Soil While Davidson And State Remain Home.

Three aggregations of the Big Five will travel to foreign fields for Saturday's engagements, Carolina meeting Tennessee at Knoxville, Duke engaging Wofford at Spartanburg, and Wake Forest tangling with Mercer. State will play host to the Mississippi Aggies, while Virginia Poly will invade the Wildcat den.

The Tar Heel-Vol contest at Knoxville is slated as foremost North Carolina game of the week. With both teams entering the battle suffering from defeats at the hands of Alabama and Georgia respectively, the contest should assume the nature of a "consolation game."

Having sunk the Navy most effectively, the Duke Blue Devils will probably make the dedication of the new Wofford stadium an unpleasant ordeal to the South Carolinians.

The Pack-Aggie struggle at Raleigh will attract the attention of home state fans as one of the most interesting battles of the week. The game will bring together the forces coached by Ray Sermon, former coach at West Raleigh high school, and Christian Keener Cagle, the red headed All-American backfield selection who led the Army grey to victory for several years. Downed by a number of low ranking teams in the south, the Aggies surprised sport dopesters by upsetting the Lousiana State Tigers 8 to 6, high scorers in the south and a team which had been nosed out the week before by South Carolina, seven to six.

FRESHMAN TEAMS SCRIMMAGE HARD

Tar Babies Prepare for Game With Princeton Team Saturday.

Taking advantage of the first real football weather of the year, Coach Enright sent his first two freshman teams through a lengthy two hour scrimmage. The play was hard and fast and the members of both teams were full of pep and fight. In fact, the whole squad seemed to be anxious to work. The weather had something to do with this, but the most important stimulant was the desire to make the trip to Princeton. Coach Enrght said after practice that the selection of those men to go had not been made definitely, but that he thought that about twenty-six men would go Friday and return after the game Saturday.

The coaches were satisfied with the showing of the team Saturday against Maryland, but admitted that the pass defense was weak and needed polishing up. In view of the fact that the yearlings used Georgia plays against Maryland instead of their own, the showing is all the more worthy. This week, however, they have been working on their own plays and will have a more concentrated offense to offer Princeton Saturday.

As has been said, the scrimmage yesterday was a very spirited affair. Both of the teams played well and that they were evenly matched is shown by the fact that the first team could only score once, although most of the playing was in the shadow of the second team's goal. The first string line was composed of Brandt and Harrington, ends; Mulligan and Tatem, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Parker, center; The backfield with this team was composed of Woolen, Hackney, Phipps, and Weisker. The second line showed Hinkel and Rankin, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; Wilson and Shore,

BASKETBALL MEN BEGIN PRACTICES

Six Lettermen to Form Nucleus Around Which To Build 1930-1931 Quintet.

The initial call for candidates for the 1930-1931 basketball team resulted in twenty-five men reporting to Coach Ashmore Monday night in the Tin Can. Several of the veterans of last year's quintet and a few new candidates have been practicing since the opening of school under the direction of Captain Marpet, and Monday's call brought them out in force.

Captain Marpet first put the men through a ten-minute setting-up drill, after which Coach Ashmore showed the candidates the fundamentals of running shots under the hoops, spending about an hour in correcting the faults of some and improving upon the form of the others.

Considering the time of practice, the turnout tends to point to a successful year. Several of the men are out for football and will report in December, while others are engaged in other activities and will report at their earliest convenience.

Among the candidates are some well known figures in other sports. Hines, national junior tennis champion and star freshman forward, is making a good bid for one of the forward berths on the varsity. Merritt, captain of last year's crack tennis team, is also out for a regular position. Also Meade Willis of the golf team, and Henry and Chandler of the football squad have reported.

Graduation has hit the Tar Heel squad severely, five letter men, four of them regulars, failing to come back to school. These men are: Captain "Puny" Harper, versatile center for three seasons; Johnny Green, flashy forward; "Ookie" Neiman, one of the team's highest scorers and running mate of Green; Billy Brown, stellar guard; and Phil Sher, reserve forward.

This year six lettermen will form the nucleus of the Tar Heel machine. Captain Marpet and Alexander ought to hold down the last line of defense with Choate in reserve. Edwards and Cleland should take good care of the forward berths with Slater, Hines and Chandler to back them up. "Sandy" Dameron, Harper's understudy last year, should have little trouble holding down the pivot post.

In addition to this list are: Smith, Booker, Crouch, Crane, and Cohen of last year's squad, and Lineberger, Beale, Hamlet, Markham, Moore and Parsley of last year's freshman team, who will be ready to give the monogram men a stiff battle for their positions.

BILL FETZER MAY COACH AT STATE

William McK. Fetzer, former head coach at Davidson, State, and Carolina was named today as the likely selection for the vacant position of head backfield coach for the State College Wolfpack by officials of the North Carolina State College athletic association. The decision to secure a new coach came with the resignation of John M. Van Liew and the concurrent choice of Ray R. Sermon, present athletic director, as head coach.

Fetzer left Carolina in 1925 to enter the real estate business in the western section of North Carolina. He had been coach at Davidson almost a decade previous to this, coming from there to State.

guards; Fitzgerald, center; Jones, Johnson, McGill, and Eanes formed the backfield combination. Weisker starred for the first team, making several nice gains. Hackney and Phipps also showed improved form in hitting the line. McIver and Barclay, in the line, continued to show up well. For the second team, the line play of Shore and Fitzgerald and the defensive work of two backs, Jones and Johnson, was worthy of comment. Jones also made several nice runs.

There are no serious injuries and the team will send its full force against Princeton. Mullis, regular tackle, is out with a stiff leg, but he is expected to be ready Saturday. The Princeton freshmen are expected to offer strong opposition, but the chances of victory for the "Tar Babies" are good. It will be remembered that the last time a Carolina freshman team played Princeton the score was 6-0 in favor of Carolina. Johnnie Branch and Bill Suggs starred in that game.

cember 29 through January 2. At this meeting, two or three talking pictures of men who cannot appear in person will be presented. There will be one of Aristide Briande of France on his United States of France plan.

He spoke also of the debating tours which the Federation sponsors, and said that a team from Cambridge is being brought here to the University in December.

In his explanation of the work carried on by the Federation Mr. Murrow spoke of the travel department, which sends students from America to Europe and brings European students over here. A native guide is furnished in each country for the aid of these students.

He mentioned also the information service in the central office which compiles statistics of student government for the service of the member institutions. There is also a weekly news service which sends to the editors of student publications, news of national importance.

Mr. Murrow spoke also of the International Confederation of Students, which is the combination of all the national federations of several nations, which met at Brussels, Belgium, last summer. This is the organization which conducts the travel tours, and fosters international sports.

The Federation broadcasts every week over a national network, bringing to the students, speakers of international importance. Among these are Dr. Karl Becker, minister of educaton in Germany, and Tagsre, the famous Indian poet and philosopher.

European unions are highly centralized and directed. Mr. Murrow stated that the union in America wishes to develop intelligent student opinion and not direct it: it does not wish to make a political union. "It is an idealistic experiment, but at the same time practical experiment." The Federation must continually search for new ways of serving the students.

Electric Industry Needs Men Of Well Balanced Technical Education

mission lines, insulators, meters, resistances, and so on without end one might almost say.

"So let us look again at the original question of "What the electrical manufacturing industries expect of the technical schools."

"'Of course the industry needs men, it needs educated men, it needs techniacally educated men. It does not expect men from the schools ready qualified to solve every problem concerned in the design and manufacture of any one item in this range of devices—much less of all of them. the industry does expect, however, a group of men so selected and so trained in fundamentals and in analysis, and in the application of such analysis to practical problems, that they can develop into the doers of everything needful for the solving of each problem in that whole range of requirements.

"Again, however, the industry does not expect that each and every man bearing the certificate of a technical school shall be capable of developing into a successful coverage of every requirement in that whole range.

"The reasonable expectation of the industry is satisfied, if for instance, Graduate A emerges with capability of developing into the best there is in such and such a division of the field, while Graduate B is so qualified and fitted for similiar development in another perhaps equally important field, Graduate C similarly for still another field, and so on. The sum of A plus B plus C, and so on, is what the educator is expected to furnish.

"And right here I think it only proper to say that the industry is pretty well served with what the educator is doing with his problem. The industry has absorbed great numbers of technical graduates in the past half century, and it would be no exaggeration to say that it could not have made its remarkable progress without this steadily increasing supply of technical school men. And that the training has been, and is at present, much more than useful is amply confirmed in the fact that the young men in each successive year's graduating class are sought out and absorbed by the industry as its best hope for future progress.

"In fact the term basic training should properly be expanded into basic qualificatons, and as basic qualifications include not only the training imparted in the technical schools, but those qualities the young man brings to the school with him, the effort should extend to an interested selective process as to those to be admitted to the technical schools. This selective process should cover both the personal characteristics of the candidate and the kind and the degree of education already received. The accepted candidates for technical training should be young men of good moral character, physical health, and pleasing personality, and with a good background, as well as with a sane look ahead on what is planed to accomplish in life.

"The most frequently heard criticism of the technical man is that he is lacking in human understanding and in acquaintance with the world of affars, and along with these deficiencies he is very often lacking in the exercise of adequate expression in speech or writing, especially on subjects involving anything outside purely technical subjects.

"Now, having presumably made good selections of the technical student, and given, or rather induced in him due familiarity with the laws of mathematics and of physical phenomena in their various forms and the relations obtaining among all these, and in addition having stimulated his appreciation of the fact that there is something worth while in his business world aside from mathematics and physics, the time should be opportune for an attempt to aid him in his selection of an objective toward which to work.

"A series of instructive talks might be provided by some members of the faculty best qualified to speak on the subject of what in general the electrical manufacturing industry includes by way of divisions of work calling for technical education, and ingeneral the guiding of preparation the individual student might subject himself to in the last year or two of his course, as one or the other of these divisions seems best to meet his qualifications and desires. This I realize could usefully distinguish between only the broader divisions such as design, research, commercial and administrative; and in fact that is about all the degree of specialization there would be any use in trying to accomplish in the usual term of technical courses. Post graduate work might in some cases—especially in research—be profitably employed in the schools, though as a broad proposition the real specialization comes only in the actual contact with the school of experience in the industry itself.

"What the industry wants is men who can and will do some one thing better than it has ever been done before—who can add something to the sum of human experience, whether that experience has to do with design or manufacture or research or selling or administration—and the technical man who is properly qualified and trained and willing to work has no limit to his possibilities in the electrical manufacturing field.

"There is one point that fits in here though not exactly coming under the question of what the electrical manufacturing industry expects from the technical schools—rather it would class under what the industry would like to expect—and it concerns not the technical education of the graduate but his often displayed lack of educational and social advantages. I say his own kind of educational and social advantages. I say his own kind advisedly, because there is a world of education ground out in the hard school of experience in all sorts of work, manual or mental, by men who never saw the inside of a college, and who have things stored up from their experience that no college can teach.

"The young man of fundamentally the right sort comes to sense this fact sooner or later, and correspondingly avails himself of the opportunity of supplementing his own education with what he can learn from those who have had the other kind of schooling. In addition, he broadens his view of human relations, and learns how to appreciate with sympathetic understanding many problems of the industry that have nothing to do with materials or formulae.

"The year or so of shop work which the graduate generally gets as his first year's assignment on entering the manufacturing organization is the time when he can profit most from the contrary of the attitude indicated. If he could bring the right attitude with him on his first day's employment that would be most helpful to all concerned.

"Possibly this is one of the things that can only be worked out in the school of experience, but, on the other hand, perhaps the schools could in some way get the point before the graduate so that his own common sense would work to his own early advantage."

The scientist who said the next battles would be fought in the air were entirely right if they meant political battles.—Arkansas Gazette.

COMMUNITY CLUB HEARS LIBRARIAN

Mrs. M. L. Skaggs Talks of Magazine Facilities in University Library.

Mrs. M. L. Skaggs, who has charge of the magazine department of the University library, talked to the literature department of the Community Club at its regular monthly meeting in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Skaggs talked of the magazine facilities of the library and the use of the reader's guide. She stated that there are about 22,000 magazines published in the United States and Canada, and that the University library receives over 3000 of these each month. There are a great number of bound volumes in the library, and by a system of exchange others are borrowed from libraries elsewhere.

Mrs. R. L. Boggs read an article, "The Chicago Complex," which appeared in the October Atlantic Monthly.

Following this there was a general discussion of magazines and magazine articles for the month of October.

The department will meet again November 4 in the social room of the Methodist church. Dr. George Howe will talk on "Virgil." Mrs. P. C. Farrar, chairman of the department, states that they would be glad to have any one who is interested attend this meeting and hear Dr. Howe.

Judges Visit Stations

Launch Contest in Beautification; Verdict Next Summer

Mrs. H. R. Totten, Mrs. J. M. Valentine, G. M. Braune, Carl Durham, and T. F. Woofter, the judges in the filling station improvement contest, visited 16 stations in Chapel Hill township last Sunday afternoon.

They took photographs of every station while the proprietor looked on in approval and expressed his gratification that his place was receiving attention. The station men listened eagerly to suggestions about beautifying both the buildings and the surroundings. The judges made copious notes as well as photographs, and when they go around again in June they will be able to compare the October 1930 and the June 1931 appearance of every place.

Prizes have been offered for the greatest improvement in appearance between now and next summer.

Filling station proprietors may obtain shrubs from W. C. Coker without cost; and he will also give them information about planting.

DEBATE SQUAD TO HEAR ZIMMERMAN

The Tar Heel debate squad will meet in 201 Murphey at 7 o'clock Thursday night to hear E. W. Zimmerman, economics professor, discuss free trade, the subject of the dual debate with State College, November 20 and December 9.

Zimmerman, an authority on commerce, will define the term "free trade," and show how its meaning has changed since 1800. Eligibility to compete for a place on the team for this debate is dependable upon attendance at this lecture. Both men and women may compete. Attention is called to the change in time of the meeting.

Year Book Staff Meets

The first meeting of the Yackety Yack editorial staff will be held this afternoon in the office in the basement of the Alumni building at 2:00 P. M. Clyde Dunn, editor-in-chief of the publication, requests that the following men attend this meeting: Doug Kincaid, Ed Hamer, Mayne Albright, Will Yarborough, Beverly Moore, Holmes Davis, Herbert Taylor, Henry Anderson, Harold Wilson, Ed Yarborough, Ed Kidd, Bob Mebane, John Allison, Nut Parsley, Joe Adams, Tom Wright, Bill Hoffman, Albert Oettinger, and K. President Graham Good As His Word

Takes Plane to Get to Georgia Game, As He Promised.

Greenwood, S. C., Oct. 19—When President Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina promises the [illegible] he will be on the bench to watch them play a football game, obstacles in his path are merely little things to overcome.

On a train which he expected to reach Athens in time to witness the Georgia-North Carolina game yesterday he found it was about two hours behind schedule and would not arrive in time for him to even hear the final whistle.

At Whitmire, S. C., he sent two telegrams, to Greenville and Greenwood, asking whether airplane service could be had.

On arrival of his train here he found Greenwood could not furnish plane service but Greenville could. Another wire brought a plane here and forty minutes later he was in athens.

"I promised my boys I would be on the bench and I must get there." he told the pilot.

Student Paper Crashes Movies

Out in California, which has some of the finest and most beautiful schools in the country and which is also the cradle and home of the national movie industry, the college campuses are frequently used for the filming of college comedies. On this subject, the editor of the Los Angeles Junior Collegian writes interestingly:

"The Junior Collegian is now in the movies.

"In a preview shown at a local theatre we saw a good picture. It was a college picture.

"Most of it was filmed on this campus. Things were going along quite smoothly until someone woke us up and said, 'Why there's your paper!'

"And sure enough, it was. A co-edish looking damsel was looking at it so intensely she might have been reading it."

It is quite possible that, in some of the college pictures that come to this state, the Los Angeles Junior College and its worthy newspaper have appeared before local audiences.

Dramatic Association Announces Arrangements For Play Contests

The Carolina Dramatic Association, under the supervision of Secretary Louise S. Perry has announced plans and activities for the coming year. This association was formed by the Bureau of Community Drama, directed by Professor Frederick H. Koch, in 1924. The purpose of the organization as stated by Professor Koch are, "to promote and encourage dramatic art in the schools and communities of North Carolina and to meet the need for a genuinely constructive recreation; to cooperate in the production of plays, pageants and festivals of real worth; and to stimulate interest in the writing of native drama."

The services of the Bureau of Community Drama are available to all schools, colleges, and communities throughout the state. Requests for suggestions concerning organization, play selection, rehearsals, problems [illegible] lighting, planning [illegible] programs, and the teaching of dramatics are promptly handled by Mrs. Perry in cooperation with the officers of the Carolina Playmakers and the Carolina Dramatic Association.

The Bureau has at its disposal 2,000 volumes of play books and subject matter dealing with the various phases of dramatic art. These along with illustrations and many magazine articles which help in the solution of problems are willingly loaned to interested little theatre organizers throughout the state of North Carolina upon the payment of postage and packing charges.

In order to assist schools and communities in dramatic work the bureau offers the services of a representative who upon request directs the initial rehearsals and givs personal information and advice concerning organization, directing, and acting.

Any dramatic group or any individual interested in the drama may become a member of the Carolina Dramatic Organization by subscribing to The Carolina Play-Book, the periodical published jointly by the Carolina Dramatic Association and the Carolina Playmakers. Membership now includes many representatives from all sections of the state.

A meeting of the dramatic directors of the state will be held here on January 10. All directors have been invited to attend and a program of interest which will include practical helps on current problems in theatre arts has been ararnged.

In connection with the Carolina Dramatic Festival to be held in the Playmakrs Theatre, on March 26, 27, 28, contests in play production, play writing, and in other dramatic arts will be conducted as part of the Eighth Annual Dramatic Tournament. Only groups or individuals having membership in the Carolina Dramatic Association are eligible to participate in the tournament.

The competing groups in the contests will be clasisfied as follows: (1.) city high schools and private schools, (2.) county high schools, (3.) senior colleges and little theatres (little theatres are classified as those having a paid director.), (4.) junior colleges and community clubs (community clubs are classified as those whose director serves without a salary.)

The competitors may select any approved play of not more than an hour's duration, but the same play may not be entered by more than one club in the same classification.

Special contests will be held in costume design, make-up, posters, programs, and stage models.

The club or group winning the state championship in each of the classifications will be awarded a plaque bearing the signet of the Carolina Dramatic Organization. The winners of the special contests will be awarded complete sets of The Carolina Folk-Plays.—P. H. J.

V. P. I. Has School Song Problem Also

The University is not alone with its school problems. At V. P. I., they have found that the regular school anthem is not suited for all occasions. So, the student paper there is recommending the writing of a new song, just as was done by Dr. Dyer, of the University music department, through the Daily Tar Heel not long since. The following is the first paragraph of an editorial in the Virginia Tech:

"Last spring we proposed a new school song. Not to replace "Tech Triumph," not even to detract from its glory, but to be substituted for it on certain occasions where it is apparent "Tech Triumph" is not the most appropriate song that could be sung. We heard of one instance where a V. P. I. cadet tried his hand at composing such a song. We have not heard the results. We again recommend the writing of such a piece."

Theatre Entertains

The Sigma Chi fraternity will be entertained by the Carolina theatre Saturday night. All members of the fraternity are requested to be at the door of the theatre with their president at 7 o'clock.

SPANISH CLUB TO MEET TOMORROW

A. K. Shields, instructor in the Spanish department, invites all students interested in Spanish to attend the first meeting of the Circulo Hispano at eight o'clock, tomorrow evening at the Episcopal Parrish house. After the election of officers for the coming year, Umberto Umana will give several selections on the guitar, and F. C. Hayes will talk on the contemporary Spanish poet, Federico Garcia Lorca.

Mr. Shields wishes to correct two wrong impressions. The society is not a new one; it was first rganized in 1920. Also, membership is open to all interested in Spanish, not only to Spaniards and Latin-Americans.

Parker Discusses Kummer's Surface

Yesterday afternoon at the seminar meeting W. V. Parker, of the mathematics department, again spoke on the subject of Kummer's surface. At the meeting last week he discussed the general problem.

Yesterday he took the case when the polynomial has all its roots real and he showed the correspondence between the points of the curve Y2 equals F(X) and the points of its associated Kummer's surface.

OBERLIN COLLEGE HAS DEPARTMENT OF PEACE STUDY

Society Is Formed to Discuss Effects of War As Aid to World Peace.

More than seven hundred Oberlin College undergraduates have formed the Oberlin Peace Society, an organization which evolved from a chapel address made by Dr. Ernest Hatch Wilkins, president of the college, and one which the student leaders hope will spread, in one form or another, to all the colleges and universities of the country.

Many of the students who joined the society pledged themselves to do special research work in problems of peace and war in an effort to arrive at an intelligent solution of the problem.

The address which inspired the formation of the society was one in which President Wilkins expressed the belief that colleges ought to make the study of peace one of their main subjects.

Warning the students that this generation, although due the credit for starting the movement for world peace, will never see the culmination of their work ,Dr. Wilkins continued:

"I have imagined that for a period of seven years Oberlin might devote itself to an intensive study of this problem—elementary work in all departments to continue in the normal way, advanced work in all or nearly all departmets to concentrate very largely on the common theme. Thus the department of history would study the causes of war and their correction; the departments of literature would deal with those works which set forth the experience of war as seen by men of genius who have shared in it; the dapartments of physics and chemistry would study the implications of physical and chemical warfare, and the departments of biology the implications of that bacteriological warfare which is all too possible; and the other departments would study the actual effects of war upon the body and the mind and the spirit of men.

"A monotonous and a ghastly program, you say? Yes, but less monotonous than the trenches; less ghastly than a city street where a bomb has fallen."

Dr. Oscar Jaszi, former Hungarian cabinet member, now profesor of peace and war in the college, is to have a part in the society.

Education School

All juniors and seniors of the school of education, who have not as yet had their majors and minors approved, are requested to see C. E. McIntoch at once. This matter will have to be attended to before registration for the winter quarter.

FOERSTER HEADS SCHOOL AT IOWA

Former University Professor Is Directing an Experimental School of Letters.

The University of Iowa launched a school of letters this fall, a school believed to be the first project of its kind in the history of education in the United States.

Under the direction of Professor Norman Foerster, well known for his work in humanism at the University of North Carolina, the new school has placed all the languages in one group, and the organization for the study of language and literature has been outlined much in the same way treatment is given to subjects in the schools of religion, schools of journalism, and similar university departments.

All of the University's language and literature departments—Greek and Latin, French and Spanish, German and English, are participating in the program.

Dr. Foerster declares he is seeking to break down artificial departmental barriers between these closely related subjects, and to keep the common life and specialized interests of the languages in the foreground.

Cameron Off to Africa

Son of Professor Here May Be Gone Two or Three Years

Francis Cameron, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cameron of Chapel Hill, is on his way to Africa and will be there two or three years. His mission has to do with mining explorations, and he will penetrate into the wildest and most savage regions of the Dark Continent.

He and his bride-to-be were on a visit with his parents last week. He had thought of getting married before starting on the trip, but it was decided that the character of his travels and work would be such that the marriage had better be postponed.

From Chapel Hill he went to New York and sailed on the Mauretania this week. He will be in London for a few days before sailing for Africa, and he expects to be leaving the borders of civilization about six weeks hence.

Mr. Cameron is 28 years old. He is a graduate of Leland Stanford where he specialized in geology and other subjects related to mining. He served for a while with the U. S. Geological Survey.

Co-eds Entertain

The regular weekly house tea was given at Spencer Hall Wednesday afternoon between the hours of 4:30 to six. As is the custom, tea was served in the long living room which was cheerfully lighted for the occasion. A large log fire added much to the pleasure and enjoyment of the afternoon. Along with the tea delicious cakes and nuts were served. There were

Reckoning Time

A University of North Carolina professor struck a prevalent note the other morning when he addressed his class on this wise, "Gentlemen, the reckoning time is almost here. Although I have only a hazy idea of what you have accomplished thus far in this course, University ruling demands that I give you a mid-term grade."

The professor in question went on to say that he personally hated the idea of examinations, and that he would never give one if left to his own convictions. This attitude, which is rather prevalent among the younger element of the faculty, affords abundant room for speculation. All students hate examinations, and a considerable number of the faculty concur with them. This being the case, it is high time that we inquire into the grading system which is built upon the principle of the periodical, written examination.

One encounters no difficulty in finding professors who admit that they place no reliance whatever in examinations. Such teachers hand in their grades without allowing examination marks to enter the tabulation. Mid-term and final examinations are rapidly coming to be considered mere nuisances which are demanded by university ruling.

Students taking examinations can be divided into three groups: those who have maintained high scholastic attainment throughout the course and who, for this reason, don't need to be given an examination; mediocre students whose examination grades are almost identical with previous standing in the course (in this case tests are a waste of time); and stragglers who are apt to fail. If such persons do pass, they do so by means of "cramming"—a process which results in temporary learning only.

We are forced to conclude that examinations are a nuisance to all concerned. There can be little doubt that men experienced enough to be college professors are capable of evaluating a student's efforts and acquisitions without employing the method of the written examination.

—J. C. W.

An Equalizing Chorus

The faculty and townspeople would be too polite to admit it voluntarily, but if they could be caught off guard and given no time to plan an answer, they would probably confess that they find the students a scatterbrained lot—some of them lovable, some of them vastly irritating, but all of them scatterbrained. And maybe they would be more or less justified. Not altogether. If the professors could know us as anything but students, and the townspeople as anything but idlers, they might overlook the natural inclinations of youth. Youth would be still slightly scatterbrained, but more flattering adjectives might be applied.

Anything that can bring together faculty members, townspeople, and students on an equal footing will make the students far more acceptable. One can judge an inferior, or a superior. It is possible to judge a peer. It would be inadvisable for the students to spend twenty-four hours a day seven days a week being the peers of the faculty and citizenry. That would be a new and rank form of socialism.

To our minds, the community chorus, beginning its second year on the campus, is an equalizer, a sane and sufficiently conservative equalizer that should be made a tradition. And there is a real pleasure in establishing a tradition that is far more delightful than the self-righteous satisfaction of preserving the same tradition.

Use Your Stationery

One of the best ways to spend your spare time is in writing letters. We realize how hard it is to make oneself write them, but in the end you will be fully repaid for your trouble, even if you have to miss a few hands of bridge. We always get a big kick out of a letter from some friend. As for the females, all our Romeos will tell you that nothing causes Juliet to look for another boy friend quicker than a mail-box that's always empty.

Of course, the better the letter is, the more you enjoy it. Since in letter-writing, as in everything else, practice makes perfect, why not write a few letters? More than likely you will soon find out that letter-writing is really a lot of fun.

If you have the idea that you cannot write an interesting letter, get it out of your head at once. Your letters will not be graded, so don't write them in the same spirit that you write themes. If you can carry on an interesting conversation, you can write an interesting letter. Simply write as you would talk.

Your friends are the most valuable possessions that you have, and you are taking a big chance on losing them if you let your stationery become covered with cobwebs.

—C. A. P.

Spare Time And Reading

How many of us think of the library as a place to spend spare time? Probably not many. A most profitable and entertaining practice is that of browsing in a desultory manner in the library, reading whatever catches our eye. One need not necessarily read anything word for word in order to derive benefit from this practice. He may merely look around with a view to finding where certain books are that will serve for reference later.

It is likely that one following this practice will run across some bit of information which he would not have been able to find under a classified list. Often we have found, after it was too late to profit by it, some book containing information which could have been used to advantage, but which was not listed under any given kind of material, and so was lost to us.

Especially profitable is such a practice of desultory browsing in the reference room. It requires only a comparatively short time to look over the reference shelves and to find what type of information can be obtained there. Material on almost any subject can be found by consulting the reference catalogs. It is not necessary that one remember where the various reference books are. Merely the knowledge that certain facts are listed is sufficient to justify the time spent in looking around.

It is rare that one does not find something entertaining as well as instructive in casually looking over the reading shelves. One may nearly always find a book that he has heard much about and wanted to read, but for which he would hardly have thought of making a special trip to the library.

OPEN FORUM

HASN'T HE DONE THAT?

To the Editor:

It seems rather odd having so many reserve men from last year that were apparently of all-southern brand to turn out to be all state second string. After viewing several shots from the N. C.—Georgia game, I still think that it is more than an accidental occurence.

We cannot figure whether it was an alumnus in the tobacco business, one in the liquid dispensing business, or both, that got hold of the football squad. At any rate it has always been an old Spanish custom that the mighty warriors of the grid keep up the appearance of training. Of course we recognize that we have an exceptional team and that they can do exceptional things, but we were not under the impression that breaking training was among the wonders to be performed.

We suggest that since we cannot win the Southern Conference with a team that will not train, the worthy mentor kick several lower anatomies—in fact the majority—off the squad, and start bringing the understudies into good habits. Of course one can see the bind that Collins will be thrown into by letting the varsity drift off, but he also has next year to look out for. So we suggest that he take the red headed center and start building a team around it that can refrain from breaking training. What say?

Student Government

Catawba Will Make Aims of the System More Effective.

In the Catawba College newspaper, The Pioneer, there appeared last week in "Facts," an editorial column, the following quotation on student government, which is particularly pertinent in view of the recent visit of E. R. Murrow, president of the National Student Federation, ot this campus:

"Word has come to us that the 'powers that be' in student government are working upon a tangible, and we hope, practicable plan whereby student government aims can become effective. The framers of the scheme propose to make provision for joint meetings between members of the student senate and the presidents of the important organizations on the campus, including class presidents. The purpose of the plan is to knit the student body together through the cooperation of the various student leaders.

"This is the best plan for securing student sentiment consolidation that has yet come to our notice. Its final effect would be the promotion of school spirit; a more creditable aim could hardly be found for our present governing body."

The University student council, the faculty executive committee and other official groups on the campus are intending to inaugurate some similar plan of education in student government here at an early date. As yet, the idea has not taken tangible form.

Outstanding Pictures Scheduled For Theatre

Manager Smith, of the Carolina theatre, has announced the following pictures as among the list of attractions forthcoming for the month of November: "DuBarry, Woman of Passion" starring Norma Talmadge, "Laughter" with Nancy Carroll, Amos an' Andy in "Check and Double Check," William Haines in "Remote Control," Robert Montgomery in "War Nurse," Rube Goldberg's "Soup To Nuts," "Tom Sawyer" with Jackie Coogan, "Feet First" with Harold Lloyd, "The Way of a Sailor" with Jack Gilbert, Jack Oakie's two latest pictures "Kid Boots" and "Only Saps Work," Gary Cooper in "Morocco," and Joan Crawford's latest release "Her Fortune" and "Big Trail."

Burch Makes Furniture

Mahogany from the Philippines coming into Chapel Hill to be made into furniture—here is an example of the many new activities in the village.

In the low brick building down behind Phillips hall P. L. Burch, the University's superintendent of buildings, has a well-equipped wood-working shop where expert cabinet-makers construct tables, shelves, wall-cabinets, and desks for the buildings on the campus and occasionally turn out articles of furniture for people's homes.

In these columns last spring was described a walnut suite fashioned by Mr. Burch's men and displayed at the flower show in the Tin Can. Only a month or so ago he sent an old-fashioned three-cornered walnut cupboard to Mrs. Charles Coolidge (the former Miss Jane Toy), and he produced pieces of the same sort for D. E. Schreffler and S. H. Hobbs, Jr. For somebody else he made a mahogany bed and a mahogany highboy.

This construction of domestic furniture is incidental to the work done for the University. At odd times, when the force is not busy at its main job, somebody will come in with a sketch of a table or a cupboard or a desk, and a week or so later the object will be ready for him to install in his home.

Once half a carload of Philippine mahogany was brought here from New York after having come across the Pacific ocean and through the Panama Canal. Sometimes Honduras mahogany is procured through Atlanta. On one or two occasions shipments of white maple have been received from the North. Of course a great deal of the wood used by the University comes from North Carolina and nearby states, but frequently there is need for a material not obtainable in this region. The seats for the Kenan stadium came from the state of Washington on the Pacific coast.

The furniture for the geology department in the New East was made in the building department's shop, and so was the equipment for J. F. Dashiell's and English Bagby's psychological laboratories in the New West. Things of wood are constantly being fashioned for the various other departments scattered around the campus. When we called at his office a few days ago Mr. Burch was studying the plans for the great double doors for the lobby of the new auditorium and was preparing to pass them on to the shop foreman.

One of the recent achievements of the wood-working force is the fitting-out of the new hall where Harold S. Dyer is soon to have the dedicatory organ recital. The white pine for the grill at the back of the stage and for the sash and windows came from California.

Many Students to Run in Cake Race Today

FRESHMAN FIELD TO BE STARTING PLACE FOR RACE

More Than One Hundred Entries Expected To Be in Annual Cross Country Run.

RACE WILL START AT 4:20

The seventh annual Cake Race will get under way at 4:20 this afternoon. It is rather hard to predict the winner of a race of this kind in which all the men are unknown quantities but Coach Ranson expects the first man to be from among the following: S. Askenas, W. R. Grover, H. G. Meade, E. E. McRae, H. E. Vitz, A. Gabriel, E. J. Hunter, A. B. Petty, B. A. Sieder, J. B. Farr, and G. F. Doran.

The entries are to report at the main gate of Emerson field between 3:15 and 4:15 in order to get their numbers and final instructions. The contestants should be sure that their team affiliation has been indicated before the start of the run otherwise their score will count towards the team originally affiliated with.

The ten teams finishing with the lowest scores will receive prizes. Individual prizes will be awarded to the first seventy-five men to cross the line.

Fame, if not fortune, awaits the winner of the Cake Race. The winner of this event in previous years has invariably proven to be an outstanding track man, quite a few of whom have been Southern Conference champions. The winners in former years are: Thatch, 1923; Byrd, 1924; Elliot, 1925; Barkley, 1926; Fisher, 1927; Watkins, 1929.

GENE M'EVER HAS AN INJURED KNEE

Doctors Hope To Have Brandt in Shape for Vanderbilt Game November 15.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 22—Gene McEver, star University of Tennessee halfback, underwent a major knee operation in a local hospital today, and was reported as getting along nicely. If the wound heals up according to expectations he should be able to return to the Vols' lineup next year.

Dr. Willis C. Campbell and Dr. J. S. Speed, orthopedic surgeons, examined McEver and Fritz Brandt, Tennessee end, also out with leg injuries. They informed Brandt that he will be out at lesat two weeks, but probably will be able to play in the Tennessee-Vanderbilt game November 15.

The examination disclosed that ligaments and cartilage are torn in McEver's injured knee. Dr. Speed described the operation as a major one of its kind.

McEver was injured last spring, and again during the summer. When he resumed fall practice he again was disabled in scrimmage. A last try to return to the backfield showed conclusively that his injury was serious.

McEver has not played this year, and expects to be eligible next season.

John Warren will fight in the heavyweight class again this year after one season in the lightheavy.

Pep Meeting

The cheerleaders will hold a pep meeting tonight at 8:00 o'clock at Swain hall. As the team leaves they will give several yells. All students are urged to be present and give the team a big send-off.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

Casting our line into the proverbial dope bucket we caught an old shoe, a piece of stove pipe, and the following alleged football predictions. We picked:

Southern

Duke over Wofford at Spartanburg.

Mississippi A. and M. over State at Raleigh.

Wake Forest over Mercer at Wake Forest.

V. P. I. over Davidson at Davidson.

Vanderbilt over Alabama at Birmingham.

Georgia over Auburn at Columbus.

Kentucky over Virginia at Lexington, Ky.

Tulane over Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

Northern

Notre Dame over Pitt.

Fordham over N. Y. U.

*Princeton over Navy.

Southern Methodist over Indiana.

Northwestern over Centre.

Harvard over Dartmouth.

Michigan over Illinois.

Michigan over Illinois.

Army over Yale.

We experience no little un easiness in picking the outcome of the Alabama-Vandy game. Although the Tide has swept the country V,andy has anhilated some of the best combinations in the nation this year and has the fastest line in Dixie in our opinion.

The Army-Yale game will also give us the shivers. Naturally our predictions will be a mile or two off the track, but there is no denying that Booth is Yale and Yale is Booth. Some say that Little Albie will warm the Eli bench Saturday, and assuming that this is true, we figure that the Cadets will have the edge.

As to the Carolina-Tennessee game — well, that's another story.

We won't attempt to pick the winner of this battle of battles, but if a few things we have gathered during the past week mean anything, the Tars will certainly show the Vols their Heels.

In 1926 a fighting Carolina machine was smashed before it could get a start, by an apparently underrated Tennessee combine. The following year the Volunteers came to Chapel Hill and Major Neyland remarked that he was only over for a workout. The Vols ran ragged over Carolina to win a 26-0 decision on Emerson field. Neyland laughed.

We asked a young gentleman garbed in the Tar Heel blue jersey yesterday about the Carolina-Tennessee game. scratching his head for a minute he said, "The Tennessee game? Oh yeah, we play Tennessee after freshman scrimmage Friday; I ought to get a little exercise!"

*We would really like to pick the Navy over Princeton, but then you must remember that our friends down the Durham way hurt the sailors' feelings last week and we couldn't possibly have the Navy beat Princeton.

Famous Last Words

Press dispatches state that the Duke team was heard to say, "Bring on Carolina," when they walked off the field after the Navy game.

Undergraduates who are working their way through Princeton University win more than their proportionate share of Phi Beta Kappa memberships, according to university officials.

PROMISING TAR HEEL BACKS

"Dunk" McNeill and Stuart Chandler are two of the most promising backs on the Tar Heel team this year. Both ball carriers were stars on the freshman team last year and have played consistent ball on the varsity this year. McNeill is a substitute for Henry House, and Chandler is an understudy of Magner and Maus.

First Varsity Eleven Shows More Offensive Ability In Scrimmage

House, Maus and Branch Make Many Long Gains, But Team Does Not Yet Stop Tennessee Plays Satisfactorily—Magner And Cole Continue Working With Freshmen.

Stellar work by Johnny Branch, Henry House and Jimmy Maus netted gain after gain for the first varsity team yesterday afternoon in the scrimmage with a reserve eleven at Kenan stadium. The regular line was able to rip wide holes in the reserves' forward wall for the backs to plow through on numerous occasions, but the team failed to keep up this punch throughout all of the afternoon, being held for downs by the reserve several times.

The reserves in orange jerseys ran Tennessee plays against the varsity and succeeded in eluding them several times with Neyland's tricky offense. Roy McDade continued the good work which he started against Georgia, smearing many of the orange teams plays. His play on defense showed improvement also.

The first team yesterday showed the same line which has started the last two games. Johnson and Parsley were the ends; Thompson and McDade, tackles; Fysal and McIver, guards; Lipscomb, center. Backs were Branch, quarter; Maus and Slusser, halves; and House, fullback.

The reserve eleven included: Grindstaff and Huffman, ends; Daniel and Reading, tackles; Kerr and Margolis, guards; Koehl, center; Patterson, quarter; John Daniel and White, halves; McCaskill, fullback.

After the varsity retired from the scrimmage another eleven in blue jerseys took the field. This outfit was unable to do anything with the orange team, allowing it to rip off gain after gain through its line and complete several passes. John Daniel gave a stellar performance at halfback for the orange, making one run for some 60 yards and a touchdown.

The second blue team being on defense most of the time, showed no marked offensive ability. Playing on this eleven were: Alexander and Davis, ends; Oliver and Rose, tackles; Philpott and Newcombe, guards; Allen, center; Moore, quarter; Nash and Croom, halves; and Houston, fullback.

Jim Magner and Al Cole continued working out with the freshmen, so that they will be in shape when they return to the varsity next Monday.

The Tennessee game is causing local fans to speculate considerably about its outcome, and many of them seem to have a very pessimistic attitude about it. Repition of the "beaten before they started" attitude which the Tar Heels showed in the Georgia game would mean sure defeat, but they have gone about their work this week with a peppy air, determined to mix great offensive football with the dogged defensive fight of the Georgia game. And besides this Carolina football team has not forgotten that Coach Bob Neyland came to Chapel Hill in 1928 for "a workout." That 26-0 defeat has not been forgotten.

Jack Sharkey announces that he is willing to meet anybody the New York Commission suggests, but he prefers Willie Stribling.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Chi Psis Win

The Chi Psi tag football team defeated the Sigma Zetas this afternoon by a score of 19-0. The scoring was evenly divided between Dudley, Mitchan, and Atwood, while Parks showed up best for the losers.

D. K. E.'s Win on Downs

D. K. E. won out over the Phi Sigma Kappa eleven yesterday afternoon by 7-3 in first downs. Chatham, for the Dekes, did some pretty broken field running. While losing the game the Phi Sigma Kappa's kept their record, of not being scored on, intact.

Theta Chi Loses 7-0

Beta Theta Pi defeated Theta Chi by the close score of 7-0 yesterday afternoon. Moody passed to Plumly for the only touchdown of the game, while Follin kicked the point.

Phi Delta Theta Forfeits

The Phi Delta Theta forfeited to the Phi Kappa Sigma yesterday in the intramural football league.

Bob Warren Named Backfield Coach At N. C. State College

Raleigh, Oct. 21.—Dr. Robert E. "Bob" Warren, freshman coach and captain of the 1928 Wolfpack, today was advanced to the position of backfield coach of the N. C. State college varsity football team. He assumed his new duties today.

Warren's promotion will fill the gap in the Wolfpack coaching staff caused by the resignation yesterday of John M. Van Liew as head coach. Dr. Ray Sermon, director of athletics, was made acting head coach upon Van Liew's resignation and will continue to serve in that capacity.

CANDIDATES FOR WINTER SPORTS START PRACTICE

Boxers, Wrestlers and Basketeers Working Hard in Endeavor to Snare Championships.

The Tin Can presents a scene of unusual activity in the line of early practice for winter sports for such an early date this year. There is a goodly crowd of wrestlers engaging in strenuous practice under the guidance of Coach Abbott. Competition is keen among the varsity men, several letter men being eligible for competition this year, and in addition several freshmen are practicing daily on the fundamentals of the game.

Several nights each week see the varsity basketball men working hard in an effort to get into such good form for this year's season that they will wipe out all memories of last year's poor season.

Every afternoon, varsity and freshmen boxers are working out, and of late the presence of Add Warren, former Tar Heel heavyweight, who is training here for his fight with Jeff Carroll in Charlotte Monday night, has added interest to the afternoon's sparring sessions. Add looked much improved in his workout yesterday over those of Monday and Tuesday. In addition to working out for several rounds on the bags, shadow boxing, and taking calisthenics, Add boxed five rounds, one each with Wilson and Miller, sophomore heavies, Obie Davis, varsity middleweight, Archie Allen, last year's captain and welterweight, and his brother John Warren, varsity lightheavyweight last year.

Despite the good sized crowd out for practice, Coach Rowe is not satisfied with the number of freshman candidates. A great many showed up at first, but several have become discouraged and stopped. The intramural tournament will be held after Thanksgiving, and it is expected that this will bring out a good many men, who may eventually try for the team. Coach Rowe pointed out in his interview with the Tar Heel reporter yesterday that Archie Allen, Southern Conference champion lightweight in 1929 and Tar Heel captain in 1930 had never had on a boxing glove before the intramural tournament in the spring of his freshman year. Noah Goodridge, this year's captain, is another star who never boxed before his freshman year at Carolina. Coach Rowe feels that in the light of the brilliant success of men such as these, and especially since boxing is now a major sport, every freshman physically and mentally able should report for practice—at least for the intramural tournament.

Intramural Schedule

Thursday, October 23

3:30—(1) Kappa Alpha vs. Zeta Beta Tau; (2) Kappa Sigma vs. Zeta Psi.

4:30—(1) Tau Epsilon Phi vs. Phi Gamma Delta; (2) Delta Psi vs. Pi Kappa Alpha; (3) New Dorms vs. Graham.

Friday, October 24

3:30—(1) Grimes vs. Lewis; (2) Old West vs. Everett.

4:30—(1) Mangum vs. Old East; (2) Manly vs. Law School; (3) Ruffin vs. Carr.

Varsity Track Men

All varsity track men are to report to Coach Dale Ranson in the stadium office before 4:00 o'clock to receive instructions in regard to officiating for the cake race this afternoon.

Gym Excuses

Through the courtesy of Dr. Lawson all the contestants in the cake race will be excused from gym if they give their names and gym numbers to the manager at Emerson field before 4 o'clock.

CROSS-COUNTRY TRIALS DELAYED

Cake Race Today Will Give Line On Prospective Freshman Material.

Varsity cross-country work is settling down to more substantial things, now that the fall quarter has gotten under way. The men are working out on the cinder path down at Emerson field daily, and are coming around to the style of "pounding" the turf they used to have.

Last Friday the varsity cross-country time-trials were to have been held on the practice field. They did not materialize, due to the fact that several members of the squad were out with minor injuries and slight colds. A number of the men had their time checked to get some estimate as to the length of their progress so far this season. The members of the squad who showed up well were: Captain Baucom, Cordle, Jones, Watkins, Pratt, Hubbard, Jansen, Farris, Lumpkin, Hunter, Petty, and Allen. These men have been showing the most consistent work so far, and the heart of the squad is formed around them. An official time-trial will be held this coming Friday or Saturday at the practice field to get a definite line on the efficiency of the team as a whole.

The cake race which will be held today will serve to give the coaches a real line on the freshman material of this year, and will afford the first real competition for the runners.

HASKELL INDIANS DANCE ON NIGHT BEFORE GAME

Lawrence, Kans.—(IP)—The beat of tom-toms and chanting of braves echoed over the campus of Haskell Institute here as more than 1,000 Indians, attending a nation-wide pow-wow incident to the game between Haskell and the University of Kansas, and participated in the war dances of their forefathers.

The spectacle was held in the athletic stadium of the government's Indian school. The braves tramped across the chalk lines of the institution's football field, the modern battle ground of Indian youths.

Following the dances the Indians participated in a colorful pageant depicting the history of a number of Indian tribes.

The following night, a band of present-day Indian warriors, Haskell's football team. went on the war-path against the University of Kansas eleven, and lost by a score of 33 to 7.

It was the first meeting of the two teams in 10 years. The pow-wow, called in celebration of the resumption of athletic relations between the two schools, was intended at first only for graduates and students of Haskell. It was made nation-wide, however, when Indians from all parts of the country announced they would attend.

VIRGINIA COACHES DISPLEASED WITH SHOWING OF LINE

Earl Abell Sending Cavalier Forwards Through Heavy Workouts Preparing for W. and L.

University, Va., Oct., 22.—Virginia's guards and tackles and ends will have plenty of work to do this week before the Cavalier squad starts out to play Kentucky in Lexington, Ky., on Saturday.

Earl Abell, Cavalier head coach, is still a long way from being satisfied with the play of the linemen. He knows they'll have to do a great deal better than they did against V. M. I., if they are to outplay the Wildcat forwards.

Bob Kimball, veteran lineman who was injured in the V. M. I. game will probably be out for several weeks according to Archie Harn, Cavalier trainer. In his place will be Buck Poss, who was the line star of the '29 first year eleven. Poss was hurt in the Randolph-Macon game and was kept from practice for 10 days.

Madison, Wis. —(IP)—"No practice until further notice—hit the books," is a sign recently posted on the training room door of the University of Wisconsin football squad by Coach Walter T. Meanwell, who seldom loses a member of his team through low grades on their part.

An attempt was made to obtain William McK. "Bill" Fetzer, former University of North Carolina coach, for the State backfield coaching position, but negotiations with Fetzer were terminated today.

Dr. Warren is an alumnus of State college and of the American School of Osteopathy at Kirkville, Mo. During his student days at State he was a three-letter man and was a member of the basketball team that won the Southern conference championship in 1928.

The new backfield mentor served last year as basketball coach and trainer at Virgina Polytechnic institute, Blacksburg.

Oberlin college students of zoology were treated recently to the rare sight of fresh water jellyfish, discovered by Dr. R. A. Budington, head of the department, in the Vermilion River, west of here. Dr. Buddington told his classes this was the sixth time in zoological history that jellyfish, regularly found in salt water, had been found inland.

Barthelmess In Air

Richard Barthelmess, First National-Vitaphone star, makes his first appearance in an air story in "The Dawn Patrol," which comes to the Carolina theatre Thursday.

John Monk Saunders wrote the original screen story of "The Dawn Patrol," which was adapted and dialogued by Seton Miller and Dan Totheroh. It is a highly dramatic mirror of those early years of the World War "schoolboy" flyers in the British air service were compelled to face highly organized German aces, when their own mediocre equipment was forced to fight against the more modern enemy planes.

The Wild Potato

If times get too hard in Chapel Hill, residents can perhaps maintain themselves on the wild potato, which grows hereabouts. W. C. Coker has the root of one dug from the edge of the golf course along Rocky Ridge road. The wild potato, as well as the tame one, is closely akin to the morning glory, and this one bears blooms which to the layman look much like a morning glory's, being white with a purple center. This particular root is roundish, four inches or more in diameter, and went down so far into the hard ground that the diggers were unable to reach the end of it. Mr. Coker is not sure this species is edible.

GREENE EXPLAINS TELEGRAM FROM TENNESSEE HEAD

Invitations From Hackman Does Not Mean Free Admission To Game.

Several days ago an article was published in the Daily Tar Heel to the effect that a telegram has been received by the editor of the daily paper from the president of the student body to be the guests of the Tennessee institution, while in Knoxville for Saturday's game.

Many students on the campus seem to have gathered from the article that hotel rooms will be furnished, and free tickets to the game will be given as well. According to "Red" Greene, president of the student body here, no such accommodations can be expected.

President Greene stated that all attending the game will have to carry sufficient funds to cover all expenses. "No reduction will be made in the admission fee to the game, either," the student body president stated further. Greene explained that the telegram was merely a good-will invitation, and not a request to visit Tennessee at the expense of its state university.

A special train will be sent to Knoxville for the benefit of all those planning to attend the game. A comparatively low rate has been made for the round trip, and a large crowd is expected to witness the game.

HENRY JOHNSTON CHAPEL SPEAKER

Billy Arthur, Cheerleader, Announces Two Practices for Georgia Tech Game.

In chapel yesterday morning Henry Johnston, director of the bureau of vocational information, spoke to the freshmen on the subject of the factors which determine what one will get out of college.

Johnston started out by saying that men come to college for different reasons: some for athletics, some come to enjoy college life, some because of friends, some because of parents, and some to prepare for future work.

Whether or not one will be better fit for life when he leaves college depends, according to Johnston, on four main things: his habits of work, his moral standards, the care of his body, and the development of his personality and the social side of his life. Along with personality, which is very important, goes the ability to speak, to express one's thoughts. Initiative is also a very great asset.

Johnston concluded by saying that everyone is the master of his own fate. One gets out of college just as much as one wants to.

Johnston's speech was preceded by a short talk by Billy Arthur, head cheerleader, who explained that the presence of girls in the cheering section at the last game had hindered the Cheerios from doing all that they had hoped to do. He requested all those who are not going to take anyone to the Georgia Tech game to get seats in the cheering section. There will be two practices in Kenan Stadium next week, of less than fifteen minutes each, for those who will do this.

1881 PHOTOGRAPH GIVEN UNIVERSITY

An enlarged photograph of the University class of 1881, taken in front of South Building, near the Old Wall immediately after the conclusion of its Commencement exercises, has been presented to this institution by Charles R. Thomas, of Waynesville, one of its members.

The photograph will be hung in a room in one of the University buildings to be selected by Professor M. C. S. Noble, who was a college mate of Mr. Thomas. The class included several of North Carolina's most distinguished men, including Judge W. J. Adams, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court; Dr. Robert P. Pell, president of Converse College; Charles Duncan McIver, one of North Carolina's greatest educational leaders and President of North Carolina College for Women; Judge James D. Murphy; Herbert B. Battie; Frank B. Dancy, and others. A total of thirty-one students graduated in 1881, of whom sixteen are dead.

FEDERATION MEN VISIT COLLEGES ON STATE TOUR

Meet With Student Leaders at State Wednesday and to Meet At N. C. C. W. Today.

John Lang, president of the North Carolina Student Federation, and R. C. Greene, president of the local student government union, accompanied President E. R. Murrow of the National Student Federation of America to the Eastern Convocation of Student Government Officials, which began Wednesday afternoon at N. C. State College.

The meeting was opened Friday with a thirty-minute address by President E. C. Brooks of State College on self-government in general. This was followed by an open forum discussion for two and one-half hours on all phases of self-government and the honor system. The delegates exchanged ideas and methods of carrying out the honor system.

From 5:30 to 6:00 a program was broadcast over WPTF. President Murrow of the National Federation, and President Lang of the State Federation spoke on the history, organization, and purposes of the Federation.

At six o'clock State College and Meredith jointly entertained the delegates at a banquet in the Peacock Alley tea room. At eight o'clock a concert was given by the N. C. State College band, and this was followed by an address by Mr. Murrow on the history of the National Student Federation of America and on the things it has done and plans to do.

There were about 150 delegates present, including presidents of student government unions, vice-presidents and council members. About half of

POSITION OF GRAND OLD GRADUATE NOW HELD BY CAPTAIN TIMBERLAKE

Death of Major Charles M. Stedman, Veteran Congressman, Leaves Only Surviving Member of Class of '61, the Oldest Grad; Will Be Ninety-Three in January.

The death in Washington, September 23, of Major Charles M. Stedman, veteran Congressman from North Carolina, leaves Captain William Poindexter Timberlake, of Jackson, Tennessee, as the only surviving member of the graduating class of 1861 of the University of North Carolina, a search through the class files in the General Alumni Association offices in Chapel Hill discloses.

Captain Timberlake will be 93 years of age in January. After his graduation from the University with an A.B. degree he served with distinction in the Confederate Army, fighting in several of the most important campaigns of the war between the states. After several months service in the rank he received a captain's commission for conspicuous bravery in action.

Last week J. Maryon Saunders, Alumni Secretary of the University, received a request for information about the class of 1861 from a member of the editorial department of the Jackson Sun, who is preparing an extensive article concerning the life of Captain Timberlake. His research in answer to the request revealed a great deal of interesting information concerning the class, which was one of the most unusual in the University's history.

During the greater part of Captain Timberlake's undergraduate life at the University of North Carolina, the institution was in the midst of its most brilliant period, with the possible exception of the past ten years. But when the class of 1861 reached its Commencement its ranks were already depleted by North Carolina's initial call to arms as it prepared to defend what it considered its rights.

The Commencement of 1859 at Chapel Hill had witnessed the close of a highwater mark in student enrollment, with 430 members of the student body, including 185 from outside North Carolina. The presence at the Commencement exercises of James Buchanan, president of the United States, and one of his cabinet members, Jacob Thompson, a University graduate of 1831, climaxed one of the institution's most successful years.

But the year 1860-61 opened with a decided decrease in student registration, due most probably to the unrest in national politics and the portentious rumblings of internal strife. Only 376 students were enrolled, including 155 from out of the state. From Tennessee came 26 students, including William Poindexter Timberlake. As the year wore on the rumblings of dissension between the states became more ominous, and political excitement increased prodigiously. When in December, 1860, South Carolina passed her Ordinance of Secession, the concensus of opinion was that war was inevitable. But sentiment against secession was strong in North Carolina, as well as in Tennessee.

Not until Abraham Lincoln's proclamation of April 27, 1861, declaring ports of North Carolina and Virginia covered by the Federal blockade, did North Carolina take steps toward secession. Other Southern states had already passed secession bills, and as each state passed such ordinances, its citizens in the University student body hurried home, burning with zeal to take up arms. Those remaining were in a state of turmoil.

COFFMAN CHOSEN TO LECTURE AT EDUCATION MEET

Dr. George R. Coffman, new head of the University English department, will speak before the North Piedmont District of the North Carolina Education Association assembled in High Point this afternoon, October the twenty-fourth. He will outline the objective in teaching punctuation and grammar.

There will be meetings of the various districts all over the state this fall. Dr. Raymond Adams stated yesterday that several members of the English department would very probably attend the Raleigh conference the seventh of November, as Chapel Hill is in the district with Raleigh.

Dr. A. C. Howell will be on the program for the Southeastern District in Fayetteville November 14, and Dr. Adams on the Northeastern program the twenty-first of November in Greenville, N. C.

Dr. Adams, district chairman of the State English Council, explained that this is the first year the meetings have been held in districts around the state. The custom was, formerly, to hold the education meetings in Raleigh. The present plan was designed to reach the teachers all over the state who might be unable to attend the one central conference.

LEAR IS PRESENT AT ENGINEERING COUNCIL MEETING

John E. Lear, vice-president of the North Carolina Board for Registering of Engineers, has just returned from Richmond, Virginia, where he attended a meeting of the National Council of State Boards of Engineering Examiners. The meeting lasted from Tuesday morning until Wednesday afternoon.

The most important issue of the meeting was a bill presented for the adoption of uniform laws for all of the state boards. The council is hoping to establish these laws in every state in which there is a board for registered engineers. There are now thirty-one states which have these boards and all of these had representatives at the meeting Tuesday and Wednesday. Of these, fourteen have adopted the law which appeared in the proposed bill.

The officers for the coming year were elected at this meeting. Professor P. H. Daggett, formerly head of the electrical engineering department of this university, was elected secretary and treasurer of the National Council for the year.

T. J. Wilson Is Back

Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., has returned from Wilmington where he had a short vacation.

Silhouettes Given To The University

Three small silhouettes have been presented to the University, to be placed in the president's office, by Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department.

In the center of the group, now on the president's mantle, is a silhouette of Joseph Caldwell, first president of this university. On the left is William Lenoir, first president of the board of trustees, and, on the right, James Hogg, who secured the establishment of the University at its present site.

The original of the silhouette of Caldwell, now in the library, was presented to the University by W. A. Tillinghast of Converse College, at Spartanburg, South Carolina. On the backs of the gifts are the names of the men and their connections with the University.

VILLAGE COUNCIL EXPLAINS RULES AGAINST BUMMING

Local Government Draws Up Regulations Regarding Bumming and Street Conduct.

The town of Chapel Hill has drawn up certain rules and regulations which are of vital interest to the student body as well as to citizens of the town.

These laws concern bumming, riding over the fire hose, bus stops, and improper use of the sidewalks and streets.

On Bumming.

Section 1. No pedestrian shall be permitted to take a stand on the motor vehicular portion of any street in the town or in any manner obstruct motor vehicular traffic, and that on crossing the street, all persons shall keep in motion while in this portion of the street.

Section 2. That any person guilty of violating this notice willfully shall be subject to a fine of $50.00 in the discretion of the court.

During the winter season just past there was a further ordinance of amendment, requiring that motor vehicles stopping to take on passengers should do so only after drawing up to the curb, in order to avoid accidents from on-coming cars.

On Bus Stops.

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person operating a bus on Franklin street, between the intersections at Columbia street and Hillsboro street to stop the said bus for the purpose of admitting or discharging passengers, except at the following stations: viz, the bus station, the Carolina Theatre, and at Spencer Hall.

On Riding Over Fire Hose.

Section 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person to drive any motor vehicle, or any horse-drawn vehicle over the fire hose of the town of Chapel Hill.

Section 2. Any person violating the terms of this ordinance shall be subject to a fine of not exceeding fifty dollars, or imprisoned not more than 30 days.

All reporters who fail to cover their beats today will be in danger of being dropped from the staff. If, after covering their beats, the reporters fail to secure any news, they are required to report to the office of the Daily Tar Heel for further assignment.

COMMITTEE WILL REFUND FEE FOR ENTERTAINMENTS

No Place Ready for Presenting Programs, So Students Will Be Credited With Fee.

Rather than attempt to present inferior programs under poor conditions the Student Entertainment Committee has voted to acredit each student in the college of liberal arts and the school of education with his entertainment fee for the winter quarter. This decision means that instead of paying the usual yearly assessment of three dollars, these students will only have to pay two dollars.

For weeks the personnel of the Committee has been casting about for a suitable place to stage productions and present artists who were to have been brought to the campus. In turn the question of using the Tin Can, the Methodist church, and the new Music Auditorium, have come up. For the reason that the Tin Can is always cold during the fall and winter months this idea was rejected. The church authorities naturally enough did not care to have presented all the various types of entertainments that the Committee will bring to Chapel Hill. The Music Auditorium will seat but one third of the number who usually attend the programs, and since this building will not be opened to public use until November 14, this also was considered impractical.

The Committee was chosen to offer its first importations shortly after Christmas in the winter quarter, immediately following the dedication of the new auditorium. They are at work at the present time considering engagements and expect to meet next Wednesday for the purpose of arranging bookings.

DEMOCRATS PLAN MONSTER RALLY

Ehringhaus To Address Party Meeting in High School November 1.

Mr. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, prominent Democratic leader of Elizabeth City, will address a huge rally of Democrats of Orange County and the University Saturday night, November 1, at eight o'clock in the Chapel Hill High School auditorium or the Tin Can. Definite arrangements as to the meeting place have not been made yet.

This rally has as its purpose the furtherance of the candidacy of Josiah W. Bailey, Democratic nominee for senator, and other Democratic nominees. Many of the outstanding Democratic leaders of the state will also be present. The meeting is under the auspices of the Young Democratic League of North Carolina of which Ray Farris is field secretary.

Farris plans to stage a campaign to create interest in politics here at the University and hopes that all interested students will attend the rally. An interesting program will be arranged.

Another Experiment In Education

Although the spotlight now seems to be focused at a central point on Wisconsin in the field of experimental education, the plan in operation at Antioch College in Ohio offers a situation of no less absorbing interest, to the person interested in the future of education, than the program under way at Wisconsin. The Antioch Faculty Trust Plan, as the experiment may be termed, involves the transference of institutional control from the board of trustees to the faculty. Complete control and administration of funds even is placed in the hands of the faculty. By means of this plan of faculty control, its proponents contend, the academic institution comes nearest to accomplishing its purpose, because its activities are in the hands of those most efficient and experienced in the sphere of education.

Commenting in the current Nation, J. F. Kirkpatrick intimates that other states will follow Ohio in grasping the new idea. He even goes so far as to present the possibility of student control as an outgrowth of faculty control. Whether these developments will ensue does not interest us as much as the plan itself. The idea of faculty control has an appealing side. Too often, we think, is an institution dominated by its trustees. While this domination sometimes seems to be in favor of the school's welfare, it seems that the faculty's voice in the administration of affairs should be considered equally with that of the board.

The danger in the Antioch plan of faculty control, it seems to us, lies in the possibility—probability well we might say—of complete faculty control. Faculty control, which would cause the setting up of the most rigid academic standards, is neither better nor worse than trustee control. What educational innovators should look for is a plan embodying equal control by faculty and board of trustees.—B. M.

Again, Student Government

A sign, or trend, of the times: At the assembly of Eastern Carolina college students in Raleigh Wednesday, convoked by John Lang and the Student Federation, the two Raleigh high schools were invited to send delegates to participate in the discussions. We may look to the time when all the high schools and prep schools in the state will be given such an opportunity.

Meanwhile, as the enlistment of the youngest generation gets underway, federation officials and the student officers on this and other campi hope to create a stronger sentiment for student government ideals through intensive publicity, from the public platform and through the collegiate press.

But, "let the oratory come later."—E. C. D., Jr.

Dean Inge And Marriages

Dean Inge, the liberal head of the Church of England, has just startled conservative christians by proposing a new form of marriage. The gloomy Dean would have marriage as a short-time contract as well as a life-time compact. He would like to see the time come when a couple will promise to love, honor, and obey—not until death do them part—but for the period of six months, one year, or whatever period they are optimistic enough to believe their happiness will last.

To Babbitt, the Dean's suggestion smacks of heresy. But to the thinking person, it presents a hopeful picture in which he sees far less unhappy marriages than are prevalent today. Unhappy wives and husbands would no longer throw loose articles of furniture at each other. They would wait until the expiration of their contract, and then separate to try their luck again. Divorces would diminish rapidly. Matrimonial murders would cease. In short, marriage would become less of a speculation and therefore more likely of a success.

Marriage is too much of a gamble today. A man sees a woman with beautiful eyes, and imagines that it would be paradise to see those eyes looking at him across the breakfast table every morning for the rest of his life. He marries her. After a short period of marital bliss, however, he discovers that the blue in her eyes is not as pretty as he had once thought they were. An added disclosure reveals to him that the head containing the once beautiful eyes, also contains a tongue that wags continually. Other illusions are shattered one by one in the succeeding weeks. He looks wildly about for a method of escape, and finds that murder and divorce are the only doors leading to freedom. But if he kills her, he pays justice; and if he divorces her, he pays alimony. So he joins the vast army of harassed husbands, and is enlisted for life.

All of which, Dean Inge asserts, would not have happened had his plan been the law.—P. L.

One of the St. Louis boys who made it, says his chief difficulty in driving a car across the continent in reverse was a pain in the neck. It seems, then to have been unanimous.—Detroit News.

Joy Depends On Interest

We have been wondering ever since Tuesday where the mass meeting was held. We have gone about inquiring; we have gone about eavesdropping, and all to this hour, in some vain attempt to discover where the students met en masse Tuesday evening. Some few of us, believing in the divine inspiration of every printed notice, went to Gerrard hall at 7:30. We heard several very excellent speakers. But nobody in his most fantastic dream could have called the few of us a mass meeting.

And yet we went to hear speakers, definite speakers. And we heard them. And we liked them. And we know more than we did before about student government.

We are not condemning those who failed to attend our "mass meeting." We are pitying them, because apathy is always pitable. We are all of us mortals innately selfish. So from a selfish point of view we may as well notice that loss of interest in campus affairs never comes by itself. The mental state that brings it brings loss of interest in things in general. And the ability to enjoy is dependent on the ability to be interested in. Be more selfish.

OPEN FORUM

YACKETY YACK PICTURES

Cooperation of the students can relieve the unnecessary and wasteful task of making appointments for pictures that must go in the Yackety-Yack. Each year it becomes harder for the staff representatives to round up the boys and induce them to accept a time for their appointment.

This school is the only one where such a situation is found, and we should not be content to fall down in a duty that is so easily done. There are three booths conveniently open at chapel period, after lunch, and after supper. Members of the staff will also canvass the dormitories and fraternity houses, in an effort to have the pictures taken in time for the annual to appear as early as possible.

Last spring the yearbook was not distributed until the week of exams. This was unsatisfactory for both the students and the staff, and could have been prevented by cooperation on the part of the students.

The Yackety-Yack staff is making an effort to get the book out earlier this year and it is up to the students to carry out the program on schedule.

A SENATOR SPEAKS

I am sure that the Dialectic Senate heartily appreciates B. M.'s article published recently in this paper in regard to the resolution of that body which appertained to the Nye Campaign Funds Investigation Committee. We wish, particularly, to thank him for coming out fearlessly, unabashed and alone, for implanting himself firmly in our pathway, and calling attention to the fact that our Senatorial Robes of Dignity were becoming soiled.

"Aye," he calls in that quietly convincing manner of his, "not only have they become soiled but almost thread-bare." We have even dared question the motives of the invulnerable Senator Nye and his committee. Ye Gods! Not only did we dare question and discuss these motives in an open meeting, but we even assumed the audacity of informing him of our opinion. I repeat, we appreciate very much the fact that the watchful B. M. was on the alert and called our attention before the robes had gone beyond the reach of dry cleaner's art.

I might add here that the Senate would also appreciate the watchful one remaining wide awake and informing us when we have withdrawn far enough into our little sphere to be out of reach of this cold hard world with our precious but perishable Robes of Dignity.

We do not ordinarily solicit favors, but we would not mind a nice, soft, little pat on the back when we have accomplished this feat, accompanied with words something like—"Now that's a nice little boy—go on with your discussions—yes, have your opinions—but Oh! horrors no, do not let anyone else know that you have them. The hem of the robe begins to drag the foul, black earth in that event."

While we are on the subject, we might suggest that the highly dignified B. M. give us some points on the redecoration of our robes. Henceforth, I caution all Senators to be watchful and should they catch a glimpse of this B. M. to report his mode of dress to the Senate so that we may have a model by which to adjudge our future official dress.

A SENATOR.

Tar Heels To Workout In Asheville Today

THIRTY-ONE MEN MAKE KNOXVILLE TRIP FOR GAME

Team Leaves After Taking Fast Workout at Kenan Stadium Yesterday Afternoon.

BAND WILL BE AT GAME

Fifty Musicians Leave for Tennessee Tonight on Special Train.

By K. C. Ramsay

A squad of Tar Heels, thirty-one in number, left from Swain hall last night at 8:15 o'clock for Asheville where they will workout today on their way to Knoxville and the Tennessee football game. In spite of the rainy weather there was a sizeable crowd of students to give them a big send-off with the cheerleaders conducting a few Carolina yells.

University Band Going

The University band will be at the game, leaving here for Knoxville tonight on the special train with T. Smith McCorkle, director. Bill White, drum major, and 48 members of the band are making the trip. The special train leaves Chapel Hill tonight at 8 p. m. from Pittsboro street crossing, and a large number of students in addition to the band are expected to be on the special when it departs.

Line Looks Better

Coach Collins sent the tackles, ends and centers through a stiff line scrimmage yesterday afternoon at the stadium as final preparation for covering the tricky plays of Coach Bob Neyland's Volunteers. Practically every lineman on the first three squads got into the scrimmage and showed up much better than they did the preceding day.

Tackles were slashing in and smearing interference with some degree of regularity, and the fullbacks and centers were getting the tackles well. As a whole, end play was not what it should have been, but several of the flankmen displayed their ability to diagnose the plays and halt the yellow jerseyed reserves.

Backs were down in one corner of the field drilling on the passing attack, both offensively and defensively. This was done as a final polishing up of offense, the backs having been kept busy rushing the ball through the line in Wednesday's scrimmage.

Collins Speaks About Game

On being asked about Carolina's chances against Tennessee yesterday afternoon after practice, Coach Collins stated that the odds were against the Tar Heels because of the rather poor showing of the team against Georgia and there was assurance that they will come

TAR HEELS TO BE PITTED AGAINST TEAM OF STARS

When the Tar Heels meet the Vols tomorrow afternoon at Knoxville they will be pitted against a group of All-Southern and All-American stars. Coach Bob Neyland presents Bobby Dodd, All-Southern quarterback, and Paul Hug, All-Southern end. Frederick Brandt and Gene McEver will be out of the game because of knee injuries. Quinn Decker, Buddy Hackman and Captain Harry Thayer are other outstanding gridders on the Tennessee team.

M'RAE, GROOVER TRAIL WINNER

Mead Makes Time of 9:51 2-5 In Flashy Field of Contestants.

By Karl Sprinkle

H. G. Mead, running under Tarheel Club colors, triumphed over a field of 128 contestants yesterday afternoon to win the annual cake race. His time for the one and nine-tenths miles course was 9 minutes, 51 and two-fifths seconds, exceptionally good for the run. E. E. McRae, running for Mangum, placed second with a time of 10 minutes and two-fifths seconds, and W. R. Groover, also of the Tarheel Club, placed third.

A record number of 128 contestants out of 163 qualifications ran in the race today. Early in the race Groover, McRae, and Mead took the lead. Mead did not take the lead until the last quarter mile of the run. He came in leading McRae by about forty yards, and Grover by seventy. All three were running smoothly at the finish, showing no signs of weakening.

Traverton of Lewis, Sullivan of Steele, and Sieder of Alpha Tau Omega were the next three men to finish in the order named. Then came Griffin, running for the Question Marks, Vitz, for Manly, Farr, for the Tarheel Club, and Gabriel, also for the Tarheel Club.

The following are the first fifty men to place:

Mead, H. G., Tarheel Club; McRae, E. E., Mangum; Groover W. R., Tarheel Club; Traverton, W. M., Lewis; Sullivan, L. G., Steele; Sieder, B. A., ATO; Griffin, M. S., Question Marks; Vitz, H. COLLINS OPINES ON TACTICS OF CAROLINA TEAMS

Also Avers Tennessee As Formidable As Georgia in Radio Talk.

Coach Chuck Collins, head mentor of the famous Big Blue team at the University of North Carolina, again entertained radio fans over station WPTF at Raleigh, by giving his opinions and predictions of future football games to be played in the South. Collins also talked about one or two of the teams in the "Big Ten," discussing the different aspects of their chances in the conference.

At the beginning of his talk, Collins launched volubly into the mutual strength of U. N. C., Georgia, and Tennessee. He says that the offense of Carolina is very good, but the defensive is sadly lacking in potential strength. Georgia has greater offensive and defensive strength than Carolina. Tennessee is rated as equal to that of the Bulldogs, and will give Carolina a lot of trouble this Saturday. In aerial warfare, Carolina will hold her own with the most formidable foes in the Southern Conference, and will outplay almost every team in the South by this route.

The U. N. C. coach talked on offensive football in the State, dealing with State, who has an unusual type of offense, and Duke and Davidson, who have similiar tactics; and Wake Forest and Carolina, who have common offensive drives. While talking about the different kinds Tar Babies Working Hard to Get in Form for Tiger Yearlings.

A steady drizzle did not stop the members of the freshman squad from putting all they had into a very snappy workout yesterday. The list of the boys to make the trip was not posted until after practice and the whole squad had aspirations of going to Princeton, consequently there was an excess of pep. Thirty members of the squad will leave today at four o'clock after having had a workout on Emerson field.

After the customary setting-up exercises the squad was divided into three sections. The backs, the ends, and the linemen, each went off in a separate group to practice The linemen practiced stances and coming out of the line. The ends and the backs soon combined and went to work on perfecting a pass defense. Time and practice are the only remedies for a weak pass defense and plenty of work was put on that department yesterday. After spending some time on this, the squad was divided into four teams and a lengthy signal practice was staged.

The "Tar Babies" want to win this game and they have been working hard this week to iron out as many of the rough spots as is possible. The Princeton freshmen have a very powerful eleven, according to northern newspapers. They held their varsity to two touchdowns in a

After a few weeks of inactivity and idleness the Hot Stove League is coming into its right with the startling announcement by E. S. Barnard, president of the American League, that the sacrifice fly should be eliminated When one takes this bit of news more into consideration, he probably wonders if the "higher ups" in the national game are deliberately trying to make baseball a game entirely devoid of thrills, narrowing down to a point where slugging will be baseball itself.

Due to the lively ball, more emphasis is placed on mere brute qualities, namely batting, than on any other branch of the game. Pitching, before the entry of the "jack rabbit" sphere, was one of the major departments of baseball—and now what has happened? The majors had just as well hire twelve year old youngsters as the specie of manhood who calls himself a pitcher. This is clearly illustrated in the slugging orgies which featured the World Series of 1927, 1928, and 1929. In two successive years, 1928-1929, the New York Yankees, literally slaughtered the cream of National League hurling, submerging the St. Louis and Pittsburgh teams in four games each. And the Athletics didn't treat the Cub hurlers any too gently either in 1929.

LOCAL HIGH WILL MEET APEX GRID MEN HERE TODAY

Neville, 190 Pound Halfback, Strengthens Chapel Hill.

The Chapel Hill High School football team will play Apex high on Emerson Field at 3:45 p. m. this afternoon.

This should be a fast and hard-fought battle if comparative scores indicate the strength of the opposing teams. Apex has defeated Oxford, eastern class B champions, by an 18-0 score, but could not gain a first down when they played the fighting Cary eleven. The Chapel Hill team made twice as many first downs as Cary did when the two teams locked horns two weeks ago.

Neville, a local 190-pound husky, has added his talent to the team as right halfback. Humphries, a former halfback at Augusta Military Academy, who is a recent addition to the Chapel Hill squad, is scheduled to make things look rosy for the "Hillians" when they go up against the Apex team this afternoon.

The probable starting line-up for Chapel Hill will be: L. E., Stone; L. T., Renn; L. G., Earnst; C., Pendergraph; R. G., Cate; R. T., Mann; R. E., Captain Ray; Q. B., King; L. H. B., Dashiell; R. H. B., Neville; F. B., McKnight.

Although the forward wall is light, this team should be able to make up for the lack of weight by swiftness. The backfield is made up of a well-balanced and heady quartet of shifty runners, and with this combination, the home team boys hope to give the boys from Apex a hard fight.

The admission for Carolina men and townspeople will be 25 cents.

RUGGLES IS LATEST COMEDIAN ON SCREEN

Charlie Ruggles' mannerisms of speech, his chief comedy attribute, are not simulated, according to those who have heard and seen him work before the cameras at the Paramount Hollywood studies. Ruggles' style of clipping off his words in the British manner, at the same time using a pronunciation purely American, is as natural to him as his ready cherubic smile.

Dialog script girls at the Paramount studios in Hollywood, where Ruggles recently worked in the new Clara Bow hit, "Her Wedding Night," booked for showing today at the Carolina theatre, claim they have twice as much work to do since Ruggles invaded Hollywood. Dialog script girls take shorthand notes of every line the players speak while they are before the cameras, to secure an unquestionable record of any changes from the written script that might be made while words are uttered.

tic year a petition to suspend classes until the next fall was addressed to the faculty by the students. President Swain of the University issued a circularized statement, conceding the wisdom of a call for service on the battlefields, but pointing out the uselessness and danger of zealous youth rushing prematurely to arms. His message foreshadowed his later pleas that the schools of the South be kept open, protecting what he termed the "seed corn" of the Confederacy's future strength.

Despite the fact that neither North Carolina nor Tennessee ratified ordinances of secession until late in the summer, the Commencement exercises of June, 1861, were tinged with gloom. Those attending were apprehensive under the shadow of the coming struggle. Of the 87 members of the graduating class, only 30 were present. The University nevertheless conferred degrees upon all members of the senior class, although many had gone into military service before standing the final examinations.

Practically every member of the class entered the Confederate service. Of the graduates at least 25 lost their lives in the conflict, many of them being killed outright on the field of battle and others dying of wounds and disease. Many more of the matriculates of the class lost their lives in the struggle.

Torn by war and still further depleted by the terrible years which followed, the University class of 1861, with the sole exception of Captain Timberlake, has succumbed to the inevitable ravages of time. A highly respected citizen of Jackson, Captain Timberlake is a retired cotton broker.

scrimmage last week. This certainly is an evidence of power and the Carolina yearlings will have a tough row to hoe if they want to bring home a victory.

Mullis and Brandt, tackle and end respectively, for the first team, are still a little stiff from injuries. Mullis has a sore leg while Brandt's shoulder is troubling him. Both of these men seem to think that they would be in condition to play Saturday. There are no other men who are not in the best of condition with the exception of Anacoskus, a promising back, who will not make the trip on account of a lame leg.

The thirty men that Coach Enright has picked to make the trip include: Brandt, Harrington, Rankin, Matthews, and C. M. Jones, ends; Mullis, Mulligan, Strickland, Crane, and Tatum, tackles; Barclay, McIver, R. G. Wilson, Shore, and Matheson, guards; Fitzgerald, Gardner, and Horney, centers; Jones, Woolen, Priest, Phipps, McGill, De Rose, Weisker, Johnson, Witener, Hackney, Eanes, and Leroy, backs. These men will leave today at four o'clock.

Although no indication has been made as to the starting line-up, it is probable that this team will take the field first. Brandt and Harrington, ends; Mullis and Mulligan, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Gardner, center. The backfield will show Jones, Hackney, Phipps, and Weisker.

Cosmopolitans Hear Of Manchurian War

The Epsilon Phi Delta cosmopolitan club met for the first time this year at 9:00 o'clock last night in the Y. M. C. A., with Beverly Moore presiding.

After a few minutes dicussion of business matters, a paper was presented to the club by Doug Potter on "The Clash of Imperialism in Manchuria." Potter discussed the clash of the three powers, Russia, England, and Japan in their struggle for power over Manchuria. He spoke of the developments in recent years in the country, explaining something of their interests. Potter ended the paper with a plea for order in Manchuria.

through this week. He seemed to be of the opinion that the Tar Heels' aerial game will easily match that of the Vols, but that the line will be up against a heavier and more experienced forward wall.

It remains to be seen as to whether or not the line will be able to drive back the Vol forwards while the Tar Heel backs execute the passing attack and run the powerful line plays.

side baseball have all gone to the dogs. And why not? Why should a team take chances of injury in base running and why should they waste their thinking powers to advance base runners when in all probabilities, the men to follow in the batting order will drive the ball to all parts of the park? In the last two decades, with men like Johnson, Mathewson, Bender, Brown, and Salee doing their chores on the mound, it was news if a team went on a slugging bee; now, if they don't it isn't news.

Isn't a race between an outfielder's arm and a runner's legs one of baseball's greatest thrills? Isn't a contest of physical power a thrill in a game? Then why eliminate it? Baseball is primarily meant for the pleasure of its audience; then why eliminate anything that would prove of great enjoyment to fans—they are paying for it, so why not put the matter up to them.

It is this writer's opinion that Mr. Barnard's suggestion will have the same resting place as the National League president's suggestion last year of having a man bat for the pitcher—in the waste basket.

of formations used by the Big Five, Collins went into detail, explaining the T formation, short-kick formations, general offensive formations, and regular punt formations, applying each one to the way it is used by the different teams in the state.

The half-pint quarterback on that wonder-team of the University of Georgia, came in for his due share of praise from the coach of the Tar Heels. Chuck lauded this boy's ability to play the quarter position as only a master can play it. This lad is mighty good, and will give the fans more and better thrills for the rest of the year than he has so far, says Collins.

After talking for a few minutes, Coach Collins introduced Pat Miller, head coach of the Wake Forest Deacons, who talked about the favorite Fall sport and its different phases. Miller would like to have all the unnecessary ill-timed and ill-made remarks about the boys who play a square game of ball obliterated. Many remarks are made about the members of the different teams of sport through envy or sarcasm, which are very distasteful, and should be wiped out of every clean school in the country, according to Mr. Miller.

Coach Miller of the Deacons says he has been asked how his team has made such a good record so far in the season, when every one thought the Deacons were so weak and insignificant. He says that if the fundamentals of football are learned, and carried out as well as a team can execute them, then there is no reason at all why that team is not plenty good. Continuing his oral revue on football, Miller says that a small team should not scrimmage over 40 minutes a day after the team has encountered a stiff game the day or so before. In doping out the coming fray to be held in Knoxville, Tennessee, with the chief combatants being the Tar Heels and the Vols, Pat Miller promises that a real scrap will ensue, and that if the Vols aren't very careful, Carolina will emerge with a long-sought victory, maybe by the air-route.

In the recent game between State and the Deacons, Mack Stout, captain of the fighting Wolfpack, had occasion to remove one of his teamates because he was roughing the game up to a stage approaching brutality. Miller praised the fact that the plucky State leader showed so much fairness and sportsmanship in this minor issue of the game, and took advantage here in his talk to laud Mack Stout's beau gesture, Coach Miller states that the squad having a fine moral background on which to build a varsity is by far the organization which will come out closer to the top than one which has no moral support to back it up.

After Collins had said a few wards in summing up Miller's eulogy on pigskin warfare, he introduced Captain Parker, of the Demon Deacons, who conversed a while in praise of Pat Miller and the system now in use at the Baptist school which has brought them from the background into the limelight of footballdom in the Old North State.

As soon as Captain Parker finished his discourse on Miller, Collins answered one or two questions sent in by gridiron enthusiasts. The only important query the Coach had time to answer was in reply to the following question: "Please tell us why you jerked your first string of varsity men in the last part of the game against Georgia while the score was 18-0 in their (Georgia's) favor?"

The general trend of Collin's answer was that he jerked the men because there was no use leaving them in the fray as the game was nearing its end, and, looking forward to the Tennessee battle, he did not wish to give luck a chance to cripple any of his first string men. With this answer, Chuck brought his talk to a close, predicting that this week-end would see some of the greatest battles of the year in the sphere of football.

TAR HEEL WILL INSPECT ANNUAL STATISTICS '30-'31

No Person To Be Permitted to List Honor Unless Earned.

The two staffs of the Daily Tar Heel will meet tomorrow night as is usual. Last Sunday night Oscar J. Coffin spoke to the staff about the work done during the week prior to his talk.

The meeting Sunday will be shorter than usual but very important due to the fact that the managing editor will re-assign all beats for the first time this year. A review of the work done to date will be made, in addition to announcements concerning the editorial board.

In past years a person in composing his statistics for classification in the Yackety Yack was allowed to credit himself with work on the Tar Heel for any period of time that he was a member of the staff. This year, for the first time, a very rigid inspection will be made of all Yackety Yack statistics and those who have not served a full year will not be allowed to credit themselves with Tar Heel service.

A special Sunday edition is being considered which may possibly contain a science article somewhat similar to the "Believe It Or Not" series by Ripley.

In the future, beginning this week, four reporters will be "star" reporters of each week on a basis of the total number of inches printed in the paper, enthusiasm and attitude regarding their work, and the punctuality with which they attend meetings. In addition, it is expected that valuable prizes will be awarded besides the regular course credit which may also apply to freshmen this year.

The editorial men will meet in the Tar Heel office at seven o'clock, while the general meeting will be held in Room 104 Alumni building at seven-fifteen.

FEDERATION MEN APPEAR AT DUKE

E. R. Murrow, president of the National Student Federation of America, and John Lang, president of the State Federation, addressed the entire student body of Duke University during the chapel period Thursday morning. The two speakers were introduced and welcomed by "Bill" Murray, president of the Duke student body.

As well as describing the work and purposes of the two federations, Murrow and Lang urged the Duke student body to preserve and perfect its honor system which is just now being restored.

These two officers and Red Greene, president of the Carolina student body, attended the Eastern Convocation of Student Government Officials in Raleigh Wednesday, and have had other appointments during Student Government week, at the North Carolina College for Women, Friday night, and are to speak at Davidson tonight.

All students who have not received their Buccaneers should call by the Buccaneer office and get them today from two to four o'clock, according to James C. Harris, business manager.

UNDERGRADUATES ARE WARNED OF FACULTY RULING

Dean A. W. Hobbs wishes to call to the attention of the students the following ruling by the undergraduate faculty:

A freshman must pass five courses in the first three quarters. After the freshman year, a student must pass at least one course each quarter, four courses in two successive quarters and seven courses in three succesive quarters. Deficiencies may be made up by correspondence or in summer school, in which case only credits exceeding one course credit so obtained shall count for readmisison.

By two successive quarters is meant the last two quarters of residence, and by three successive quarters is meant the last three quarters of residence.

REES AND SMITH SCHEDULED FOR LUNCHEON TALKS

"The College Graduate and Southern Industry" is the topic to be discussed at a luncheon meeting at 12:30 Friday, October 31, at the Carolina Inn.

General R. I. Rees, assistant vice-president, American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and W. Henry Smith, junior vice-president and personnel manager, Retail Credit Company, Atlanta, will speak. (Mr. Smith is taking the place of Cator Woolford, who had expected to be here.) Frank Page, former highway commissioner of North Carolina and recently elected chairman of the Southeastern Council, will preside at the meeting.

Mr. Smith will discuss "The Georgia College Placement Bureau and Its Value to Industry," and General Rees will talk on "The College Graduate's Value to Industry.' Both of these men will give the viewpoint of industry toward college people and show how business assimilates college men. A general discussion will follow the talks.

A number of prominent educational and industrial leaders from this section are expected to be present for the meeting. Members of the University faculty, students or people of the community are cordially invited to attend. It is absolutely necessary, however, that such people who want reservations made get in touch with R. M. Grumman, University extension division, not later than Tuesday, October 28.

Male Teachers Are Increasing In State

The number of men school teachers has been increasing until the percentage of male teachers is now even with that of the year 1920, according to the State Department of Public Instruction.

Before 1920, women had replaced the male pedagogue of the nineteenth century that only 15.8 per cent. of the total number of teachers included men.

The percentage of male instructors in North Carolina compares favorably with that of other states. The North Carolina figures show the state slightly lower than that of the entire United States.

Among sixteen southern states, North Carolina ranks tenth in this respect. Elementary schools employ 54 men out of every 100, while high schools employ the remaining forty-six in this state.

MOTION PICTURES TO BE TAKEN OF N. C. TRACK MEN

Grantland Rice Has Arranged to Have Staff Here Monday Afternoon.

Having so decisively won the Southern Conference track meet this spring, nation-wide attention was attracted to the University. As a result of this great interest, Grantland Rice, well known sports writer, has arranged to have motion pictures taken of Carolina's relay teams Monday. At least four relay teams will be used in the filming of the picture. The picture will stress the important phases of running a relay, the exchange of batons especially. Any men interested in running should see Coach Ranson as soon as possible.

The men who will probably run in the relays Monday are: Charley Farmer, one of the best sprinters in the United States; L. Weil, stellar quarter miler; K. A. Gay; J. K. Smith; K. L. Marland; C. G. Stafford, outstanding hurdler on last year's freshman track team; W. C. Mitcham, member of the record breaking two mile freshman relay team; T. Watkins, winner of last year's cake race; R. W. Drane, star sprinter of the freshman team last spring; J. F. Geiger; H. R. Garrett; R. B. Brock; W. C. Medford; and J. C. Goodwin, winner of the 120 yard high hurdles in the prep school meet last spring.

H. W. Odum's Book Wins Position Of Honor In The New York Times

One of the many reviews in praise of Howard W. Odum's new book, An American Epoch, has the place of honor—the front page—in last Sunday's issue of the book section of the New York Times.

"No one who writes of the South as it was and as it is," says the reviewer, Arthur Krock, "no outsider who wants to work among its people, and no Southerner who would like to see his own background cleared of its cluttering fictions, should neglect to own this book. For a great many years there has gone out from Chapel Hill, the seat of the University of North Carolina, a vibrant wave of light and healing fully comparable to that which shone in another day from the library windows of Monticello. No resident of this Athenian settlement has done more credit to its enlightening mission than Mr. Odum. He must have known that, for all the enthusiastic jacketeering of his publishers, for all his cover array of Northern endorsements, he was writing for limited royalties and for the dust of libraries—to be disturbed frequently by the hands of students, but not to pass often through the hands of train butchers. Yet that devotion, that will to spread knowledge which is responsible for most of the useful writings of man, he gave for long years to a worthy task. And, partly because of him, posterity will be able to shake off the drenching scents spread by the romantic writers, dissipate the smell of the 1928 campaign, and see what the South was, what it is, and why."

Here are some other passages from the Times review:

"What a storehouse of facts and images is this book! Mr. Odum sits in a priceless mint of information, showering his treasures with a lavish hand. The golden items lie in heaps behind him. But it is very difficult for the casual reader to bring away from their contemplation anything more than dazzled eyes. Although the author scorned the pure narrative style employed by McCaulay and chose to try a duo-biographical method, he has still produced far more of a textbook, a sourcemine, than 'The History of England.'

"The book—the encyclopedia, rather—is dedicated 'To the Next Generation,' those Americans who in 1960 will be celebrating the centenary of the War of the States (falsely styled 'The Civil War'). Perhaps by that time man will be having enough of a holiday from the machines in the cogs of which he is now enmeshed to turn leisurely to such a study of the past as An American Epoch. It will help him to understand Sumter and Appomattox; Calhoun and Sumner; Bishop Leonidas Polk and Bishop James Cannon, Jr.; Fayette County, Kentucky, and Gaston County, North Carolina; Henry Watterson's Louisville Courier-Journal and William Randolph Hearst's Atlanta Georgian; Woodrow Wilson and Thomas J. Heflin. Here he will find the actual distinction between 'the poor white trash' and the middle Southern class, which owned few slaves and had little education, but yet was powerful and respected in the community.

COMER AND HAMER TO ATTEND STATE Y CABINET TODAY

H. F. Comer and Ed Hamer left this morning to attend the first meeting of year of the State Student Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, which begins this morning at 10:30, at the Greensboro Y. Ed Hamer, president of the local Y, is also president of the state cabinet.

The program for the meeting includes devotional exercises to be led by Leroy Clarke of State College, discussions of the exchange of deputations, and consideration of common problems. The state cabinet will endeavor to found Y associations at collges and Hi-Y groups in schools that do not now have them. Each college will be made responsible for the Hi-Y's in its section of the state.

The State Student Cabinet meets as the guests of different associations once every two months.

EHRINGHAUS WILL LEAD DEMOCRATIC RALLY NEXT WEEK

J. C. B. Ehringhaus of Elizabeth City, one of the most eloquent of the Democrats of North Carolina, will speak in Chapel Hill on Saturday evening of next week, November 1. Whether in the Tin Can or the public school auditorium will be announced later.

The occasion is a Democratic rally arranged by Ray Farris. Members of the Orange county executive committee and other prominent men and women in the party are co-operating with him to make the affair a success. John W. Umstead and Samuel M. Gattis, Jr., respectively, candidates for state senator and assemblyman, will be on the platform and will probably speak. It may be that the University band will lead a march down the main street of the village and across the campus just before the rally opens.

Mr. Ehringhaus, who is one of the aspirants to the governorship in 1932, was in the University here thirty years ago, has come back many times since on visits, and is remembered with affection by members of the faculty and other citizens. Since leaving the University he has achieved prominence as a lawyer and in the political life of the state.

TOWN ENDORSES DRIVE FOR FUNDS

The Town of Chapel Hill is backing the King's Daughters, woman's organiation, in its drive for charity funds, according to a letter from City Manager J. M. Foushee to the organization's president, Mrs. F. P. Brooks. Mr. Foushee's letter follows:

"I understand that the King's Daughters are making their annual canvass of Chapel Hill to obtain funds for carrying on the work of this organization. This association has been a great help to the town. Numerous cases of charity come to the town office each week, and these are referred to a committee of the King's Daughters. Your committee has carefully investigated these cases sent to them, and aid has been rendered where necessary.

"I know that the work of the King's Daughters is necessarily limited on account of the lack of funds, and I trust that the people of this community will respond generously to this worthy cause."

PHILOSOPHER TO ADDRESS SELECT CAMPUS GROUPS

New York Professor Will Be Brought Here By School Of Education.

Professor Reinhold Neinhold, of the Union Theological Seminary in New York City, will speak to an especially invited group of students and faculty in the sunday school room of the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon, November 2.

Written invitation are being sent to members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets, certain graduate students and faculty members, a select group from the Duke faculty, the International Relations club, and the Amphotheron club. All others, however, who desire to attend the address are asked to call at the Y office and leave their names. This is done so that a sufficient number of seats will be available for the audience.

The speaker was born of German parents, and can speak both English and German fluently. At present Professor Neinhold is Editor of the World Tomorrow and is also a member of the Editorial staff of the Christian Century. He has a reputation of being the most popular of the modern day philosophic speakers. For the past several years Mr. Neinhold has been professor of ethics at the Union Theological Seminary.

During the summer of 1930 Mr. Neinhold made a tour of Europe, and his address will be a discussion of the economic, political, and social situation and problems which he observed in Germany and Russia. Following his lecture, the speaker will discuss any question along the line of his subject.

The education school is bringing Professor Neinhold here for a convention which is to be here on October 31 and November 1. He is being held over for his speech Sunday afternoon by the local Y. M. C. A.

The Y hopes to be able to secure Mr. Neinhold for another speech on Saturday night, but at present no plans have been made in this regard.

REVIEW TO HAVE EXTRA EDITIONS

Following the policy inaugurated this fall, the Alumni Association is issuing a weekly football edition which is a supplement to the regular monthly review.

The plan was first carried out this year and seems to be meeting with the approval of the readers of the Alumni Review. The supplement appears every Wednesday except on weeks when the regular Review is published.

There are ten issues of the Alumni Review and seven issues of the football supplement, which contains football news only. The football news includes a detailed acount of the latest football game of the preceding week and a discussion of the prospects for coming games.

There will probably be no supplement for sports other than football. The extra editions are sent to members of the general Alumni Association and to the subscribers of the Alumni Review.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Kutz and Miss Abilene Kutz of Fayetteville are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Kutz.

Unfounded Charges

The Raleigh Times makes serious and unsound charges against Jim Magner and Al Cole, two members of the football squad who were suspended for breaking training rules, when it intimates strongly that the two were suspended for more serious offenses than smoking.

In part the Times says: "It requires but a small amount of imagination to understand in what manner the discipline of the coach was defied. 'Breaking training' is just another way of saying, as it is phrased by the younger set, 'getting high.'"

This implies that Magner and Cole are guilty of getting drunk. As it is generally understood on a campus noted for its gossip and rumors the two were suspended because they were smoking. It is unlikely that the boys could have pulled a drunk without its spreading all over the campus.

A general indictment of our student government and of college administrative authoritives in general follows: "But—and it is a serious but—how do the college administrations get the point of delegating their power and authority to an athletic coach? 'Training rules,' for all we know may prohibit indulgence in chocolate creams, absorption of drug store sundaes, loss of sleep by reason of late dates with the sex which is always in condition for a campaign. But it was not for a sweet tooth, over-feeding or dalliance with the fair—that these suspensions were decreed. We may be sure that they were imposed by the coach for matters as well against the discipline of the University as against his own regulations."

And he burns us up when he adds: "If it be answered that the University has student government — 'Don't make us laugh!'"

Such an intimation against the student government here is to be resented. The editorial so much as says that when athletes are involved authorities and student councils shrug their shoulders and say, "Oh well, we must win football games."

That attitude has long ago passed from the University. No longer do the athletes have a bed of roses. They, like the rest of us, are subjected to all regulations governing student conduct and we have never heard of an instance during the past four years wherein a student by reason of his athletic prowess has been exempted.

We take exception to the tone of the Raleigh Times in suggesting that Magner and Cole were guilty of charges more serious than smoking, and particularly to the suggestion that student government officials are lax in regard to athletes.

If the writer of the editorial has facts to back his suggestion that Magner and Cole were drinking or had been drinking he should let the proper officials have those facts and then condemn them if action is not taken. If the suggestion is based on general college boys, then the less said the better.

A Shorter Rushing Season

A college generation has come and gone since the present rushing system was founded at Carolina, and from every side there come complaints of its inadequacy. First of all, it does not serve the purpose behind its inception. Critics say: all fraternities do not have an equal chance during the period of rushing.

Freshmen are actually, if not officially, pledged before pledge day; many of them are rushed and make decisions about fraternity affiliation during the summer; periods of silence go unobserved; rushing is done away from the Hill; entertainment is provided the rushees. "High pressure" tactics still prevail; "cut-throat" policies are employed.

One may say that these are all violations of the rushing rules and not faults of the system itself. It has been suggested that a longer, more leisurely season would eliminate them. On the other hand, a shorter rushing period has been proposed and seems to have a great many advocates.

It is impossible, naturally, to get a system to please everybody. The writer, personally (not as a member of this editorial board), inclines towards a wide-open period of rushing to begin on the first day of Freshman Week, making the freshmen eligible for pledging when they pay their University bills. Certain provisions of the present system, regarding periods of silence before pledging, the distribution of bids, and similar requirements, would be retained.

Such an arrangement would, it seems, make the duties of both the rusher and the rushee lighter. As it is now, studies and campus activities alike suffer from the loss of time and effort detracted from them by the exigencies of rushing.—E. C. D. Jr.

Collegiate Characters

A most subtle and discerning piece of race caricature appeared recently in the editorial columns of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch—another Pulitzer paper. We quote:

"To the old definition that one Englishman is a gentleman, two Englishmen make a club and three Englishmen make a colony, the Manchester Guardian adds the following:

"One German is a philosopher; two Germans make an argument; three Germans make a political party.

"One Frenchman is a "causeur" (talker); two French people are a liaison; three French people make a marriage.

One Swede is a Scandinavian; two Swedes make a polar expedition; three Swedes make a massage institute.

"It is more difficult to reduce Amercans to a formula. However, will this do?

"One American is a go-getter; two Americans make a corporation; three Americans form a Hoover commission."

Localizing this material, we add still another characterization, though realizing the feebleness of our own humor: One college student is a sot; two college students are a bull session; three college students make a fraternity. Needless to add, one college girl is a co-ed; two college girls are still co-eds; but it takes 22 college girls to make a sorority.

Now, one more, inspired by G. W. W., Jr., of the city editors staff: In Virginia, one school building is a prep school; two school buildings make a college; and three school buildings make a university. E. C. D. Jr.

Leading Editorial Of The Week

A general feeling of depression seems to be stalking the jungle ready to swoop down on the returned sophomore, junior, and senior. The indigo feeling does not seem to be due to the magistrate exploration, or rumors of European war, or the American unemployment situation. Like Topsy, "it just growed." And it keeps growing outside of Barnard too, from what the novelists and playwrights tell us.

Our oracular editorial mind conceives this blueness to be an infection by the epidemic virus of inactivity or passivity. The panacea we suggest is enthusiasm for something. If we no longer look forward to a heavenly future to guide our actions if we don't believe in the completely satisfying power of love, if we don't believe in the Victorian fancy of doing good to our neighbor in order to buy our own peace—then we must look to ourselves to produce the antitoxin.

Enthusiasm for some one thing has wonderful effects. Not an enthusiasm which sits back on its haunches—but enthusiasm which stirs us to work for some purpose, not too farfetched to be attained, nor so easy of accomplishment that it soon becomes worthless. A passion for Abraham Lincoln and all his works, or for coin-collecting, or like that of the late Bronx insurance agent for Chinese tapestries, one that makes you work hard to satisfy its claims, that makes you write letters, and compile note-books, is the only effective way we have been able to find to work the deep blue out of one's system.

Of course, the danger point is evident when someone asks what flower painting, or exhaustive information on the Indian is worth in the general scheme of things. We really don't know, nor do we care too much. If we don't think with Shaw on the superman teleology, if we find ourselves willing to accept "futility" as the modern answer to "Whither are we-all tending?" it would be insane to permit such an answer to paralyze our activities. The immediate need is to drive out the blues by working up and satisfying an absorbing curiosity in the ductless glands. —Barnard Bulletin.

OPEN FORUM

To the Editor:

It seems that the letter in the Open Forum of the Thursday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel was misinterpreted by some of the readers. Being among the group of boys that wrote the letter we wish to apologize for our part of the write up. We did not in any way mean to offend the team, or any member of the team, and are sorry that it was taken in this way.

SPEAK, GREET, MEET WEEK

Carolina has lost her life blood, her personality. What is the life blood, the personality of a university but its traditions, its sacred memories of a beautiful past, its manifestations of glory and power? Where are those old traditions which Carolina once so proudly acclaimed? In the forward stride of development and progress they have been wantonly cast aside, to remain a smouldering fire in the hearts of those who once thrilled to the significance of their position in the university life; those who heard mighty cheers rise up in acclamation of their true worth.

Carolina is in the heyday of its life. Then why should it lack this life blood, this necessary factor for real fellowship, this quality for the salvation of its personality, and this ingredient in the composition of its daily life? Ostensibly, Carolina has expanded to such proportions that traditions are not practical, are inconsistent with the code of living, and are to be shunned as a nuisance. But are they? Decidedly not. If so, then why has the Freshman Friendship Council of the "Y" formulated plans to bring back to Carolina the old traditions? Why has every college and university of any repute so closely guarded and cherished its every tradition?

One old tradition in particular we have forgotten, the habit of speaking on the campus. Northern students are asking where is the so called southern hospitality. Students pass by students and no word of greeting or of good fellowship is spoken. That is the reason the Freshman Friendship Council has planned to have a "Speak, Greet, Meet Week" at the University. They believe that in their endeavor to stimulate better speaking conditions on the campus they will be serving the school as no other group has ever done. When this plan is placed within our grasp every loyal Tar Heel should rise with grateful applause, and laud the new movement of ushering in a new eon for better conditions, on the campus of the University of North Carolina.

CHIPS
"BLOCK"
By Moore Bryson

The managing editor said, "Block, we are depending on you to have your column in every week for the Saturday issue."

"Jack," said I, "that's' all very well, but I'm going to be mighty busy this week. Besides I don't know anything to write about since I was unable to round up enough money to go to Georgia and really learn some scandal."

"That's all very well," said he, "but we are depending on you, so either write or get off the staff."

You would think that I was a blamed freshman by the way they treat me. However, I'm not going to give up the opportunity of spilling a little dirt now and then, so here goes:—

From now on, you will have to find the best places in town to eat for yourselves. Never again will I venture to say which place serves the best coffee. Not only have I been accused of being paid for advertising a certain establishment in town, but I have been slighted by all my friends who are in the restaurant business in Chapel Hill. I think one of them gave me a tough steak the other night just out of spite. What is more, the managing editor gave me a nice long lecture. And to think, I had nothing but kindness in my heart when I made the simple assertion.

Everyone has heard of "Flying Doctors," "Flying Fools," "Flying Lawyers," etc. but I think that Carolina may rightly claim to be the first university with a "Flying President." With all due respect to Mr. Graham, we venture the assertion that he was not the only one that got "high" on the way to the Georgia game. (Moans and groans from the multitude.)

The Tar Heel announces that "Co-eds To Dance For First Time of Year Friday." Pity the poor males on a night like that. Incidentally, I wonder what the headline writer would term the terpsichorean antics of some of the "ladies of the campus" at the recent Graduate Club dance.

John Lang has been in the height of his glory during the past few days, conducting the president of the National Federation of Students about the campus.

"Oh, may I walk to class with you?"
I said to a little Pi Phi.
"I'm thorry, thir, Craig has a car,"
She lisped as she heaved a thigh.

Well, as I told Jack when I started to write this, I really didn't have anything to say in the first place. I hope that next week will find a little gossip as well as a little mental activity on my part.

hymns and folk music of white and black; why Thomas Nelson Page and Mary Johnston were succeeded by James Branch Cabell and Ellen Glasgow—these things will all be revealed. Stage Set For Vol-Tar Heel Clash Today

Carolina Stands Good Chance To Upset Team Of Major Bob Neyland

Injuries Expected To Wreck Havoc In Tennessee Forward Wall.

VOL LINE IS SHIFTED

24,000 Fans Will Pack Stands For Homecoming Contest.

The gridgraph report of the North Carolina - Tennessee football game will be shown in the Tin Can this afternoon starting at three o'clock.

By K. C. Ramsay

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 24.—Preparations were completed here tonight for the University of Tennessee homecoming celebration tomorrow when the North Carolina and Tennessee football teams meet on the gridiron. Much speculation was going on as to who will win the game with the odds favoring the Volunteers from one to two touchdowns, but Coach Chuck Collins and his Tar Heels are noted for their ability in the air, and an upset would not be at all improbable.

The Tar Heels are expected to arrive here tomorrow morning from Asheville where they took a light workout yesterday. Coach Collins is bringing a squad of thirty-one men with such stars as Johnny Branch, Captain Strud Nash, and others to be pitted against the Tennessee backfield combination of Dodd, Hackman, Allen and Decker.

Coach Bob Neyland has made several shifts in the lineup for the game to strengthen the forward wall. Franklin is expected to be one of the guard posts with Saunders at the other. The flanks for the Vols will be minus the stars Hug and Brandt because of injuries. It is rumored that Hackman will not start, but he will probably see action in the game.

Up until late tonight Jim Magner had not been reinstated by Coach Chuck Collins, so it is highly improbable that he will get into the game.

Probable lineups announced tonight were:

North Carolina		Tennessee
Johnson		Rayburn
	Left End
Thompson		Thayer (C)
	Left Tackle
McIver		Franklin
	Left Guard
Lipscomb		Franklin
	Center
Fysal		Saunders
	Right Guard
McDade		Aiken
	Right Tackle
Parsley		Derryberry
	Right End
Branch		Dodd
	Quarterback
Maus		Cox
	Left Half
Nash (C)		Allen
	Right Half
House		Decker
	Fullback

Carolina Stands Good Chance

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 25.—One of the outstanding games in Southern Conference circles will be played today on Shields-Watkins field when the Tar Heels of North Carolina clash with the Volunteers of Tenn-

Buddy Hackman

Without Buddy, or the "Blonde Blizzard" as he is sometimes called, there would be no "Hack and Mack" on Tennessee's football team. There are plenty of good sophomore half backs in the country each year but seldom two outstanding candidates turn up on the same team and play brilliant football in their second year of college as did Hackman and McEver in 1928.

Buddy doesn't always confine his activities to the gridiron. He made his letter in basketball and was captain of the baseball team. Recently he was elected president of the All Students Club, which is the highest honor to be attained in school activites, and was awarded the Toga as the most outstanding member of the Junior class at Tennessee.

Last year when Tennessee came from behind in the last few minutes to tie Kentucky in their annual Turkey Day battle, fans remember Buddy's almost imposible catch of a forward pass and his dash for the goal line thirty-five yards away. The game was played in a blinding snow storm but Buddy was fighting to uphold the record of having never lost a football game since he entered Montgomery Bell Academy in 1924. Perhaps he had this in mind when he scored six points in the last few minutes of play when it looked like certain defeat for Tennessee.

Collins Is Unmoved By Telegram From Tennessee Players

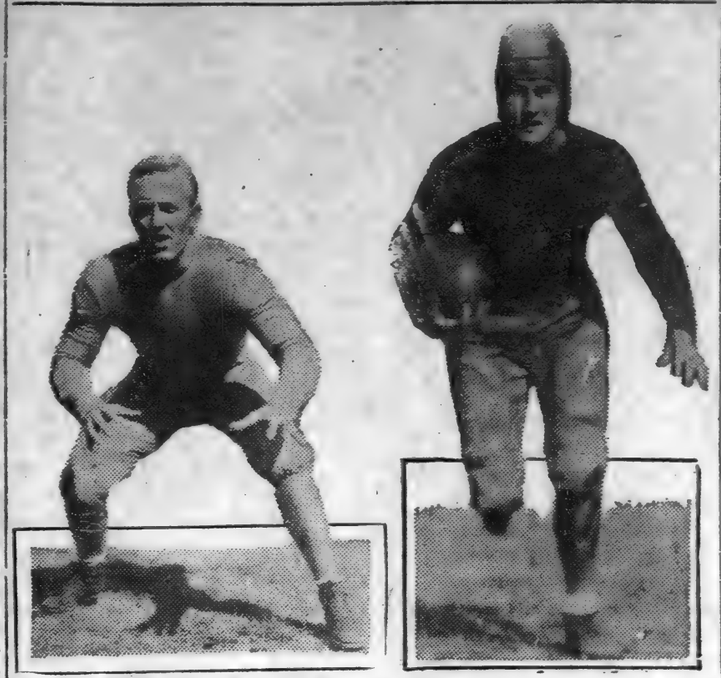
Coach Collins received a telegram Thursday night from the members of the University of Tenessee football team, requesting him to allow Jim Magner, star halfback, and Al Cole, sophomore end, who were both suspended for breaking training, to play today when the Tar Heels face the Vols at Knoxville. However, this gesture of good sportmanship was of no avail as Coach Collins would not recant his first decision of keeping both men out of the Tennessee game.

DOPING 'EM OUT

By BOB BETTS

Last Saturday night we were advised to take an overdose of poison by some of the boys who took this dope seriously enough to risk the family bankroll on our selections. However, we are still kicking after a week of upsets and herewith present this week's favorites.

Over the mountains in Knoxville, Tennessee, two badly battered teams will try to find out which team is the better. The Vols have a splendid line from tackle to tackle. On the flank positions, however, they are weakened considerably by the absence of Fred Brandt, who will be out until the Vanderbilt game on November 15. Hug, who did not start in the Alabama game, will be ready for action today at left end. In the backfield Gene McEver will be among those missing from the fray. North Carolina will be minus the services of Jim Magner. This will undoubtedly weaken the offensive power of the team, as Magner is the spark plug of the backfield. Carolina's weak forward wall will be hard put to stop the rushes of the Vols' heavier and more experienced line. Coach Neyland shifted his line this week in an effort to develop more drive and speed. Tennessee holds a big advantage in the line and they also have fine reserve material for their forward wall, whereas the Tar Heels have very few high class substitutes. The Vols should trim the Tar Heels before their Homecoming crowd.



Down in Birmingham the unyielding force strikes the immovable object. Neither Vanderbilt nor Alabama have tasted defeat this season. Both squads have a long string of brilliant victories to their credit. Alabama, however, had an extremely hard foe in Tennesse last Saturday, while Vandy was snowing under Spring Hill with the reserves doing the work. This should be in Vanderbilt's favor. The Crimson Tide has the strongest line in the South; the Commodores have a line that managed to hold Minnesota and V. P. I. to a slow walk. Alabama holds a slight advantage here. Vandy has the better backfield of the two teams, although 'Bama has one of the best backs of the Conference in Monk Campbell. Vanderbilt has a lot of fine sophomore backfield talent and "Red" Leonard, last year's Soph sensation. This battle may settle the championship of the Conference. Vandy's Sophs may crack or they may play unbeatable ball. We pick Vanderbilt to check the Crimson Tide although the Red Tide may drown the Commodore's hopes.

Over in the Capital City, North Carolina State, under a new coach, will be attempting to win their second game of the season from "Red" Cagle's Mississippi Aggies. Cagle's boys fresh from a victory over Louisiana State Tigers, should beat "Doc" Sermon's gang of toothless wolves. The Wolfpack will develop however as the season goes on, as they have a better team than their record indicates.

After picking Duke to bow to Davidson, and Navy, we nomin-

RIVAL CAPTAINS IN TODAY'S GAME

Here are the two men who will control the destinies of their men in the Carolina-Tennessee clash in Knoxville this afternoon. Although Captain Harry Thayer will not be in the starting lineup due to an injury received in the Alabama game last Saturday, it is expected that the Vol mentor will send his capable player into the fray before the first quarter is very old.

WARREN WORKING OUT IN TIN CAN

Former Tar Heel Boxer Uses University Students As Sparring Partners.

After a week of intense work in the Tin Can, Add Warren, prominent North Carolina heavyweight, is about ready for his clash with Jeff Carroll in Charlotte Monday night. Warren is in better condition than he has been for some time and will go to Charlotte confident of gaining revenge against Carroll whom he has yet to defeat in two bouts. The first scrap went to Carroll when Warren broke his arm and the second, held in Asheville recently, was called a draw.

During the past week Warren has been working for speed and with that end in view had added Archie Allen, last year's varsity captain and welterweight, to his list of sparring partners. Hugh Wilson and John Warren, varsity heavyweights, Bill Miller, lightheavy, and Obie Davis, middleweight, have been his other spar mates and have afforded him some very stiff workouts.

Warren has, of course, kept his sleep producing right hand under wraps during the week, but has used a left hook effectively, particularly to the body. Aside from work in the ring, Add has given a great deal of his time to shadow boxing and work on the light bags in an effort to increase his speed. Warren should be in the very best of condition when he steps in the ring against Carroll if he continues to utilize his time during the latter part o fthe week as he has so far.

Backfield Systems Clash

The Notre Dame and Princeton ball-advancing systems will be tester under heavy fire for their relative merits when North Carolina plays its Homecoming Day battle with Georgia Tech here next Saturday. Mike Miles, All-American Fullback at Princeton, coaches the Tech backs. Bill Cerney, halfback of "Four Horseman" days at Notre Dame, has charge of the Tar Heel backs.

FROSH SET FOR PRINCETON TILT

Tar Babies Take Light Workout Before Leaving Chapel Hill For Match.

The freshman team going to Princeton for the game there today left here yesterday thirty strong at three o'clock. Coach Enright had his charges out for a short workout yesterday at one o'clock. The drill lasted about an hour. Time was spent mostly in practicing kick-offs, and making points after touchgiven down. All the men were given new jersies and stockings for the trip. Coach Enright is particularly anxious to take Princeton into camp, and is going to do everything he can to do this. Mullis, the big tackle from Charlotte, who has been out with a very painful "charley-horse," was back in uniform today and was sure of playing tomorrow. As far as could be learned there were no other injuries reported.

The game is scheduled to be played at one-thirty o'clock today, preceding the Princeton varsity battle with Navy.

C. H. H. S. 12; Apex 0

In a game marked by several arguments and a great deal of fumbling, Chapel Hill High School defeated Apex High, 12-0 yesterday at Emerson Field.

The local team scored their first touchdown on the last play of the third quarter by a blocked punt and a fifteen yard run by McKnight on a fake reverse. In the final period Chapel Hill added to their total when King intercepted a forward pass on Apex's twenty yard line and went the remaining yardage for the latter part of the week as he tra point was disallowed.

Tech Better

If you figure football on paper, the North Carolina carriers of the pig-skin are going to have a tough time when Georgia Tech blows to town Saturday. T echbeat South Carolina 45-0. South Carolina beat Duke 22-0. Duke beat Navy 18-0. If you go by that, Tech is 85 points better than Navy.

PLAN SERIES OF GOLF TOURNEYS FOR LINKS TEAM

Tournaments Will Give Coaches Line on Strength of Material.

The Tar Heel golfers have planned an intensive fall training schedule, starting Monday, with the first of a three weeks' tournament at Hope Valley. The tournament will be divided into three parts: the first one for the varsity, the second for the freshmen, and the final to consist of matches between the varsity and the frosh. With the exception of the third tourney, there will be a three day, qualifying round preceding the regular competition, which will be match play.

The main purpose of these tournaments will be to allow Coach Kenfield to get a line on both the varsity and freshmen material, and to select the men who will represent Carolina against Virginia in their annual Thanksgiving day matches. This year the matches will be played at Charlottesville.

Of the men that formed Carolina's crack squad last year, only one is back in school this year, with the possibilty of another returning to school in the spring. Meade Willis, the only letterman back from last year, is acting manager until a captain will be elected; then there is a good chance that Benny Goodes, another letter man, will be ready when spring practice is called. These two men will form the nucleus of Coach Kenfield's squad, but nearly all of last year's freshmen team has returned, and Coach Kenfield will be able to pick a formidable team from this aggregation. In addition to Goodes and Willis, there will be Aubrey Brooks from last year's squad, Joe Adams, Freddie Laxton, Billy O'Brien and Ray Chatham of the Tar Baby squad last year, and two transfers, Al Brown and Paul Carter.

Little is qnown of the 1931 Tar Babies with the exception that Allan Smith, holder of many intra-state amateur titles, will play for the freshmen.

TAR HEEL-TECH BATTLE RECALLS TOUGH GAMES

The Carolina-Georgia Tech rivalry, to be renewed here Saturday, recalls many a tough game. In 1916 Carolina played Harvard, Princeton and Tech in a row, and held Tech, with its immortal Strupper, Guyon and Flowers, to 10-6. In 1927 Carolina was within Tech's five-yard line four times, but lost "the hardest 13-0 game ever played on any field anywhere." In 1928 Tech won 20-7, the subs doing all the scoring in the opening minutes, only to have Carolina rush Tech's great first team off its feet in the second half. Last year, Tar Heel took revenge and toppled Tech's national champs of the year before in a great battle that ended 18-7.

Three hundred and seventy-eight students at the New Jersey College for Women who worked during the past summer, earned a total of $44,550. The average length of employment was eight and a half weeks.

GRIDGRAPH REPORT

U. N. C. vs. Tennessee TODAY 3:00 P. M. Tin Can - 40 cents

RING PROSPECTS APPEAR BRIGHT FOR FROSH TEAM

Squad of Twenty-Five Showing Vast Improvement As Work Gets Under Way.

Although the freshman boxing squad has fallen off in numbers the candidates for the team are hard at work and are showing marked improvement. Rushing season, the cake race, and other things have caused the number of candidates to fall from fifty-five to less than twenty-five but among those still working are several men with unusual possibilities.

Glover is leading the other bantamweight aspirants who are Holt, Wilmer, and Masten, and looks like a real prospect for the berth this winter. He has the advantage of having trained with more regularity than the others, and has been working with Boring of the varsity.

Raymer looks to be the class of the featherweight division, so far, by virtue of a right hand that packs dynamite. He still has a good bit to learn about boxing, but when he does this his right should be more valuable than ever.

Although Hudson seems to have a slight edge over the other lightweights, Stein and Barringer may be able to change this situation if they continue to improve as they have recently.

Guthrie, a welter, Pace in the middleweight, and Brown, a light-heavyweight, are showing daily improvement and are likely looking prospects in their respective weights. Several promising men have dropped out of competition lately, but are expected to return and offer trouble for some of the present favorites.

LOCAL STUDENT WILL BROADCAST

Brooks Frye, a freshman at the University will broadcast over radio station WPTF in Raleigh, N. C., this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Fryre is considered one of the leading pianists in the state. Mr. Fryre will play several popular pieces and will include in his program some older pieces which were popular some years ago.

Concluding his program Mr. Fryre will play a selection of his own composition entitled 'Carolina.' This piece he hopes will be used as the music for a future Carolina song.

Councilman Begins Third Year On Body

"Red" Greene announces the election of Pat Patterson as representative of last year's student council to this year's council. Patterson replaces Bob Graham who did not return to school this fall. This will be Patterson's third year on the council; he was representative of the sophomore class two years ago, and was representative of the student body at large and secretary of the council last year.

"Red" Greene, president of the student body, is ex-officio chairman of the council; Mayne Albright is senior representative and secretary of the council; W. E. Uzzell, junior representative; Harper Barnes, sophomore. M. S. Benton represents the law school; L. G. Barefoot, pharmacy; and Allen Whitaker, medicine.

Room 204 of South building is the student government office and President Greene has office hours there from ten-thirty until eleven in the morning, and from two until three in the afternoon.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Double Forfeit

The game scheduled between Old West and "I" was forfeited by both teams as neither appeared.

Grimes Forfeits

Grimes forfeited to Lewis in the intramural football league yesterday afternoon.

Another Forfeit

The Law School received a forfeit yesterday afternoon when the Manly team failed to appear.

Yet Another

Old East won from Mangum by a forfeit when the latter failed to appear.

Ruffin Wins on Downs

Ruffin defeated Carr by 9-5 first downs in the only game of the afternoon. Neither team appeared to be very strong. Riggs and MacBride led the attack for the winners.

Trade Question Is Often Abused By Amateur Speakers

Meeting in regular session Thursday night at seven o'clock in 201 Murphy hall, the debate squad heard Dr. E. W. Zimmerman of the school of commerce lecture on the subject "Resolved, that the nations of the world should adopt a policy of free trade." Both sides of the issue will be debated in the coming dual debate with North Carolina State College.

The speaker reminded his audience that the question of free trade versus protection has been abused time and again by amateurs, who have been wont to conceal their ignorance and prejudices behind a barrage of high-sounding phrases. "Free trade is always a political question, and as such cannot be disassociated from the elements of time and place," stated the economist.

Dr. Zimmerman was very emphatic in his contention that the free trade isue "is nothing more than a segment of the still larger problem of laissez-faire." By the way of tracing the history of free trade, he made frequent mention of the teachings of Adam Smith. "Adam Smith," stated the speaker, "was not a complete free trader. He rather believed in the protection of infant industry."

Throughout his lecture, Dr. Zimmerman gave ilustrations bearing directly on the issue and its relation to political expediency.

Arthur And Johnston Speak To Sophomores

Sophomore chapel was but a repetition of Thursday' freshman chapel. Billy Arthur again made a plea to the chapel to turn out for the Cheerio practices next week.

Henry Johnston repeated his practical talk on vocational choice. The talk was interspersed with interesting experiences of men who have graduated from here and with whom the vocational bureau has come in contact.

'OI, OI!' A RUBE GOLDBERG COMEDY WILL COME HERE

Comedy appealing to the general tastes of every man, woman, son and daughter in the land is said to be found in Fox Movietone's latest laugh picture, "Soup to Nuts," based on an original story by Rube Goldberg, famous comedy creator, which will open at the Carolina theatre today.

Benjamin Stoloff directed the comedy which revolves about a romantic young couple who are tangled in a web of misunderstanding.

Stanley Smith and Lucile Brown portray the infatuated lovers, whose affairs grow rapidly from bad to worse.

Carolina Stands Good Chance to Upset Team Of Coach Bob Neyland

essee in the annual Home Coming celebration at the University of Tennessee.

Until defeat was administered by the big boys down in Alabama last Saturday, the Volunteers had a record of thirty-three consecutive victorious games. In 1929, the North Carolinians piled up an enviable record marred by only one defeat. The teams are considered evenly matched, and the contest will be exciting whether it is a line plugging best-man-win affair, whether the great Bobbie Dodd chooses to take to the air, or the famous Hackman shows the Tar Heels what a pair of Tennessee heels can look like.

Both teams will be fighting like a prairie fire with a good start to keep their previous records from falling lower in the Coneference standing. There is a chance that the winner of the Southern Conference will not be an undefeated team. In that event, the team having the fewest losses may tie for winning place and all the glory it entails.

After a visitation of almost every injury except writers' cramp and the itch, the Tennessee team begins to look like a convalescent ward rather than an operating room. Derryberry and Allen, two dependables will see service in this afternoons game, after serving time with their injuries while the other Vols fought the Battle of the Tide.

Eugene McEver, Tennessee's All-American half back who has been kept on the bench all this season with injuries to his knee; Paul Heydrick, and Faust; Paul Hug and Fritz Brandt, veteran All-Southern ends, are still nursing their injuries and cursing fate. None of these men will see service in the North Carolina game.

The line-up as announced by the Tennesse coaches is: Left end: Derryberry; left tackle, Saunders; left guard, Franklin: center, Mayer; right end, Rayburn; right tackle, Aitken; right guard, Hickman; quarterback, Dodd; right half back, Allen; left half back, Hackman; and full back, Decker.

A record crowd is expected to witness this game. Pre-game seats sales indicate that a crowd of about 24,000 will attend. Reports filtering to Knoxville say that everybdoy, with the possible exception of a few women, and children, and sick wil come from Western North Carolina.

Music Auditorium Carpet Is Said To Deaden All Sound

Two men are at work stitching together the strips of the carpet for the new music building auditorium, so that it will have been layed by Monday.

The carpet is of heavy heather velvet to be laid over a lining of paper stuffed with cotton. One of the two men at work yesterday said that the fact that the lining contains paper will in no way affect the durability of the whole. It will not have to be replaced periodically, but will last thirty years at least.

The carpet was made by Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Company of New York, a company organized in 1825. The Bigelow of Bigelow-Sanford is the inventor of the first power loom for making carpets.

The type of floor covering being placed in the auditorium is the type used in many theatres and dispenses with all echoes. Used backstage, it helps deaden sound. It is said that after its installation the acoustics will be one hundred per cent better than before.

Doping 'Em Out

ate them to steamroll Wofford at Spartanburg. The Blue Devils came within a touchdown of beating Navy as bad as Notre Dame's Ramblers did. Evidently they have everything to make a good club. James DeHart, the Little Napoleon of football, deserves all the credit in the world, and we hate to see him go at the end of the season.

Monk Younger has every reason to be gloomy when his Wildcats take the field this afternoon against Virginia Tech. In spite of reports from Blacksburg that indicate half of the team at least must be in the hospital, the Gobblers will present a fast charging line and shifty backs for the Davidson players to attempt to catch. V. P. I. should win this game.

Wake Forest's Deacons and Mercer's Bears clash in Wilmington today. Miller's boys have one of the best lines in the state and a good backfield. Wake Forest should win with hands down.

Tulane's Green Wave flows into Atlanta to cope with Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado. In this battle of the elements two great lines oppose each other. Tech has the advantage in the backfield, however, and this should be enough to swing victory in their favor. Tulane has practically the same line that they won the championship with last year, but they lost Billy Banker, Ike Armstrong, and other veteran backs by graduation.

Down in Columbus, Georgia, Auburn's Plainsmen may upset Georgia's mighty Bulldogs. The Plainsmen lost to Florida by 7 points and to Georgia Tech by 2 markers; they have their best team in years. Nevertheless, Georgia should win.

Kentucky should find an easy opponent in Virginia. The Wildcats have been clicking very smoothly in their games so far this season. Florida should cage Furman's Hurricane with ease. Byrd's Maryland outfit will have a tough tussle on their hands in Richmond with VMI's Flying Squadron; the Old Liners should win, as they have a better line and backfield. Ole Miss journeys to Chicago for an intersectional game with Stagg's Chicago eleven. Mississippi will have a cold time of it, and Chicago, with a fair team, should win by a close score. Washington and Lee should crush little St. Johns College with ease.

Tech Brings Great Tackles

North Carolina tackles will likely have another tough day when Georgia Tech comes to Kenan Stadium next Saturday. The "Ramblin' Wreck" has two of the greatest tackles in the country in Frank Speer and Vance Maree.

SURVIVORS TELL GRAPHIC STORY OF DISASTROUS FIRE IN ANNEX

(Editor's note: In keeping with its policy of covering all Chapel Hill and University news alike, the Daily Tar Heel had a reporter on the scene of the Carolina Inn Annex fire, which occured early Friday morning several weeks before the fire broke out. As a matter of fact, just between you and me, our reporter started the fire in order to have some live news to give you this morning.)

On the scene of the disaster, October 24, 1:30 a. m.—A disastrous fire, supposedly started by a cigarette butt thrown in a trash barrel, swept through the Carolina Inn Annex, housing the Inn cafeteria and some 15 boys, shortly after one o'clock this morning. The financial loss involved had not been reckoned as this was being written, but the extent of the fire covered one trash barrel, four feet of bannisters (on steps leading down from the side of the building), one four-by-four post, a badly scorched screen door, and a 3 or 4-foot square on the roof over the steps.

The survivors from the fiames each tells the horrible tale in his own manner.

An unidentified student, who lives in a cottage behind the Inn says, "I was sitting by the window, before going to bed, doctoring my athlete's foot; I saw the flames literally leap from the barrel and bannisters; I yelled, 'Fire'; and ran out and jumped the fence."

"Fire Chief" Cook Prettlow, of Wilmington: "I had been studying that (censored) accounting, and had just got in bed. When I heard the yells and saw the light of the fire through my window, I jumped up, ran to the hall, and snatched down the fire extinguisher. 'Everybody stand back,' I said, 'these things are dangerous.' I clutched the tiny hose of the extinguisher, trembling with fear and excitement. Nothing happened. 'O-o-oh', I cried, 'the (censored) thing won't work; bring on the water'."

(Co-) Eddie Marshall, of Rocky Mount: "I grabbed up a smoldering floor mop, stuck it in some water, and started swabbing the burning timbers. That was all that saved us. 'It's no need to call the fire department,' I told the boys. 'That dog goes with the me everywhere they go; they won't come unless the dog wakes up, and right now she's got a litter of puppies to watch out for'."

Johnny Branch's brother: "When the extinguisher would not work, I called for several waste baskets full of water and succeeded in wetting my clothes thoroughly. I hadn't gone to bed when the fire began."

Charles Hargrett, of Tifton, Georgia, whose window was nearest the flames: "I woke up and saw the fiames leaping about my window curtain. I grabbed for my pants and my new overcoat."

Maurice, the negro night watchman, who woke up thirty minutes after the fire was out: "Who set it on fire?"

The rest of the Annex roomers, who didn't wake up until eight o'clock: "ZZ-zz-zz- . Snooo-re."

Wigue And Masque

There will be a tryout for the Wigue and Mask staff pianist and assistant staff pianist in the forthcoming Wigue and Mask production. All applicants are urgently requested to meet Wex Malone, president of the organization, in the choral room of the new music building Tuesday night at 7:30.

Loyalty Fund Appeal Is To Meet Need Of Student Loans

Greater Need for Loan Funds Than Ever Before in History of University.

$45,000 MORE IS NEEDED

There is a grave need for additional student loan funds at the University of North Carolina, according to a recent survey made by the office of Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students. An effort to meet this need is the principal objective of this year's Alumni Loyalty Fund appeal.

As is generally known, a large percentage of University students are dependent upon some outside source for their financial aid in obtaining a university education. Only about one-fourth of the student body is entirely independent of outside financial aid, thus leaving three fourths of the students of the University, or almost 2,000, who are classified as self-help students. These 2,000 students must pay their own way through the University in whole or in part. One fifth of the entire student body, that is about 550, are compelled to pay their entire college expenses without any assistance from their families.

Obviously, students loans constitute the chief aid to these self-help students. As many of them as are able to find employment in Chapel Hill do so and work to meet their expenses. But the demand for jobs is much greater than the campus and the small town of Chapel Hill can supply. If the University is therefore to live up to its promise that no worthy boy need be turned away for a lack of funds, the only alternative is to lend him money. Hundreds of students each year are thus enabled to enjoy the advantages of the Carolina campus because of loans who would otherwise be deprived of the opportunity entirely.

The demand for loans and other forms of self-help this year is much greater than ever before in the history of the University. Mr. Brashaw estimates that the demands for this school year will approximate $85,000. There exists now loan funds which total approximately $160,000, but all of this money has already been loaned with the exception of $15,000. The fact that the average length of the term of the loans is about six years means that much of the total loan funds are always outstanding.

According to the present rate of collections about $25,000 of the present outstanding loans will be collected this year. This amount added to the $15,000 now on hand will total $40,000, thus failing by $45,000 to meet the demand of $85,000. It is also pointed out by Dean Bradshaw that much of the $25,000 which will be collected this year will be collected too late to be of any assistance to students who need loans in order to remain in school. Therefore a conservative estimate of the amount of money needed to be raised from outside sources in order to meet this year's demands is $50,000.

Announcement has been made that all unrestricted gifts made to the Alumni Loyalty Fund this year will be used to meet this need. The Loyalty Fund Council is furthermore attempting to raise this year money enough to solve for several years to come the student loan problem.

Loyalty Fund Chairman

Leslie Weil of Goldsboro, who graduated from the University in 1895, is chairman of the Alumni Loyalty Fund Council. In addition to his duties on the Council Mr. Weil has been a member of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees for many years and was a member of the special committee of five men who made a comprehensive study of presidential possibilities preceding the election of Frank Porter Graham to the presidency of the University.

Alumni Are Urged To Contribute Now

The Alumni Loyalty Fund Council urges all alumni who have not yet contributed to the Fund during 1930 to send in their subscriptions now in order that the money may be made available as quickly as possible for student loan purposes. Any amount, regardless of how small, can thus be put to a practical advantage.

In many instances students need to borow only $50. If prospective donors can not give as much as $50, and many of them of course can not, only five ten-dollar contributions will equal an amount sufficient to keep many worthy students in school.

Already subscriptions blanks have been sent to every alumnus. He is invited to send his subscription either to his class agent or to the Loyalty Fund office in Chapel Hill, or he may give it in person to the committeemen in his county.

Campaign Sidelights

Among the many interesting side lights of the Alumni Loyalty Fund campaign to date is the typically dramatic manner in which the subscription of Sidney Blackmer, the famous actor who now is busily engaged in filling the terms of his contract with National Pictures, was received. Mr. Blackmer sent his subscription by air mail.

Although the amount of Mr. Blackmer's gift was not revealed by the Loyalty Fund office, in keeping with its custom, Director Grisette announced yesterday that it was more than most students need to borrow.

Not to be outdone, Dr. Wade H. Atkinson, prominent Washington, D. C. alumnus, telegraphed his subscription in order that it might be received in the office before University Day.

Sigma Epsilon announces the pledging of Forney T. Rankin of Belmont.

GOVERNOR LAUDS FUND COMMITTEE

Gardner Writes to Class Agents And Committeemen, Thanking Them for Assistance.

Governor O. Max Gardner has shown a remarkably active interest in the success of this year's Alumni Loyalty Fund appeal. Last week he wrote a personal letter of appreciation to all class agents and county committeemen for the work they are doing in assisting to make the campaign a success.

The Governor's letter follows:

"As chairman of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina, I wish to take this occasion to thank you for your fine assistance in serving as a member of the Alumni Loyalty Fund committee for your community.

"As you know, all gifts which you secure from other alumni this year will be used as loan funds for worthy students. I am sure you will agree that no money could possibly be invested more wisely.

"The fact that thousands of Carolina alumni are unitedly contributing some annual gift to her, augurs well for her continued growth. Greater financial resources and a more actively interested body of alumni, both of which are essential in the successful administration of a great university, will result.

"Your service on the committee, together with the others who are rendering a like service, is making this new support possible. The University and all its friends owe you a debt of gratitude.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) O. Max Gardner."

COUNCIL DIRECTS FUND ACTIVITIES

Group of Twelve Men Supervise Collections and Expenditures Of Loyalty Fund.

The activities of the Alumni Loyalty Fund, both in the field of raising money and its expenditure after it is raised, are supervised by a group of twelve alumni known as the Alumni Loyalty Fund council.

Three of the twelve are ex-officio members, as follows: Frank Porter Graham, president of the University; W. T. Shore, '05, Charlotte, president of the General Alumni Association, and J. Maryon Saunders, '25, Chapel Hill, executive secretary of the General Alumni Association.

The remaining nine members of the council are appointive, two-thirds of them being appointed by the president of the University and one third by the president of the General Alumni Association. The appointive members serve during terms of three years each and are subject to re-appointment.

The present appointive members of the council are as follows: Leslie Weil, '95, Goldsboro, Chairman; H. G. Baity, '17, Chapel Hill; Allen J. Barwick, '00, Raleigh; Burton Craige, '97, Winston Salem; Alfred W. Haywood, '04, New York City; Dr. J. G. Murphy, '01, Wilmington; Dr. Ira W. Rose, '06, Rocky Mount; C. R. Wharton, '12, Greensboro; and Dr. Louis Round Wilson, '99, Chapel Hill.

The council employs a full-time executive secretary-director whose activities are accountable to the council. Felix A. Grisette, '22, is the secretary-director.

ALUMNI LETTERS ARE INTERESTING

A feature of the Alumni Loyalty Fund campaign is the large number of interesting and encouraging letters which accompany subscriptions, according to information revealed when a reporter for the Daily Tar Heel was permitted a parusal of some of the fund files. Without exception the letters commend the idea which motivates the Loyalty Fund and they usually express regret that the amount of their contribution can not be larger.

The particular piece of literature which seems to have appealed most to all alumni was the letter from President Frank Porter Graham in which he told in such a straight-forward and frank manner the needs of the University at this time. Many alumni have written that this appeal alone is sufficient to merit their subscription. One went so far as to add that "I shall send another gift every time you will send me this message."

It is highly encouraging to Loyalty Fund officials to note that a large number of alumni have written encouraging letters who were not able to contribute.

WOODHOUSE HURT AS CARS COLLIDE

Professor E. J. Woodhouse of the government department of this University was injured Friday morning when the car which he was driving was forced off the road into a ditch by a large truck. Professor Woodhouse sustained a broken nose and cuts about his forehead and lips.

He was returning to the Hill alone from his home in Sedgefield at the time of the accident which occurred about five miles from Pittsboro. He received first aid at Pittsboro and is now resting comfortably at Sedgefield.

His car, in spite of smashed bumper and cracked steering gear, was driven into the Hill under its own power.

Knight Is Author Of Education Book

Edgar W. Knight of the school of Education has just had a new book published entitled Reports on European Education. This book deals with European influence on education in the United States during the second quarter of the last century.

This Issue Dedicated To Alumni

For the first time since the paper became a daily, the alumni of the University will be given an opportunity to see the Tar Heel. This issue is dedicated to them and a copy of it is being sent to each of the 14,000 former Carolina students throughout the state and the nation. It carries considerable news of interest to "old grads" as well as the regular material, thereby serving a two-fold purpose. The staff of "the only college daily in the South" joins with the Alumni Loyalty fund council, which sends the paper to you, in hoping that you will read and enjoy the new Daily Tar Heel.

Contributions To Fund Proving Satisfactory

Loyalty Fund Director

Felix A. Grisette, director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund, was graduated from the University with the class of 1922. He is regarded as being well fitted for the position which he holds because of an experience covering several years during which time he directed financial campaigns for non-profit institutions in many parts of the United States.

Loan Funds Prove Good Investments

Nothing could be a better investment than money made available for student loans, if one may judge from the records of collections as revealed from the Business Office of the University. These records show that during the long period of years during which loans have been made, more than 99 per cent of them have been repaid.

The average length of such loans is a little more than six years. Every loan is secured by the endorsement of two people, usually residents of the same community in which the borrowing student lives, thus reducing to the very minimum the possibility of losses.

All loans require interest at the regular legal rate. Thus both principal and interest is used as loan funds and their rapid turn-over and the certain return of the principal serves to constantly increase the amount of money available.

The fact that such a high record of collections has been established has led many alumni to give for this purpose who otherwise might not have done so.

Speak, Greet, Meet

The publicity committee of the freshman friendship council announced yesterday that plans were complete for the observation of next week as "Speak, Greet, Meet Week."

The object of this week is to stimulate better speaking conditions on the campus. The idea is sponsored by the freshman friendship council, which is trying to have every person on the campus to speak to all their fellow students, a tradition the freshman group feels has been neglected recently.

The council has proposed a set of rules that will be presented during the week.

The observance of the "Speak, Greet, Meet Week" will begin with the presentation of the idea by Pat Patterson and Ed Hamer, Y. M. C. A. officials, at chapel Monday and Tuesday.

1,000 SUBSCRIBERS

Class Agents and Committeemen Secure Large Number of Responses to Appeal.

SMALL GIFTS EMPHASIZED

The annual appeal of the Alumni Loyalty Fund is making a most satisfactory progess, according to reports which have been made so far to the central office in Chapel Hill. Already the number of subscribers has passed the thousand mark and there is practically no let-up. So rapid has been the return of subscriptions since the appeal began on September 29 that no attempt has as yet been made by the Fund office to announce the total amount of money obtained.

This year's appeal is being carried on largely by the class agents and by Loyalty Fund committeemen in each county in North Carolina. The reports of the committeemen in the various counties are far from complete and it is expected that when these reports have all been turned in the present list of subscribers will be augmented by several thousand.

Subscriptions received so far represent every living class of University graduates, more than two thirds of the counties in North Carolina, 15 states other than North Carolina, and six foreign countries.

Amounts of the subscriptions vary in size from one dollar to five hundred dollars. The Loyalty Fund office has not yet been able to compile the amounts of the averages of each subscription received to date. Last year the average was about $30.00. It is presumed that this year's averages may be somewhat lower than those of last year because of the business depression which has prevailed throughout the state during 1930.

The Loyalty Fund council is not discouraged, however, over the possibility of a lower average in the amounts of the gifts. It has always been a policy of the Council that the amount of the gifts was secondary. This policy was and is founded on the belief that the number of subscribers rather than their individual amounts is the most valuable asset to the University.

Such a theory is reasonably explained. The larger number of subscribers, the larger number of active supporters will the University have. This is a logical conclusion, for the simple reason that an alumnus becomes much more active in his interest once he becomes a contributor. Another valuable aid from a large number of subscribers is the fact that such action on the part of many alumni of small means will inspire men of wealth and the rich educational foundations to give in large amounts.

The number of subscriptions received to date is much larger than has ever been received before in the history of the University.

There was a time when an alumnus thought, and justly so, that a gift such as his means would permit would not in any way help in solving the many financial problems which are always confronting the University. Under the present arrangement even the smallest gifts are placed with thousands of others so that the aggregate amounts to a large total.

The Alumni Loyalty Fund

Every alumnus and every undergraduate is by now well acquainted with the Alumni Loyalty Fund and the purposes for which donations collected through this channel are to be used. A very intensive publicity campaign has been carried on by Mr. Grisette, director of the Fund, his predecessors, and affiliated agencies. Although the Fund is relatively new, those in charge have met with a fair grade of success in their appeal to the alumni. The response of the alumni as a whole, however, has not come up to expectations.

Never has the University been more in need of funds than at the present time. The state's appropriation has been cut, and the University, to meet this deficiency, must have another source of income. What this source shall be we do not know, unless it shall be the alumni.

No other institution in the country can boast of a more interested group of alumni than can Carolina. The activities of the Alumni Association will attest to the interest of the old grads. But certainly the Alumni Loyalty Fund provides an opportunity for every alumnus who is financially able to show his loyalty in a material way to his alma mater at a time when aid is needed. —B. M.

The judge in Chicago who ruled that fifteen year old girls could stay out until 2 a. m., saying that his own nieces did it at times and he himself hadn't objected so strenuously to staying out that late, would get over big with the co-eds at the University.

Student Loan Funds Founded Here Thirty-Nine Years Ago

The history of student loan funds at the University of North Carolina extends over a period of 39 years. During the 39 years since their establishment, the funds have undergone an expansion comparable to that of the University itself. Their value has steadily increased, affording funds for more loans. Yet such has been the growth in numbers of the student body of the University that the increase in value of the funds has not kept pace with the development of their field of application.

Mere want of immediate funds has never been a bar to entrance into the University. Besides the exercise of his own earning power, a student without funds has but one other pricipal recourse in maintaining himself in college or university during his course of study, namely, to borrow money.

When a man really wants something, he is willing to work for it. The loan funds have ben established as one means of assisting such students to help themselves. In short, the loans are simply one form of self-help. In many cases the student loan funds are the sole resort available to students in need of imediate funds. These considerations further indicate what importance should be attached to student loan funds.

Establishment of Loan Funds

Just four years after the reopening of the University in 1875 the first loan fund was estabished. Anyone with even a sketchy knowledge of that lean period in the life of the state and the Southland as a whole can readily see the living need that called forth gift by Dr. Chas. F. Deems to the University. The scars of war and the confusion and disorder of re-construction could not so quickly have been erased and supplanted by orderly progress.

The original Deems Fund consisted of $300.00 to be used in making loans to worthy students of the University. The gift was made to worthy students of the University. The gift was made in memory of Theodore Disosway Deems, the son of the donor, who was born in Chapel Hill and died at Gettysburg.

The principal as well as the interest of the fund was to be loaned. Students were required to give security. Later the donor made an additional gift of $4000.00 and 1881 Mr. William H. Vanderbilt contributed $10,000.00 to the Deems Fund through Dr. Deems. Not long thereafter Dr. Deems removed his preference in favor of ministers sons and put the administration of the fund into the hands of the faculty.

The latest records, those for the period ending October 15, 1930, indicated that at that time the value of the fund was $64,798.74 These figures are eloquent testimony to the fact that student loans are safe investments. Instead of dissipating the fund, loaning the principal augments its further accumulations.

The second loan fund established at the University was the gift of Thomas D. Martin of Raleigh, North Carolina. By his will he left his residuary estate to the University to be invested under the direction of the Trustees as a permanent fund to yield an annual income to be loaned to such poor and deserving students at the University "as shall be designated by the faculty." The original value of the fund was approximately $7,400.00. It became available during the session of 1908-09 upon the death of the donor's widow, who had been entitled under the will to the income of the estate during life.

The Hogue Fund was established during the session of 1912-13 by the Rev. R. W. Hogue. It represents the rental revenues from a house and lot. The donor of the fund was at the time of its establishment the Rector of the Chapel Hill Episcopal Church. He later became Rector of the Church of the Ascension, Baltimore, Md., and lives to see his gift to the University growing ever more useful as time passes.

The Hewitt Fund was the gift of Joseph Henry Hewitt of Princess Anne County, Va., in honor of the donor's deceased parents, amounting to $18,700. That amount was "securely invested" as directed and the fund began to operate during the session of 1919-1920.

In a letter of October 4, 1920, to the president of the University, Mr. Lawrence S. Holt, Jr. of Burlington, North Carolina, a member of the clas of 1904, made a gift of $10,000, "as a loan fund for worthy and needy students of the University of North Carolina."

The Victor S. Bryant Loan Fund is a legacy of the late Victor S. Bryant of Durham, North Carolina, a member of the class of 1890 and for some years a member of the board of trustees of the University. The gift consisted of $7,500. The will of Mr. Bryant was probated September 9, 1920, and the fund became available during the then current scholastic year.

In 1922 the Masonic Loan Fund took its place among the student loan funds of the University. It was established as part of a general Masonic educational program by three Grand Masonic Bodies of North Carolina, namely, The Grand Lodge of Masons, The Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and The Grand Commandary of Knights Templars.

During 1922 the Seely Loan Fund was established by a gift of Mr. F. L. Seely of Asheville, North Carolina. The original principal of $1,000.00 was to be loaned and income added thereto. The J. M. Lear Loan Fund of $5200 was established in 1921-22.

By her will probated July 2, 1924, Miss Katherine B. Blackwood of New York City established for the University a loan fund of $10,000 for needy students, "the sum so bequeatehed to be known as the 'E. S. Blackwood Memorial Loan Fund'."

One of the youngest loan funds was established in May, 1925. This is the A. B. Andrews Loan Fund established in memory of Col. A. B. Andrews, who was for thirty years a trustee of the University, by his five children: Wm. J. Andrews, class of 1891; Alexander B. Andrews, class of 1893; Mrs. W. M. Marks; John H. Andrews, class of 1897; and Graham N. Andrews, class of 1903. The original gift of $2500.00 was augmented by an additional sum of $500.00 in 1926, the gift of Alexander B. Andrews of Raleigh, North Carolina. Subsequent gifts have brought the value of the fund to about $4,200.00. Both pricipal and income were made available for loans to worthy students.

The latest of the loan funds is the Joseph E. Pogue Memorial Loan Fund, established by Mrs. Henrietta K. Pogue of Raleigh in April of this year. Its value is $1,000.

Bridge Tournament Tuesday

The Louise Manning Circle of the Episcopal church will have a benefit bridge tournament at 3 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon, and again at 8 o'clock that evening, at the home of Mrs. G. M. Braune. The entrance fee is 50 cents. Reservations may be made with Mrs. George Bason (telephone 5821).

NEW YORK TIMES DUBS KAY KYSER 'GENIUS OF JAZZ'

Former Student and His Band Are Popular Radio Numbers In Eastern Cities.

Kay Kyser and his orchestra, composed mostly of former University of North Carolina students, who got their start on the Carolina campus, have been making a big hit in New York in recent months, according to the reports of music critics in New York newspapers.

Kyser and his men have been filling an engagement at the Hotel New Yorker, one of the world's largest, and have also been doing a great deal of broadcasting.

Says the New York Times: "Those of you who stay awake after midnight and crave something really different in the jazz music world would do well to tune in on WJZ and get an earful of the dansapation dished out by Kay Kyser and his Hotel New Yorker orchestra. Last night was the first time we 'caught' this fellow Kyser, and believe us, we'll be around again when he's on the air. Novel syncopation, standout choruses, and clever arrangements are all trade-marks of this outfit. Right here and now, Kay Kyser is dubbed the 'genius of jazz'."

The New York Telegram says: "Kay Kyser has made something of a stir among the sharpereared dance music fans of the town. Everywhere in circles that take their dance music seriously, you hear the name of Kay Kyser as one who puts out a melodious brand of rhythms."

A number of other press comments carried similar praise.

Kyser and his band are now moving on to the Nixon Cafe in Pittsburgh, where they are to play over Station WCAE. From there they will go November 15 to the Hotel in Dallas, Tex., where they will broadcast over WFAA.

Advertising on the back of postage stamps, as suggested by one ingenious congressman, would be grand, of course, for any one who wanted to get his product on every tongue.—Boston Herald.

Safety Spells Defeat For Tar Heel Team

Carolina Is Defeated By Nine To Seven Count As Magner's Kick Is Blocked

SLUSSER SCORES LONE TOUCHDOWN FOR TAR HEELS

Homecoming Crowd of 18,000 Sees Vols Battle Carolina Invaders.

HACKMAN VOL STAR

By Don Shoemaker

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 25.—(Gridgraph Special)—A fighting Tar Heel eleven that matched the redoubtable Volunteers of the University of Tennessee, run for run and pass for pass, went down to defeat at the hands of Madam Luck via an early safety here today to drop a hectic homecoming encounter, nine to seven. Forcing the Vols on the defensive through the major portion of the battle, the Carolinians were separated from a well-earned tie and perhaps a victory by an untimely blocked punt behind the goal line in the second period.

Leading the southern invaders by a two point margin at the outset of the fourth quarter, the men of Major Bob Neyland scored again when the Tar Heel line weakened momentarily, but soon had their lead threatened when "Rip" Slusser, plunging Blue and White halfback, drove his way across the Tennessee goal in the same period. On five similar occasions the Carolinians failed to score, carrying the ball to within the shadow of the Tennessee goal posts only to lose it on downs.

The contest was essentially a battle of lines with the decision in favor of the Carolina forward wall. The line that "Jack the Ripper" Roberts found as penetrable as a sieve last Saturday, tightened before the plunging of the famed Buddy Hackman and stopped the deadly halfback in his tracks repeatedly.

The initial period saw Carolina work the pigskin into enemy territory on three occasions, losing the ball each time on downs, while the Vols failed to carry the oval past their side of the fifty yard line. The disastrous safety that was to prove the ultimate margin of victory in the middle of the second quarter after Jim Magner, reinstated before the game following his suspension for the infraction of training rules, attempted to punt from his own goal line. The kick was blocked and the free ball rolled over the goal line where Magner recovered it and was downed by opposing linesmen.

The second Tennessee score came in the third period when, after an exchange of punts, Allen and Haekman carried the ball from the Carolina forty-six yard line to the sixteen yard marker. After two unsuccessful stabs at the line, a pass from Hackman to Decker put the ball on the one yard line, where Hackman carried it over for the score. Dodd made the kick. A second score was narrowly averted in the same period when Dodd dashed around the end of the line for fifty-five yards, placing the ball on the Carolina nineteen yard line. On the second line play, Hackman fought his way to the two yard line where he fumbled, Magner recovering for Carolina.

After an exchange of punts in midfield, Slusser dashed off tackle for thirty-one yards to the Tennessee six yard line where in two plays the line-ripping halfback planted the oval across the Vols' goal line. Three plays later the game ended.

Both aggregations presented a highly polished aerial attack which, however, was ineffective for the greater part. Tennessee attempted seventeen passes, completed six, and had one intercepted. Carolina attempted fourteen passes, completed three and had one intercepted. Tennessee made thirteen first downs to Carolina's nine.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

"I" dormitory's tennis team proved to be too good for "J's" squad Thursday, and "I" won by the score of 5-0 to be one of the leaders in the intramural tennis tournament.

Blauman of "I" defeated Waldo with ease; 6-1, 6-0.

Winig also won his match easily; 6-3, 6-0.

Schlitzberg completed the victory by trimming his opponent; 6-0, 6-0.

"I's" team further proved its superiority by cleaning up both doubles matches. Blauman and Schlizberg rushed through their doubles match to trim Waldo and Pease. Winig and Dorfman won their match by default.

"Red" Bethea, Florida halfback, ran twenty-eight times against Chicago last Saturday to gain 209 yards, one more than the entire Chicago team.

STARS OF YESTERDAY'S GAME

Two halfbacks, one wearing the brilliant jersey of Tennessee and the other the Blue and White of Carolina shared honors in yesterday's game at Knoxville. Hackman bore the brunt of the Vol attack for the greater portion of three periods, while Slusser ripped and fought his way to a touchdown in the final period.

Homecoming Crowd To Witness Tech-Carolina Contest Next Saturday

BATTLE WILL BE GALA AFFAIR IN DIXIE FOOTBALL

"Ramblin' Wreck" Has Won Four Out of Five Games Here Since 1915.

BOBBY JONES TO BE HERE

Carolina, Tech, and American Legion Bands to Parade.

The University of North Carolina's big home-coming game is just one week away. The Tar Heels meet Georgia Tech in Kenan Memorial Stadium here next Saturday, November 1.

Tech and Tar Heel supporters are joined by Grantland Rice in expecting one of the outstanding battles of this year's Southern grid campaigns. Rice selected this as one of four games of national importance to film, pictures and sound, to illustrate his "Sportlight."

One of the largest and most colorful crowds of the Southern season will gather to see the two elevens battle. Georgia Tech is declaring a holiday, and two special trains will bring students and alumni from Atlanta. Tech alumni from Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina will hold general reunions. Carolina will be celebrating Homecoming Day, and advance ticket sales indicate a record turnout of the old grads.

Tech students will sit in a body on one side. Lustily urging on the Tar Heels from the other side will be a large section of freshmen and upperclassmen, being given special drills by Billy Arthur, chief cheerleader. Tech is bringing its famous 112-piece band, Carolina will have its own fine band out in competition, and more music and marching formations will come from the crack drum corps of the American Legions in Raleigh and Salisbury.

Besides the host of student and alumni supporters of both teams, there will be such notables on the Tar Heel side as Governor O. Max Gardner and President Graham of the University, and on the Tech side Governor Hardman, President Brittain and Atlanta's Bobby Jones, greatest golfer of them all. Enthusiasm is at the boiling point in the camps of both squads, and indications are for a game of color second to no other on the Southern schedule.

Carolina has virtually the same backs and power with which she first toppled Tech last year, and is expected to show improved co-ordination of power and a more seasoned line. Georgia Tech beat South Carolina 45-0, South Carolina beat Duke 22-0, and Duke toppled the Navy. Neither team has hit top stride for the year, but the ancient toughness of the Tech-Tar Heel rivalry should force both to their best.

The Tar Heels will have the advantage of playing before a Homecoming Day crowd, the largest alumni gathering of the year. Tech will have its share of supporters too, for Tech alumni in the South Atlantic states regularly make this game a reunion affair.

Tech and Carolina games, five in number and dating back to 1915, are conspicuously hard-fought as a matter of course, although Tech, long a leader in Southern football, has managed to win all the games from Carolina except last year's.

The "Ramblin' Wreck" won by 23 to 3 in 1915. In 1916 Carolina played Princeton, Harvard and Tech in succession, losing to Tech by 10-6. The Georgians won tough games in 1927 and 1928 by 13-0 and 20-7. Then last year Carolina won revenge by deposing Tech's national champs of the year before in a great game, 18-7.

Munch To Speak

M. F. Munch, of the school of education, will go to Charlotte next Friday to address the mathematics section of the State Teacher's Association.

TECH PLAYS SECOND GAME ON NORTH CAROLINA SOIL

Georgia Tech comes to Chapel Hill Saturday to play the University of North Carolina in Tech's second game in history on Tar Heel soil. In the other game, in 1928, Tech beat the Tar Heels 20-7, the rookies scoring three touchdowns in the opening minutes, only to have Carolina come back and fight Tech's first team off its feet the second half, making 10 first downs to Tech's 2.

The Apple that Keeps the Doctor away

TAR HEEL TOPICS BEGINS NEW YEAR

University Advisory Sheet Enters Fourth Year of Service To High School Students.

Every student in his senior year in high school is faced by the many problems of his impending college career. What institution shall he attend? What are the entrance requirements? What expenses can he expect? These and many other similar questions somewhat mar the pleasure which he experiences at the thought of leaving the public or preparatory schools. This University has attempted to relieve this situation by issuing to prospective collegians a little paper, Tar Heel Topics.

Tar Heel Topics will enter its fourth year with its November number. It is sent every month except September and October to 10,000 students and parents of students who are in their last year of preparatory school. All such institutions in North Carolina are covered and, too, some selected ones out of state. The paper has won the commendation of numerous superintendents, many of whom use its contents as a basis for chapel talks. No other university regularly issues a like advisory sheet. While it is, naturally, primarily a University of North Carolina feature, there is no insistence that the student come to this university; Chapel Hill data are merely given as the standard of comparison.

The ten numbers of each year really constitute a series of one-sided "chats" which familiarize the prospect with college conditions. The fall numbers deal with the history of the University, famous alumni and the like, with perhaps a word on the value of a degree. The winter numbers get down to facts; they survey the various divisions of the school. One issue takes up the College of Liberal Arts and outlines its three types of courses. Another discusses the profession of law, while still others tell of the library, debating, music, and campus activities. Toward spring a considerable amount of space is devoted to athletics. Then, usually in June, the less pleasing but unavoidable problem of finance claims practically the entire leaflet. The paper quotes the approximate figures and gives many practical tips.

Edward Scheidt, the editor of Tar Heel Topics, has made the sheet attractive by the inclusion of frequent pictures and the careful avoidance of a preachy tone. He has done much to clear away the difficulties facing the high school senior.

METZ RESIGNS AT LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. George A. Metz at the conclusion of the Sunday services announced his resignation as pastor of the University Lutheran Student Association. Mr. Metz is resigning this position which he has held for over a year, in order to devote all of time to the study of law. His resignation takes effect November first. The members of the association are extremely regretful that their student pastor finds himself unable to spare the time which the work requires. Services will be continued without interruption pending the completion of new arrangements, as Mr. Metz has offered to serve until that time.

CHEERIOS PLAN TO 'PUT ON SHOW' FOR HOMECOMING GAME

Billy Arthur, chief cheerleader, is expecting the student body to cooperate with him in his plans for a Cheerio section at the homecoming game with Georgia Tech Saturday. He has arranged for students who expect to come to the game alone (that is, without a girl) to secure seats in a special section of the stadium, directly on the fifty-yard line. In order to get these tickets, a student must attend practice twice this week.

Since Grantland Rice is to film the game for his "Sportlight" it is especially desirable that a good show be put on for him and the homecoming alumni. The first practice will be held at Emerson field, three o'clock this afternoon.

Speak-Greet-Meet Week Starts Today

Due to a conflict in the arrangement of the chapel programs, the freshman friendship council did not start its program for the Speak-Greet-Meet Week yesterday. The week's program, however, will start today with a larger variety of speakers and a greater spirit of co-operation from the different departments of the school.

Jack Ward, president of the inter-fraternity council, says, "The plan is good and the friendship council can depend upon the fraternities of this university to co-operate with them in every phase of the week's program."

Last night an announcement of the program was made by Hamilton Hobgood to the students in Swain hall.

Pat Patterson and Ed Hamer will speak to the freshmen at chapel on the subjects of old traditions.

Several years ago a similar program was held at the University and the dynamic Kay Kyser aroused the interest of the students, but the interest in speaking on the campus has fallen off and as a final resort to revive the old tradition the freshman friendship council asks the co-operation of each student on the campus of the University of North Carolina.

L. R. WILSON ADDRESSES EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Several University men addressed the annual district meeting of the North Carolina Education Association which was held in High Point, Friday. Dr. L. R. Wilson, University librarian, addressed the library division on "The Library's Contribution to the Pupil." Dr. G. A. Harrer of the Latin department spoke to the Latin teachers section on "The Times of Virgil." The Social Science division was addressed by A. K. King of the school of education whose subject was "The High School Course and Study of Citizenship." Dr. E. T. Browne of the mathematics department spoke about "Human Elements in Mathematics."

Beside the departmental programs, there were three general sessions in the High Point high school auditorium.

Mrs. Mosher Visits

Mrs. E. R. Mosher, state president of the Aemican Association of University Women, has returned from a visit to the Statesville and Asheville branches of the association.

JOHNSTON GIVES VOCATION TALK

Freshmen Hear of Economic Values To Be Gained From A College Education.

The two greatest purposes of the university were presented by Henry Johnston of the bureau of Vocational Information to the freshmen at chapel hour yesterday. He stated that college mainly prepares the student, first for the solving of problems that present themselves after graduation and, second, by increasing his capacity to enjoy life more fully.

He further brought out the traits an employer usually desires of an applicant. These traits are primarily cultivated during the college days by the activities one enters into. To take advantage of all college privileges, the freshman should try to realize his varied talents and cultivate these from the beginning.

Character above all can be established. A consideration of this and also of dependability, a good physique, personality, diplomacy, elocution, and carefulness is always paramount in either the acceptance of rejection of the employment applicant after graduation.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRODUCE COMEDY

"Importance of Being Earnest" Is Next Presentation Selected.

Professor Koch announced yesterday that the Carolina Playmakers will produce Oscar Wilde's London society comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest" for the second bill of the year. This play, a highly amusing three act comedy was chosen after much debate by the play committee, consisting of Professor Koch, Samuel Selden, and Ralph Westerman, largely because of its reputation as one of the most mirthful comedies ever written.

The production will be staged December 11, 12, 13. Try-outs for parts in this play will be held in the Playmakers Theatre Wednesday evening beginning at 7:30. As usual the try-outs are open to anyone having an interest in acting or any other phases of dramatics. Student Federation Is Sponsor Of Lecture Tour Through State

The meeting of the students of nine Western Carolina colleges in Greensboro Friday night brought to a close Student Government Week. John A. Lang, president of the North Carolina Student Federation, seemed greatly pleased with the results accomplished by the week set aside for the improvement of student government and student relations in the state.

Lang and E. R. Murrow, of the National Student Federation, made a tour of the state, visiting colleges which are members of the state federation group, and led the campaign for better student government and intercollegiate relations.

A large number of students throughout the entire state took part in the discussion of student problems and issues and a greater number heard the problems discussed. Lang believes that faculty members and students have been brought more closely together and made to feel that they must work in harmony with each other.

Besides the effort in the directing toward improvement of student government and student relations, a complete survey of student governmental machinery has been made in practically every college of the state.

The week's program began with addresses by Murrow and Lang to the Y. M. C. A. cabinets and student council of Carolina last Monday night, and to the student body of the University Tuesday night.

Wednesday afternoon six eastern Carolina colleges and two high schools assembled in Pullen hall at State college for an investigation of their student governments and intercollegiate relations. President E. C. Brooks of State college, together with the two federation men, addressed this meeting. Open forum sessions on student problems were held afterwards.

There was a special student program broadcast over radio station WPTF in Raleigh between five-thirty and six o'clock in the afternoon with the chief talks by Lang and Murrow.

Thursday the Duke student body was addressed by Murrow and Lang, and open forum sessions were held on student government and student relations.

The week's program was completed by a meeting of the students of nine western Carolina colleges in Aycock hall at North Carolina College for Women Friday night, when both advocates of student governments made their final plea for efficient student government and wholesome student relations.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE IN OBERLIN SEMINARY

According to a clipping received at the office of the Daily Tar Heel last Thursday from the graduate school of theology of Oberlin College, Ohio, J. P. H. McNatt, former student of the University of North Carolina, was elected president of the Oberlin Seminary Union. McNatt graduated from Carolina in '28, and entered the Oberlin graduate school of theology the same year.

While an undergraduate at the University, "Boob," as his friends called him, was student assistant to "Parson" Moss, pastor of the local Presbyterian church.

RULE REGARDING QUIZ ABSENCES TO BE ENFORCED

Because of some misunderstanding concerning absences from quizzes, the Registrar's office wishes to explain the manner in which they must be obtained. Unexcused absences, especially among the freshmen, have been numerous since the opening of school, and the Registrar's office feels that an explanation of the rules governing the granting of absences from quizzes is necessary.

In order for a student to be eligible for a make-up quiz, his excuse of absences must be approved by the Registrar, or by the dean of his school, before he absents himself from the quiz. Some laxity has been allowed in the approval of excuses given after the date of absence of the apparent ignorance of this regulation, but from now on the rule will be rigidly enforced.

Rees And Weisiger To Speak This Week

Col. Rees, vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and Kendall Weisiger, assistant to the vice-president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company of Atlanta, will be in Chapel Hill this week to address the civil and electrical engineering students.

Col. Rees will address both the Southern Conference on Education, which will be in session from Thursday, October 30, to Saturday, November 1, and the Taylor Society. The Taylor Society is composed for the most part of engineering seniors taking business administration, and for this reason Rees will confine his talk to phases of engineering.

Weisiger will talk to the members of the student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at their meeting this week.

Senate To Consider Jim Magner 'Affair'

2. Resolved: That Coach Collins was not justified in allowing Jim Magner to play in the Tennessee game.

Fraternity Head Visits Campus

The first picture, to be shown tomorrow night, starts at seven thirty o'clock, and consists of five reels. The first two reels are on the subject of waterpower, and were made in co-operation with the Westinghouse Electric Company. They should be of particular interest to persons interested in hydraulics. The next three reels are entitled "Open and Shut" and were made in co-operation with the Crane Company of Chicago. These reels deal with all kinds and all sizes of valves. The public is cordially invited and there is no admission charge.

The Buccaneer And Its Editors

Kermit Wheary, editor of Carolina's feeble attempts to produce humor, committed one serious error last week. In an attempt to obliterate the wording of one particularly offensive joke he called attention to it.

Undoubtedly the joke would have offended the superficial modesty of many and would have nasueated those sincerely modest. But once the decision to let the joke go in, there should have been no backsliding.

The tastes of this campus is varied. Some prefer outright dirt, others dislike anything even smutty. There are many stranded between the two groups. To appeal to the taste of all is impossible. To appeal to the taste of even a majority of the campus is well nigh impossible The Buccaneer staff must decide which element it is to satisfy. Let the campus know that the Buccaneer is to feature a type of joke and the rest can save themselves the effort of looking for something they consider funny. And when the jokes are selected let there be no half-hearted censorship. Go all the way. You'll either make or break the Buccaneer and either is preferable to its present status.

Athletes And Pay

Not so long ago the Phi Assembly debated a resolution having to do with the advisability of giving self-help jobs at athletic contests to athletes. The presence of opposition startled us, so much so that we were too dumbfounded to speak at the time. We have been wondering in these two weeks by what process of logic the opposition hoped to convince anyone that those jobs do not by their nature belong to athletes. We thought the old Schoolmen were clever logicians—they who could determine just how many angels could stand on a needle-point at one time without falling off. But it would take far more subtle reasoning to convince any intelligent person that self-help jobs at athletic contests do not belong to athletes.

So we, really irritatingly curious, wondered what attitude of mind could make the opposition believe what it ardently professed to believe.

We can explain it only by employing a word that has explained many an inexplicable—atavism. Atavism, and nothing else, makes people revert to the ostrich and refuse to face facts. They blatantly decline to understand that play for its own sake is a thing of the past in these United States. Call it the American system. The name will do as well as any other. It would be presuming on a man's good nature to insist that he work, sweat, struggle, and half-die six times a week for the love of agony. And love for a school is no boundless love.

As it is, the athlete gives infinitely more than he gets. He should at least get food and an education, even when he can afford them himself. If a conference prohibits the payment of money to athletes, give them their scholarships and their jobs. Give them especially those jobs that, from the very nature of their work, belong to them.—V. A. D.

Entertainment Committee Takes Wise Step

The action of the student entertainment committee in deciding to postpone all entertainment programs until after Christmas reflects wisdom. Lack of comfortable housing facilities would make even the best of the scheduled importations seem mediocre, thereby displeasing the performers, the spectators, and the committee. Decreasing the entertainment fee for the current year to two dollars, by virtue of no fall quarter entertainments, is preferable to taxing students to the full quota of three dolars in the face of conditions which would make satisfactory performances impossible. There has perhaps never been a time when students needed to make their money go as far as they are now forced to. The committee did well to consider this factor.

Here, as elsewhere, nothing but a good performance will draw an impressive attendance. Owing to extremely limited funds with which to operate, the entertainment committee has for a long while faced the problem of getting the best without paying maximum costs. Now that there are to be no performances during the course of the present quarter, the committeemen have ample time to provide for the winter-spring program.

Although the small town of Chapel Hill has many advantages which are not to be had in larger settlements (and seldom even in towns of equal population), amusement facilities are scant—lamentably scant, in fact. To supplement this scantiness and to provide a campus-wide liberalizing influence, the student entertainment policy was set up some years ago. Upon the completion of the new University auditorium, the program now being formulated will undergo presentation. Doubtless, the loss in time occasioned by postponement will be swallowed up in the added effectiveness of performance which is certain to spring from settlement of the housing problem.

Pessimism And Criticism

One of the favorite indoor sports around here now seems to be knocking the football team. In our estimation this is a mighty low-down trick. Those who are on the football squad go down to the field every afternoon and put out more hard work in one week than many of us have done in a lifetime. They do this for the love of sport, and to give us amusement. We pay them back by knocking.

Even if Carolina had a poor team this pessimism and criticism by those who think they know more about football than the coach would be inexcusable. Instead of grumbling over the defeat by Georgia and Tennessee; we should be proud of what they have done and admire their efforts.

Not only in cheering does the student body exert an influence over our athlectic teams. If the members of the team see that pessimism prevails on the campus and that they are not expected to win, they will naturally lose confidence in themselves and will be lacking in the all-important knowledge that they can win. One of the world's greatest tennis players attributes his success to his overwhelming ever-present desire to win.

Coach Collins is becoming noted for his pessimism. In a coach this appears to be a good thing, for it tends to keep the players from becoming too confident and slackening up. In the student body, however, it is entirely a different matter. Here pessimism and lack of confidence are fatal.—C. A. P.

International Debating And the Federation

Few things, if any, demand a loftier perch in the range of commercial values than does good-will. There is no greater asset to an individual or to an organization. International good will, the only guarantee against world-wide war, has its rootage in mutual concern and its derivative, mutual understanding. The volume of the good will of tomorrow will vary in direct proportion to the mutual understanding existent in the youth of the present. International debating, through association of varied conceptions of world-wide problems, is generative of good will to a far from negligible degree.

Among other duties, the National Federation of Students is sole director of international debates. Realizing the importance of good will among nations and being keenly cognizant of the accelerative influence which internationl debates have upon the development of this quality, the federation is putting forth a determined effort to arrange more debates of that vintage in the future. Even now small colleges seldom have the good fortune to debate against a team from another nation.

By continuing its activity along such lines the federation can render its maximum service to the human order. —J. C. W.

FIELDS CHANGED IN ESSAY AWARD

North Carolina Academy Offers Annual High School Prizes For Essay.

The fifth annual state-wide contest offered by the North Carolina Academy of Science for the best essay written by a high school student on a scientific subject was announced here recently by H. R. Totten, secretary of the academy.

The first contest was held in 1927 in the field of biology and geology and was won by Miss Hilda Cook of the Sunderland School in Concord, N. C., Henry E. Biggs, Jr., of Greensboro High School, won in 1928 taking a subject in the field of chemistry and physics. In 1929 Miss Lila Aaron of Lexington high school won in the field of biology and geology, and in 1930 the winner was Calhoun Pruitt of Monroe high school in the field of chemistry and physics.

Subjects for essays this year will be limited to the field of biology and geography. The contest closes April 1, 1931, with the prize, a cup, to be awarded at commencement of the winner's school. Information concerning the contest may be secured from Dr. H. R. Totten, secretary of the North Carolina Academy of Science, Chapel Hill, N. C., or from Dr. Bert Cunningham, chairman of the high school science committee, Durham, N. C.

Films Capture Famous Broadway Stage Stars

The Carolina theatre presents today "A Lady Surrenders," the brilliant and sophisticated picturization of John Erskine's recent best seller among novels, Sincerity. The action moves around a young and well-to-do bed manufacturer and his marital difficulties with his novelist wife, who finds the confinement and domesticity of married life a bore.

Conrad Nagel and Genevieve Tobin head the cast, containing also such stars as Basil Rathbone and Carmel Myers.

KING'S DAUGHTERS PLAN FALL DRIVE

The King's Daughters of Chapel Hill are continuing their welfare work this week by distributing to all homes in Chapel Hill envelopes in which the people are asked to place Thanksgiving offerings. The money collected will be used to carry on the work of the organization during the winter months.

The county welfare department has turned over all of Chapel Hill and Carrboro to the King's Daughters, and they have full charge of the work in these places.

The organization investigates fully every case reported, and gives the aid necessary, caring for both white and colored people. It provides families with clothing, food, and fuel where they are needed. Families in which the husband is on the road are cared for, and also old people which the county home cannot take. The King's Daughters also arrange for operations and for other hospital treatments.

U. D. C. Plans For Hallowe'en Frolic

A Hallowe'en Festival will be given on Friday evening, October 31, in the Tin Can by the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Stunts and tap dancing will be presented, and there will be two or three fortune tellers. Two modern dances will be alternated by one old-fashioned square dance. W. S. Bernard will call figures for the square dancing. An admission charge of thirty-five cents will be charged.

On Sunday afternoon, November 2, E. Carrington Smith will present a picture in the Carolina theatre for the benefit of the U. D. C. Members of the chapter will take a collection.

These entertainments will be given to raise money for a University scholarship which the chapter will give beginning in 1931. It will be given to a high school boy chosen by a competitive examination, probably essay writing. The winner of the scholarship will receive seventy-five dollars each year for four years.

State Universities Here For Meeting

The Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and allied institutions will have its annual meeting here at the University November 13, 14, and 15, it was announced today by Russell M. Grumman, director of the University extension division, who is in charge of arrangements.

The Association is composed of trustees, regents, and other members of the institutions represented. David E. Ross, a trustee of Purdue University, is president.

Leslie Weil, of Goldsboro, is the representative of the University in the Association, which has a membership of about forty.

The delegates will assemble in Durham Thursday morning, November 13, and visit Duke University. They will come to Chapel Hill for lunch, and hold a session here that afternoon. That night they will be guests of the Carolina Playmakers at a performance of folk plays.

There will be sessions Friday morning and afternoon, with a tour of the University plant scheduled for Friday afternoon. The final session will be held Saturday morning.

FOOTBALL

By K. C. Ramsay

The TAR HEEL LINE HAS proven itself able to stop the most powerful offensive thrusts, and anybody who has the idea that Coach Collins' forward wall is weak needs only to turn to that Carolina-Tennessee game. Superb work by the Tar Heel forwards kept the Vols from scoring a single first down in the first quarter while the Tar Heel backs chalked up five. Failure to cross the Tennessee goal when within the Vols' 20-yard line three times in the first period is largely responsible for Carolina's defeat.

Ned Lipscomb roved up and down the line making tackle after tackle. The driving Tennessee backs were unable to average more than three yards through the center of the Tar Heel line.

TO RIP SLUSSER MUST GO the honors for the Tar Heel backs. He not only carried the ball four consecutive times in the final period for a total of 33 yards and a touchdown, but made several nice gains in the first quarter to help the Tar Heels make five first downs, the longest gain being for 15 yards.

Jim Magner went out to Knoxville on his own expenses, so determined was he to get into the Tennessee battle. It was Magner's recovery of Hackman's fumble in the fourth quarter which stopped an almost certain Tennessee drive for a second touchdown. His defensive work and his passing also were high spots of the game.

ALABAMA AND GEORGIA probably will fight it out for the Southern Conference title at Birmingham on Thanksgiving Day, for both of these teams seem to be stronger as each Saturday passes by. The Bulldogs made Auburn's rejuvenated team look very weak in their 39-7 win. Alabama's Crimson was not rated as an outstanding conference contender at the first of the season, but their recent victories over Tennessee and Vanderbilt put them out in front of the list of contending teams. Tulane, Kentucky, Florida and Clemson are the other undefeated teams in the conference, but two of these will be eliminated this week with Kentucky meeting Alabama, and Florida clashing with Georgia. Tulane is fighting hard to retain the conference championship but it will be a severe test for her to down Georgia at New Orleans late in November.

STATE COLLEGE TURNED in its first conference victory in two years when Cagle's Mississippi Aggies lost to the Wolfpack Saturday. Coaches Sermon, Warren and Slaughter deserve a great deal of credit for getting the ailing wolves in shape within a week after the varsity coach resigned his post.

DUKE HAD A HARD TIME beating the Wofford Terriers in a stadium dedication at Spartanburg, but a team always fights harder when it has a homecoming crowd to perform before. Navy's Middies seems to be strong even though they were humbled by the Blue Devils, for they had little trouble handing the Princeton Tigers their worst licking in over thirty years.

LITTLE SEVEN FOOTBALL is turning into a battle between Guilford and Catawba for the title. "Unk" Moran's Catawba Indians had little trouble in beating Elon, with Williams and Company, 32-0, and the Quakers had a track meet at the expense of Atlantic Christian. 69-0 was the final score.

Bill Werber was voted the most valuable player in the Eastern League this year.

Grantland Rice Sportlight Records Sound Pictures Of Carolina Relay Team Races

Will Return Here Saturday To Film Carolina-Georgia Tech Football Game.

The members of the Grantland Rice Sportlight crew were guests of the Athletic Association yesterday afternoon, at which time they filmed the University's cinder stars in action. Pictures were made with sound of the runners training for the important relay meets scheduled this year.

The squad showed up well before the camera and displayed ability in getting off good starts. Coach Bob Fetzer was invited to speak to the "talkie" audience through the Sportlight. The films made yesterday will be shown together with those taken taken of other track squads and will be distributed throughout the country.

Coach Fetzer declared that "The University of North Carolina considers it a singular honor to have the privilege of displaying her track prowess before the eyes of the nation through the medium of the Sportlight."

The personnel of the crew, which includes Jack Eaton, producer, R. J. Ervin, cameraman, R. J. Swanecamp, sound engineer, and several assistants, left last night for Pinehurst where they will take sound pictures of a quail hunt.

The group will return Saturday to obtain views of the Carolina-Georgia Tech football classic. Mr. Rice will be here to supervise the filming of this game, which was chosen as one of the four most important games in the country to be shown in his feature. He will record the antics of the Carolina cheerios and band, the 110-piece band which is expected to accompany the Tornado invasion, and the American Legion Flag Escorts.

The staff of the sportlight made preparations to take pictures at the stadium, and were pleased with the layout which will afford a fine background for the filming.

Sports Staff To Meet

There will be a meeting of the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel this afternoon at two o'clock in the offices in the basement of Alumni building. All reporters must be present as there will be several changes in beats.

MEN CHOSEN FOR INTERCOLLEGIATE TENNIS TOURNEY

Hines, Hendlin, Wright and Several Other Men Make Pinehurst Trip.

After a heavy workout Friday afternoon, Coach Kenfield announced the official Tar Heel representatives to the intercollegiate at the Pinehurst fall tennis tourney which got under way yesterday. The chosen ones are: Hines and Hendlin, singles; Hines and Wright, doubles.

In the two weeks that have elapsed since Hendlin and Hines returned from White Sulphur Springs with their laurels Coach Kenfield has been cracking the whip hard to produce a team that will do things at Pinehurst.

Besides the official representatives, other members of the squad may make the daily trip to Pinehurst as independent entries. This group includes Liskin, Graham, and Abels. It is also possible that several of the outstanding frosh such as Shuford, Dillard, and Morgan may make the trip. Liskin's drive continues to emulate the proverbial Gibraltar. Shuford has been hitting the ball hard of late and in practice matches with the varsity has done some fine work.

Ed Yeomans has entered the singles and may pair up with Hendlin to form another Carolina doubles outfit.

The varsity practice on Friday was uninspiring and makes predictions conservative. Hines playing tennis below his usual standard beat Wright straight sets. Wright found trouble getting his service in and his ground game was ragged. Under Kenfield's direction Wright pounded Hines's backhand with great effectiveness. Hendlin and Yeomans met the varsity doubles combination in a practice match and were soundly trounced two straight sets. The Hendlin snort was very much in evidence and Yeomans was not meeting the ball cleanly. Hines and Wright, however, turned in a superb doubles performance. Hines, slashing forehand was effective as a passing shot while Wright's volleying and his overhead game showed a remarkably improved game from the singles performance.

Kenfield has chosen this doubles team as the most effective combination that has come to light as yet. This same team worked last year and made the finals at Pinehurst.

The cold weather has lowered the usual brand of tennis and may cramp the styles of the warm weather players. Little is known about the possible competition at Pinehurst. Hines on the basis of his summer record should reach the finals in the singles.

Last year Georgia Tech failed to stop a big veteran Tar Heel line and a stumpy but fleet Johnny Branch. This year the big blue line is no more, but the squat quarterback remains an eyesore to the Jackets, so they are likely to be doing their best to cover Branch when they meet the Tar Heels here Saturday at 2:30 o'clock.

TAR HEELS START WORK FOR GAME WITH TECH TEAM

Varsity Takes Light Workout as Coach Cerney Gives Georgia Tech Plays to Reserves.

The Tar Heels started preparations for the homecoming game with Georgia Tech with a light workout at the stadium yesterday afternoon. Coaches Collins, Cerney and Fetzer are planning to put the team through stiff workouts, however, during the remainder of the week so that the eleven will be in top form for the Saturday's game.

Coach Bill Cerney, who scouted the Tulane-Tech game last Saturday, spent the afternoon teaching Georgia Tech plays to the reserves, so that they will be ready to scrimmage the varsity elevens tomorrow and Thursday.

Work for the men who saw action in the Tennessee game was confined to drills in blocking and in limbering up exercises, with harder work promised to them for tomorrow and Thursday.

Coach Collins seemed to be pleased with the showing of the Tar Heel line from tackle to tackle against Tennessee, but was disappointed with the performance of several of the veteran backs, because they were slow at coming up to the line for secondary defense.

Because of the fact that scoring punch was lacking in the Tennessee game it is expected that there will be stiff offensive scrimmage during the week. The Tar Heels were within the Vols ten yard line five times and scored only once.

According to Trainer Chuck Quinlan the squad went through the game with only minor bruises and injuries. Captain Strud Nash was in light equipment yesterday because of an injury to his ankle and probably will not be in the scrimmages of the week, but he is expected to be ready for the Georgia Tech game. Barring injury during the week, the squad should be in perfect shape for the invasion of the Golden Tornado.

Chapel Hill High Grid Star Is Hurt

Paul Pendergraft, regular center on the Chapel Hill high school team, was seriously injured in the game with Apex Friday. While making a tackle in the third quarter of the game he fell so as to rupture his bladder. He is now in Watts Hospital at Durham and is getting on as well as could be expected.

The play during which the tackle was made was illegal. Pendergraft was one of the best linesmen on the squad, and his injury is a severe blow to the team, coming just before some of the hardest games of the season. He is undoubtely out of play for the rest of the season.

CROSS COUNTRY SQUAD SET FOR V. P. I. RUNNERS

With the cross country meet with V. P. I. less than a week away, Coach Ranson and his squad are busy applying finishing touches to put the Tar Heel runners in first class shape for the match.

Time trials were conducted Friday and Saturday afternoons with Captain Baucom, Jansen, Jones, and Farris finishing in the first four places followed by Cordle, Hubbard, Pratt, Watkins, and Lumpkin. The track mentor stated yesterday that prospects are exceedingly bright for the ensuing match with the improvement evidenced by the last few days training.

According to advanced information from the Virginia school, V. P. I. will bring a seasoned team of veterans here Friday to meet the Carolina team.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Phi Sigs Trounce Pikas

The Phi Sigma Kappa team continued its drive for the intramural pennant by defeating Pi Kappa Alpha 18-0 in the most interesting game of the day. Thomas scored two touchdowns on passes from Teachey, one being good for thirty-five yards and the other for thirty yards. Teachey intercepted a pass on his own thirty yard line and ran for a touchdown for the third score. He also made a beautiful run around end for forty-five yards.

The passing attack of the Phi Sigs baffled their opponents and gave the victors the lead early in the game. Teachey was the star with his accurate passing to Thomas and Vick.

Aycock Defeats Lewis 6-0

Longest's pass from the twenty yard line to Potter who caught it behind the goal line, gave Aycock a 6-0 victory over Lewis dormitory. Longest and Potter took turns passing to each other to capture the spotlight. Lewis offered a stubborn defense and threatened to score, but lacked the punch to carry the ball over the last stripe.

Carr Bows to Ruffin

Carr lost to Ruffin in a close game only after McBride pushed the pigskin across the goal line in the latter part of the tilt to give his team a 6-0 victory. The contest was close throughout and lacked any thrilling gains.

Forfeits

Grimes forfeited their match scheduled with the Question Marks, and Steele forfeited to New Dorms.

Tennis

Due to a change in the schedule, the games in the Intramural Tennis League yesterday afternoon were postponed. The tournament will begin today and last through Friday.

TECH-CAROLINA GAME EXPECTED TO BE THRILLER

If History Runs True, Game Will Be Tough Battle With Spectacular Runs.

If tradition runs true to form, there will be thrills galore for the spectators when the University of North Carolina and Georgia Tech clash on the gridiron here in Kenan Stadium next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Tech-Tar Heel games of previous years have turned out to be among the most colorful football classics of the Southland.

Off hand come recollections of the last time Tech played in Kenan Stadium—1923. Tech shut out Notre Dame the Saturday before they played Carolina, and brought to Kenan Stadium a team that later won the national championship.

Nervous and awed by Tech's great reputation Carolina's rookie backs failed to cover on passes and Tech's rookies scored 20 points in the opening minutes. Tech's first team came in, Carolina settled down, and from then on the Tar Heels gave the national champions a walloping unprecedented in football history.

The Tar Heels made 10 first downs to Tech's two for the last half, and won most of the glory, although losing 20-7.

Tech won by 23-3 in 1915, but in 1916 Carolina's fighting hordes played Harvard and Princeton by way of warming up, then gave Tech's Southern Champions a great run before Tech won 10-6.

There was another great battle in 1927. Four times the Tar Heels swept up to within inches of the goal, but the Tech line

DEAN PIERSON AT CONFERENCE OF GRADUATE HEADS

Representing University at Meeting of American Universities.

Dean W. W. Pierson, of the graduate school, has been attending the annual meeting of the Association of American Universities at the University of California for the past week. The association is made up of thirty of the leading graduate schools in the country. Leland Stanford University and the University of California were the joint hosts of the meeting this year.

Being a member of the executive committee of the association, Dean Pierson had to attend its meeting before the regular convention opened. The duties of this committee are to make recommendation for new members, change any policies of the organization, and attend to any business which may be concerned with the association.

Dr. Pierson also took part in the program of the meeting. He read a paper on the subject of "Summer Schools." In his paper, the dean discussed some of the evils of summer schools, and suggested certain remedies for these wrongs. In addition to this his paper took up a comparison of the standard of the summer school with that of the regular session.

The University of North Carolina is one of three schools in the South which are members of this association. The other two members are the Universities of Virginia and of Texas. The former was one of the charter members of the organiaztion, and the North Carolina institution was the first other university in the South to be asked to join.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL PLANS LAID

Every year between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving, the American Red Cross takes its roll call of old and new members. The Red Cross has, for years, been recognized as everone's friend in time of trouble and despair. It helps in earthquakes, floods, and famine. The Red Cross is known the world over for the aid it gives to persons of all nations. It helps war veterans and those without a home. The President of the United States is at the head of the Red Cross and is first on the roll call.

Last year the American Red Cross spent over sixteen million dollars in giving service. Since 1881, it has spent for relief more than eighty million dollars.

The Chapel Hill chapter received an honor flag for reaching its membership goal last year. This chapter received contributions totalling seven hundred dollars and sixty-eight cents, and it spent seven hundred dollars and fifteen cents. Of this three hundred and forty-five dollars were spent for the placing in hospitals of eighteen cases.

Other expenditures went to the National Red Cross and for loans and Christmas cheer for soldiers. The Red Cross hopes to reach a new goal of membership this year.

Clothes Needed

Again students are urged to drop cast-off clothing in a box in the lobby of the Y in order to help relieve the acute condition that prevails among Orange county poor. The clothing will be turned over to George Lawrence, who is chairman of a relief committee.

The club house will be decorated in Hallowe'en style and apple cider, doughnuts, and apples will be served as refreshments.

Dancing will begin at nine o'clock and will continue most of the evening. The committee plans a special feature, probably a grand march at which time the guests will be given confetti and noise-making favors. Music will be furnished by a local orchestra.

Mrs. Harold S. Dyer is in charge of the entertainment, assisted by Mrs. Ernest Mackie and Mrs. J. Fred Dashiell.

All members of the Country Club are asked to bring their out of town guests.

At the fall meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in Durham last week, John E. Lear, professor of electrical engineering, was elected to the executive committee of the organization. The other members of the committee are: chairman, J. H. Poget of Raleigh; secretary-treasurer, E. C. Weese of Raleigh; Charles B. Waddell of Asheville; and M. E. Lake of Charlotte.

Although the meeting was held in Durham the representatives from Carolina outnumbered the representatives from the college in Durham. There were twenty-two students from the Hill at the meeting.

HOYLE TO SPEAK AT SEMINAR MEET

Dr. V. A. Hoyle, professor of mathematics will discuss problems in the field of tensor analysis tomorrow at the regular seminar meeting in Phillips hall.

His discussion will cover problems in conformal geometry in the field of tensor analysis; problems containing applications to the study of the geometry of paths. This deals with the determination of the shortest paths between points on a sphere or on the surface of other regular bodies, and fall under the theories of Professor A. Einstein on Relativity.

The cases which Dr. Hoyle will take up will be of a general rather than specific nature.

Dr. Hoyle has been studying at Princeton and is now an instructor of mathematics here.

ous other distractions about the campus have led to an unusual dearth of postponed and forfeited tag football games. Shorts are being abandoned for sweat pants and sweat shirts are much in evidence. Heavier scoring is reported as the boys obtain more finesse in the pass attacks. No fraternity or dormitory team has been able to put into action a consistent running attack.

Kappa Alpha took the high scoring honors for the week when they handed the Zeta Beta Taus a 39-0 trimming. The Sigma Nus septet made merry at the expense of the Chi Phis and the result: 34-0.

Interest lags somewhat among the dormitory outfits. The favorites are successfully defending their honors. Ruffin, managed to eke out a win in first downs over Carr, 9-5.

The high hopes of Graham were rudely shattered by the New Dorms scoring machine.

The Graham goal line had not been crossed up to the New Dorms contest. An overabundance of captains and a fine passing attack of the New Dorms put the final score at 19-0.

Umana Elected To Head Spanish Club

The Circulo Hispano met for the first time this year Friday evening in the Episcopal parish house, with Professor A. K. Shields in charge of the meeting. A large number of advanced Spanish students and Spanish-Americans who are in school this fall attended. Officers for the present year were elected: Umberto Umana y Cordero was chosen president; D. F. McDowell, vice-president; Armando Mendez Perez, secretary; Kolburn Kjellesvig, treasurer.

Umana, taking charge of the program, talked for a few minutes of the importance of spoken Spanish, and asked the cooperation of the members in the work of the club.

Francis Hayes continued the program by giving a short sketch of the life of the contemporary Spanish poet, Frederico Garcia Lorca, and a discussion of his work. This was followed by the reading of the the author's best known poem, "Casada y Fiel."

A series of songs with guitar accompaniment was given by Umana, these including the Mexican ballad, "El Desterrado," and the Argentine tango, "Negra Mala."

The next meeting of the club will be called by the president.

held, while Tech barely nosed over touchdowns in the last minutes of both halves. Tech won 13-0, and one Atlanta sports writer called that the "hardest won 13 to 0 game ever played on any field anywhere."

The fifth and final game of the rivalry, last year, saw Carolina's Branch outstump Tech's Thomason, and Carolina won revenge by deposing the national champs of the year before in a great game 18-7.

This year Tar Heel has Branch, Magner and the other aces who penetrated and upset Tech's great bulwarks. Tech has lost Thomason and Mizell, but has a fighting team with one of the South's strongest lines, headed by the all-American tackles, there should be a great battle in the offing.

World's Smallest Motor

What is believed to be the world's smallest synchronous electric motor is shown by C. E. Skinner, assistant director of engineering for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. About the size of a hickory nut, it runs on ordinary house current. Its rating is approximately one-half cricket power.

This motor is used in delicate devices which require a constant speed with very little power.

While Coach Bill Alexander tinkers with the "Ramblin' Wreck" of Georgia Tech and groans over injuries, Coach Chuck Collins continues on the North Carolina defenses and to look for someone to plug up the hole at left tackle. It seems that there is a mutuality of worry as the two teams prepare for their annual tough battle in the Tar Heels' Homecoming Day game here Saturday.

Even brain-workers and frat-house fans get "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

YOU don't have to be an athlete to get "Athlete's Foot." Men who do their daily dozen in the library giving the old bean a big workout; and the boys who do a mental marathon in class but never try for the track—as well as those who really do give their muscles to Alma Mater—any and all are just so much good red meat to the tiny germ which has spread this ringworm infection everywhere. Tinea trichophyton is its name and it's the cause of "Athlete's Foot."

In universities from Pennsylvania to California, it has been found that 50% of the men have it. The U. S. Health Service has reported that "at least half of all adults suffer from it at some time." Co-eds are not immune from this trouble, either.

It lurks in the very places where we all go for cleanliness and health—on the edges of swimming pools and showers—in gymnasiums—on locker- and dressing-room floors. In spite of modern sanitation (you have to boil socks 15 minutes to kill it) this fungus parasite infects and re-infects bare feet almost any time they come in contact with damp floors.

Absorbine Jr. kills the germ of "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

Tests in a famous New York "lab" have revealed that Absorbine Jr. penetrates flesh-like tissues deeply and that wherever it penetrates, it KILLS the ringworm germ.

It might not be a bad idea to examine your feet tonight. At the first sign of redness between toes, itching, peeling or blisters, douse on Absorbine Jr., and keep a bottle handy in your locker as a preventive. Use it after every exposure of bare feet on damp floors. At all druggists—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Mass.
